The memory of Matteoti, the anti-fascist member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies who was foully murdered three years ago by the direct tools of Mussolini, brought hundreds of workers to the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave., yesterday afternoon where a meeting was held by the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America.

Enos Sermenti, well known Communist leader among the Italian workers, did not speak having been deported from this country on Saturday.

H. M. Wicks, editor of The DAILY WORKER, said:

"Mussolini's regime is the blackest the world has ever seen. Waded to power through rivers of blood shed by the flower of the working class in combatting his mercenaries. A few days ago before the chamber of deputies, this monster boasted that he would build an army of five million. He doesn't dare attempt an army of a million. No despot dares arm his enemies. If Mussolini arms any appreciable number of the population of Italy they will turn their guns upon fascism and drown it in its own blood.

"One of the best ways to fight Mussolini fascism in America is to join the militant section of the labor movement here and help stifle the American brand as represented by the Walls, McGradys, Fraynes, Sigmans and other reactionaries who are using fascist tactics against labor here while condemning it in Italy."

Other speakers were Carlo Tresca and Francisco Coco in Italian.

NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY

Window Cleaners' Strike Near End.

NEWARK, N. J., June 12.—The strike that the Window Cleaners' Union of Newark has been conducting for the past few weeks is practically over. The workers went out on strike when the bosses began to hire scab help, thus violating the agreement with the union. To date 15 of the shops have settled and the men have gone back to work. Two shops, the American and the N. Y.-N. J. Window Cleaning Companies, refuse to recognize the union. The union has decided to fight these scab employers until their shops are 100 per cent unionized. To that effect each member of the local has been asked to carry on the fight. It is only a matter of time when these shops will have to concede to the demands of the workers and the union. Picketing will continue.

Electrician's Strike Ends.

NEWARK, N. J., June 12. The strike of the electricians affiliated with Local 52 of Newark has terminated with the bosses' contractors association conceding to an increase in wages from $12 to $12.50 a day. The helpers will receive a sliding increase from $7 to $7.50 a day. This settlement was reached this morning between Local 52 and the Master Electricians' Association. The striko has been on since May 1st.

BAYONNE, N. J., June 12.—Thirty-five journeymen barbers went out on strike yesterday when the bosses refused to sign up the new agreement with the workers. The men demand an increase in wages from $12 to $15 a week. To date 10 of the bosses have signed up the new contract.

WOLKOFF MEETING TOMORROW NIGHT; NEW STAR CASINO

Protest Against Danger Of New World War

Workers of New York will hear tomorrow an explanation of who ordered the assassination of Wolkoff, the ambassador of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics to Poland. Prominent speakers, well known to the workers, will explain what this first step in a new campaign of unofficial war against the first workers' republic means, and the danger of its being turned into an open war, on a world wide scale. All this at the New York Wolkoff Memorial Meeting, New Star Casino, Tuesday, June 14. The committee in charge has issued the following announcement:

With the news coming through from Moscow, it becomes clearer every day that the murder of Comrade Wolkoff, the Soviet ambassador to Poland, is part of the same provocation that caused the raid on the Peking Soviet embassy, the raid on Arcos in London and the breaking off of the Soviet-English relations.

British imperialism, facing severe losses in foreign markets and the rising of its colonial peoples in many places, and seeing before it the doom of the British Empire, is riding headlong toward the world war.

The masses of the Soviet Union have demonstrated more then once that they are determined to prevent a war if at all possible but one must not mistake this desire for peace on the part of the Soviet Union for docility. It is up to the workers in all capitalist countries to see this danger of a world war and to mobilize the masses of their own country against it.

The memorial meeting for Wolkoff arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party for Tuesday, June 14, at New Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Avenue, will also be a demonstration of the militant workers of this city against war and for the defense of the Soviet Union.

The speakers will be William F. Dunne, who is still in jail but is expected to be released by Tuesday; M. J. Olgin, Alexander Trachtenberg, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, John J. Ballam, Molach Epstein, Rebecca Grecht and Sam Don.

Professional Patriots

"During the past year the attention of the country has been directed to the activities of a group of men known as professional patriots."

This statement concerning professional patriotic organizations is contained in a Congressional report made several years ago.

"Professional Patriots" is edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley.

The Security League is no less alarmist in its tone, charging Bolshevism with responsibility for the federal income tax law. Mr. Solomon Stanwood Menken, President of the League, revealed himself whole-heartedly in a public speech before the Kiwanis Club of Buffalo, N. Y., October 21, 1923, on "The Spirit of America." We quote from a League reprint:

"We have here 600,000 Communists meetings weekly, publishing 50 papers, attacking your country, your government, your right to prosper, to bring up your own children as you will, to enjoy the advantages of this country as we know it and our forefathers planned it. To fight them, more of us must get on the job and help take care of the U. S. A.

"Their attack has created a disaffection and critical attitude toward our officials which has worked great political injustice and is further reflected in the Socialistic coloring of legislation. A fair example is our tax law, which throttles enterprise while reducing the financial return to the government. This law was an entirely proper means for meeting a part of the federal expense but has become such a burden to wealth that men of large means will not take a 100 per cent risk of principal in reasonable ventures of benefit to the community when the maximum personal gain is but 40 per cent (sic). How was the enactment of such a law possible? Because the Reds and Yellows raised a false issue as to what they call predatory wealth, and the politicians were misled into believing that the noise they made was the voice of the American people.

"Our course is fatuous in the extreme and we elect to places of trust Frazier, LaFollette, and Brookhart, send our young people into the red and yellow journals, and The Nation and The Republic, with the same perverted sense as those of another time peeked into obscene literature."

In justice to Mr. Menken it should be added that he spoke at a meeting of the Teachers Union of New York early in 1927 and surprised every one present by expressing the opinion that "teachers have a right to hold their economic views and express them freely irrespective of Board of Education or State authorities of any kind."

Inspiring Creed.

Another gem of verse published by the Security League was written for it by Felix Baldwin. Here it is, all four stanzas.

BOLSHE VIKI

"What are the Sirens shriekin' for?" said Percy Parlour-Red.
"To speed the guest, to speed the guest," the Loyal Native said,
"What makes you smile, so grim, so grim?" said Percy Parlour-Red,
"I'm thinkin' of a muzzled hound," the Loyal Native said.

For they're shippin' Bolshe Viki, you can hear the engines purr,
They are weighin' of the anchor, eu' the decks are all a-stir,
They've pinued a number on him, an' they've branded him a cur,
An' they're shippin' Bolshe Viki in the mornin'.

"What makes the People mutter so?" said Percy Parlour-Red,
"They're wakin' up, they're wakin' up," the Loyal Native said,
"What makes thet fellow gulp and quake?" said Percy Parlour-Red,
"It's his turn next, it's his turn next," the Loyal Native said.

They are shipping Bolshe Viki to a port beyond our ken,
They have taken Bolshe Viki with his poisoned tongue and pen,
And he'll sail in half a minute, the despised of decent men,
O they're shippin' Bolshe Viki in the mornin'!

"His speech was very fine to henr," said Percy Parlour-Red,
"My ears are deaf to traitor-talk," the Loyal Native said,
"I shook his hand not long ago," said Percy Parlour-Red,
"Then wash your own of alien dirt," the Loyal Native said.

They are shipping Bolshe Viki to a far, unknown place,
For he smirched the Flag which welcomed him, and spat in Freedom's face,
And there's thousands like him still at large—America's disgrace,
While they're shippin' Bolshe Viki in the mornin'!

"What's that like blood against the sun?" said Percy Parlour-Red,
"The Bolshe Viki hrand of flag," the Loyal Native said,
"What's that that whimpers from the deck?" said Percy Parlour-Red,
"The Yellow Streak, that's sailin' now," the Loyal Native said,

For they're done with Bolshe Viki, an' his serpent breed must go,
This People, they are thinkin' hard—but thinkin' very slow!
Ho! America must arm herself to fight an unclean foe,
An' be shippin' Bolshe Viki EVERY mornin'!

Mr. Emerson Hough, "the eminent author," also wrote a piece for the Security League worth quoting, entitled the "One Hundred Per Cent American." He wound up his appeal with the following paragraph:

Lyric Poetry.

"Do I hold myself a one hundred per cent American? I never asked myself about it, nor needed to. But I know if I were that manner and fashion of one hundred per cent American she might by act of grace have share in the control of this country for a few short years, I would close Ellis Island tomorrow. I would dig deep the most around America and let the portcullis fall. Then I would say: 'What ho! Warder. Go now and breed me Americans, here in America. Take your time —you have if necessary fifty years, or say one hundred years. Breed them clean and strong. Choose good grandfathers for our people, and let us have at last a nation which is not merely a feeding trough—a country which is not just a place.

"'And let us call that country—once more—America!'"

The League also reprinted certain patriotic definitions by Mr. Henry Irving Dodge which had appeared in the "Scribner Magazine." The leaflet bears the title "That's Bolshevism":

SAME AS LINDBERGH USED

Captain H. C. Major demonstrates to Secretary of the Navy Curtis Wilbur, left, the use of the earth inductor compass, the invention of Dr. L. J. Briggs and Dr. Robert B. Heyl, of the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C. The compass is the same as that used by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on his New York to Paris flight.

Fighting the Trade Union Bill

By LOUIS ZOOBOCK.

The anti-labor legislation of Baldwin's Government is evoking indignation among the toiling masses in England. The wave of protest from the workers is spreading from day to day. Thousands of demonstrations, conferences and mass meetings, pass resolutions against Baldwin's Bill. All over the country the workers are testifying to their firm decision to resist its putting into practice by every means at their disposal. The trade union rank and file have lined up and determined to make every sacrifice for the prevention of this anti-labor Bill being passed.

On the other hand, however, all the symptoms prove that the official trade union and Labor Party leaders are reluctant to fight. The heroes of "Black Friday" and the betrayers of the General-Strike and the miners' strike are once more meeting to plot another betrayal of the workers. The parliamentary fraction of the Labor Party has declered its intention to fight every line and point of the Bill; the trade union leaders are not chary of sounding phrases and unctuous declarations as to the need of resisting the passing of the Bill by all possible means. They do not, however, suggest any practical measures for the fight.

The only measures to which they would agree are "Constitutional and Parliamentary." To stop, however, at "Constitutional" measures alone, in the face of a ready-made Government majority, would mean the surrender of the position without striking a blow; in a word would mean —treachery.

The course of the Conference of Executives held on the 20th of April merely confirms that the present trade union leaders are not in a position to lead the workers in their energetic fight with the Government and its anti-trade union Bill.

"Political" Action.

The Conference was attended by 600 delegates from various trade union executives, affiliated to the British Trade Union Congress and representing over four million organized workers, as well as by representatives of the Labor Party Parliamentary Fraction. The tone of all speeches completely confirmed the assumption that leading trade union circles intend to carry on a mere campaign of agitation against the trade union Bill and that their fight will be purely "political," i.e., limited to parliamentary methods.

George Hicks, (well-known for his "Left" sympathies) presided at the Conference and emphasised in his speech the significance of the Bill, pointing out that it revives all those persecutions and repressions met with by the pioneers of the trade union movement. If the Bill is passed the whole trade union movement will be delivered up to the tender mercies of the State legal machinery which is entirely in the hands of the capitalists, etc. "Therefore," added Hicks "we must make use of every kind of weapon in the arsenal of the working class."

Henderson chiefly touched upon the question of political funds in his speech. Analysing the fourth clause of the Bill, he stated: "Actually, and in practice, it revives upon the trade unionists an obligation which no other body of citizens is required by law to observe." "The clause represents, in my judgment," he continued, "an outrageous invasion of individual and personal rights."

The Fiery Snowden.

Snowden, referring to a letter from MacDonald, pointed out that the present correlation of forces in parliament make it impossible for the Labor Party to count on the intervention of vital alterations in the Bill.

The General Council's resolution condemns the Trade Union Bill as one "designed to cripple the workers' effective powers of resistance against attacks by organised employers upon the already inadequate standards of wages and conditions of employment." The resolution goes on to condemn the Bill as an attempt to undermine the power of the Labor Party which puts its monetary funds chiefly from collecting small subscriptions among the workers. The Bill perpetuates and accentuates the advantages of the capitalist parties, which get big sums of money by selling through its agents in the Government, titles and honors as well as by secret subsidies from the wealthy.

The resolution then goes on to say: "We warn the Government that the consequence of placing in the hands of the Law Courts such vast powers of repression and obstruction proposed in the bill will be to bring the law into contempt. To enforce against the Trade Unions the provisions of the bill must inevitably lead to widespread and concerted resistance on the part of the organized millions of trade unionists, and will intensify and embitter industrial conflicts.

Minority Movement Fights.

Gossip, member of the Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Furnishing Trades Society and representative of the Minority Movement, brought the following amendment: "That this conference asks the parliamentary Labor Party to obstruct the whole business of government in the House of Commons, and to do everything possible to force the Baldwin Government to resign, and also instructs the General Council of the T. U. C. to make all possible preparations to use the industrial weapon by a general strike, if necessary, in order to defeat the Government."

The Conference turned down the amendment and adopted the resolution by an overwhelming majority.

Such is a short summary of the labor of the Conference of Executives. The trade union bureaucrats did not allow the Left Wing delegates to take active participation in the conference. Gossip twice asked the floor, but was not allowed to speak. The same thing happened to Cook when he endeavored to come forward against the resolution. The Conference allowed no discussion of the Chinese question. Its machinery worked smoothly enough. The bureaucrats don't want a fight and have no faith in successful resistance to the Government. All their hopes are centered on one thing: when the Labor Party comes to power, it will repeal the outrageous act.

Ode to The DAILY WORKER

By District Attorney Michael A. Driscoll.

(The DAILY WORKER hesitates to print this ode delivered by District Attorney A. Driscoll, in Part 1, Special Term of the Supreme Court, during the trial of William F. Dunne. Our hesitation is not caused by any doubts concerning the District Attorney's lyric gifts; but we find the publication of free verse an expensive business.)

We will pass over

Whose flag of freedom
And the emblem of Liberty

Has from its very beginning
Stretched forth
Its arms in welcome
And of haven and sanctuary
To the Oppressed Of All Lands

And on its very

Is indelibly impressed

The names of those who freely
Gave their very life's blood
That the Nation might exist and endure
In accordance

After Nanking

At this very day we do not yet know the outcome of the negotiations between the American, British and American imperialists. It is clear to us why Great Britain insisted on sharing responsibility in a war against China with other powers. The fear inspired by the Left Wing, by the hegemon of the Chinese revolution is of enormous political importance. But Baldwin and Chamberlain know perfectly well that the MacDonalds and Thomas are not going to lead the working masses. They know and they know that there is some real weight in Cook's declaration, that a war declared by the Conservative Government against the Chinese people may cause the miners to re-talkits by a war against the Conservative Government. Under these conditions it is difficult—absolutely impossible—to start a great war single-handed.

Great Britain was compelled to seek some reliable partner. Even prior to the Nanking bombardment she secured such a partner in the "fearless friend", Mussolini. But they fearless friend has his own ambitions and interests, and, what is more, he cannot be of much help. A partner like the United States is, of course, more interesting and more valuable.

We do not know as yet the price Great Britain paid for her new partner. But there is no doubt that joint action by the United States and Great Britain in the attack on defenceless Nanking does not yet signify the beginning of a lasting alliance. The interests dividing these two states in China are still in force. On the other hand, we must take into account the enormous significance of the factor which leads to their alliance—we have in mind the social and political character of the new stage in the Chinese revolution.

ECHOES are to be heard in many European countries of the co-ordinated action of Great Britain and America against China. In this connection the attitude of the German press is very characteristic. The overwhelming majority of German papers described the Nanking events in the London fashion. "Vorwaerts", follows the London example in carefully concealing the frightful results of the prolonged bombardment with the heavy guns.

The French press is not much different from the German press. Only the "Humanité" described the details of the Nanking bombardment. All other papers speak of the Nanking bombardment merely as an unpleasant incident. We may surmise that the bourgeois press of all countries supports the united front of Anglo-American imperialism in its attempt to turn the wheel of the Chinese revolution with the help of their naval forces. In order that the reader may have a clear conception of how the European press pictures the Nanking pogrom, we will quote a short leading article from the "Manchester Guardian" of March 26th. We choose the "Manchester Guardian", as this paper has a reputation as an old Liberal and neutral organ, which from time to time has taken the liberty to come out against Baldwin's policy in China:

"The story of events at Nanking is confused and the upshot is not yet completely certain, but much of what happened can be reconstructed. The Northern army entered, as at Shanghai in a hostile and vengeful mood. It looted, as it went and the advance-guard of the Cantonese looted as it came. The foreigners at Nanking concentrated on a hill near the north gate of the city, under the guns of the ships remaining there until disciplined Cantonese troops entered and restored order, or simply as a temporary measure until they could be withdrawn to the ships in the river. It was in this position that they were shelled by troops described as Chinese "irregulars", and some of them were killed. It is unusual for "irregulars" to be equipped with guns, but in China the distinction between regulars and irregulars is sometimes a fine one, and perhaps depends mainly on the disposition of the troops at any given moment to obey the orders of their chiefs. At all events, the Cantonese commanders, in the danger, the commanders of the British and American warships in the river issued an ultimatum demanding their safe delivery on pain of a bombardment of the city. At the same time, when the foreigners were shelled, the warships bombarded the quarters whence the shelling came and landed naval forces, which, at the cost of some casualties, succeeded in withdrawing the foreigners from their dangerous position. It is possible, as it is much to be hoped, that all the foreigners have now been brought safely away. The leaders of the Canton army, like all Chinese Governments, are no doubt ready and anxious to secure the safety of foreigners. The trouble is that they are in imperfect control not only of the auxiliaries who accompany their advance, but also, it is to be feared, of some which are supposed to be more closely under their orders."

THIS article needs no commentaries. The facts here are given in such a way as to picture the bombardment as an unpleasant and cruel necessity. Nevertheless this article as well as the entire European press is interesting and characteristic also from another point of view. It is no secret that the British Empire, in spite of the meaningless phrases of the pacifist gentlemen who endeavor to prove that the Empire is an alliance of free republics, is cemented together with the blood of the mass extermination of "aborigines" which is a usual phenomenon in the history of the British Empire. The forms and methods of these extorminations were determined by circumstances and by the development of military technique. British imperialism, as imperialism in general, held and still holds under its subjection the weaker nations primarily with armed force, with the help of which the discontented masses are being mercilessly crushed. But the European press, and particularly the British press was compelled to maintain silence during the Nanking bombardment. This proves that the imperialists finds it difficult under the present conditions to secure the support of the general public in their Chinese policy. The imperialists know that. This explains why their wrath is directed primarily against the Soviet Union and against the revolutionary Labor movement in all countries. Every article in the British press dealing against China is accompanied by atrocious attacks on the Soviet Union and the Communist movement. All correspondents in Shanghai consider it their duty to describe the unusual influence of Borodin, a citizen of the Soviet Union, on the Chinese Revolution, and the sympathy of the Chinese Revolution for the Soviet Union.

What was and is the response of the European Labor movement to the intervention in China in general, and to the beginning of the war in particular.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

(c) Chief Tasks.

The need of unanimity of methods and of approach to the problems of building our party is apparent. To become efficient organizers of Communists and to actually organize the workers for the overthrow of capitalism, we must learn how to connect the struggle for our ultimate aims with that of the elementary needs of the workers.

Our members too often overlook these needs, although being employed in the shops themselves, because the everyday abuses caused by the system of exploitation have become so habitual and ordinary. While this is too often accepted merely as a part of wage slavery, it is precisely the things which are objectionable to the workers. The objections, however, are not given expression.

It is the duty of our shop nuclei to take up these issues, formulate the proper demands and correct slogans. But so simplified that a few are concentrated on and couched in the language of the workers. These issues should be taken up through our various means of activities, and particularly through the shop bulletin. Properly conducted they will serve to establish wide contact with the workers and gradually move them into action against their class enemies. There are for example the following issues:

1.—Speed-up System and Long Hours of Work.

In most of the industrial enterprises of the country, prodnction is standardized, the individual output being ever increased. Various devices are applied to increase the speed of the motions of the workers, in addition to the fremor driving them to the point of exhaustion. Most places long hours obtain with a shift system. Sometimes double shifts with no extra pay for night work. Yet when work is slack the speed does not diminish and seldom are the hours reduced, but workers are rather placed on part time employment while the industrial reserve army waits at the gate for jobs. Thus increasing the competition of the workers end further intensifying the speed-up system. Shop nuclei must here take up the question of getting rid of slave driving bosses, reduce hours of work, point to the need of organization of the workers and solidarity with the unemployed.

2.—Health and Safety Conditions.

In the factories many conditions obtain dangerous to the health of the workers. Lack of ventilation, use of poisonous materials, insanitary toilet and washroom facilities, etc. Lack of safety devices make accidents daily occurrences. Compensations for accidents generally mean a maze of red tape and graft by petty politicians. In this respect shop nuclei can be instrumental in leading the fight for healthy conditions and for real safety devices and assist workers or their relatives who are victims of accidents to obtain adequate compensation.

3.—Violation of Working Agreements.

This is a problem mainly of shops of organized workers. With unorganized workers the bosses make no agreements. Violations often occur as a result of demands that workers prepare their own material not specific in the agreement or carry heavier loads than specified; or in many other ways. Discrimination generally results where objections to such practice is made. If not through actual lay-offs, then often in assignment to lesser paid or more disagreeable work. While the violations also often have a direct connection with co-operation of trade union officials who sell out the interests of the workers and co-operate with the bosses.

Schemes of so-called adjustment through adjustment boards, arbitration, or permanent labor boards generally further discriminate against the workers in favor of the bosses. A fight against such violations, discriminations and the schemes to uphold them broadens the basis of shop activities as well as the ranks of the fighting forces. It often makes possible the establishment of effective connections from shop to shop in the same industry. A part of the fight must be the exposure of the corrupt practices of trade union officials where such is the case.

4.—Fight Against Wage Cuts.

Wage cuts are ordinary occurrences whether applied on the hourly rate or piece work rate. The first task of shop nuclei members should be to understand the nature of the cuts, discriminations and the schemes to uphold them broadens the basis of shop activities as well as the ranks of the fighting forces. It often makes possible the establishment of effective connections from shop to shop in the same industry. A part of the fight must be the exposure of the corrupt practices of trade union officials where such is the case.

4.—Fight Against Wage Cuts.

Wage cuts are ordinary occurrences whether applied on the hourly rate or piece work rate. The first task of shop nuclei members should be to understand the nature of the cuts, discriminations and the schemes to strengthen the case of the workers and proceed to organize resistance. This gives a particular opportunity for party members to explain the system of exploitation of the workers, proceeding from a concrete basis and will generally bring ready response from the workers concerned. While in the organized shops, the fight should be conducted through the unions, in unorganized shops the fight becomes directly bound up with the problem of organization of the workers and all actions must be properly organized. In each case, however, splendid opportunities are offered to Communists.

5.—Blacklist System, Spies and Special Police.

These are some of the usual methods maintained to keep the workers in subjection, particularly in large enterprises of heavy industry. Blacklists often appear in deliberate workout cut for agitational, some times requiring personal sacrifices on the part of militant workers, while spies appear in the shops to help get the goods on the workers. The whole system in the United States often extends to embrace the leading industrial institutions in smaller cities where big factories are located. While such conditions point to the need of caution of shop nuclei work, it will also particularly tax the ability of the members to expose this system and generally the fight will enter directly into the field of political struggles.

6.—Bosses' Welfare Associations.

Such associations appear in many forms and are but the first steps toward company unions. Sometimes they may have a sport character, social, or beneficial character. They are, however, always means of the bosses organized by them with especially fitted agents put in charge to help tie the workers to the factory wheel. With this follows generally stock selling schemes to make the workers believe they are part owners of the plant and thus readier accept whatever conditions are imposed. Otherwise the workers obtain little or no additional material gain for themselves, but it helps to divide their forces. An exposure of such hideous schemes is necessary to show the workers that real improvements can be gained only by united class efforts and not by false illusions of generosity of the bosses.

7.—Joint Works Committees and Company Unions.

Despite its name, Joint Works Committees supposedly representing both workers and bosses wherever such committees exist, they are merely instruments in the hands of the bosses. Sometimes the members supposedly representing the workers are elected by them and other times hand picked by the bosses. The final decision always rests with the management and the committees thus serve as a shield to make the workers believe they have something to say.

Company unions are, of course, outright tools of the bosses and organized particularly to prevent real working class organization in the shop. Secondly, they are organized to help keep the workers' conditions down and maintain a low rate of wages. In either event, it is necessary to both work from within and from without to expose these schemes and replace them with real workers' shop committees and real labor unions.

During elections of workers' delegates to so-called Joint Works Committees our shop nuclei should bring forward their own progressive candidates together with a program corresponding with the needs of the workers in the shop. The program, of course, cannot be realized by these committees but helps to expose them and lay the basis for real shop committees. As for "company unions," past history has proven that when a few live militants are inside they can make contact with the workers there and change the efforts of the bosses into [illegible] organization.

8.—Workers' Shop Committees.

Being close to the rank and file workers, shop committees will easily become responsible and trusted and become real instruments in their struggles for better conditions. Creation of shop committees are one of our real tasks. The most important issues in the shop should be put forward as the basis of propaganda for election of shop committees. In organized shops, this should be done with the assistance of the unions. In unorganized shops, these committees will become the most effective organization campaigners. Shop committees are composed of delegates elected by the workers only; and generally a certain number from each department in the industrial plant. At least this should be the basis of our propaganda to be particularly put forward when wage cuts are threatened or other encroachments in working conditions are made by the bosses.

While at certain periods the possibilities of establishing such committees may not be so very good, it should nevertheless be propagated at every opportunity. Naturally many difficulties will arise in attempting to put this into effect, but we must learn how to overcome such difficulties.

9.—Strikes.

Our shop nuclei members must always participate in and be in the front ranks of every strike. If within organized plants, the activities are naturally concentrated through the unions. With unorganized plants the difficulties become great.

Strikes within unorganized plants are, however, very common. Generally lack of leadership and lack of organization is apparent and often leads to defeat. When important issues appear in such shops, our shop nuclei members should always be fully acquainted with the sentiment of the workers and their readiness to resist if a strike is impossible or some other means of demonstration of resistance required. If strikes are possible, the first steps must be to organise to win the strike. Have the demands properly formulated. A strike committee through representation from each department. The committee should be authorized to communicate with the employers, report back to the workers and arrange for regular strike meetings, pickets, etc. The local party organization must be kept fully in touch with and guide the activities in such strike developments.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

MALE sob sisters are bawling us that the Lindbergh flight across the ocean and his visit to England helped to cement peaceful relations between Europe and the United States. But there is no noticeable peace character to the exercises that are being conducted thruout the United States in honor of the intrepid airman. We see him in a picture on the front page of the New York Times laying a wreath on the grave of the "unknown soldier" while surrounded by soldiers with bayonets pointed to the heavens.

WAR planes, soldiers, guns, police, battleships—this is the background against which Lindbergh is cast. People resent being told that another world war is inevitable after reading the peace mush that fills the columns of the capitalist press. Accustomed we are to human gullibility the way the reading public has fallen for the bokum peddled by the press about Lindbergh has amazed us.

THIS is the day of the rotarian. Here is a phenomenon he can understand. No superior intellectual can tell him Lindbergh did not cross the ocean. He knows he did. And since three fourths of the news space in our dailies are occupied with recounting the young man's deeds and his homely virtues what chance has the intelligent mortal who understands what the hunk is about to convince our rotarian that the object of all the hullabaloo is not to honor Lindbergh but to arouse the spirit of patriotism, the spirit that makes a declaration of war easy for our masters?

THERE are other things to comment on besides Lindbergh. Otherwise we might develop a single track mind. There is the news that Chang-Tso-Lin's fifth concubine has arrived in Peking from Mukden, which kills the rumor that Chang was to leave immediately and which indicates that he will stay about one more week. Had the balence of the marshall's visible means of entertainment arrived we would fear that he intended to stay forever.

STRANGE that we hear no reflections cast on the marshall's morals by his British, American and French allies. It is true that the average person does not expect the French to generate much indignation over issues of this kind but the British and their American "cousins" are particular and Great Britain has sent more than one expedition to some benighted eastern country to blast the natives on to the road of true connubial morality. But Chang, bandit and polygamist is as free from criticism as if he were the head of the Salvation Army.

THERE is a reason as the owner of a nationally advertised and nationally devonred breakfast food used to say.

MUSSOLINI'S popularity is increasing so rapidly in Italy that nobody can approach him now without being searched for arms except his wife and children. Having crushed all the opposition parties in the country, says a writer in the New York World (he ignored the existence of the Communist Party which is functioning even tho illegally) Mussolini has now on his hands a savage crew of black-shirted patriots looking for honors, offices and graft that are not available for them. So Benito must wave the stiletto and threaten to conquer Jugo-Slavia, France and build up a second Roman empire to appease the appetites of his followers.

THE "duce" no longer appears at mass meetings and demonstrations. Since the last attempt was made on his life by a member of the Fascist organization, Benito has been living in a state of terror. The World correspondent says that the Fascist organization is seething with dissatisfaction. Unless Benito gives his ambitious swashbucklers a war and fat glory they expected they will have his scalp. There is no cementing influence in this organization except terror and the lust for gain and "glory."

SCORE DISPATCH OF U. S. MARINES TO PEKING AREA

Chiang's Disciples In Canton Ban Strikes

PEKING, June 13.—Dr. Wellington Koo, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the "Peking Government," has made public a formal protest against the occupation of Tientsin by American marines.

Although the protest is merely formal, it is regarded as extremely significant in that the Peking Government has been forced by public opinion to protest against the American action. Sympathy for the Nationalist cause is so strong in the north that the corrupt Peking "Government" is compelled to make concessions to public opinion.

The dispatch of American marines to Tientsin is a violation of the spirit of the Washington treaty as well as the Boxer protocol, the note states.

Duncan Visits "Boy Emperor"

LONDON, June 13.—General Chiang Kai-shek, renegade Nationalist, is reported to have captnred Haichow and Sklyang in northern Kiangsu Province.

Major General Duncan, commanding the British forces in China, is reported to have visited Hsuan Tung, (the "Boy Emperor" forced from Peking by the Nationalist commander General Feng) at his residence in the Japanese concession in Tientsin.

Right Wing Forbids Strikes

SHANGHAI, May 3. (By Mail).—The right wing government in this city has issued an order forbidding workers to strike. The order signed by General Chien Ta-chun says:

"According to the first section of the ninth martial law regulation the Commander in charge of Martial Law is empowered to prohibit public gatherings, strikes by laborers or merchants, end publications, such as newspapers, magazines, and cartoons, when considered to be detrimental to the military control. Now that peace has only been restored recently, the peoples' minds are still in a troubled state, and the Martial Law headquarters has decided to suppress every kind of strike.

The public is hereby notified that rash actions without the sanction of the Martial Law authorities will be severely punished, so as to maintain peace and order in the city."

Help the Nationalist Wounded.

Readers of The DAILY WORKER are again nrged to send whatever they can spare to the Chinese Red Cross at Hankow to aid Nationalist troops wounded in the struggle for the liberation of China.

The New York Times, thru its British-inspired correspondent, Frederick Moore, is fighting the Red Cross campaign. Don't let the Times crush it.

DAILY WORKER readers are urged to aid the Nationalist cause by sending contributions to Mme. Sun Yat-sen, care of the Chinese Red Cross, at Hankow, China.

Trade Conditions Again Good in Wuhan Province As the Nationalists Gain

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

WUHAN, June 13.—The plot of Shanghai merchants supporting Chiang Kai-shek to cause a financial crisis here has evidently failed. Due to the victorious advance of Chinese Nationalist troops there has been a definite amelioration of business.

Prices of foodstuffs are becoming stabilised and many Chinese and foreign business firms have been re-opened.

A telegram just received here from Shanghai declares that Chiang Kai-shek has driven Shantung troops from the last fortified position in Kiangsu province.

The anti-Japanese movement is growing here and proposals for a boycott of goods from Japan are being seriously contemplated as a protest against the sending of Japanese troops through Shantung.

Forced to Retreat

In arguing the question of granting a certificate of reasonable doubt in the case of our editor, William F. Dunne, Judge Mullan was forced to admit that "the case does not come within th epurview of the statute." What does this mean? It means clearly that the entire case thus far, was, in the opinion of Judge Mullan, unjustifiable. It means that it is becoming more and more evident that the case was a frame-up against The DAILY WORKER. It means that through the support and energy of the comrades behind The DAILY WORKER, we were able to put up such a vigorous fight for our paper, that we were able to wring from the mouth of the judge, this damaging admission.

But we have only begun. The five hundred dollar fine still remains as a heavy weight around our necks. The sentence against the members of our staff still stands. Dave Gordon has been sent to the reformatory. We must wipe this dastardly verdict off the statute books. The black reactionaries must not be permitted to claim a victory. Your dollars have work to do, comrades. Send them in at once.

NEWARK FURRIERS WIN BIG VICTORY; DEFEATING RIGHTS

All Scabs to Be Fired Immediately

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—A smashing defeat for the Matthew Woll Oiser Schachtman combine in the Furriers' Union is seen as a result of the decision of the Consolidated Furriers' Association to employ only those workers who are members of Local 25 of the Furriers' union and at the same time to the fire the 12 scabs that have been working during the period of the strike.

The bosses' association also agreed not to interfere in the internal problems of the union.

The conference was held here Saturday with representatives present of local 25, local 58 of Brooklyn and the bosses. After a lively discussion the unanimous decision was that the progressive administration by Morris Langer would be the only one recognized by the manufacturers. Local 58 promising not to allow any of its members to work in Newark or in any way interfere with the activities of the New Jersey local.

Rats Right Wing Scabs.

The conference also decided that the 12 scabs that the machine hoped to use as a nucleus to break the strike are immediately to be thrown out of the shops and not allowed to return.

After the successful conclusion of the conference, delegates representing local 25 left for Washington to attend the convention of the Furriers union that opened up yesterday morning.

Hold Big Celebration.

The victorious furriers held a celebration meeting last night at Montgomery Hall. Headed by a brass band the workers marched from union headquarters, 194 Prince St., to the hall being cheered by hundreds of workers that lined up on the sidewalks. At the meeting rank and file members of the organization spoke on the significance of the victory.

(Worker Correspondent).

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—In order to get a clear picture of the strike of the furriers here and to the causes we must go to the roots of the matter. Local 25 has been a thorn in the path of the officialdom of the International Fur Workers' Union ever since the membership dared to elect its officials from the rank and file and ousted Milton Corbet, a slimy crook and a vice president of the International, who stole $40,000 of the union's treasury.

Since then Lucchi, Sorkin, Schachtman, Hilfers and Co. have been busy

Over 100,000 Lindbergh Leaflets Were Distributed At the Jingo Demonstration

Over 200 members of the Young Workers League and the Workers (Communist) Party joined in the distribution of 100,000 "Lindbergh Leaflets" during the city parade yesterday afternoon.

A sharp warning that the young aviator's courageous feat was being utilized for militarist propaganda was contained in the leaflet which also detailed the career of the flyer's father, the late Congressman Carl A. Lindbergh who was described by "patriots" in 1917 as "a sinister and dangerous influence" for his ceaseless activity against the war aims of American capitalists.

"Follow in the footsteps of Lindy's father;" the leaflet concluded. "Don't allow the war jingoes to turn this demonstration into war propaganda."

Over 5,000 copies of the city edition of The DAILY WORKER, which contained a number of special articles on Lindbergh, were also distributed.

LINDBERGH LONE CIVILIAN IN BIG MILITARY SPRAWL

Huge Crowds Trampled By Mounted Cops

By Charles Yale Harrison.

Ten thousand soldiers, sailors and marines and one lone civilian paraded up Fifth Ave. yesterday. The lone civilian was Charles A. Lindbergh, the intrepid trans-Atlantic flyer. The thousands of soldiers, sailors and marines were supplied gratis to the people of New York by the obliging secretaries of war and the navy.

As was to be expected the Lindbergh welcoming demonstration degenerated into an orgy of war propaganda.

Early in the day millions of New Yorkers turned out and lined the sidewalks to catch a glimpse of the livest bit of army and navy propaganda that ever fell into the hands of the recruiting gentlemen. Every window on Fifth avenue was jammed with faces eager to see the son of the pacifist, ex-Congressman Charles A. Lindbergh, Sr.

Plenty of Soldiers.

What was actually seen was battalion after battalion of marching U. S. soldiers, who sweated and panted up the avenue. The West Pointers, ridiculous in their starched pants, strutted along. Bands played well known military airs. The crowds cheered.

"Where's Lindy," shouted the crowds.

Punch Women.

Still more soldiers, more marines, more bands. Officers marching stiffly holding their swords at the salute. The air was white with impromptu

STRIKING FUR WORKERS TO WEAR ARMY HELMETS ON PICKET LINE

Ex-Service Men Will Lead Thousands in Mass Demonstration Today

"Tin" army hats are to be worn on the furriers' picket line this morning by a group of ex-service men who are members of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union.

This is part of the preparations being made by the Joint Board to meet the squad of notorious characters whom they are told will appear to create disorder on the picket line, under pretense of being trade unionists answering the call of Matthew Woll, chairman of the Furriers' Reorganization Committee.

According to I. Shapiro, chairman of the Strikers' Law Committee, the Joint Board has been reliably informed that the Curley gang, Frenchy's gang, the Kid Dropper gang, led by Kid Archy, Lipky and Little Maxie, are to come into the fur market with instructions to attack the workers on the picket line.

Threaten Workers.

"Some of these people were in the fur market this morning," says Shapiro, "and made open threats to the pickets that what they will do tomorrow when they have all their companions on hand. Mr. Woll and Mr. Edward F. McGrady have announced that they are inviting union men to come to the picket line tomorrow; but we know the sort of characters who are really to be brought there under this pretense, and we are making every preparation for them.

"We are engaging several cameramen, including one operating a motion picture machine, and we intend to take photographs of these gangsters and of their attempts to assault workers. We will have such photographs to compare with rogues gallery pictures, and thus prove our statements about the sort of persons being employed by the right wing officials to try to break the strike."

Workers who wear trench hats will carry signs reading, "Our heads are not safe. Gangsters are here." Mathew Woll and McGrady take away the gangsters," and a number of other slogans.

Campaign Against Gangsters.

"The Joint Board is determined," says Shapiro, "to carry on a vigorous campaign against the gangsters and gangster methods employed by the right wing. We are going to expose this whole matter, and try to force an investigation, either by police authorities or a committee of citizens. These attacks on fur workers, such as the nearly fatal assault on Aaron Gross, a Joint Board business agent last Thursday, must stop. We are not going to rest until this is accomplished."

Aaron Gross, who was hit over the head with a bottle which severed an artery in his neck, is still in a very critical condition. His assailants, Meyer Friedman and Benjamin Cohen are out on bail, and their case, which came up for hearing in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning, is postponed for a week.

SOVIET OFFICIAL MURDERED IN NEW TERRORIST PLOT

Labor Protests Against British Provocation

BERLIN, June 13.—Reports received here state that the Soviet government has announced the murder of a prominent Communist named Turoff in the vicinity of Moscow. Turoff's murder is regarded as a part of the campaign of terrorism which White Guards are waging with the approval and support of Great Britain.

Turoff is said to have had a long revolutionary career. He is reported to have joined the Communist Perty in 1918 and to have held the position of Deputy Chief of the Soviet Trade Mission in Berlin.

Bare More Plots.

MOSCOW, June 13. — Numerous secret organizations of the White Guardists are being uncovered hv the Orgn thruout the Soviet Union. Many of the White Guardist groups are said to have been organized by British spies sent to the Soviet Union for that purpose.

Workers thruout the Soviet Union are demonstrating against the series of provocatory murders instigated hy Great Britain. The murder of Turoff coming on the heels of the assassination of Voikoff and two bomb explosions has created a furor among workers and peasants thruout the Soviet Union.

Labor unions are contributing funds to the Gas Research Institute, following the lead of the city of Moscow's answer to Chamberlain.

Soviet Policy Firmer.

Litvinoff's note dispatched to Poland yesterday requesting Poland to take stern measures to disperse terrorist organizations in Poland, is regarded as an indication that the Soviet Union may adopt a firmer policy in dealing with its enemies.

Although the workers and peasants' government of the Soviet Union wishes only peace and an opportunity for construction, it is stated that it will not tolerate the open and flegrant attacks which its enemies are openly making against it.

Howling Missouri Mob Burns Negro Brothers In Huge Lynching Orgy

LOUISVILLE, Miss., June 13.—Two brothers, Jim and Mark Fox, Negroes, were burned to a stake near here early today hy a mob of at least 1,000 people.

The Negroes were taken from Deputy Sheriff Permenter, Clarence Nichols, sawmill superintendent, notorious for his brutal treatment of men, was shot and killed. The Negroes were accused of the crime.

They were arrested a few hours after the slaying and were being rushed to Jackson, Miss., for safe keeping when the mob overpowered the officers and took their prisoners into a nearby wood.

"AMO" FIRST AUTO PLANT OF U. S. S. R. SHOWS BIG GAINS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail)—"Amo!"—a magic word in the Union of Soviet Republics—a blazing beacon of the New Russia.

For "Amo" is the name of the first automobile plant within the borders of the Workers' Republic, and since czarist rule made no effort to create an auto industry, this Soviet achievement has established a new frontier in Russian industrial development.

Has 1,400 Workers.

The "Amo" (Moscow Automobile Association) Plant is located in the Simaskaya industrial district on the south side of Moscow. I visited the plant on a busy Saturday and watched its staff of 1,400 enthusiastic toilers building auto-trucks and auto-buses that are being put to work in all parts of the Soviet Union, just as quickly as they can be turned out.

The thing that thrilled one here in the "Amo" plant was the determina-

LINDY GREETED AS GRAND EXCITEMENT FROM LINDBERGH

Utilize Popularity for Militarist Propaganda

WASHINGTON, June 13 (FP).—Young Lindbergh, attractive, modest, courageous and highly skilled as an aviator, flew across the Atlantic alone, to Paris. When he reached the French capital he was welcomed with an enthusiasm for which the Latin peoples have a natural tendency, but which on this occasion they raised to the level of hysteria. This young American had challenged their imagination, their love of heroes. And he did not come as a soldier or messenger of war, but as a pioneer of internationalism in the air. The French were tired of criticizing America. And their government had its own political and economic reasons for encouraging this friendliness.

So we had the statesmen and scientists and soldiers of Europe meeting to honor this American flyer. And then came Belgium's royalty to do the same. Next the British people responded to the appeal of the hero, and their royalties and dukes and admirals and generals fell in line. They could not help liking Lindbergh, and there was no harm in sharing the limelight with him.

American Publicity Seekers.

This limelight in Europe pleased the American public. Times of peace, when they are times of rapid accumulation of wealth, lend themselves to ventures in organized enthusiasm. Advertising has come to be one of the peculiarly American sciences. It was called into service, Lindbergh was "sold" to an eager public in millions of printed words daily. Calvin Coolidge annexed his reception, ordering him home promptly to receive a decoration before the President should leave for the Black Hills. And the army and navy and the munition manufacturers saw a golden opportunity for themselves.

Here was a young hero whose father, as congressman and as candidate of the Non-partisan League farmers for governor of Minnesota, had been the fearless enemy of "Wall Street's war," and had published a book to prove that Morgan & Co. and other big banks of Wall Street had conspired to bring the United States into the world war for the purpose of further aggrandizing the big bankers and to further enslave the wage workers and farmers of this country. Why not take this young hero and make a military figure out of him? Why not make the public forget that he flew to Paris as a private citizen, a civilian, on a purely civilian voyage with which the army and navy had nothing to do?

Army and Navy.

So Lindbergh became more and more emphatically Captain Lindbergh, and then Colonel Lindbergh, when the military elements discovered the ironic humor of the situation. He was ordered home on a cruiser. He was met by an army dirigible, a navy blimp and scores of army planes. He was given a military uniform. And a military parade was staged on Pennsylvania Ave. This made possible the boast that the elder Charles Lindbergh, student of banking and stalwart foe of big bankers and their militarism, had been sneered at by the regular Republicans in 1917, 1918 and 1920. And it suggested more money for militarism.

Secretary of State Kellogg was prominent in the welcoming ceremonies. Kellogg, as senator from Minnesota in the war period, was one of the ugliest-mannered of the spokesmen of the steel and banking and grain buying and railroad clique that tried to terrorize the state into snubbing the elder Lindbergh in 1918. Kellogg is credited with calling Lindbergh a German agent at that time; he did at least furnish much of the strategy of that persecution of Lindbergh and the farmers' organization. Now he welcomes the son who in those years was his father's close confidant. Minnesota farmers drove Kellogg from the Senate, but Coolidge made him secretary of state. And political expediency and a hope of using the son to serve the militarist and banker cause has led the agile Kellogg to the grandstand.

Militarist Holiday.

Back of the public hysteria over this fine young man is a sense of relief that the age of personal adventure in pioneering is not gone by. A machine age has not killed the chance for a young man to challenge the elements and win great fame. There is also the hunger of a comfortably-fed people to be thrilled. And gratitude that this can be done without war.

But the army and navy will make Lindbergh their text in a fervid plea for bigger appropriations. Not civilian flying, but war preparation, is the picture they ask Americans to see and applaud.

A portrait snap, made in Paris, of Benjamin F. Mahoney of San Diego, Calif., designer of the Spirit of St. Louis, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's plane. He's even younger than the intrepid New York-Paris flyer.

THE FUR WORKERS ASK FOR YOUR HELP.

Last year the furriers in New York won a 40 hour week; they also won an increase in wages. This was done under the leadership of the Joint Board of the Furriers Union.

But the labor bureaucracy is not concerned with the gains of the workers. They want the control of the union even against the will of the members. They have conspired with the bosses against the workers even at the expense of bringing back the sweatshop conditions. They are determined to put the loyal leaders of the Fur Workers and Cloakmakers Unions in prison under frame up charges. The Furriers Union was compelled to call a strike to save the hard won gains of the workers of last year.

Fifty Thousand Dollars Needed Immediately—Buy Bonds.

All workers, labor unions and workers organizations are called upon to buy bonds in denominations of $10, $15, $25, $50 and $100.

These loans will be returned in weekly payments upon request, beginning with the middle of July 1927.

Send in your first payment on the bond today.

Get Certificates On Pledge.

Workers are called upon to make periodical payments on pledges from 50 cents to $2.00. You will get a certificate for each payment on the pledge. Get some certificates and solicit among other workers for pledges.

Furriers Coney Island Stadium Concert

On July 16th we must pack the Coney Island Stadium for the Furriers concert. Tickets are $1.00 each. Labor unions and workers' organizations should get a supply of tickets to sell to their members. Individual workers should buy and sell tickets to other workers.

Branch Office.

Bonds, certificates, tickets and information can be gotten at the Branch Office of the FURRIERS STRIKE FUND & RELIEF COMMITTEE at office of the Furriers Joint Board, 22 East 22nd Street.

All payments for this committee must be made to this office.

28 Organizations Of Stamford Call For Sacco Freedom

STAMFORD, Conn., June 13.—Twenty-eight fraternal and labor organizations assembled here in a mass meeting to protest against the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti. Five hundred workers unanimously endorsed a resolution demanding the release of the two persecuted men at the meeting, held at Columbus Hall under the auspices of the local Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Conference.

Edward Sentz, secretary-treasurer of the Stamford Central Labor Council, presided. The speakers were: Will de Kalb, of International Labor Defense; Nicola Napoli, editor of Il Lavoratore; and George Siskind, of the Workers' Party, of New York.

Another Army Plane Falls

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., June 13.—Two army air officers—Lieut. Frank B. McConnell and Lieut. Cornelius Anderson—were killed and their bodies badly burned here this afternoon when their plane fell during machine gun and bombing maneuvers.

McConnell is from Nashville, Tenn., and Anderson is from Lacenter, Ky. Both are rated experienced flyers. Their plane was destroyed by fire.

Paul Crouch, Uncowed By Prison, Starts on Anti-Imperial Lecture Tour

CHICAGO, (FP) June 13.—Over 2 years in military prison have not dimmed the anti-imperialist ardor of Paul Crouch, the former U. S. army sergeant sentenced to 40 years for radical activity while stationed in Hawaii. On his release from Alcatraz June 1 he immediately began preparations for a nationwide speaking tour to begin in Los Angeles June 19th under the auspices of the All-America anti-Imperialist League.

Other towns in the itinerary include San Francisco, Portland, Oregon, through Washington state, Montana and Minnesota, to Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New York, New Haven and Boston.

In a letter to the American section of the league in Chicago Crouch says: "During the long days in prison I determined that as soon as I got out I would carry the message of the oppressed peoples not only to my former comrades in arms, the American soldiers who are sent to suppress them, but also to the potential soldiers, the great mass of American workers and farmers who make up the raw material for war and imperialist aggression."

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—The first casualties in the strike that Local 478 of the Teamsters Union are conducting occurred when 5 strikers were arrested for an alleged assault on scab truck drivers. The truck drivers who carry building materials are involved in the strike. They are asking for a flat increase of $1 per day in wages. Thus far efforts to meet the employers and arrive at a settlement have met with failure.

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—When an agreement was reached with Local 52 of the Electricians and the Master Electrical Association, representing 50 bosses, work estimated at $10,000,000 was resumed. The electricians and helpers have been out on strike since May first when their agreement expired. The bosses thot that they could break the ranks of the union and decided to fight the local unions. Today the ranks of the union are 100 per cent strong and the men have gone back to work with $.50 increase per day plus a sliding increase from $3 to $5 per day for helpers.

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—At a mass meeting last night held under the auspices of the Jewish Progressive Club and the Council of Workingclass Housewives the workers, 400 in number, passed a resolution endorsing the fight of the furriers affiliated with Local 28, and pledged themselves to aid and help them in every way.

Speakers from Local 35 and the Joint Board of Furriers addressed the audience.

Oakland for Sacco And Vanzetti Altho Council Sabotages

By ALMARD TOBEY.

OAKLAND, Cal., June 13.—Resolutions to free Sacco and Vanzetti were passed at an International Labor Defense meeting, held in this city, attended by 500 or more citizens representing 18 labor organizations and many fraternal and liberal bodies at which J. Stitt Wilson presided and John D. Barry of the San Francisco Daily News and Florence Thompson, student at the University of California spoke. We believe that the sentiment expressed at this meeting is the sentiment of the majority of the people of this vicinity, especially as the local press, particularly the labor press, gave us favorable mention repeatedly.

The meeting was a splendid success. The Central Labor Council withdrew from the affair, but that did not hurt it any.

Crouch Speaks.

The I. L. D. gave Paul Crouch a reception Sunday, June 5th, at which John E. Snyder, C. Almarz Tobey, Anita Whitney and others spoke. The musical program consisted of songs by Clarence Tobey, Comrade Beck and a trio with Madame Beret, Joseph Margolis and Geo. Allen Kelly, Jr., Vane Dart acting as chairman. Refreshments were served and everybody had a fine time. Paul Crouch as guest of the evening gave a fine talk.

A reception is planned for Charlotte Anita Whitney for Wednesday evening, June 15th, when we will all turn out to render tribute to her before she begins her term in San Quentin under the Criminal Syndicalism law of California. We, her old friends and associates, feel that we can do this much for her anyway. Otherwise our work in the I. L. D. here is progressing well and our members are beginning to understand its scope better.

Yonkers Builders Seek Court Order to Stop Unionization Program

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 13.—William J. McGeory, of Yonkers, president of the Building Trades Council of Westchester County, was the principal witness today in the action brought by twenty-five building material firms against Patrick D. Pearce, business agent for Local No. 45 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America.

The action is brought by the Willson and Adams Company, of Yonkers, in the name of 25 building and construction firms in an effort to obtain a permanent injunction restraining Pearce from attempting to unionize their yards and workers.

NEWARK FURRIERS WIN BIG VICTORY; THE RIGHT OPPOSITION IS DEFEATED

trying to break the unity of the membership.

Four Misers, Hillman, McGrady and Hilfers tried to talk to the members of Local 25 for several minutes. They failed. Then the International delegations, assured an injunction against the union and its local officials, decided not to appear in court. This silence fell them.

Deal With Bosses.

Then the International betrayers made a deal with the bosses, guaranteeing them that everything under the sun. Naturally the bosses fell for this as they saw an opportunity to increase their profits and to lower the standards of the workers in the shops, conditions that were obtained after years of bitter struggles with the bosses. On the heels of this the International opened an office in Newark and attempted to induce the members of Local 25 to register. Coupled with this undertaking the bosses proceeded to lock out the workers when they appeared in the shops on a Monday morning a few weeks ago.

When the membership saw the crimes that the traitors of the International were perpetrating against them they reveited. On Wednesday evening, May 25th, a membership meeting was called and the entire assemblage voted to go out on general strike against the treacherous acts of the International officials and the bosses.

400 Workers Involved.

In this strike 400 workers are involved and 20 nationalities. The war area extends from New Brunswick to Paterson.

What are the issues with which the International and Local 25 are at loggerheads? On one side the International offices have lined up with 12 scabs including Milton Corbet, the crook; the bosses organized in the Consolidated Fur Dressers' Association, all the officialdom of the N. J. State Federation of Labor, Hilfers, Jennings & Co., the courts and the politicians of the city and state.

Lined up with the members of Local 25 are its honest officers including Morris Langer, its business manager, around whom centers the entire fight with the International.

What charges do Schachtman & Co. make? The smoke screen that is thrown out is "Communism". They this cry the International raises the cry of Americanism! The bureaucracy of the A. F. of L. maintains that they are the 100 per cent Americans and that Local 25 and its officers are propagating "Communism," with orders from "Moscow" and not fighting in the interests of trade unionism and Americanism.

To Hide Treachery.

The Jennings, Wolfe, McGradys and Hilfers are raising the slogan of Americanism in order to hide their treacherous work and betrayals to the rank and file of organized labor. But they are doomed to failure. They have taken unto themselves allies that the workers know cannot fight for the interests of organized labor and the entire working class. These allies are the police, politicians and bosses.

Communism and the Workers (Communist) Party have been dragged into the struggle against the progressive and honest leadership of Local 25. Altho the membership of the Rabbit Workers' Local Union 25 did not know the difference between the left wing, the right wing and Communism. But before the fight is over between the International and their allies, the bosses, with local 25 the workers will understand the differences. The rank and file see clearly the ridiculousness of the bankrupt cry of "Communism."

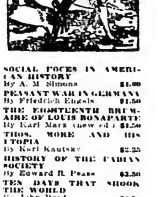
They know that they have a right to choose their own officers. They know that for the past nine months the International and the executive board have been honest and have fought in the interests of the union and better working conditions. The workers also see the treachery and traitorous acts the officers of the International and the A. F. of L. have committed against them. They realize now, while the general strike is on that they are not guilty of any charges against the union. They were suspended illegally. The International wants to impose scabs and grafters, as officers, on the backs of the local membership.

Victory Is Near.

Victory is at the threshold of the officers of Local 25, thanks to the splendid support of the progressive elements in the unions of New Jersey. With this victory over the labor fakirs and corruptionists the left wing will take on a new breath of life, increased courage and fight the fight for emancipation not only from the traitors in the unions, but from the bosses and the yoke of capitalism. The threats to drive out the left wing in the A. F. of L. in New Jersey will not meet with great success after the defeat in Newark.

Communists will aid in the fight to remove graft and cogruption within the unions and by their participation in every struggle the workers will soon learn the Communists are out to build up the unions, make them more powerful and to make trade unions organs of struggle and defense for the working class.

Mussolini's New Game; Wages and Prices See-Saw; Lira Still Rises



ROME, June 13.—Five hundred thousand textile workers have accepted a forced cut of 10 per cent in wages, beginning the 1st of June. To offset this new blow to the Italian workers, reductions in the retail prices of certain staple articles, averaging 10 per cent, have been announced; and to counteract this harsh treatment of the masters, the Confederation of Industries is recommending additional wage reductions.

On March 31st, there were 268,000 workers in Italy, totally unemployed, more than double the number for the previous year.

The continued rise of the lira is keeping the credit situation in an unsettled state, in spite of low interest rates, and business continues depressed, with wholesale prices declining, in face of the favorite showing of government accounts.

A Neglected Strike and Official A. F. of L. Scabbery.

The production of eighteen open shop mines of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in the Pittsburgh district in May was 493,035 tons against 451,690 tons in March.

A coal miners' strike has been in existence since the first day of last April.

It is pertinent to inquire what has the officialdom of the United Miners of America been doing to help win the strike and defend the present standard of living of the mine workers?

It is also pertinent to ask what has been the contribution of the officialdom of the A. F. of L. to the winning of the miners' strike?

Careful investigation has failed to convince us that the Lewis leadership of the United Mine Workers of America has put forth a serious effort to defeat the bosses. John L. Lewis, whose resonant voice thunders so loudly at conventions against the radicals, has been comparatively silent since the rank and file of his unions brought up their tools from the mines on the first of last April. The red-baiting hero crouches like a frightened rabbit before the bosses. He is leaving a gallant army disorganized to do the best they can against a powerful and well-disciplined enemy. So much for the direct leadership of the United Mine Workers of America.

What about the executive council of the A. F. of L.? What part has it taken in this struggle?

What it has not done in winning the strike for the miners is a matter of common knowledge. But it has not been idle in the meantime. It has been engaged in strike activity or rather strike-breaking activity.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., is a member of the United Mine Workers of America and former secretary-treasurer of the miners' union.

Under Mr. Green's direction and directly led by Matthew Woll, a vice-president of the A. F. of L., a committee of labor fakers and gangs of underworld thugs have been busily engaged trying to break a strike of fur workers in New York city.

This corrupt outfit has not a word to say in behalf of the miners struggling to maintain their present standard of living, but it has time, money and gunmen to spare to break a strike of fur workers.

This gives as clear a picture of the character of this strike-breaking aggregation as could be penned. The facts need no embellishment. They speak for themselves.

The only addition that need be made to this indictment is that every class-conscious worker in the country must see the necessity of organizing the left wing in the trade union movement and burying those fakers, politically, beneath an avalanche of rank and file resentment.

The strike-breaking officialdom of the American Federation of Labor must go.

Pilsudski's Guilt Now Evident.

Not even the most gullible can longer doubt the responsibility of the fascist government of Poland for the assassination of the Soviet minister, Comrade Voikoff. Saturday official announcement was made by the bloody Pilsudski government that the murderer, because of his youth, would probably be lightly dealt with, as "Poland exercises extreme clemency in cases of crimes of minors." A request that the culprit be turned over to the Soviet government was declined, as was also the demand for an investigation in an effort to definitely establish the identity of the instigators of the murder.

This attitude of the Polish government sheds a glaring light upon the real murderers and proves our contention that Pilsudski and his fascist government are vassals of Britain, the mad-dog of Europe, in its conspiracies against the workers' and peasants' governments comprising the Soviet Union.

The whole thing becomes perfectly clear. The murderer was chosen for his youth, instructed to commit the crime, whereupon he would be instantly taken into custody by the Polish police, where he would be in safe and friendly hands. The "apologies" and messages of condolence sent by Pilsudski's underlings to Moscow were all part of the plot because the wretched hirelings of British imperialism knew that Moscow would see through the pretenses of Poland and would demand stern repression of the hordes of white-guard terrorists who are colonized in Warsaw and other cities for the purpose of plotting murder expeditions against the leaders of the revolution. The murder at Warsaw was part and parcel of British provocation against the Soviet Union that has been consistently carried on since the tory gang of forgers came into power. The profuse apologies on the part of Poland were part of the plot. The murderers could hardly be expected openly to gloat over their act, but their role was to pretend to abhor the act while at the same time conducting themselves in such a manner that the Soviet authorities would know it was merely adding insult to injury.

Tory Britain has chosen fascist Poland as its agent in the plot to create a bloc of nations against Bolshevist Russia. This fact is plain to everyone capable of the slightest political understanding. The capitalist press pretends that Russia is indulging in absurd exaggeration in placing the blame for the murder where it properly belongs—at the door of Britain. But the imporialists who pay the pen valets of capitalism also know the game and they are alarmed that the Soviet leaders have the courage to expose to the world the real forces behind the series of provocations culminating in Voikoff's murder.

The Soviet government exposes the real menace in Europe to world peace by ripping from the face of Britain its hypocritical mask. The pent-up fury of the masses of revolutionary Russia is being directed into channels that will make more powerful the mighty Red Army. The limit of provocation has about been reached. One more step may be the last before the signal is given for the defenders of the proletarian dictatorship to avenge the deaths of the martyrs who have perished at the hands of the imperialists. If the command is given to crush the fascist agents of Baldwin and Chamberlain these criminals will not only face the avenging hosts of revolution on foreign soil, but will have to reckon with their own revolutionary forces at home who will take advantage of the crisis to fan the flames of revolt in the "mother" country.

Weakening the Building Trades Unions.

The various plumbers' strikes taking place in Greater New York furnish a fine lesson for those who want to avoid the weakening of organized labor through lack of united action. Plumbers' local No. 1 of Brooklyn is conducting a strike against the bosses. They have been left in the lurch by their international officials who came before them and advised arbitration, which was repudiated by the rank and file. While they are out there is also a lockout against the plumbers in Staten Island and Queens.

All these strikes and lockouts are being betrayed by the building trades council which permits other building trades workers to stay on the jobs in spite of their provisions against handling scab material or working on buildings where scab labor is used. Then the plumbers themselves, in turn, are damaging their own chances of success by refusing to unite with the plumbers' helpers who are on strike in Greater New York. If they would unite with the helpers, who are organized into a body trying to get recognition by and admission to the American Federation of Labor, against the bosses and carry on a determined fight to induce the other building trades to go out with them they would soon bring the employers to time. But, under the present conditions the employers of Brooklyn are taking advantage of the confused conditions among the unions and the traitorous acts of the international officials to begin the organization of a company or employer-controlled "Amalgamated" union of plumbers—the first in the building trades in the city.

It is not yet too late to repair the damage done by this series of blunders and betrayals—the plumbers' helpers being neglected by the plumbers, who in turn are being betrayed by both their international officials and the building trades council. If the strikers will close their ranks and start a determined drive to enlist the support of the rest of the building trades, even over the heads of the Building Trades Council, they still can save their unions and win their demands.

Another Paid Liar of the New York Times.

That notorious hag of the journalistic red-light district, the New York Times, maintains the world's greatest staff of paid liars whose duty it is to malign and villify every effort of labor throughout the world to strike from its body the chains of capitalism. Two of them are noteworthy. In China they have Frederick Moore who concocts mendacious tales against the national liberation movement. In London they have Ernest Marshall, who acts as press agent and editorial writer for the Baldwin government of forgery. This worthy, writing what purports to be a news story about British reaction to the executions in Moscow of the paid spies of London banking houses, indulges in editorial fury against the Soviet Union.

This pen prostitute calls the leaders of the Soviet Union "the Moscow murderers," and adds that their "extermination is a necessity for the well-being of the rest of the community."

From the safety of his London room, Marshall and his ilk can hurl maledictions against the revolution in Russia, but let them dare try to turn their words into action and they will find not only an invincible Red Army to smash any force his masters can hurl against the revolution, but thousands upon thousands of class-conscious and revolutionary workers in the capitalist countries who will do all in their power to cripple any army sent against the Soviet Union.

Class Justice and Hero Worship

An Answer to the Letter of a Sympathizer

By BENJAMIN D. WOLFE.

In The DAILY WORKER of April 26th you refused to publish my article, stating, in reply to my request for an explanation, that the article was "full of hero worship" and that it "fell beneath the Communist dignity of grown-up politically-developed people." You suggested that I read Petty step by Debs. The failed to speak with." He feels that "this sort of thing has not helped the Socialist Party . . . and . . . will not help our cause."

Ruthenberg and Debs.

In the first place I think Comrade Richarts makes a big mistake in comparing our treatment of Ruthenberg with the Socialist Party's treatment of Debs. It was the fact that the rest of the paper contradicted Debs' words that inspired the degeneracy of the Party he did not have the courage to break with. It was the contradiction between the militant spirit of struggle he stood for and the cringing spirit of class collaboration in which the officialdom of the S. P. is acting. It was the contrast between his "criminal" record and the Party's "respectability," his desire for unity of all labor forces and the S. P.'s splitting tactics, his friendship for the Russian revolution and the Oneal-Cahan hatred of it; his participation in united fronts and the S. P.'s sabotage of them—in short, it was the contrast between words and deeds that made the use of the heroic figure of poor old Debs as a fig-leaf to cover the S. P.'s naked betrayal of the class struggle so disgusting.

But as to honoring Debs, reprinting his speeches, commemorating his life, even we who see his weaknesses do that. And I think we will do more of it as the memory fades of his final failure to break with a degenerating and decaying party that was feeding on his name and reputation, and as the things he stood for—unity, solidarity, industrial unionism, struggle against war, uncompromising class struggle—stand out more and more.

Richarts Ignores History.

You say, Comrade Richarts, that "revolutionary parties, scientifically-minded people" don't do that. How about the Russian Party with its Lenin; the German Party with its Liebknecht and Luxemburg; the French Party with its heroes of the Commune? Surely the workingclass also has its heroes, and does not shun the idea of honoring them.

Not Hero Worshippers.

True, we are not hero worshippers in the sense that we look to them for help in the building of the movement that in turn "builds" them. We know that without an army the greatest general is nothing but we know also that a good army needs a good general and without officers an army is no army.

But of what importance is a leader such as Debs or Ruthenberg after he is dead?

Tradition Plays a Part.

To answer that question, Comrade Richarts, you must understand the part that revolutionary tradition plays in the building of a revolutionary movement. The tradition of the Communards of 1871 gave us May Day. The tradition of the French revolution and of '48 gave France the Paris Commune. The tradition of the Paris Commune gave Russia 1905 and the tradition of 1905 gave us 1917.

The bourgeoisie tries to make us forget our workingclass heroes and our workingclass traditions of struggle. It tries to tell us that "May Day is un-American" the it originated in America. That "revolution is un-American" the America was born of a revolution. It tries to make us forget the left wing of the American revolution, the Daniel Shays and Thomas Paines and those who are too prominent to be forgotten, the Patrick Henrys and Thomas Jeffersons—it conceals their revolutionary character. Because the master class controls the schools, the press, the church—our memory is painfully short. We must struggle to preserve the precious heritage of workingclass heroes and workingclass struggles. Without such a continuous and growing revolutionary tradition each generation must begin again from the beginning. Our class will grow in ripeness as we learn to treasure the traditions and inspiration it has for utilize it and speed it in all our plans.

American Traditions.

In the new world war that is approaching the tradition of Debs and Ruthenberg—the tradition of struggle against imperialist war—will prove a priceless American heritage. Above all that of Ruthenberg, who, a thousand times more than Debs, was the first American to clearly formulate the struggle to change imperialist war into class war, into civil war. It is our task to make the whole workingclass remember and understand and build upon that tradition. Let us conserve and spread the memory of Debs and Ruthenberg, as we were written by him. He saw our class as a whole, its allies and its enemies and this relation to other classes more clearly than any of the rest of us.

Pointing out and avoiding their errors, we must keep alive the memory of Debs and Ruthenberg, as we must revive the memory of other American workingclass heroes (such as Sylvia) whom we have permitted to become names. But above all we must keep alive and carry to all our class the memory of Ruthenberg for he is the outstanding figure the American workingclass has so far produced. The DAILY WORKER talks too much about Ruthenberg? My complaint is that it does not talk about him enough.

Chicago Launches Drive to Increase Subscription List

CHICAGO, June 13.—A special committee, headed by S. T. Hammemark, Chicago representative of The DAILY WORKER has issued a call for a conference to be held at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard, on Friday, June 17th. A mid-summer subscription campaign is to be launched and all Party units and supporting and sympathetic organizations are to be busy obtaining subscriptions between now and July 15th, when the drive will end.

At the meeting reports will be made by Comrade Arne Swabeck, and the delegates including representatives of the foreign language press.

On July 2nd, a special Chicago edition to be edited by Thurber Lewis will be issued for wide distribution.

This activity is by way of reply to the attacks on The DAILY WORKER by the courts and other reactionary forces.

Large Audience at Reading of Poems of the Revolution

$262.21 was realized from "Red Poets' Nite," held for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER, it is announced. This affair was arranged by Nucleus F-4, sub-section 1-B, Workers (Communist) Party.

A group of the most prominent of the radical poets participated in the program held at the Labor Temple. The program presented was the first of its kind held, revolutionary poetry being read in many languages, including English, Yiddish, Russian, Chinese, Hungarian, and Japanese.

Moissaye J. Olgin, editor of "The Hammer," Yiddish Communist monthly, presided.

Among the poets represented were Michael Gold, who read "An American Funeral"; Abraham Ruisin, famous Yiddish poet; H. Lalveck, author of "Shop" and "The Golem"; Adolf Wolff, Joseph Freeman, A. B. Magil, Mani Leib, Max Slengel, Louis Egri, Hungarian poet and author of "Rapid Transit"; Siego Ogino, Simon Felshin, Ho Su-shing and Eli Siegel.

The committee in active charge consisted of A. Finkelberg, Rose Baron, S. Shipman, A. Wolff, M. Woll and J. Nekon.

of the 152 returns still to come in the Labor Party has won 18 seats, the same number it held in the last parliament. The government party is faring badly, the de Valeraites running closely behind it. When this was written the government party had only 25 seats against 61 for the combined opposition.

THE defeat of the Government party would mean additional anxiety for the British government. The Free State government is simply a puppet of British imperialism and an official of the Dublin cabinet recently stated that should England engage in war with a foreign power the Free State would be morally obligated to lend her assistance. It is not at all unlikely that this statement may contribute as much as any other single factor to the defeat of the Government.

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

VOIKOFF PROTEST MEETING TONIGHT

Will Warn of Menace of New World War

A special meeting for Peter Voikoff, attaché of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics to Poland, who was murdered last week in that country by a monarchist, will be held tonight at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave.

While the workers at tonight's meeting will mourn the loss of that brilliant fighter for the working class, they will also hear of the latest attempts of world imperialism to fight against the first workers' republic.

It is now self-evident that the assassination of Peter Voikoff, the Soviet ambassador to Poland, was not a mere accident but part of a well laid-out plan carried on by enemies of the workers' and peasants' government of Soviet Russia.

The throwing of the bomb into the crowded Communist meeting in Moscow, the murder of the Soviet official who was taking a spy to the Russian boundary line, the attempted assassination of Bukharin coming as they did after the raid by the British government on Arcos and the breaking off of relations by British imperialism with Soviet Russia, shows that the Voikoff matter is not merely one of assassination, but one that shows the danger of a world war and the necessity of defense of the workers' government of the Soviet Union.

M. J. Olgin, who participated in the revolutionary struggles of the Russian workers, will be one of the main speakers. Others include Alexander Trachtenberg, William F. Dunne, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, John J. Ballam, Melech Epstein, Rebecca Grecht, Sam Don, Bert Miller will preside.

Hearing Today of 5 Plumbers' Helpers Jailed as Pickets

The five plumbers' helpers arrested last Thursday for picketing will come up for a hearing in Coney Island Court this morning. At the time of their arrest one of the strikers, Thomas Russo, was severely beaten by a policeman.

The helpers have been on strike since April 1. They are fighting for union recognition and increase of wages.

Pay Scale $5 a Day.

Plumbers' helpers are being advertised for in the capitalist papers, and $5 a day is being offered. The Active Association, a notorious strike-breaking organization is now carrying an ad in The World, in which the helpers are offered one dollar a day more than the average scale before the strike.

An important mass meeting of all members of the American Association of Plumbers' Helpers will be held tonight in the Church of All Nations.

Matters of vital interest to the membership will be taken up, according to C. E. Miller, president.

Fur Boss Held in Heavy Bail.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 13.—Bail of $75,000 was set by Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins here yesterday for the release of Nathan Ressler, president of the Yonkers Fur Dressing Company held on an indictment charging first degree arson.

No bondsmen appeared at the hearing when the bail was set, and Ressler was returned to jail.

$6,000 for Furriers Relief Fund, Double Shop Chairmen

Congratulations to the victorious Newark furriers was sent last night by the joint shop Chairmen's Council of the furriers and cloakmakers.

The meeting of the executive board also decided to start a campaign to collect $15,000 for the furriers' relief fund.

The telegram to the Newark furriers read: "Congratulations. We half-your victory as a victory of progressive organized labor against the bosses and their union agent."

Students Beaten Up On Sigman Visit to Take Legal Action

Some legal action against the officers of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union is being contemplated by three members of the International Students' Association who were expelled from the headquarters of the union when they tried to call upon Morris Sigman and Julius Hochman on Saturday, and at the corner of Fifth Ave. and 16th St. were severely cut and beaten by gangsters employed by the union.

The chairman of the association, A. Wagner; secretary, H. Seiden, and M. Rosenbloom went to call on Sigman and Hochman to urge them to be present at a luncheon they were arranging for discussion of the situation in the needle trades. The students' group has for several weeks been actively interested in trying to arrange such a meeting in an effort to be helpful, if possible, in bringing about peace in the union. They have taken no sides in the matter, and were endeavoring to bring representatives of both factions to address the university students at the proposed luncheon.

As soon as they entered International headquarters Saturday afternoon, they were ordered out. At first they thot they had made a mistake and come into the wrong building; but they were told in a surly manner that this was the I. L. G. W. U. but they could not see either Sigman or Hochman, and they could "Get the hell out of the building, quick." As they went out, they were roughly pushed along down the stairs; and when Wagner reached the 5th Ave. corner, which was deserted on Saturday afternoon, a group of thugs attacked them and slashed and beat them.

The students, still suffering from their injuries, are planning determined action against those responsible for this assault. Incidentally, they have decided they are no longer neutral in the needle trades fight.

Einstein Theory Under Motion Picture Tests

CHICAGO, June 13.—Prof. Albert A. Michelson, world-famous physicist of the University of Chicago, will use motion pictures in his new experiments to test the Einstein theory of relativity, it was disclosed today.

Beams of light as they race back and forth from the mirrors he is using in his test will be photographed by motion picture camera lens, set for high speed. The purpose is to discover whether the light travels in the direction of the solar system with the same speed at which it travels at right angles to that direction.

If the light is not shown to travel at the same speed, it will be impossible to substantiate the Einstein theory, Prof. Michelson said.

Job Sharks Seek to Gouge Money From Workers

Prey Upon Victims of Unemployment

Employment sharks whose nests of graft line the Bowery in New York are getting more human every day in their practice of preying upon the unfortunate unemployed workers who drift into New York in an effort to find jobs. One of the most glaring incidents came to the attention of The DAILY WORKER in the case of Carl Schwartz, who bought for the fee of $2.00 a job wielding a pick and shovel on the Pennsylvania railroad at Logans, N. J.

Two Dollars For A "Job."

He bought his "job" from the employment concern of Rosen & Costello, on the Bowery, near First street, whose misleading sign about the job brought him into their clutches. After arriving at Logan on June 2nd, he worked until the 10th (pay day) and was informed that he would get no pay that day because he had not worked long enough.

He was then told he would have to wait until the 25th to get paid and that then he would only get paid until the 15th—the company holding back ten days' pay. The pay was at the rate of 40 cents an hour for a nine-hour day—making a total of but $3.60 per day. He was told he could get good board for $1.05 per day and the food served was such swill that none of the men who had money would eat it, although they had to pay for it just the same. All of them spent from $1.00 to $1.50 in order to get decent food in town near where they slept in railroad cars not fit for cattle.

Cheated Out of Wages.

Schwartz got sick and could not work on Saturday so he was told to go to Trenton on a pass to get paid. The Trenton boss told him he would give him a pass back to New York and he would have to see the employment sharks, Rosen & Costello. On calling on them he was informed that they could do nothing for him.

The result is that he was left stranded in New York, the employment fakirs had his two dollars and the Pennsylvania railroad had cheated him out of eight days' labor.

An investigation by congress should be ordered to probe this practice of interstate commerce in human labor power and the organized frauds perpetrated by the employment agencies.

Hunt Portuguese Flyer.

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 13.—Several boats are searching for Major Sarmento Beires, the Portuguese flyer, who has not been heard from for several days. The flyer intended to go to the West Indies, and left several days ago, but ships and radio report that the airman has not been sighted.

LONDON, June 13.—The Eastern Telegraph Company, an English firm, is laying a new armored cable across the desert between Port Said and Suez.

The object of the line will make possible messages from London to Bombay without being handled en route.

Furriers to Wear Tin Helmets on Picket Line

to picket, which Matthew Woll wants to have taken away, is to be tested by the case of 46 workers who were arrested yesterday morning on 27th street near 7th avenue, while picketing the shops of the Associated Fur Manufacturers.

The workers were charged with disorderly conduct, but the Joint Board attorney, Jacob Mandelbaum, argued that their picketing was perfectly lawful, and they were guilty of no offense. Magistrate Abraham Rosenblut, who heard the case in Jefferson Market Court, paroled the workers in the custody of the lawyer until June 17th, and requested the attorney to file a brief giving the legal arguments supporting the right to picket. This will be placed in the magistrate's hands today.

Arrest Daudet After Workers Protest; Cops Get Communist Leader

PARIS, June 13.—Widespread protest on the part of Paris workers has at last led to the arrest of Leon Daudet, Royalist leader.

Although M. Semard, Secretary General of the French Communist Party, had been unceremoniously dragged away to jail a few days ago, French police failed to arrest the Royalist leader. The excuse given by the police was that Daudet had been protected by a number of the young followers.

Parisian workers who had witnessed the police in action at Communist demonstrations rather doubted the inability of the police to cope with a handful of raw, enthusiastic young Royalists. They demanded the immediate arrest of Daudet.

Protest Semard Arrest

The protest of Parisian workers had its effect. At 7:30 this morning, Police Prefect Chiappe, accompanied by an army of policemen and firemen, surrounded the offices of L'Action Francaise, Royalist sheet.

Said the Prefect to the handful of Royalists, "In the name of the blood that you mourn" (Daudet's son committed suicide recently) "call you all now more French blood to be stilled."

Daudet (surrounded by his few score psychopathic followers) answered generously, "No. I do not wish to start a civil war." Shouting "Long live France," he walked out of the building with dignity and accompanied the army of policemen and firemen to the police station.

Secure French Imperialism

In the meantime Paris workers are demanding the immediate release of M. Semard, who has been sent to jail for eight months for opposing French imperialism in Morocco.

Sinclair Begs to Be Arrested But Boston Cops Shy

BOSTON, June 13.—The police department of this city, which has charge of deciding the merits of contemporary literature, refuses to arrest Upton Sinclair.

The author of "Oil!" arrived here a few days ago to make a test case in the courts when his book was banned by the local authorities. Yesterday Sinclair addressed a crowd of several thousand on the Boston common and compared his latest novel with "Hamlet" and the bible.

He received a tremendous ovation when he appeared. He recounted the story of the case and was interrupted only when a cop asked if he had a permit to speak. When this was furnished, there was no further official interference.

Courts Arrest.

"I wish you would arrest me," Sinclair pleaded with the sergeant in charge of the cops. "I would consider it the greatest privilege ever accorded me. And if it wasn't that I might be charged with bribery I would gladly offer you $1,000 to place me under arrest."

Girl Punished for Bumping Captain.

Betty Rogers, of New York City, was arraigned before Justice A. M. F. Seegar in the Supreme Court of New York City today and received a suspended sentence of six months for operating a car while intoxicated on April 8th, last. Miss Rogers drove a car which crashed into another in Haverstraw. In the collision captain and Mrs. William Bennett of Haverstraw were severely injured.

Taxes Fleece American Farmers of One-third Of Net Yearly Income

The American farmer is mulcted, in taxes, of one-third of his net income.

Sensational figures are disclosed in the report of a study made by the National Industrial Conference Board, 247 Park Avenue, New York, showing the acute crisis which American agriculture has passed through in recent years, and the heavy burden of taxation which it still carries.

In 1920-21, the report states, taxes collected from the farms amounted to nearly six times the total net profits from all farms. In 1921-22, there was considerable "improvement," when "only 77.7%" of the net profits of the farms was swallowed up in the maw of taxation.

For the last three years, the study shows, farm taxation has hovered at about the same level, about 33⅓ of the net income, this figure being nearly three times as high as taxation figures for the last three years before the war.

Celebration and Stage... Left Wingers, Boston Up at Convention

At the hour of going to press the only information received from the Washington convention of the Furriers' Ipsl was that Englander on international vice president of the union and a left winger, and Stein a delegate from Philadelphia, were beaten up by right winger gangsters.

"When you hear a man tryin' to discredit Uncle Sam, that's Bolshevism . . .

"When you hear a man sneerin' discredit on the sincerity of Washington and Lincoln, that's Bolshevism—because those two are the corner-stone of our patriotic faith.

"When you hear a man distortin', misquotin', misconstruin' our Constitution, that's Bolshevism—because that instrument is the soundest thing, it's the greatest safeguard of human liberty ever evolved from the experience of or directly by the wisdom of man."

...ad of course the inevitable appeal to womanhood. This by Virginia Terhune Van der Water in a League leaflet:

"Bolshevism and Americanism cannot exist in the same land. Our fight is not yet over. One war has been won. We are facing another war that we must fight with all our strength of will and purpose. It is the fight of Americanism against Bolshevism.

"Can women, whose men helped win the World War, hesitate to say on which side they stand?"

The National Association for Constitutional Government, with which are associated the Hon. James M. Beck and the Hon. David Jayne Hill, has issued a number of pamphlets, among which are: "Confessions of an Erstwhile Parlour Socialist" by Hermine Schwed, former lecturer for the Better America Federation and other professional patriotic bodies, and "The Enemy Within Our Gates: Bolshevism's Assault Upon American Government" by the Rev. Dr. Henry Campbell Black. In the latter appear such paragraphs as this:

"Bolshevists are the hyenas that slink upon the heels of the dogs of war. Wise men and patriotic men put themselves on guard; they do not parley with hyenas under soft Marmorean skies."

Dr. Black describes Bolshevism as not so much "a crime of political philosophy as a career of crime. . . . It is the enemy of the human race." . . . "It is organized anarchy and crime." . . . In pleading for stricter espionage acts and immigration laws he says: "For what shall it profit us to have all the commerce of the world, if in the end we blow up in one grand bolshevik bust!"

And of course, "Whatever we do, let us not procrastinate. The poison is in our veins. Let us make haste to eject it and to fortify ourselves against the plague."

No less weighty than the American Constitutional Association is the recently launched (1925) United States Flag Association with public officials, cardinals, rabbis, bishops and educators as its sponsors. It acclaims itself "The Great American Patriotic Society." Its purpose is to "put across" the American flag as representative of the institutions "which have given us the best Government on earth and in only a century and a half made this country the greatest and most prosperous nation in the world."

In appealing to employers to form "circles" in their factories a booklet of the Association says the name might be for example "The John Smith & Co. Circle of Buffalo" or "The First National Bank Circle of Syracuse." These circles are to promote locally "the basic aim of the United States Flag Association, to counteract and ultimately destroy the insidious forces, sinister influences, and disturbing elements, which, in these days of discord and divided counsels, are working and spreading to divide the unity of American citizenship and finally undermine the Republic."

And further:

"In organizing a Flag Circle the firm would be doing its bit to help counteract these growing forces and influences which are a disregard not only for property rights but also for personal liberty."

What are these "detrimental influences and forces" which the association says constitute the reason for its existance. They are explained in this footnote:

"As one of the several evidences of the rate at which one of these forces, Communism, is growing in this Country, it may be remarked that in 1920, Eugene Debs, the Socialistic-Communist Presidential candidate polled about 100,000 votes. At the last Presidential election (1924) the Communistic Presidential candidate, William Z. Foster, received something like 500,000 votes. The Communists of the Country are elated over the progress thus made and are confidently predicting in their publications and otherwise that at the next Presidential election (1928) they will poll between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 votes."

A frank exhibit is a pamphlet prepared by the Better America Federation in 1923 which it hoped to circulate in the public schools, but which the California school authorities declined to permit. It was entitled "America is Calling to the Students in Her High Schools and Colleges." It was in effect an appeal against socialism and public ownership, and warned students that "if these groups of free thinkers or liberals in America succeed in materially changing our Constitution or substituting some other kind of government, there will be no profit to worry about in business. Maintenance of the Constitution of the United States is the highest form of business insurance. Without it you will not need much of an education."

Most of the literature of the Better America Federation carries a sensational title, such as "The Red Menace," "The World Bolshevized," "The Enemy is Nationalized," "Strikes, not the American Way," "America on Guard."

The American Constitutional Association, confining its efforts to West Virginia, battles particularly with pamphlets to preserve the "fair name of the state." Its "West Virginia Wake Up," aimed at some New York ministers and lawyers interested in free speech who had invaded successfully a county closed for years to any discussion of unionism, ended with this call to arms:

"It is time for every 100 per cent West Virginian to show his colors. Our enemies have been at work hurling disrepute into our midst. We have turned the other cheek too long. Wake up West Virginia!"

In a subsequent leaflet addressed to the business men of the state, this organization devoted to the Constitution says:

"The facts are that Mr. Debs secured 919,799 votes in 1920 as the candidate of the Socialist Party, while in 1924 Mr. Foster received 33,276 officially counted votes as the candidate of the Workers Party. No Communist paper or official has predicted anything about the Communist presidential votes in 1928. Ed.

On the picket, on the picket line.
We'll sing and yell,
We'll fight like hell;
On the picket, on the picket line.

Mr. Coolidge Comes to Indiana

By B. SKLAHR.

Elaborate preparations are being made by the republican politicians of Lake County, Indiana for the reception of President Coolidge who is scheduled to arrive on the 14th of this month.

This visit was planned a long time ago and the readers of The DAILY WORKER will doubtless recollect that a delegation composed of prominent politicians was sent to Washington several months ago to invite the president to come.

Playing Politics.

At that time The DAILY WORKER pointed out the political importance of this invitation and its acceptance by Mr. Coolidge. We have stated that this is to be considered as one of the first steps in Mr. Coolidge's campaign for re-election and that it is no accident that the beginning of this campaign is to be made in the state of Indiana, one of the K.K.K. strongholds, the seat of the powerful U. S. Steel Corporation and the hotbed of reaction.

Seeks Reactionary Support.

The political meaning of Mr. Coolidge's visit, as we have already pointed out, is this: that in his campaign for re-election he will not seek the support of the progressive, liberal elements; but that he will seek to base himself upon the support of the most reactionary and corrupt elements of the electorate.

This contention is substantiated by the president's recent speech at the Decoration Day ceremony. In that speech Mr. Coolidge reached the very depths of hypocrisy. How could any honest man believe Mr. Coolidge sincere, when he intimated that the visit in Nicaragua was an act of good will, peace and friendliness towards the Nicaraguan people; that threats and coercions and intrigues in Mexico are likewise an expression of the most friendly and peaceful feeling towards a weaker nation; that the killing of Chinese people, by the gunboats and forces of the U. S. was prompted by the policy of peace and respect for the sovereignty of other peoples?

Mr. Coolidge's speech, veiled as it is with declarations in favor of peace, is in reality an appeal to the imperialists of America, to the capitalist interests which are seeking the expansion of their markets through conquest and subjection of weaker nations by the force of arms.

There is no reason to anticipate that Mr. Coolidge's pronouncements on the occasion of his visit to Indiana will not be in complete harmony with his Decoration Day speech.

Negro Vote Abandoned.

It is self understood that seeking to mobilize the support of the militarist, imperialist and all of the reactionary elements; that while catering for the support of the K.K.K., Mr. Coolidge definitely breaks with the great mass of Negro voters. This has been clear for a long time. Not on a single occasion of the numerous outrages committed against the American Negro has Mr. Coolidge taken a courageous stand in favor of equal rights and opportunities for the Negro citizen. Not once has Mr. Coolidge used his executive power to interfere on behalf of the persecuted and martyred victims of K.K.K. brutality, of race prejudice and discrimination.

Mr. Coolidge considered it important to furnish armed "protection" to the capitalists of America engaged in plundering Nicaragua, Mexico and China, but did not deem it advisable to say a single word for the protection of Negro citizens at home. This open defiance of the Negro electorate may have the same results as Governor Smith in the Chicago elections for the Negro—baiting Mr. Dever.

It is well to ask oneself what bearing Mr. Coolidge's visit is calculated to have upon local politics. Not in vain do the Indiana Republican politicians seek the visit of the president.

Republican Reverses.

The Republican Party of Indiana, while still in control of the machine, has suffered serious set-backs in the last state elections. The Democratic Party (for which we hold no brief) registered considerable gains. It was the only medium through which the people could express their protest against the corruption and the reactionary, oppressive rule of the K.K.K. Republican Party.

The Klan-controlled Republican Party of Indiana was torn by an internal fight, as witnessed by the fight of Governor Stephenson, (now imprisoned) against the K.K.K. fraction now in control of the state machinery; as witnessed by the fight of Mr. Adams, a Republican journalist, for a public investigation of the political corruption in the ranks of the party; and by numerous other signs and events that space does not permit us to mention.

The sorely pressed Republican Party of Indiana needs the presence of Mr. Coolidge in its effort to re-establish harmony within the Republican ranks for the purposes of the approaching Presidential elections. How successful Mr. Coolidge will be in accomplishing this task remains to be seen.

Spike Reactionary Guns.

If the reactionary designs of Mr. Coolidge's visit are to be counteracted the progressive, liberal forces of Indiana must assert themselves and make preparations for active participation in Mr. Coolidge's reception. Those elements who stand for peace with Nicaragua, Mexico, China and other weaker nations, would do well to send a delegation to request Mr. Coolidge to put into practice his peaceful declarations and cease to intervene with armed forces in the affairs of other peoples.

The Negro organizations should unite with organizations of other races in demanding that lynching cease; that the guilty instigators be punished, and that full rights of citizenship be fully granted to Negro citizens, as provided by the constitution.

Organized Labor should demand that the U. S. Steel Corporation be restrained from discriminating against union men, and that the steel workers be not intimated in their attempts to organize a union.

All honest elements must finally unite in demanding that the investigation into political corruption in the State of Indiana be conducted publicly, and that the results be published to the people.

Are there people in Indiana with vision, and with the interests of the people sufficiently at heart to take the initiative in such public action?

WORKERS OF NEW YORK PROTEST INVASION OF CHINA

Under auspices of the "Hands Off China" Committee, New York workers picketed the British Consulate last Saturday and protested the imperialist policies that lead to such bombardments as that at Nanking.

We have already pointed ont that the Second International has refused to give any active support to the Chinese revolution. We also know of the activities of the largest sections of the Second International. The British Labor Party has actually sanctioned the military hostilities of the occupation forces in China. The German Social Democrats tell the German workers through the "Vorwaerts" that the Chinese revolution is not their affair. The French Socialists helped Poincare to pass the mobilization law which enables the government to mobilize the population and to decapitate revolutionary organizations that dared to resist a war, while the Nanking bombardment was in the process of preparation.

We have before us a marvelously interesting document which characterizes the attitude of the Amsterdam International to the Chinese Revolution.*

HOWEVER, regardless of the position taken by the Second and Amsterdam Internationals, and by all reformists, we have reasons to believe in the growing sympathy of the working class for the Chinese revolution. This sympathy has not yet been organized; in many countries it has not yet taken definite shape. But the first attempts of the Communist Parties to mobilize the Labor movement for an active struggle against imperialist intervention have shown that the slogan for the support of the Chinese revolution meets with the warm sympathy of the proletarian masses. The Nanking bombardment was not a surprise to the Communist Parties. We have quoted above the British Communist organ on the growing war perils. If we analyse the documents of other Communist Parties, we will find that a petty war against China will, as a result of the development of the Chinese revolution, and the social crystallization of the character of that revolution, develop into a great war directed not only against China but also against the U. S. S. R.

*See Victor Demar's article in this issue, "Amsterdam and the Proletariat of the Colonies and the East," or Outgoeed's reply to a Chinese delegation.

In the manifesto of the Eleventh Congress of the Communist Party of Germany we read:

"Never, since 1914, were the war dangers so great as they are now. . . . Be ready everywhere and particularly in the chemical and metallurgical industries and by our transport to frustrate the war and undermine the front in the coming war."

In the manifesto of the Communist Party of France, we read:

"The road to peace lies in the unconditional support to the Soviet Union in its construction of Socialism, and in the victories of the Chinese national revolution which must be supported by the proletariat to the utmost."

This manifesto, as well as that of the German Communist Party, speak of the pending danger of a great war which must be resisted with all force.

The ideas expressed in the Manifesto of the Communist Party of France were advocated at a mass meeting on March 22nd, which, according to the French press, was, both as to the number of participants and the enthusiasm, much like the monster meetings in 1920. Semard's declaration at that meeting, that the Communist Party will not stop at anything until it turns he armed masses against the government and transformed the imperialist war into civil war and gives all power to the workers, peasants and soldiers, was met with vigorous applause by the working masses.

But, it must be stated that whilst the imperialists have already gone over from words to action, we do not yet see any concrete, definite action on the part of the working class in Europe starting a real struggle against the imperialists and giving determined support to the Chinese revolution.

It seems to us that now more than ever we must remember that a war cannot be stopped with words, slogans, and fine gestures. Moreover, under the present circumstances, mass action is the best agitational method. Imperialism does all in its power to keep the broad masses under its influence. The social traitors and pacifists help imperialism in that. These lackeys of imperialism must be mercilessly exposed. But exposure alone will not do. If it is true that the Nanking bombardment was the beginning of a great war—and it is absolutely true—then this calls out to the working class to exert heroic efforts in actually beginning to organize the war against war.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER V.

Special Tasks of Street Nuclei.

Being a numerically small Party with the membership widely scattered within the great industries of the country our street nuclei are due to remain of special importance for a long time to come. Their fullest development is, therefore, a necessity and while the general rules of organization function, which have already been emphasized, should be observed, there are also many special tasks entirely depending upon our street nuclei.

First, however, a few words on one important problem. To effectively carry out its special tasks the street nuclei must have an actual territorial basis with the members living within one certain territory. The existing language difficulties may sometimes necessitate certain exceptions. In order to avoid a return to the former language branches, where certain territories are exclusively inhabited by workers of one nationality it is often desirable to go beyond the borders and draw in to the nucleus members from other language groups.

Street nuclei have one thing in common with shop nuclei. While the latter apply themselves to the problems in their shop the former apply themselves to the problems of their territory and give them political content. It is, of course, necessary that a complete study be made of the existing issues which may vary within each territory. For exemple, high prices, high rents, housing and sanitary conditions, local political corruption, local race problems, local tax questions, local traffic problems or public school problems. Invariably all such issues can be splendidly utilized for mass agitation and propaganda purposes and if properly pursued can lead through struggles to real organizational results. Most often, however, they are entirely overlooked by our street nuclei.

Tenants leagues to combat high rents, parents leagues to fight obnoxious school methods or demonstrations against high prices oftentimes come into being spontaneously but lack however, usually the necessary leadership. It is precisely in such activities that the members of our street nuclei should participate as conscious political groups and function through fractions within the organizations once they are established. It goes without saying that this kind of work must be properly directed and be made the occasion of special study by the local, section or sub-section executive committee.

Party Campaigns on Territorial Basis.

Election campaigns are perhaps the best opportunities available for territorial activities (this does not in any way lessen their importance in the shops). To correctly understand and utilize election campaigns means to agitate candidates and to connect the local issues of the territory with the general issues in a practical way as a basis for our program to be put before the workers. If such local issues as those mentioned in the previous paragraph do not exist there will always be others more or less of the same character.

Next there is the problem of organizing local public meetings, indoor or street corner meetings using slogans in advertising the meetings which will actually bring the workers to turn out. Then as a necessary part of the campaign must follow distribution of the Party press and literature, leaflets, etc. This must be organized systematically. First, of course, the shops and factories in the territory should be covered, but also union meetings and other working class gatherings as well as house to house canvassing.

We can never be too painstaking in organising all these little details. As a matter of fact, this is what will particularly test the ability of leadership of the local, section or sub-section committee as well as the ability of execution by the nuclei. As the class struggle becomes intensified more meetings become mass demonstrations of greater magnitude and greater importance.

If an election campaign contains possibilities of being conducted on a united front basis, by supporting labor candidates or establishing a labor party, we must take advantage of the local or territorial situation in the same manner. While it changes the program and in most cases the character or the candidates, the activities remain the same, except that they are given a much broader basis. It is also well to remember that with such united front activities our Party retains its own identity and will put forward its own program.

Other campaigns, like those for the protection of foreign born, for defense of political prisoners, for relief of strikes, etc., must similarly be applied on a territorial scale. A campaign for army, militia, boy cooties, membership must likewise be correctly connected with the local issues of the territory and the measures for its application carried out systematically.

HAIL LINDY!

Impressions At Battery Park.

South Ferry.—Streams of jostling humans leave the elevated. "Buy a Lindy Button, ten cents!" The crowd moves like moulten lava. "Quit your pushin' ya big bum!" The working world is on parade. "Buy a Lindy button—ten cents!" Thousands of slaves have left their desk, shipping room, truck. No work for three or four hours. Hail Lindy!

On the side-walk thousands of workers are on parade. "Buy a picture of Lindy!" Men women, children in Sunday clothes. A sweating cop is losing his patience. "Keep moving. Keep moving!" Thousands of workers are on parade. "Buy a Lindy pennant and the 'Merican flag!" Thousands of slaves have been allowed to leave the machine, the office and the kitchen. Free from labor for three hours. Hail Lindy!

In the streets, miles and miles of uniforms. "The National Guard is good enough for Lindy. Join the National Guard!" A sea of perspiring soldiers stand in the baking sun. Regular army, militia, boy cooties. "Join the Army!" From the surrounding windows paper streams in clouds. Confetti, telephone books are torn up, correspondence files. The band strikes up. "Join The Army." Hail Lindy!

Overhead a sky-writer in beautiful long streams of white writes: "Hail Lindy!" Hurray! Hurray! Another plane whirrs overhead. Five army planes drone powerfully in precise formation. The flags are flying. The band strikes up. Thousands of workers are on parade. Thousands of workers have left the shop and office. Join the army. Hail Lindy!

TWENTY MINUTES AFTER ONE! Suddenly a whistle blows. Another. Then more until an unearthly din is made and continues. The crowd grows hysterical. It moves toward the bay. Large ships, small craft, all are heading for the pier in parade. Pennants are flying. Whistles blowing. Aeroplanes dip and circle gracefully in salute. Suddenly twenty huge planes appear above Wall Street. They maneuver, change formations, stream out to greet Lindy. The crowd cheers. The band plays. There he is! There he is! I see him! Hail—Hail Lindy!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

LEON DAUDET, French royalist leader, after having barricaded himself for days in his editorial offices and protected by a small army of followers, successfully defied the French police to arrest him, finally, magnanimously allowed his person to be taken into custody, if such a term can properly be applied to the delicate manner in which the police fulfilled the requirements of the law.

ONLY a few days ago this column commented on the difference in treatment accorded Daudet, the Royalist, and Semard the Communist. The latter was unceremoniously seized, and rushed off to prison without even being allowed the privilege of saying goodbye to his family. The former was serenaded by a prefect of police and permitted to make a speech from the balcony of his office, which exceeded in expressions of loyalty to France the most fervid oratorical efforts of the super-patriot Poincare. We presume the prefect would have kissed him on the ear if the law of gravity permitted him to ease himself up for the osculatory effort.

DAUDET made terms with the "enemy" and his troops evacuated the building with drums beating, colors flying and arms glistening in the sun. The New York Herald-Tribune professes not to understand this phenomenon. The not laying claim to conscience it can inform the "doubting Thomas" of the Herald-Tribune editorial staff that the explanation of the leniency shown Daudet in contradistinction to the severity of the treatment accorded Semard, can be found in the fact that Daudet is a bitter opponent of Communism and a supporter of the capitalist system while Semard is just the opposite.

GENEVA is the proper place to hold a conference on the question of over-crowding. Because we believe, if there is such a problem as overcrowding, the league of nations can dispose of it by setting the wheels of its war machinery in motion. There is no simpler or more direct way to reduce the population than to wave half a dozen war-colored flags in front of the cannon fodder of half a dozen of the most thickly populated countries, serve them a hooker of rum each and exhort them to get each other in the name of country.

OF course there are the usual drawbacks to this method and it is quite possible that the World Population Conference may reject this suggestion. Soldiers have a habit of cutting loose in an enemy country and the temporarily there is a dent in the population the slack is taken up when the new recruits begin to come in. There is also the danger that, owing to the effectiveness of our modern methods of conducting warfare, some practical joker in an airplane might circle over Geneva and drop a ton of high explosives on the gentlemen engaged in the business of solving the overcrowding problem from a safe vantage point. But there are hazards attached to every plan.

EVIDENTLY harkening back to the scriptural saying "A little child shall lead them," the British government has refused passports to parties of British workingclass children who were invited to visit the U.S.S.R. with a view to seeing how the children were being treated in the Workers Republic. Great Britain will suffer her little children to starve in her slums, for such go quickly to the kingdom of heaven.

ALL the children refused passports are under 14 years of age. Evidently the government of the mighty British empire fears that on the children's return the story of what they saw in the Soviet Union would have a disturbing effect on the waifs of British capitalism. But mighty the the empire is, the little children will find a way of getting to Russia.

A FINE opportunity is presented to those who wish to visit the Soviet Union in the six weeks' trip from New York to Moscow via Leningrad which is scheduled to leave here on July 14th. Those who have suffered from the nuisance connected with the European frontiers can visualize the superior comfort that can be enjoyed on a straight sea trip from New York to Leningrad without the necessity for spending money on visas. MORE U. S. TANKS, MARINES, PLANES RUSHED TO CHINA

U.S. Officials Exposed as War Lords' Aids

SHANGHAI, June 14.—Despite the bankik's utterances regarding China that have been emanating of late from the State Department at Washington, 1,150 American marines, twenty-five tanks and an aviation unit arrived here today on the transport Chaumont from Manila.

The marines, under the command of Colonel Davis, will probably be sent to Tientsin where American forces are concentrating in preparation for the advance of the Nationalist troops.

Fresenden Aids War Lord.

(Special to Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, May 10 (By Mail).—That Stirling Fresenden, American lawyer who heads the Shanghai Municipal Council, and Leabord Husar, former United States District Attorney at Shanghai, acted as advisers to Chang Tsung-chang, notorious Shantungese war lord, is one of the startling revelations that has come out at the trial of Husar for accepting bribes and permitting the smuggling of arms and opium into China.

Husar admitted on the stand that he had been employed by the Shantung war lord since 1924, while he was still holding office as United States District Attorney.

When asked by Judge Purdy whether any other "advisers" had been employed by Chang Tsung-chang, Husar admitted that Fessenden had been employed in a similar capacity. Husar also admitted that he had received a bribe of $37,000 for acting as a go-between in the shipment of $700,000 worth of arms

NEW YORK LABOR MEETS TO HONOR MARTYR VOIKOFF

Victim of Capitalist Hate for Soviet Union

New York workers held a Memorial meeting last night at New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., for M. Voikoff, Soviet Minister to Poland who was assassinated last week by the hand of a young Russian monarchist inflamed by British-inspired anti-Soviet propaganda.

The hall was jammed with those who came to hear the reason for the act which may precipitate another world war. H. M. Wicks, editor of The DAILY WORKER, Alexander Trachtenberg, Joseph Freeman, John Ballam, Rebecca Grecht, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Melech Epstein, and Sam Don were among the speakers.

Dunne Still Jailed.

William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER and M. J.-Olgin, announced as speakers, were unable to appear, Dunne not yet having been released from the workhouse on bonds pending a new trial, on the certificate of reasonable doubt which was obtained yesterday, and Olgin being ill.

"Voigoff is a martyr to the Russian Revolution," declared Bert Miller, business manager of The DAILY WORKER, who acted as chairman of the meeting. "Tonight we not only mourn the death of our comrade, but unite in protest against the new world war which is now being hatched by the imperialist powers."

Stand to Commemorate.

Following his call to rise in mourning for the death of the slain comrade, the audience stood in commemoration of Voikoff, and sang the Russian funeral march.

"Behind the assassin of Voikoff," declared H. M. Wicks, the principal speaker, "stands the fascist monster, Pilsudski. Behind Pilsudski stands the British tory government of coalgorge and provocation in the role of the mad-dog of Europe, carrying on a world-wide campaign against the Soviet Union because the workers and peasants government in Russia raises high the hopes of all the oppressed of the world. Britain is preparing for war, striving to set the world aflame, in a desperate effort to recover its rapidly declining power.

"The Soviet Union has steadfastly

Another Step Forward

Each day marks another advance made by The DAILY WORKER Army in its battle against organised reaction. William F. Dunne has been released on bail of $1,000. This has been accomplished as a result of the efforts of the thousands upon thousands of loyal workers, who, through their devoted support of The DAILY WORKER, have made this possible.

But a taste of victory has made our Army hungry for more. Nothing will satisfy us but a clean sweep. We must reverse the decision which now appears on the court records. We must appeal the Five Hundred Dollar Fine. We must appeal the conviction of the members of the staff. We must appeal the conviction of Gordon.

Let us finish the job we have begun so well. Send in your contributions with redoubled force so that we may be able to push the fight with redoubled strength.

WOLL'S GANG NOT ABLE TO DO MORE THAN SLUG 1 MAN

Great Crusade Against Furriers Fizzles

The gangster threat of Matthew Woll failed to materialize yesterday morning when the thugs and gunmen who were to infest the fur district in the guise of trade unionists rode by in automobiles, not daring to get out of their cars and face the righteous wrath of the thousands of strikers.

While the gangsters were comparatively quiet, beating up only one worker, the police were on the job arresting between 200 and 250 strikers, including those ex-service men who were wearing tin army hats. They were gathered up in large groups and taken to Jefferson Market Court for trial.

Judge Gives Warning

When brought before Magistrate Rosenbluth 50 of the strikers were sentenced to one day in jail. The others were dismissed with a warning that if they were brought before him again they would be sent to the workhouse.

The judge's ire was especially aroused by the signs the workers carried. The ex-soldiers had placards reading "Our Heads Are Not Safe," The other strikers had signs with "McGrady and Woll—Take Away Your Gangsteres."

On their way to the court the strikers sang workingclass songs in the patrol wagons. The most popular were "Solidarity Forever," and "On the Picket Line," which was published in yesterday's issue of The DAILY WORKER.

Hit With Bar.

The assaulted worker, Samuel Barr, had left the Joint Board office, 22 East 22nd Street, 6.45 p. m., for the picket line. When he reached the cor-

White Army Mercenaries Recruited in Balkans For Anti-Soviet Drive

VIENNA, June 14.—Protests are pouring in on the Hungarian Government against the continued recruitment, in the Balkans, of an army of forty thousand, ostensibly for agricultural labor, but believed to be, in reality, for military service in the Ukraine in a new drive against Soviet Russia. Some color is lent to this belief by the report that General Wrangel, of counter-revolutionary fame, has been reviewing his White Guards in Macedonia.

It is said that the recruiting is being carried on by agents of the French and Hungarian Governments, with the greatest secrecy; that a condition of the "employment" contract is that applicants be fit for military service, and agree to keep their destination a strict secret. Agricultural laborers are reported to have been offered huge sums of money for a three-year engagement.

5 Big Miners' Locals Back Progressives in Fight Against Fakers

OLYPHANT, Pa., (FP) June 14.—The five big local unions of the United Mine Workers at Olyphant, near Scranton, have jointly pledged their moral and financial support to Stanley Dzierzgielewski, local progressive union leader who has been suspended from the union by the district executive board. The constitution was violated in removing Dzierzgielewski without a hearing before his local union, says the resolution jointly adopted.

Dzierzgielewski is a graduate of Brookwood Labor College. He took a prominent local part in the Save-the-Union campaign for John Brophy for president of the U.M.W. of A. last Fall. Ninaldo Cappellini, district president, is his active foe.

BRITISH INDUSTRIALISTS HIT BY USSR BOYCOTT WANT TRADE AGAIN

Plan International Credit to Soviet Union; Capture Spy in Employ of British Navy

BERLIN, June 14.—The Soviet prediction that die-hard Britain was digging its own grave when it smashed the Anglo-Soviet trade agreement and ruptured its diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union seems to have come true.

Hard hit by the boycott which the Soviet Union has placed on British goods and fearing that other countries will take advantage of the breach, British industrialists are struggling to unite German, French and British business interests in a project for the extension of credit to the Soviet Union.

Swept into a breach with the Soviet Union by the extreme tories and finding their lucrative trade going to other countries, particularly Germany, British industrialists are speaking very gently to and about the Soviet Union.

Not Love, But Necessity.

The English manufacturers have little more love for the workers' and peasants' government in the Soviet Union than the bankers; but they need Soviet markets for their goods.

Reports received from London indicate a severe slump in British industry. The iron and steel industries have been compelled to reduce their output, and the outlook for the textile industry is anything but promising.

Even the extreme tories sensed that the break with the Soviet Union would mean a loss of markets and a blow to British industry. But representing the financiers and not the industrialists, the extreme die-hards favored the break and an unofficial war against the Soviet Union.

U. S. S. R. Boycott Effective.

After he had announced the rupture of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, Stanley Baldwin, premier of the die-hard cabinet, expressed the pious hope that the action of his government would in no way interfere with Anglo-Soviet trade. The Soviet Union punctured Baldwin's little scheme by immediately boycotting British goods.

The conference of British and German industrial leaders, which began at Berlin, has been transferred to the Rhineland estate of Herr Duisberg, the president of the German chemical trust. Represented at the conference are the industrial leaders of both Germany and Great Britain.

Industrialists Object.

The abject position to which British industry has been reduced by the Soviet boycott was made startlingly clear by the following statement made by P. J. Hannon for the German Industrie und Handelszeitang. (P. J. Hannon is leader of the British Industrial Federation.)

"No one in England contemplates war or any danger of war from the assassination at Warsaw," Mr. Hannon said. "I don't doubt Russia will fulfill her current obligations and don't believe economic relations will be ended."

Industrialists Worried.

British industrialists, he admitted in the course of the interview, were extremely concerned over the British break with the Soviet Union. He pointed out that the proposed Midland Bank loan to the Soviet Union for $50,000,000 really came from the industries.

Although American financiers had held numerous conferences lately with the object of extending credits to the Soviet Union, they have taken British anti-Soviet propaganda a little too

Boss in Open Shop Presides at the Opening Session; Thugs Play Active Role

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The hand-picked right wing credential committee at the convention of the furriers' International here brought in a report today refusing to seat the 30 delegates representing the New York Joint Board.

The first session was opened under the personal auspices of the high priests of the reactionary officialdom of the A. F. of L., and a manager and foreman in an open shop in this city, named Shack, was the presiding officer.

Lefts Barred From Hall.

When the delegates returned to the hall for the afternoon session the left wing delegation from New York was barred from the hall. Up to this time they were allowed in the hall, they being considered by Oizer Schachtman and his lieutenants as "visitors."

According to the credentials committee headed by H. Begoon, of New York, no action will be taken on the 30 unrecognized delegates until the right wing has officially countersigned the expulsion policy of Schachtman, Woll and th eclique.

Conference.

While the left wing delegates are barred from the convention they have by no means relinquished the battle for recognition. Tonight they are holding a conference with sympathetic delegates discussing a common program to save the union from destruction.

Thugs A-Plenty.

A large contingent of hired thugs and guerrillas, usually retained for the purpose of slugging fur workers who are affiliated with the Joint Board, were conspicuous in the convention hall. This time they weren't even dignified with the title of "sergeant-at-arms," and before the first day of the convention was over, they had beaten up two left wing delegates, Englander, an international vice-president of Toronto, and Stein of Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—(Special) With 64 delegates uncontested by executive council chamber of the American Federation of Labor, which was taxed to its capacity, precipitated stormy debate and stormier fist fights before the first session was half through.

William Green, president, Matthew Woll, vice-president of the A. F. of L., both made speeches that were remarkably similar. In attempts to justify the procedure of the A. F. of L. in interfering in the internal affairs of the furriers' organisation, Green said that he would not permit the Communists to "inject their strange philosophy into the trade unions."

The "strange philosophy" mentioned by Green referred, apparently, to the process of winning strikes, whereas his "American philosophy" was represented by the present situation in the mining and other industries, where strikes which have the personal supervision of the present most prominent "red baiters" end with loss of membership, working conditions and wage rates.

Punish Left Wing.

About a year ago, following the remarkable victory in winning the 17-weeks' strike by the left wing, headed by Ben Gold, the A. F. of L., in order to save the reactionary officialdom from being completely discredited began an "investigation."

The interference of the A. F. of L. was the culmination of a conflict between the New York Joint Board, representing 10,000 to 12,000 members, and the International, representing a negligible proportion of the entire membership.

As a result of this fight, the International officials summarily deposed the Joint Board officers, "suspended" four locals, four new ones created, and a general "reorganization" ordered to eliminate what the A. F. of L. asserted was a "Communist leadership, headed by Gold."

Deny Floor to Gold.

Immediately after Woll's speech, Ben Gold arose and demanded the Norwegian Labor Pays Tribute to Voikoff; Scores Britain's Part

OSLO, June 14.—Leading members of the Norwegian Labor Party attended a memorial service to Peter Voikoff, murdered Soviet minister to Poland, at the Soviet Legation here, on Saturday night.

The parliamentary leader of that party voiced the sympathy of the Norwegian workers with the Workers' Republic of Russia, and their horror of the brutal murder of the Russian minister, instigated and planned by her capitalist enemies.

Mr. M. Markar, Russian minister to Norway, charged Britain with being implicated in every recent murder of prominent Soviet officials, and laid the murder of Mr. Voikoff directly at her door.

2,000 Barbers May Strike Tomorrow; Ask Pay Increase

2,000 barbers employed in shops between 59th street and upper Bronx, on the West Side, will strike tomorrow unless the Master Barbers' Association accedes to their demands for an increase in wages.

Numerous conferences with the employers have been held during the past week but they have repeatedly refused to grant the demands.

A basic weekly wage of $35 is asked by the men together with a proportional commission over $50 income on each chair.

The present working hours of the men are from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., and until 10 p. m. on Saturdays.

Life Term in Sing Sing For Theft of Chickens

John Daly, 27, was sentenced yesterday in the Queens County court to serve 18 years in Sing Sing, and Joseph Brown, 67, a Negro, was sentenced by the same court to life imprisonment.

They were charged with having stolen six chickens and six ducks. Both had previously served jail terms on minor convictions.

...Of Wall Workers RUSHED TO CHINA

The Kremlin wall in Moscow has been undergoing repairs by workers who are members of the Communist Party. The work is the last step in the restoration of the ancient wall, which dates back to the 15th century. It was begun in the days of the Soviet regime by the party which learned with the World Congress on July 14, for a six weeks' visit to Russia. Within the Kremlin, which is the old fortress of Moscow, are cathedrals, monasteries and palaces—some of them eight centuries old—which have been turned into monuments by the Soviet Government. Much time has been devoted to restoring the ancient beauties of these buildings so that they shall regain their original appearance.

Whites Driven Out.

During the 1917 Revolution, the Kremlin, which contained large armaments, was a stronghold of the "Yunkers" and was finally captured after a bombardment. Since 1918 it has been the seat of the chief Government Institutions, and World Tourists have arranged for permits to visit it when the party reaches Moscow.

This tour, arranged in co-operation with the U. S. S. R. Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, will sail direct to Leningrad and from there will go by rail to Moscow, after a four days' visit to neighboring towns. In Moscow, all the sights will be visited, with the help of guides and tourists, and the American visitors will be given every advantage of special delegations and pre-arranged tours.

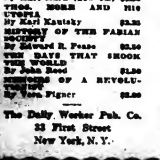
Low Expense.

The entire six weeks' tour, including all meals, rooms, rail and boat fares, theatre tickets—everything complete—costs only $575. The tour is limited, and the time is short in which arrangements can be made, so those interested in taking advantage of this opportunity to see the world's first Workers' Republic should write at once to the World Tourists, Inc., Room 903, 41 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

Southland Boosters Use Cheap Labor Plea To Northern Capital

DECATUR, Ala., June 14.—The United Textile Workers Union will have a huge job on its hands in the South before long. Shipments of textile machinery from the North are creating a bigger field for organization below the line.

Decatur, Alabama, for instance, has lately received a shipment of 200 units of knitting machinery. The knitting machines come from the Textile Trucking Co. of Fall River, Mass. and are assigned to the Connecticut Mills Co. of Decatur.



In addition to this 100 cars of the same commodity went from the Oak Knitting Co. of Syracuse, N. Y. to Nashville, Tenn.

Cheap labor is the attraction.

"We haven't any of the radical or adverse legislation, and no threat of it that is afflicting other sections of the country."

This is the hait offered by the Texas Power & Light Co. in an advertisement in the American Wool and Cotton Reporter. The Texas Company wants industrialists to move South and use its power.

...RUSHED TO CHINA

...Peking, and the rest of the foreign colony in China. Many reporters in China have been sent there by their papers to write up the Nanking regime, but a great deal of the information is a great deal of rubbish.

(Although a number of capitalist newspapers mentioned the trial of Huiler, none of them, as far as we know, made any mention whatever of the testimony implicating Stirling Fessenden. The trial of Huiler shed a good deal of light on the characters of the opium-smuggling gun-running grafters in Shanghai who are clamoring for American intervention in China.)

Ask Aid for Wounded.

HANKOW, June 14.—Eleven thousand wounded Nationalist troops are jamming the hospitals of this city. In sweeping the war lords from territory south of the Yellow River, the Nationalist armies have suffered many casualties and the inadequate hospital facilities make the situation serious.

A relief drive, led by Mme. Sun Yat-sen and Anna Louise Strong, American journalist, is under way. A special appeal for funds is made to American sympathizers.

Asks Legation Withdrawal.

(By Nationalist News Agency)

SHANGHAI, June 14.—Removal of American Legation from Peking is urged by the American-owned China Weekly Review here in an editorial in the current issue. It suggests that all the powers recall their ministers and send special high commissioners, unbounded by diplomatic precedents, to negotiate new treaties with China.

"The foreign legations in Peking as at present constituted," it says, "constitute a handicap rather than a help in Sino-foreign relations, hence they should be dispensed with and the sooner the better."

ner of Broadway and 22nd Street, an automobile stopped in his rear, several men jumped out and hit him over the head with an iron bar. Enjoying the scuffle they drove away leaving the worker laying helpless on the sidewalk.

Iron Rod Found.

Several minutes later some other workers discovered him and rushed him to Bellevue Hospital where five stitches were taken in his head. The iron bar was found on the sidewalk where the assault took place. It is 15 inches long and one half an inch in diameter.

Michael Intrator, active member of the union, arrested last week was fined $10 yesterday in Jefferson Market Court.

At a crowded meeting of the strikers held yesterday at Webster Hall it was voted to hold a bigger demonstration than ever this morning. It was also decided to protest to Mayor Walker about the mass arrests of pickets yesterday morning.

It was pointed out that the arrest of so many workers at one time is an indication that the police department is attempting to follow out the instructions of Matthew Woll.

Seattle "Skid Road's" Biggest Collection Is For Hands Off China

SEATTLE, Wash., June 14.—One of the largest open air meetings held on the skid road on "Hands off China" was addressed by District Organizer Aaron Flaherman, Sidh Chun Huang, editor the Chinese New Star and D. G. O'Hanrahan. All of the speakers demanded that the Imperialists withdraw the battleships and marines from the Chinese waters and China and exposed the intrigue of Great Britain to provoke another world war.

A collection of $50.80 for the local Chinese newspaper which was suppressed by the local followers of the Nanking regime, was taken. This is the largest single collection ever taken on any meeting in skid road.

Birdist Takes Flight To Heaven as Preacher Coos Funeral Notes

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 14.—Funeral services for Clarence Coles Phillips, the noted pigeon fancier who died Sunday night after a long illness, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at his late residence, 150 Sutton Manor, New Rochelle. Only the members of the immediate family and Phillips' closest friends will be admitted.

Peter Smith and his ten children, dead victims, arriving in Chicago from Arkansas in their sole possession, a tumble-down car, have come north seeking an opportunity to settle where Fate will be kinder.

COVETED MEDAL FOR "LINDY"

The coveted Hubbard gold medal of the National Geographic Society, awarded to Colonel Charles Lindbergh in Washington, is pictured above. Lindbergh is the eighth man to receive it in the 39 years of the Society's existence. Two other recipients were Admiral Peary, below, left, for discovering the North Pole, and Commander Richard E. Byrd, lower right, for being the first to fly over the Pole.

floor to make a reply. Schachtman, presiding, refused to recognize Gold, claiming that he was not a "legitimate delegate" to the convention, and threatened that not only Gold, but all the other left wing delegates would be ejected from the convention hall if they persisted in "interrupting the session."

Sling Delegates.

Englander demanded to know what privileges the 53 delegates brought from 33 "paper locals" in New York would have. Immediately, A. Sorkin, one of the International vice-presidents and several guerrillas began to beat Englander and the convention was in an uproar.

Delegate Stein was also viciously attacked when he attempted to defend Englander.

Green a Spectator.

Green was at this time seated on the platform, and Englander jumped on a stool and shouted to him, calling his attention to the procedure of the official machine. But Green appeared to be entirely unconcerned.

The credentials committee has not as yet brought in its report, but it is practically a certainty that none of the members of the New York Joint Board and the delegates from Local 25, Newark, which has just won an overwhelming victory over the right wing machine will be seated at the convention.

Tories Keep British Children From Visit To USSR; Fear Contrast

LONDON, June 14.—The British Foreign Office today refused passports to six children who were going on a two weeks' visit to the Soviet Union.

All of the children were children of workers, sons of them miners' children, and the British Foreign Office felt, it is believed, that the contrast between the treatment of workers in the Soviet Union and workers in Great Britain would not add to the glory of Winston Churchill or Austen Chamberlain.

The children were to have sailed last night.

Needle Trade Defense

To Newark Furriers' Local No. 25:

Congratulations! You were determined in your struggles and you emerged victorious—the combined onslaughts of the Schachtman-McGrady clique and the police could not break your determination and you fought on to victory.

New York is next—In New York the furriers have fought on bravely. They have combatted every attempt of the bosses and the reak agents to destroy their union. The Furriers in New York are also determined to protect their rights and cleanse the union of the traitorous elements who are bent on destroying it. The numerous attacks inflicted upon them daily by the police do not deter them from continuing the fight against the betrayers of labor.

It is the duty of every worker to aid this fight financially—to supply the necessary ammunition so that these brave fighters can continue. $50,000 must be raised at once! Every worker should purchase a ticket for the Coney Island Stadium Concert immediately. Not only will this Concert be one of the finest events of this season, but it will also be the biggest demonstration against the union-smashing tactics of the bureaucracy. Every class conscious worker and progressive individual should participate in this demonstration. Ben Gold, Louis Hyman and the lawyers of the Mizesla trial will address the 50,000 workers.

The relief committee has also issued bonds ranging from $10 to $25 and we ask that every worker buy a bond.

The strike is yours and you must help win it!

From the Bazaar to the Stadium.

The excitement of the bazaar is over. The comrades had the opportunity of settling for their tickets, and rest up after the four days of hard work. Now is the time to work even more energetically to make the Coney Island Stadium concert a success.

The defense committee has no doubt that this will be done. We have the utmost faith in our comrades and know that they will throw all their energies behind this campaign and help make this concert the most outstanding event. We must, however, remind you not to delay. In order to make this concert a success, the work must be done now. It is dangerous to delay. Every worker must sell as many tickets as possible. All energy must be concentrated on the concert of July 16, at the Coney Island Stadium.

Lindy Hits Jingo Lobby; Refuses to March in Uniform

WASHINGTON, (FP) June 14.—Charles A. Lindbergh gave a shock to the army-navy-militarists lobby in Washington by refusing to appear in a military uniform. The son of the Minnesota congressman who was persecuted for his anti-war principles, and who incited the mobs incited by the regular Republican organization in Minnesota in 1918, ignored his new-made title of colonel in the reserves of the Missouri state militia, and faced the tremendously emotional reception in the capital as a plain civilian.

It is reported in army circles that Alice Longworth first suggested that the militarist element should make use of Lindbergh for restoring the war machine to popular favor. Bascom Slemp, West Virginia non-union coal operator and former secretary to President Coolidge, is said to have arranged for sending a military uniform, by plane, to the Memphis so that the hero should return in militia uniform. The army and navy families who enjoy or anticipate big retirement pensions for father or brother were elated. And then the young hero showed his quality by coolly ignoring them, and telling that crowd of 200,000 people, gathered at the Washington monument, that he brought to them a message of friendship and peace from the Old World.

Lindy Wise to Kellogg.

In his witty talk at the Press Club reception, Lindberg described how he had been virtually kidnapped and sent home by the State Department, which claimed it was merely giving him advice, but had a warship waiting to carry him home. He said he was opposed to subsidizing the aircraft industry in America, because it would probably mean that the government would control the "use" to be made of aircraft—a hint that he did not want aircraft to be made to serve the war business chiefly.

For Washington—outside the military clique—is fed up on martial music and salutes and militarist snobbery. It hailed Lindbergh as the finest type of young civilian who has come into fame in this generation—unpretentious, cool-headed, modest, and obviously proud of and faithful to the memory of a father who dared to face persecution by these very politicians that now were flattering the son

Armour Grain Steal Ousts Concern From Chicago Wheat Pit

CHICAGO, June 14.—George E. Thompson, general superintendent of the Armour Grain Company, today faces expulsion from the Chicago Board of Trade, following his conviction by the Board of Governors for "dishonest conduct."

The case has been investigated by state, federal and local authorities. The high position of the Armours in the industrial and commercial world apparently saved them from the summary action which would have fallen upon smaller delinquents, caught in such a bald swindle as that charged to the defendants in this case by the board of trade investigator.

The report of that official says that the Armour concern wrecked the cooperative "Grain Marketing Corporation" by substituting samples of wheat on which a big deal turned, and cheating the "Grain Marketing" dealers out of $3,000,000.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

BROWDER TO LEAD U. S. IMPERIAL RADIO PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, has been named by President Coolidge as chairman of the American delegation and hence to be general chairman—of the International Radio-Telegraph Conference, which will assemble Oct. 4 in Washington. Frederick Sackett and Secretary Kellogg has barred, by refusal of invitations, The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and Ecuador, because they are not recognized by the United States.

In this conference the American delegation will lead the battle of private versus public ownership and operation of radio communication. It will speak for the Radio Corporation of America, which is the central organ of the American Radio Trust, owned by the General Electric power trust, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s wire trust, and the Westinghouse electrical equipment manufacturing combine. The American radio giant is allied with British Marconi in the foreign field. It has also established what it calls a "radio Monroe Doctrine" for Latin America, to exclude all competitors from the republics south of the United States.

Latins Refuse.

In the recent Inter-American Conference on Aircraft, the Latin American governments refused to accept dictation from Washington. Led by Argentina and Colombia, they voted down every proposal which was advanced by Hoover's delegates on behalf of American private monopoly in air transport in Latin America. This spirit of determination to maintain the open door for free development of air travel in Latin America is said by the South American diplomats to be a fair indication of what they will say when Hoover's program for a private radio trust control of the western hemisphere is brought before the radiotelegraph conference. In fact, they have only to repeat what they did at a pan-American radiotelegraph conference in Mexico City two years ago, when they protested the United States' delegates' attitude so sharply that the conference broke up without making a report.

Radio Imperialism.

In substance, the situation is this: The American radio trust is determined to invade foreign fields, while the European, Latin American and some of the Asiatic governments are determined that government ownership and operation of radio communication shall be maintained as a fundamental public policy. Soviet Russia, one of the most important users of radio communication, would have been prominent in defense of the public-ownership doctrine if she had not been barred by Kellog.

Because the two groups, or the American trust versus the governments of 40 nations, will be deadlocked on this issue, the conference will get nowhere with it. Instead, some rules for avoiding interference in the sending of messages will be considered, the question of establishing an international code based on government ownership will be postponed until the next conference, which will be held in Europe in four or five years.

With Hoover on the American delegation Coolidge has named Sen. Jim Watson of Indiana, Sen. Smith of South Carolina, Owen D. Young, of General Electric, John J. Carty, of A. T. & T. Rep. White of Maine, Asst. Secy. of State Castle, Stephen Davis, former solicitor for the Commerce Department; John Beaver White, electrical engineer, John Hays Hammond, Jr., and representatives of radio communication in the war, navy and commerce departments.

Communists Win Bout In So. Wales Labor War

AMMANSORD, Eng., June 14.—An effort to apply the decision of the Liverpool Conference of Trade Union executives, that all Communists be excluded from the Labor Party, was temporarily defeated at a Conference of the Llanelly Divisional Labor Party, here.

The vote stood 53 for observing the decision and 53 against. On a call for division, the chairman ruled that there be a roll-call, but as this was opposed by a section of the conference, the chairman declared the conference closed. It will therefore be necessary for another conference to be convened in order that this issue may be decided.

Many of the divisional Labor parties, who have stood by the Communists and refused to expel them from the Labor bodies, have, in turn, been disaffiliated by the bureaucracy, and are continuing to function as independent groups.

Gov. Fuller Resumes Hearings on Case of Sacco and Vanzetti

BOSTON, June 14.—Gov. Fuller today resumed his private hearings in connection with the case of Sacco and Vanzetti. He planned to interview the eleven living members of the jury that convicted Bartolomeo Vanzetti of "robbery" prior to the trial which resulted in the death sentence for both Sacco and Vanzetti on the now-famous trumped up murder charge.

It is expected that John D. Williams of Malden, defense witness in the latter case, will also see the governor.

150 Workers Escape In a Factory Fire; Two Badly Injured

One worker is in a critical condition, another is seriously injured as a result of a fire which broke out yesterday afternoon at the Empire Tinware Company, 29 So. 9th St., Brooklyn. More than 150 persons were at work when the fire was discovered, but they escaped from the four-story brick building.

Sam Misrach, 32 Pitt St., Manhattan, hurt his left foot and sustained internal injuries when he and two others, trapped by smoke and flames, ran to an extension in the rear of the building and leaped out of the window two floors to a concrete yard. Daniel Goldman, who also jumped, sprained his left ankle and was cut on both his hands.

The cause of the fire is being investigated.

Growth of Chinese Unions

[illegible] Unions (180,000), Kwangtung Province Federation of Labor Unions (110,000), Hunan Federation of Labor Unions (100,000), Hupeh Provincial Council of Labor Unions (70,000), Shanghai General Council of Labor Unions (70,000), which was in conflict with the reactionary Nationalist Government of the Kuomintang, the Hongkong Federation of Labor Unions which so successfully led the Hongkong general strike, the All-China Railway Workers' Union (60,000) and the Railwaymen's Union (50,000). The last two unions are the only ones in China organized in industrial federations on a national scale.

Despite the fact that many different branches of Chinese industry are still living through an embryonic stage, we are, now definitely on the eve of the formation of new All-China industrial unions, which began to organize themselves in the early part of 1926 on the industrial principles of the latter, and will embrace textile workers, workers of heavy industry, printers, dockers and postal-telegraph employees.

The great growth of the labor movement in China can be readily seen by comparing the numbers of organised workers, who delegated their representatives to the All China Labor Congress. At the first Labor Union Congress in 1924, approximately 300,000 workers were represented, at the Second Congress 1925, approximately 500,000 at the third All-China Congress delegaes represented already more than a million organised workers enrolled in 699 unions; the fourth Congress represented almost 3 million workers.

Perspectives and Problems of the Labor Movement.

These resolutions, which at the moment of their acceptance were partly of a declarative character and rather in the form of good intentions, at the present time with the widening of the Kuomintang power over a tremendous territory, can be and must be put into effect.

Now that the revolutionary armies have occupied the centre of the Yangtze Valley, the centre of heavy industry in the Human province with its developed mine industry, the proletariat have received a powerful ally in the million peasants that have been drawn into the movement not only of Huandun, but of Hupeh, Hunan and other provinces. For the first time a situation has arisen permitting Chinese workers to set wide organisational work afoot. And in reality, in Hankow, Utchan, Tchancha and other districts we observe an incredible strike movement and mass enrollment of the workers in the unions. The unions are growing, are widening, and hundreds of thousands of workers are already organised in them. With the lessons of the past and utilising the favorable political situation, the leaders of the trade union movement are endeavoring to make a new approach to the work of organisation. Previously they were forced to limit themselves chiefly to building up an apparatus. The small waves of political enthusiasm usually did not permit the formation of local organizations which would firmly bind the apparatus to the masses. It was for this reason that the reaction found it comparatively easy to smash and disorganise the labor movement.

The creation of locals with intermediary links connecting them with the leading organs—is the fundamental organizational problem facing the Chinese labor movement. But this is not all, the miserable wages and the astonishingly long working-day makes imperative and of first importance—together with the political demands—the fundamental economic class demands of the Chinese workers. These economic demands in the past, due to many reasons, were often too much overshadowed by the purely political demands. To be able in a proper fashion, to combine economic and political demands—is the second problem of tremendous importance facing the workers' movement of China. At the present moment, the Chinese Trade Union workers have fully noted the defects in the present situation of the labor movement and the problems that have to be coped with. They are endeavoring—corresponding with the widening labor movement—to create new ranks of trade union workers. By carrying out educational work they are endeavoring to increase numerically active workers of the unions. They are endeavoring to build up mass work connecting the locals with the leading centres.

The creation of strong unions in the present stage of the Chinese revolution, together with the agrarian question, is the fundamental problem. The correct solving of this question will immeasurably influence the tempo and the very character of the revolutionary development in China.

Portuguese Flyer Safe

RIO JANEIRO, June 14.—Major Sarmento Beires reached Vigia, Para, today after seven adventurous days, having been forced down at sea on June 7, while flying from Para to Cayenne.

The Portuguese trans-oceanic flyer encountered a heavy storm while in flight, which damaged the left wing of his plane and forced him to alight on the surface of the sea, at 20.42 latitude north and 60.30 longitude west.

Heavy seas pounded the plane from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 7 o'clock that night. Then a small boat with fishermen sighted the flyers and picked them up. They were seven days reaching inhabited land.

Workers Defy Spain's Miniature Mussolini; 2,000 Out on Strike

MADRID, June 14.—Two thousand workers will defy the labor-smashing dictatorship of Primo de Rivera when they will walk out on strike against the Spanish Company for Naval Constructions at Feryel in protest against the municipal income tax.

While de Rivera has taken no action as yet, it is understood that he will use every means of crushing the strike. This is the first time in four years that workers have dared to defy the iron rule of Spain's miniature Mussolini.

I. W. W. Fund For Chinese Wounded in Liberation Fight

CHICAGO, June.—Pointing out that while their wounded Nationalist troops are compelled to undergo horrors of the inadequate medical facilities, the International Workers' Aid, 1134 West Madison street, has issued an appeal for funds to the friends of the Chinese liberation movement.

"On the battlefields of China," the appeal says, "thousands of wounded and dying soldiers of the Revolutionary army are suffering untold agony that can be relieved with medical supply, clothing, food. Millions of workers, peasants and students, their wives are in dire want of food."

The appeal urges American workers and farmers to contribute as much as they possibly can for the relief of Nationalist wounded. Contributions should be sent to the offices of the International Workers' Aid, Chicago.

REPUBLICANS IN BIG VICTORY IN IRISH ELECTION

Labor Makes Heavy Gains; Gov't Loses

DUBLIN, June 14.—The results from 117 of the 152 seats contested in the general election have indicates that the government party has met with a severe defeat, winning only 56 while DeValera has 54.

The DeValera or Fianna Fail party is running neck and neck with the government party with signs that it will forge still farther ahead as the returns continue to pour in.

The Irish Labor Party made heavy gains and rumors of an alliance between the party and DeValera for the organization of a moderate capitalist treaty government are in the air.

Should the present government be unable to find the necessary forces for a coalition government DeValera will be faced with the necessity for adopting some practical policy. How he lies his weakness. If went to the country on the platform of willingness to participate in parliament, provided his party were not obligated to take the oath of allegiance to the king.

Official Sinn Fein Beaten.

The official Sinn Fein party from which DeValera seceded went forward on a straight platform of refusing to participate in the Dail Eireann under any condition. It was almost wiped out of existence, its leader Mary MacSwiney, failing of election in her own native city. The voters were in a "moderate" mood, the from the point of view of the labor movement the MacSwiney wing of the Republican movement is as disinterested in the cause of labor as is the DeValera or moderate wing.

DeValera was greatly aided in his campaign by the money he succeeded in collecting in the United States on his recent visit here.

A Suggested Alliance.

Should the Labor Party join with the DeValeraites and other groups that are hostile to the Treaty but believe in participating in parliament interesting developments may be expected in Ireland. Under the leadership of Thomas Johnson, the Irish Labor Party is a mild affair, only serving as a foil to the government in the Dail. It adds dignity to a government to have a respectable opposition.

The British government's agents in Ireland are plainly showing their alarm over the results. Confronted with the possibilities of the break with Russia, the difficulties in China and the Egyptian discontent—with the ever-present danger of a flare-up in India, Great Britain has no wish to have the Irish thorn re-injected into her flank.

The Labor Movement of India

ARTICLE I.

By BALABUSHEVITCH.

Before speaking of the most important events in the Indian labor movement during 1926, it is necessary if only briefly, to characterize the position of the chief branches of industry in India.

The condition of depression in the Indian cotton industry, which first made itself felt as far back as 1923, has during the period under survey finally and definitely become very marked. Many cotton factories in Bombay were forced either to completely shut down operations, or to introduce a short week not working at full capacity. The manufacturers are not satisfied with the annulment of the 3½ per cent excise duty on Indian manufactured goods demanded the protection of the Indian cotton industry by introducing high import duties. This measure was to be directed, mainly, against Japan, whose products have been successfully competing with Indian and British goods in the Indian markets.

The question of imposing duties is now being considered by a special tariff committee set up to ascertain the reasons for the depression. It is to be expected that the British-India government will not hasten to set up high import duties on Japanese cotton products. This measure would lead to a bitter tariff war between Japan and India and in a considerable degree would aggravate Anglo-Japanese relations. Besides this, an influential group of the Bengal bourgeoisie would definitely be against a tariff war with Japan since they, having a large metal trade turn-over with Japan, and desire to preserve normal trading rylations.

The Jute Industry.

Up to the present time the jute industry has been one of the most favorable and profitable in India. At the present time, however, this has changed somewhat. A sharp discrepancy was discovered between the comparatively small reserves of raw-jute and the demands of the developing jute industry. To this was added also the threat of losing some external markets which up to the present time had been monopolized by the Indian jute industry, and which are now trying to free themselves from this high-costing dependency. In view of the foregoing circumstances the working week in the Bengal jute industry was shortened to 4-5 days, while a considerable number of Bengal textile workers were dismissed.

Bad Coal Trade.

The position of the Indian coal industry up to the present time cannot be considered as being very bright. For many reasons Indian coal could not find external markets. In the internal market (chiefly in Bombay and Karatchi) unsuccessful competition was observed with South African coal, which is of better quality and cheaper. As a result large reserves of unsold coal gathered in India, which held up the further development of the coal industry. Recently, however, in connection with the British miners' strike, the position in the Indian coal industry improved considerably, as many ports on the Red Sea, which previously were coaled by Britain, placed large orders for Indian coal. These demands proved to be so large that they could not be fully satisfied owing to absence of transportation.

The demand of the Mine Owners' Federation on imposing high duties for South African coals has been rejected by the Indian government.

The Steel Industry.

The validity of the "Act on Protection of Indian Steel Industry" expires 1-March, 1927. At the present time the Indian tariff committee is investigating the position of the steel industry in view of the demands of the steel magnates, that the present government policy should be continued by further setting up high import duties on certain steels and iron ware as well as by putting a premium on articles manufactured in India. There is not a shadow of doubt that the Indian government will appease the steel magnates, the owners of the steel industry, which in a great degree works for war supplies, while for the time being this would not be a special danger to British exports to India.

The Labor Movement of India.

Very interesting to note, by the way, that as a result of rationalization of production, now being carried out at the large steel and iron works in Djepchedpure a large decrease in the numbers engaged is expected.

Lowered Standard of Life for the Working Class and the Strike Movement.

The difficulties experienced by the chief branches of Indian industry first of all affected the working class, at whose expense the Indian bourgeoisie endeavored to preserve the former level of their profits. The attack on wages was especially insistent and stubborn in the cotton and jute industries. In many cases despite the total absence of any lowering in the cost of living wages one way or another were considerably decreased (chiefly in the jute industry of Bengal). The cost of living index for December, 1925, equalled 156; in January, 1926, 155; in July, 1926, 157; in November, 1926, 154.

The attempts of the employers to lower the standard of life of the working class naturally brought about a series of stubborn strikes. We have information on the strike movement only for the first nine months of 1926. According to this information dnring January - September, 1926, there were 103 strikes in India, 140,879 workers participating with a loss of 842,557 working days. As could be expected the majority of the strikes took place in the textile industry (cotton and jute). During nine months of 1926 there were 68 strikes with 108,507 workers participating (which formed approximately 70 per cent of total number that struck in 1926). The greatest number of strikes took place in the biggest textile industrial centers—Bombay and Calcutta. Generally it is necessary to note, that an analysis of the strike movement during the last five years shows the exceptional role of the Indian textile workers, who, throughout, have been among the foremost to fight for improved living conditions for the Indian proletariat.

The majority of the strikes during the period under survey were due to the attack on wages (45 strikes out of 103) and also to dismissals and general decreases of workers engaged, etc. (28 strikes).

As regards results achieved by the strikes, we give the following figures: Of 103 strikes 7 were won outright by the workers, 8 compromises and 83 strikes were lost. (In 1922 21 per cent of strikes ended successfully or in compromise for the workers, in 1923 26 per cent, in 1924 20 per cent, in 1925 31 per cent, and for the first nine months of 1926 15 per cent).

On Defensive.

We see therefore that the struggle of the Indian proletariat during the current year was chiefly one of defense and that in the majority of cases the workers lost the strikes. (Lower percentage of successful strikes in comparison with previous years.)

This was due chiefly to the difficulties now being experienced by the basic industries of India. Likewise we must keep in view the general conditions of the present state of the Indian labor movement—its new growth, insufficient experience for the struggle, absence of a class lead, the strength of a well organized Anglo-Indian bourgeoisie, etc.

Unemployment.

The past year brought no improvements in the position of the unemployed. As before there are colossal numbers of agricultural workers who have employment only during a few months in the year, as previously the question of unemployment is very severe among the middle strata of the population (Indian intelligentsia). And finally, in 1926 large numbers of the industrial proletariat were thrown on the streets as a result of the depression in the cotton industry and the difficulties experienced in the jute industry. Committees to study the causes of unemployment have been set up in a few provinces (Bombay and Madras). These committees give no concrete help to the unemployed.

The Labor Movement.

During the period under survey existing unions have increased numerically and a large number of new unions have been formed. The Indian trade union movement by the end of 1926 was as follows: Altogether there were approximately 250 trade unions with 360 locals in India, with a general total of more than 300,000 members or 10 per cent of the general number of industrial workers (considering enterprises where more than 10 workers are engaged). The postal and telegraph workers are organized better than any (50 per cent organized). The railwaymen are organized 14.5 per cent and the workers in the cotton industries 10.5 per cent. The largest union organised numerically is the railwaymen's union (100,000 members), then come the sailors' and dockers' union (72,567 members), textile workers (45,000 members), and postal and telegraph workers (38,000 members).

The metal workers are only 3 per cent organized (about 10,000 members), miners .2 per cent (700 members), jute workers 1.3 per cent (4,000 members). In many branches of industry, food products, glass, building, clothing and wood working trades, there are no unions organized whatever.

There was a considerable increase in the percentage of organised textile workers during 1926 chiefly in the Bombay district, which suffered greatest from the depression. And so, for instance, a textile union arose in Bombay which in the short period of a few months recruited more than 10,000 members. Such a tempo for India is exceptional. During the past year much work has been done to organise workers engaged in the arsenals and ammunition and repairing shops, and also to unite existing dockers' unions. Much activity was observed among the sailors (demand to abolish system of engaging men thru agents) and the railwaymen, who asked that a committee be formed to investigate the position of workers on the railroads.

Some Problems for Worker Correspondents

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

The Deportation of Sormenti.

Enea Sormenti, Communist editor and speaker, bitter and unrelenting enemy of Mussolini and his mercenary scum, has been deported from the United States by the Wall Street-Coolidge-Kellogg-Hoover government. Once the haven of refuge for victims of old world tyranny the United States now deports as undesirables the political exiles from the murderous regimes of Europe.

The government's transformation from the defender of political exiles to the blood-hound of every despotism on earth has its economic base in the fact that the ruling class of the United States has an interest in maintaining in power the tyrannies of other nations because of its constantly increasing investments in foreign lands. After cancelling three-quarters of the Italian debt to the United States government in order that Morgan could make new loans at a higher rate of interest, it is perfectly logical that the government should try to stifle the enemies of fascism in this country.

When the United States was a young capitalist giant, expanding its industry with amazing rapidity, the demand for labor caused it to adopt an immigration policy that would attract workers from Europe. Wave after wave of immigrants rolled upon these shores, each of them making a permanent contribution to the upbuilding of the economic structure of this country. In the past the older immigrants could move on from the industrial hells to the free land of the great Middle and Far West. The closing of free lands made impossible further migrations, so the newer immigrants had to stay in the industries—and fight to resist the industrial despotism of the "open shoppers," the scab-herding "company unions" and the open agents of capitalism as well as the labor lieutenants in the trade unions. Thus is added another reason for the fierce assaults by the Wall Street government upon the political exiles of other countries who come here and participate in the labor movement. Sormenti was deported not merely because of the fact that he was a brilliant leader of the Italians in their fight against fascism in Italy, but also because he devoted his energies to building up the Communist movement here, which means that he engaged in all struggles of labor.

While every revolutionist is infuriated at the deportation of Sormenti it is not as disastrous as it might have been, thanks to the splendid defense he obtained from the International Labor Defense. The government originally intended to deport him to Italy where he would have been instantly murdered by the criminal fascists, but the pressure on the part of labor and the exposure of the role of the government as the agency for hounding down the enemies of Mussolini caused the department of labor to permit Sormenti to depart for any other country he might choose that would have him. Naturally, his destination is the only country left on the face of the earth that guarantees a haven of refuge for the political exiles of capitalism—the Soviet Union.

Sormenti has gone from these shores. He was with us but a comparatively short time and fought to the best of his ability. The workers of Italian as well as other nationalities with whom he worked will close the ranks and carry on the fight in which he was a leader. Not only will the fight against Italian fascism, imported to this country by special agents of Mussolini, continue, but the fight against the native brand of fascism must go on. One of the most effective ways to fight fascism is to organize to smash those union-wrecking agents of the employers—the Wolls, the McGradys, the Fraynes, the Greens, the Sigmans—who, although pretending to oppose fascism in Italy, actually use fascist methods against the American labor movement. The necessity for this fight was considered by Sormenti as the most pressing problem in this country.

The United States government has deported Sormenti as it has deported many in the past and will deport others in the future, but the Workers (Communist) Party, of which he was a member will carry on the fight against fascism inside and outside the United States until its bloody banners fall to the dust never to arise again. We will fight against the imperialist despotism that sent him away from us until we have conquered it and established in its place a workers' and farmers' government and bring back Sormenti and the other deportees to laugh over the grave of capitalism in America.

The Irish Elections.

It is yet too early to estimate the exact degree of the defeat inflicted on the government party in the Irish Free State in the recent elections, but incomplete tho the returns are, it is clearly indicated that the Republicans, split into two groups, and the Labor Party have made heavy gains at the expense of the government.

The Republicans are definitely against the treaty that ushered in the Free State. The Labor Party accepts it on the ground that as long as capitalism exists one government is just as bad as another, a pure and holy principle in the abstract, but like patriotism the refuge of those who wish to hide their surrender behind some gaudy cloak.

With 117 out of the 152 contested seats already accounted for, the government party has only succeeded in winning 36. One opposition anti-treaty party alone, had 34 in its favor when this count was made.

The severe jolt received by the government party is not only an indictment of the Free State government but it is a blow at British imperialism, which was the real issue in the election. The Free State government is and has been from the beginning a loyal flunkey of Downing Street. It catered to the interests of the capitalists and landlords in Ireland and constantly expressed its willingness to conform its policy abroad—within the narrow limits permitted it—with that of the empire.

Its brutal treatment of the republicans who remained faithful to the anti-British-imperialist policy of the men who made the Easter Week rebellion, its cold-blooded executions of men who fought against the Black-and Tan terror, left rankling sores in the breasts of the Irish masses and they took advantage of this election to express their resentment.

The international consequences of the defeat cannot be ignored. With Great Britain engaged in conducting an offensive against the Soviet Union, the while her slaves in Egypt and India are threatening revolt, with her grip on the luscious Chinese plum slipping and her working class at home growing in militancy, the robber empire regards with a shiver the signs written on the political horizon in Ireland: that the hornet that vexed her politicians for generations has again become active and getting ready to sting.

Tammany's Lindbergh Celebration Exceeds That of Coolidge

While the dollar patriots, the war-mongers, the Wall Street bankers, the mupition makers, the armor plate magnates, the airplane and poison gas manufacturers were utilizing the feat of Lindbergh for purposes of army propaganda, the two old parties and their respective leading candidates for president were playing their own little game. On specific orders from the Coolidge gang at Washington young Lindbergh was escorted thence by a warship, so that the republican administration could stage his first welcome home after his triumphs in Europe, much to the chagrin of Al Smith and his Tammany machine in New York.

But Tammany had its day Monday. Not even the vast military display of 10,000 troops parading to martial music, could drown the Tammany show. The male Broadway butterfly, Jimmy Walker, who was made mayor by Tammany, occupied a conspicuous place. Governor Al Smith at Central Park decorated the flyer with a special New York state medal, while the hoodlums from Tammany staged their usual stunt of singing "The Sidewalks of New York." Smith's political battle cry. .

All in all, the mobilization of Tammany's pay-roll patriots was more effective than Coolidge's array of government functionaries at Washington—principally because there are more beneficiaries of Tammany than of the Washington staff.

Young Lindbergh did all the stunts a hero is supposed to do. Made brief speeches over the radio, accepted entertainment from the nabobs of the city and paid homage to the dead of the past war by laying a wreath at the foot of the pole bearing the "eternal light" erected as a political maneuver by ex-Mayor John F. Hylan.

There was something symbolic about the "eternal light." It symbolizes the illusions of every ruling class. They like to think of themselves in terms of eternity; to believe that as things are now so they will ever be. But the class that erected the thing and that seeks to profit from the Lindbergh achievement by using it to forward their own sordid militaristic aims is no more eternal than the flimsy light bulb that frequently has to be replaced by electricians. At such spectacles the revolutionist can smile serenely because he knows that nothing is everlasting, nothing is eternal, except the universal whole and that everything within the universe has its period of birth, growth and finally death—everything constantly changes—a process of constantly coming into being and passing away. We know that just as the light is doomed to fail as the fiery current decomposes the atoms that hold it together so the gory capitalist system, whose bloody deeds it helps to commemorate, will decompose in the irresistible red flames of the proletarian revolution.

Season of Opera in English Here in Fall

A season of opera in English will be presented for a ten weeks run in New York, as well as in Chicago and other cities, next season by the American Opera Company, according to an announcement by Vladimir Rosing, director of the organization. The personnel of the company is to be built about that of the Rochester Opera Company, which appeared here this season.

The repertoire for the coming season are tih following operas: "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Abduction from the Seraglio," by Mozart; "Martha," by Flotow; "Faust," by Gounod; "Carmen," by Bizet; "Pagliacci," by Leoncavallo; "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni; "Madame Butterfly," by Puccini; and an American opera, "The Sunset Trail," by Charles Wakefield Cadman. Several light operas are also included. Among them are "Pinafore" and "The Pirates of Penzance," by Gilbert and Sullivan, and "Die Fledermaus," and "Southern Rose," by Jonann Strauss. The last named opera is a new version of "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief." .

The singers already engaged include Ethel Codd, Cecile Sherman and Margaret Williamson, sopranos; Helen Oelheim, Janet Mabon and Brownie Peebles, mezzo-sopranos; Charles Hedley and Clifford Newdall, tenors, Alan Burt, Mark Daniels, George Fleming Honston and Howard Laramy, baritones; and John Monicreiff, bass. Eugene Goossens and Frank St. Leger will be the conductors, and the producing staff consists of Vladimir Rosing, George Fleming Houston, Anna Duncan and Campbell McInnes. The scenery and costumes are the work of Norman Edwards.

While Negro troops were parading up Fifth Avenue honoring the young American aviator Lindbergh and demonstrating their loyalty to the government whose uniform they wear, two Negroes, Jim and Mark Fox, brothers, accused of having slain a sawmill superintendent in Louisville, Missouri, were seized by a mob, paraded thru the streets of the town, tied to a telephone post, saturated with gasoline and burned to death. The airplane that carried Lindbergh to France and glory was named the "Spirit of St. Louis," but all this "spirit" connotes to the Negro is lighted gasolene and the smell of burning flesh.

IMPORTANT items of news are usually hidden away in the recesses of the capitalist press. It would never do to stick this item on the front page on the day after the most popular American hero had millions cheering for him and singing the praises of the country whose stocks he has boosted by his feat. There are two Americas: The America that honors those who uphold its capitalist ruling class and the America that burns Negroes at the stake and puts militant workers in jail.

British Labor Leaders Want Soviet Trade Now

nationals, and are supposed to be a secret part of the Soviet espionage network.

The murder of Volkoff, Soviet minister to Poland, and other outrages have occurred since the U. S. S. R. has achieved peace for itself and Europe by British dis-hands for the purpose of discrediting the Soviet government, and giving a moral foundation the campaign to break off the Anglo-Soviet trade agreement.

Soviet Union is a sham of treason.

Bare British Plot.

MOSCOW, June 14.—In return for $60 and a passage to Paris, Eugene Klepkow and his wife, Nadeja, stole secret information about the Soviet navy and the British admiralty, Klepkow confessed that he was a British spy today at a trial at Leningrad.

Klepkow obtained his job, he said, thru a sister-in-law, who is connected with the Finnish naval staff at Helsingfors. Officials of the Ogwypzow who searched Klepkow's house found British instructions and a typewriter with transposed keys for writing code messages.

Ten Rumanian spies captured in Odessa have been sentenced to be shot.

Artists Contribute to Success of Concert for Benefit Daily Worker

The Bath Beach international branch of the Workers (Communist) Party have expressed their gratitude to the artists who helped make the recent DAILY WORKER concert a success.

They were the Sterling Trio, Victor Witz, violinist; Betty Dankowitz, pianist; and Jacob Pollak, cellist. Others on the program were Hyman Dankowitz, Martha, Betty and Fannie Dankowitz.

Indians Marathon 400 Miles

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—Eleven Indians today will start on a 400-mile marathon race from San Francisco to Grant's Pass, Ore. It is expected the winner will cover the distance in ten days. Three Zunis from New Mexico and eight Karooks from Oregon are the contestants.

BUY THE DAILY WORKER AT THE NEWSSTANDS

14th day of June, 1927, we send our profound condolences to the Soviet Union and to the Communist Party of the U.S.S.R. and pledge ourselves to do our utmost to unmask before the world the conspiracies directed by tory Britain—the mad-dog of Europe. We greet the Polish workers and urge them to rise and avenge the death of Volkoff by destroying the Pilsudski dictatorship and establishing a Soviet government as an instrument for the revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat and peasantry of Poland.

"Down with the bloody Warsaw flunkeys of Great Britain!

Down with imperialism!

"Long live the Communist Party of Poland.

"All hail the invincible Red Army of the Soviet Union, prepared to defend the revolution against its imperialist enemies."

Tories Regret Action.

He asserted that the British tories were beginning to regret their action in precipitating the break in trade relations with the U. S. S. R., and pointed that the British industrialists were taking frantic measures to prevent the lucrative trade going to other countries.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"The murder of Comrade Volkoff is a part of the world-wide provocation against the Soviet Union that the Baldwin-Chamberlain tory government of forgery-fame has been carrying on since it came into power. The fascist government of Pilsudski in Poland appears more and more in the role of vassal of Britain. It deliberate shielding of organizations of white-guard terrorists within its territory, its refusal to turn the murderer of Volkoff over to Soviet authorities, its hypocritical expressions of sympathy with the victims of its own criminality and its empty gestures against terror anti-Soviet terrorists only make more contemptible its role as provocateur against the workers' and peasants' government.

"The Workers (Communist) Party of America rejoices in the determined stand of the Bolshevik government of Russia, which refuses to be deceived by the cowardly words of the murderers of Volkoff and hails its attitude of defiance against Pilsudski and his terrorists who have used the most frightful suppression against the working class of that unfortunate country.

Local 25 Officials of Newark Give Lie to Bosses' Lafter

NEWARK, June 14.—Local 25, Furriers' Union, stated tonight that the Consolidated Rabbit Dressing Corporation, in which Oscar Yager, president of the union, is said to be interested as denying that the bosses made an agreement with Local 25.

Thinks Statement Fake.

Mr. Rose, who was reached at the office of the bosses, said that Yager has been out of town for several days and could not have issued the "Workers Wear" statement. As to himself, Rose denied that it had been sent out by his office.

The strikers returned to work today at the same time the scabs automatically disappearing from the scene. The scabs worked up to yesterday when they had to pack up their grips and leave.

Dismiss Two, Hold One of McGrady's Gangsters

Three of Edward McGrady's gangsters who assaulted Harry Symon, a striking cloakmaker, were brot before Magistrate Rosenbluth in Jefferson Market Court yesterday. Two of them were immediately dismissed, the third, A. Tomkins was held in $1,000 bail for the grand jury charged with felonious assault.

Famous Chemist Dies of Poison.

MADISON, Wis., June 14.—Prof. Victor Lenher, 54, of the University of Wisconsin Faculty, nationally known chemist and a member of the faculty here for 27 years, is dead today—a martyr to his profession.

It is believed death was due to selenium poison. Prof. Lenher had made extensive researches in the properties of selenium, a toxic member of sulphur group.

Workers Party Picnic June 26th.

The first summer festival to be arranged by any of the left wing organizations this year is the picnic arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party at Pleasant Bay Park, Bronx, Sunday, June 26th. Those who attended last year's picnic and picnics of the previous years knew that the Workers Party picnics, which usually are the first in the season, are the occasion for the coming together of all the left wing.

Special features at this picnic will be a baseball game between the furriers and the members of the I. L. G. W. U., and the usual battle in the baseball game between the District Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party and the District Committee of the Young Workers League. A special program is being arranged by the Young Pioneers.

There will also be special athletic exhibitions and events given by the various language groups, many of whom have attained professional fame.

Admission to the picnic will be 35 cents. Make your appointments with your shopmates and friends now for Sunday, June 26, at Pleasant Bay Park. Watch the press for further announcements relating to program of events.

Cafeteria Bosses Workers who Refuse to Sign Yellow Dog Sheet

The owners of the Globe Cafeteria, 14th St. and Irving Place, discharged five workers because they refused to sign a yellow dog agreement, and are attempting to blacklist them, it became known today.

Two of the discharged men had obtained jobs in a cafeteria in Brooklyn. Isadore Goldman, one of the proprietors of the Brooklyn cafeteria immediately communicated with their new employer and warned him that they were "members of a hotel and cafeteria workers' union," and said he suspected that they were "also members of the Workers Party."

The boss, however, refused to fire them, declaring that he was satisfied with their work.

Must Spy on Workers.

In the yellow dog agreement the workers must agree not only that he will never join any form of union organization, but that he will also call to the attention of the boss anyone making an effort to "talk organization."

Another cafeteria, to be known as the "Sheldon" will be opened by the Globe proprietors on Atlantic Ave., near the Long Island depot in Brooklyn.

Both the Globe and the Sheldon have been put on the unfair list by the restaurant and cafeteria workers' organizations in this city.

Lindbergh Feted by Big Plutocrats; Abandons Party Before Schedule

Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph Company and father-in-law of Irving Berlin, played the host to Col. Charles Lindbergh and his mother at his Long Island estate Monday night.

Among the 70 hand-picked guests were Elsberg H. Gary, J. P. Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont, and a number of others whom young Lindbergh's father attacked repeatedly when he was a member of congress.

Plans called for Lindbergh and his mother remaining at the Mackay estate over night, but about 11:40 they decided to leave for their temporary apartment in Manhattan.

Four former prohibition agents who operated in Westchester County and were indicted on charges of bribery on Feb. 7, last, went on trial yesterday before Federal Judge John C. Knox and a jury.

FISHWICK LEADS PARLEY TO MAKE SEPARATE TREATY

INDIANAPOLIS, June 14. — Two events surpass all others to date in the great lockout of the coal miners. At the same time that local unions about the country are beginning to respond to the proof offered by John Brophy that he and not John Lewis was elected head of the union, the machine officials of the largest district are meeting with the employers to follow Lewis' policies and sign a separate agreement.

The latest of the locals to condemn "President" Lewis' stealing of the election last year is Lilly Mine, Local Union 2230 of the United Mine Workers of America. The members of this local resolved that the facts as brot to their attention by the appeal to the International Executive Board by John Brophy show that Lewis should resign at once, and let the man who was really elected take his place.

Will Really Change Contract.

The negotiations with the coal mine owners' association in District 12, Illinois, are hailed with glee by all the business men in the community, and are considered to be evidence of a return to work at some skillfully modified version of the Jacksonville scale of enough union miners to definitely break down all resistance in other parts of the field. Lewis' policies have already made it certain that there will not be another general contract for the whole field, nor anything but the separate district agreements which will hereafter, for years, prevent the miners from acting as a unit.

Harry Fishwick, president of District 12, and staunch Lewis supporter at the last international convention leads the union side in the negotiations which start next Tuesday, to work out details of a plan to end the lockout in this single district.

"The miners are bound by the policy committee of the international union," said Fishwick. "They must adhere to the Jacksonville agreement But this does not interfere with the purposes of the meeting and any agreement which might be worked out would be submitted to the policy committee and to the miners' locals for a referendum vote." Referendum votes with the administration committee will them do not mean much.

THE MENACE IN THE SCHOOLROOM

MILITARISM

Maurice Becker.

The dollar patriots have extended flag day to flag week so they can ha... ...ives to prepare the workers' children in the schoolrooms for cannon fodder in future wars to defend the imperialistic investments of Wall Street. All workers should try to safeguard their children against this murderous policy. Smash the beast now by refusing to permit your children to be regimented in the schoolroom preparatory to being systematically slaughtered on the battlefields in behalf of the capitalist pinderers.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER FIVE—Continued

Shop Activities by Street Nuclei.

While street nuclei cannot concentrate their work within one shop, it is nevertheless of great importance that the ability of the individual members to carry on shop propaganda and shop activities in their place of work be fully utilized. It is important that they be given all possible training and that reports of shop conditions and shop activities be made and discussed in the street nuclei.

Where several members work together in one shop, too few to form a shop unit, they should if at all possible belong to the same street nucleus, keep in close touch with one another, and the street nucleus as a whole becomes responsible for further developing and organizing the activities with a view to building a shop unit in their place of work.

In addition, street nuclei should give all necessary assistance to shop nuclei in or nearest to their territory both financially as well as by way of distribution of literature and shop bulletins at factory gates and organization of street and factory meetings.

CHAPTER VI.

Work in Mass Organizations.

This field offers our Party some of its greatest opportunities to establish contact with working masses. The main object is to bring these masses into motion against their class enemies, to consolidate the influence gained by the Party and give it organised expression. By pursuing the correct policies and tactics the Party can gain the deciding influence of these movements. The method of work of necessity takes different forms within the different mass organisations. As an example we enumerate the following:

1. Permanent mass organizations, such as trade unions, labor parties and workers' fraternal organisations.

2. Mass organizations which have been created for specific permanent objects, such as International Labor Defense and the International Workers' Aid.

3. Temporary united-front organizations set up around single issues, such as strike relief, protection of foreign-born, anti-injunction, defense of certain workers' cases, tenants' leagues, etc.

Our trade union work is by far the most important of these various categories here mentioned since that is the basis for success in practically all other activities. The trade unions are elementary class organizations of the workers and the tasks of the Communist Party within them have been formulated by Comrade Lenin as follows:—"The engine is the Party, its cogs grip the cogs of the trade union wheel and bring them into motion. The trade unions in turn set into motion the greater masses."

The instrument through which the Party works within the trade unions is the trade union fraction. The limited influence of our Party upon the trade unions in general makes one of our main problems, that of establishing much broader contacts on the basis of the issues prevailing. In each instance the issues are determined by the conditions of the industry and the degree of development of the unions. The immediate task of the fraction is to build the left wing (whether it be the T. U. E. L. or have another name.) But the fractions must also build a broader movement of the opposition elements around the issues made concrete, bringing it constantly closer toward complete support of the left wing. The fraction then becomes the instrument with which to direct these movements in the struggle for the needs of the unions.

It is not our purpose here to deal with trade union tactics. However, the following few points should be mentioned. The issues naturally vary according to the degree of development of the unions and their positions within a given industry. The methods also vary on the same basis. As an illustration we select three industries, coal mining, the steel industry [illegible] industry.

To Pierce Sky

Plans for the proposed 110-story Larkin Tower, on West Forty-Second Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, New York City, have been approved by the city's building department. Cost is estimated at $25,000,000 and completion is anticipated before the end of 1928. Plans call for it to rise 1,900 feet above street level, 267 feet higher than the Eiffel Tower, Paris. Drawing of it is pictured here in comparison with the Eiffel Tower, Paris.

What do professional patrioteers mean by the word "patriotism"? Devotion to business privilege and to the open shop; the idea that law, private violence and officials should put down what under this definition is "unpatriotic"; that the only approach to social problems is suppression of one side of the argument.

"Professional Patriots" is edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley.

"Your business is being injured. You are losing money every day on account of the willful, malicious lies that have been told about West Virginia. You know this is true. The prosperity of this State has been retarded many years on account of these misrepresentations."

The American Citizen, a periodical published by the Association, carried the usual warnings of "World Revolution," quotations from Lenin, headline summaries of "Bolsheviki Doctrines," and the familiar closing appeal to "Mr. Loyal American."

But the most extensive variety of literature has come from the National Civic Federation, with its three departments specializing in propaganda for its conception of patriotism. Mr. Easley publishes one leaflet that is unique, entitled "Questions for Every Good American to Answer." It purports to be a letter from an indignant father to the Civic Federation, asking the Federation to take the lead in curbing the spread of radicalism so that it may not infect his children. Parts of it read:

"For the last two years my wife and I have been reading and studying Socialism and Bolshevism. We have visited the Rand School and read much of its literature. We have listened to socialists in their halls and at the street corners; we have heard them in church circles, social clubs and educational meetings. Among the speakers were clergymen of prominence, professors from important universities and principals and teachers from the public schools with now and then an editor. From all that we have heard and seen, we have come to detest the very word 'Socialism.' . . . We regard the doctrines of economic determinism as an abomination, leading straight to atheism and the destruction of the family. We regard their theory of internationalism, with its contempt for love of country, as one leading to disloyalty to our government and the destruction of nationality."

And so on through a couple of galleys, the father of a family of three sons and daughters tells how the churches, the schools and the charity organizations are being captured by the advocates of radicalism, ending with the suggestion that the parents and patriotic members of churches, and college alumni should organize and "join hands" to "beat down the impudent pretensions of the comparatively few." And finally it asks, "Will not your Department on the Study of Revolutionary Movements take the initiative in this matter?"

And of course Easely and his department will.

Another of Mr. Easley's best leaflets is entitled "The War Against Patriotism." In the space of two pages it lays low as unpatriotic, the World Peace Fellowship, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the Rev. A. Maude Royden, of London, "numerous church and missionary bodies," the National Council for the Reduction of Armaments, the Foreign Policy Association, the National Student Forum, and The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

BOOKS

"A PICTURE OF CIVILIZATION IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA"

OIL! by Upton Sinclair. Albert & Chas. Boni. $2.50.

Most of those who read this review are already prejudiced about "Oil!" They are prejudiced in its favor because it has been serialized in Pagany and against it because it ran serially in The DAILY WORKER. "Oil!" should never be taken serially—it should be gulped. Sinclair doesn't write neat works of art. He is not a novelist, in the academic sense of the word. His style bears the same relation to literature that the skyscraper does to architecture. Its proper effect is achieved only in the mass. There is nothing satisfactory about a piece of it.

Sinclair gets his results by piling up the evidence, and his "novels" have little enough of plot, nothing of that closely-knit running narrative that sustains interest from one installment to another.

The story of "Oil!" is pretty slim. There is young "Bunny," the son of a rising independent oil-well promoter, whose father gets into the big game, and grows rapidly rich, partly because of the great world war. Young Bunny is a decent lad, Sinclair's own type, presumably, and he wonders and worries about the rights and wrongs of things, meanwhile rather ineffectively dodging the matchmaking mamas, and the "red hot mamas" of his own class. In the end he becomes reconciled to Bolshevism, convinced it isn't just a German intrigue, tho still unconvinced that it is the way out of the mess which he recognizes the world to be in. He starts to spend his inherited wealth on new Brookwood schools, and solves his flapper problem by marrying a mere shevik jress. Somehow, Sinclair contrives to make this last seem like a desperate adventure.

This is the way with all of Sinclair's theses, those frankly polemical like "The Brass Check" and those disguised as fiction, like "Oil!" He crushes the present system under an avalanche of facts; he builds up a hanging case against the bourgeoisie, and then he sentences them to social service, a new liberal newspaper, or something else equally piffling.

It was obviously not for this that the book was suppressed in Boston. Nor did that half page of quotations from the "Seng of Songs, Which Is Solomon's," make any more than a pretext. The thing that riled the bankers of Back Bay is not an exposure of the impurities of the Bible, for nowhere else in the world are they such popular literature as in the home of the Puritans. What caused the trouble in Boston was that some of the impurities of the Republican saints were dragged out and flaunted in a "socialist" book. The real thing in "Oil!" is the history of graft and corruption, of the warping of every decent instinct, of the loosing of every form of degeneration and decadence which is involved in the dictatorship of the capitalist class. This class is mercilessly flayed. It is represented, at the best, in the person of men like Bunny's father, as a group of rulers rising thru definitely anti-social abilities, the power of clever swindling, and suppressing in its career those real abilities, of constructiveness which these men would otherwise exhibit. It is a ruling clique so lacking in philosophy that it falls for every sort of charlatan and spiritualist. Some of the most entertaining sections are those which deal with the creation of a new religion, "The Four Square Gospel"—a man preacher who gets lost in the sea, this time, and those who profited from this fakery themselves were swindled by others as crude.

Interspersed among the descriptions of waste and revelry, undeniably the true picture of social life of the rich in Southern California, come little sketches of the life of the poor, who make the dissipations of oil men and their movie queens possible. Into Bunny's own oil well falls a worker. (We quote a little tho, for reasons already stated, it is hardly fair to Sinclair.)

"How long has he been down ?", says Bunny's father.

"We've been fishing half an hour," says the foremen.

"Well, then, he's drowned in the mud. . ."

The foreman has been trying to get him out with a hook, because the "three pronged grab" will tear him so. But "Dad" says, "Go ahead and get it over with, and let's hope it'll teach the rest of you something."

It is chiefly for plain speaking about the man who invented "normalcy" that "Oil" is suppressed. For instance, after telling how the oil barons and other big interests bought and built a tremendous propaganda machine, by means of which 16,149,585 Americans were "successfully bamboozled" into voting Harding into office, Sinclair sums up:

"President Harding had brought with him a swarm of camp followers, his political bodyguard at home; the newspaper men knew them as 'the Ohio gang', and they were looting everything in sight. Harry Daugherty had given one of his henchmen a desk in the secret service department; this was the 'fixer', and if you wanted anything, he would tell you the price. The Wilson administration had grown fat by exploiting the properties seized from enemy aliens; and now the Harding administration was growing fat out of turning them back. Five percent was the regular 'split'; if you wanted to recover a ten million dollar property you turned over half a million in liberty bonds to the 'fixer'. Bootlegging privileges were sold for millions, and deals were made right in the lobbies of the Capitol. Dan heard from insiders that more than three hundred millions had already been stolen from the funds appropriated for relief of war veterans—the head of that bureau was another of the 'Ohio gang'." Then, of course, Teapot Dome.

We have to praise Sinclair's restraint. He has been often accused of hysteria, of exaggeration. I believe that the human imagination is not capable of describing the culpability of the present ruling class in America; certainly Sinclair did not try. The material lay thickly at his command, he had to choose, rather than to invent.

As an example of his moderation, take this description of the patriots' raid on the I. W. W. hall at San Pedro:

"Tables were overset, and dishes and crockery trampled, and the metal urn or container in which the coffee had been boiling had been overset, and its steaming contents running here and there. But first they had hurled three children into it, one after another, as their frantic parents dragged them out. The flesh had been cooked off their legs and they would be crippled for life; one was a ten years old girl known as 'the wobbly songbird'; she had a sweet treble voice and sang sentimental ballads and rebel songs, and the mob leader had jerked her from the platform, saying, 'We'll shut your damned mouth!' "

The actual fact is that not only is all of this true, but also what Sinclair does not say: the mob was not content with boiling the children in the hot coffee, its members had not been sure there would be coffee there, and they had brought boiling grease, with which they had heated some of the children; one little boy, so badly burned with grease that he could not walk, crawled several blocks to get away from his tormenters; and the mother of some of the children was so shocked by their torture that she died. Such are the deeds of patrioteers.

Sinclair's description of Bolshevism is not so good. He realizes it as a terrific force; he sees it as an inevitable development, but he always treats it as a faith, not a science. Bolsheviks are heroes, they are wise, they are successful leaders of the working class, but it would be so much nicer, in Sinclair's opinion, if we did not have to have them around. You will find out more about Communism in one page of the "A.B.C." than in all of "Oil!", tho there is hardly a chapter in which it is not mentioned.

—VERN SMITH.

THE WAR FOR OIL.

THE POLITICS OF OIL, by R. Page Arnot. Labour Pub. Co., London. $.35.

Another book on oil,—this time a good one: short, concrete, enlightened. The author covers the same field as Delaisi and De la Tramerye. Unfortunately Arnot's book appeared before Louis Fischer's Oil Imperialism. Much of the data in Fischer's book would have strenthtened Arnot's contention.

This is, in brief, that oil is a get-rich-quick commodity, which has yielded immense returns to those business interests that have participated in its development. Since oil is a source of vast economic power it implies a corresponding danger. Arnot shows very clearly that the rivalry of the great oil trusts, particularly the British Royal Dutch and the American Standard, involves the same type of economic conflict which brought on the World War.

Arnot makes another point regarding the oil industry which is not usually emphasized in books on oil. He writes of "the lot of the workers." In America he calls attention to the man-handling methods employed by the oil interests of the Southwest. Royal Dutch, he shows, is much more subtle in its handling of the labor problem. Coolies are used on its properties. "Oil Engineering" describes its labor policy in a paragraph. "These coolies are imported from Java, China, the Straits, and India in roughly equal proportions. It is found that this mixture renders the company immune from strikes and other industrial struggles, one nationality neutralising the others."

Readers who wish to keep their eyes on the oil conflict should read this book. Like all of Arnot's writing it is clear and simple, furthermore, it carries a very definite lesson in the workings of economic determinism.

HORSE stealing is not the profitable business it used to be, so the Newburgh and New Windsor horse-thief detecting agency, in which William R. Brown, former warden of Sing Sing, was an active leader, has hauled down its shingle and declared itself a thing of the past. The daring individuals who formerly devoted their acquisitive talents to the expropriation of horses are now engaged in the more lucrative business of misappropriating automobiles. America is a land of opportunity for those who keep ahead of the times. When stealing automobiles loses its glamor the time will be ripe for an up-to-date airplane thief.

A noble and self-sacrificing collection of patriots are engaged in the laudable business of saving the nation from socialism and Communism. Their organ is the "National Republic" and this being the summer season—always a slack one in the newspaper business—they are in need of funds. Well, we are not the people to blame them for that, being in a similar boat. But one would expect that those defending the interests of big business should have their efforts appreciated in a financial way. But this is not exactly what we are driving at.

MANY of you may yet remember the hectic days of Teapot Dome when the "Ohio Gang"—the titular head of which was that extremely picturesque and democratic Warren Gamaliel Harding (it is said that he revelled in a game of craps)—decided that a deluge would follow their demise and that there was no use breaking into a safe unless you took away its contents. So over their poker and Scotch they parcelled the country out between them, one fellow taking oil, another liquor and another hospital equipment.

"MURDER will out" and so will stealing, particularly if the thieves quarrel over the spoils or get to fooling with each other's wives. There was a great explosion and oil simply squirted all over the White House while Calvin Coolidge stood with his umbrella in position over his political head. It was then the stool-pigeons got busy trying to save the administration. Each division of the fink army had its own particular task.

THE National Republic rallied bravely to the cause of graft and corruption. It defended Daugherty and the rest of the crooks and sent one of its best liars to Montana to dig up or manufacture scandal that would injure Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who was on the trail of Attorney General Daugherty, strike-breaker and prince of grafters. But the stuff was so raw, that despite the best efforts of those grand patriots some of the grafters were exposed. It is true that only one of them went to jail, the fellow Forbes, who stole crutches from disabled veterans.

NOW the National Republic is combatting "the organized efforts and widespread propaganda of the destructive radical forces." We are told that "these forces have already gained too much influence over public opinion and our governmental agencies in their program to overthrow American institutions and substitute socialism and Communism." The law of self-preservation can be seen working here, et top speed. Under a Communist regime grafters would be executed on conviction. Here, unless they steal nipples from an asylum for crippled children, they retire on their loot and live in comfort for the remainder of their lives.

MORE about Daudet, the French royalist leader who consented to be "arrested" by the police only after his troops were allowed to retreat with the honors of war. The cabinet is now reported to have agreed to grant him clemency. In the meantime the cabinet is moving to lift the immunity of Communist deputies, which will enable the government to prosecute them for conducting Communist propaganda. This is class justice with a vengeance.

ENGLAND continues to press for a united front against the Soviet Union. British business interests and German business interests, however, are conferring with a view to developing better commercial relations with Russia. Poland appears to be properly frightened over the prospect of facing the wrath of the workers' republic and has acceded to the Soviet Union's demands in the Volkoff assassination. At the same time Lithuania is following England's lead against Russia "put her foot in it." The capitalist props may save us yet.

UNFORTUNATELY

Judge Mullan is indisposed. For this reason William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER is not yet released on bail, because the judge was too ill to sign the necessary papers.

Meanwhile Harry F. Sinclair, the millionaire Oil Bandit, is enjoying perfect freedom and liberty, after having been brought to trial more than five years ago.

Meanwhile Thomas L. Chadbourne, multimillionaire Traction Baron, who is mulcting the workers of the City of New York of millions of dollars annually, is on a pleasure jaunt in Europe, after the hearings which clearly showed up his depredations.

But FORTUNATELY there are many thousands of workers in this home of capitalist justice, who are not indisposed. They are on the job. They will see that Dunne is released, that the verdict imposing a Five Hundred Dollar Fine is reversed. Are YOU one of those on the job?

CHANG TSO LIN DECLARES MARTIAL LAW AS NATIONALISTS NEAR PEKING

Pacific Conference Calls for Fight Against Intervention; Score Landing of Troops

CHENGCHOW, June 14 (delayed) (via Berlin).—A huge mass demonstration, in which more than 100,000 people participated, welcomed the entry of Nationalist officials and General Feng Yu-hsiang. (Chengchow is a strategic center on the Hankow-Peking railway recently captured by the Nationalists in their drive against Peking.)

Resolutions calling for the immediate destruction of Mukden militarists and Chiang Kai-shek, and demanding the formation of a food control commission and a commission to guard against counter-revolution were adopted.

Reports from Wuhan state that Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian war lord, has placed Mukden, Tsingtau and Tsinan under martial law. (Chang has been conducting a reign of terror in cities north of the Yellow River in an attempt to smash the wide-spread sympathy for the Nationalist cause).

Shantung troops have not been paid for six months and are deserting to the Nationalists in ever-increasing numbers.

A political and military conference held here has decided that the Mukden troops (Chang Tso-lin's) are unable to offer any serious resistance to the Nationalist armies. All of the prominent members of the Kuomintang and the Wuhan (Nationalist)

Chinese Women Score Open British Brothels For Imperialist Troops

SHANGHAI, June 15.—The Chinese women in Shanghai, through the Women's Department of the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) have sent a vigorous protest to the Nationalist government at Nanking against the brothels which have been illegally and flauntingly established in the International Settlement by the British military for British and American troops.

The protest points out that the brothels are filled with 15-year-old Chinese girls. It asserts that "one object of the revolution is the emancipation of women, and it is humiliating and gruesome that China's womanhood should be trampled under the iron heel of foreign imperialism."

STRIKE OF 2,000 BARBERS NOW ON IN N. Y. C. SHOPS

Will Refuse Agreement With Individual Bosses

Over 500 shops between 59th St. and upper Bronx on the West Side were without barbers yesterday. 2,000 barbers went on strike following repeated refusals on the part of the employers to grant them an increase in wages.

The response of the workers was practically unanimous in the shops involved. Picketing began at 8 in the morning and continued until the closing of the shops.

Two enthusiastic mass meetings were held yesterday afternoon, one at Leslie Hall, 83rd St., near Broadway, and the other at union strike headquarters, 158th St. and Amsterdam Ave. Meetings will again be held at the same places tonight at 7 p. m.

Collective agreements with the Master Barbers' Association will be insisted on, it was decided at the meetings, and no agreements with individual bosses will be permitted.

A basic weekly wage of $35 is asked by the men together with fifty per cent of all income over $50 weekly received on each chair. The present working hours are from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., and until 10 p. m. on Saturdays. One of the demands involves reduction of one hour on this day.

FAIL TO TERRIFY WORKERS BY NEW ARREST TACTICS

Women Beaten by Cops In Brutal Orgy

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

At 6.45 a. m. yesterday Police Commissioner Warren's mounted police went into action. With clattering hoofs they galloped up Seventh Avenue and drew rein at the corner of Thirtieth Street. Their faces were brutally grim and set. They tugged viciously at the reins to hold the nervous horses in check.

The fur district was deserted at this early hour and the police took advantage of the empty streets to post sentries. 200 police on foot were stationed at fifty-foot intervals along the affected streets. They were armed with ugly night-sticks and uglier revolvers.

This is war—industrial war.

March of Pickets.

At seven o'clock sharp the striking fur workers began to pour into the strike area. Within a few minutes thousands of them were parading to and fro.

Massed picketing—the phrase is meaningless unless one has seen these thousands of determined workers holding their own on the picket line. Men and women, girls and youths.

Class war—the phrase is meaningless unless one has seen these courageous fur workers viciously clubbed by the police and knifed by the paid gangsters of the American Federation of Labor.

Girls Singged.

Scores of girls and men are herded into a hallway and jabbed with night-sticks. Police wagons crash through the crowd and back up. The workers are shoved and jostled in amid the cheers of their comrades.

Gangsters!

An open touring car prowls up one street and down the other. In it one sees pale, leering faces. The human drugs of the East Side are up early this morning. Information is offered. "See that car? That's 'Frenchy's' boat. Those guys are all members of his gang."

An occupant of the car nods to a

Reactionaries' Fake Delegation Determined to Split; Schachtman Quarrels With Aids

WASHINGTON, June 15.—With 31 delegates representing the scab New York unions continuing to cast a majority of votes in the fur workers' "convention" here, the bona fide delegates representing the overwhelming majority of the membership organized a unity committee last night and prepared today to withdraw from the packed convention.

Right wing forces controlling the fake convention quarreled badly all morning over whether they should accede to the first of the unity committee's demands: that the 33 delegates of the joint board unions be heard in defense against general executive board charges. President Oiser Schachtman was bitterly attacked by Vice President Winnick as a "camouflaged progressive" trying to repeat his compromising of 1925, by which he was elected president.

The right wing ganged up unanimously against Schachtman on his ruling that the joint board delegates be heard. In desperation Schachtman sent out a call for Vice President Matthew Woll, head of the A. F. of L. committee in charge of attempted disruption in New York who explained to the infuriated right wingers that it is necessary to give the joint board a hearing in order to preserve the legality of convention proceedings against attack in court. Grudgingly the machine agreed to hear the New York delegates tomorrow morning preparatory to expelling the joint board unions.

48 Delegates Join

Forty-eight delegates last night joined the unity committee to bring peace and unity within the ranks of fur workers. Representing New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Newark, Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, they spoke for 80 per cent of America's organized furriers.

Harry Englander, manager of the Toronto Joint Board, suspended on the convention's first day as international vice president because he protested the seating of the New York right wingers, was chosen chairman and an executive board of 14 members, representing each local affiliated, was elected.

Englander stated the unity committee arose from a pre-convention appeal to all locals to support a unity movement.

New York, containing the bulk of the fur workers, Englander explained, is the center of the union and the source of financial strength to help organization in outlying cities. But the present International has centered

N. Y. UNIONS WONT SUPPORT WOLL'S STRIKE-BREAKING

Workers Ignore Plea to Act as Thugs

The right wing picketing in the fur market has not as yet materialized. According to all indications it will never take place.

The letters sent out last Saturday to the New York locals of the American Federation of Labor asking for their help in breaking the furriers' strike has brought no response, the local trade unions refusing to act in the role of strikebreakers. This is seen as a major defeat for the policies of Matthew Woll.

Two Right Wingers Arrested.

Two right wing gangsters were arrested yesterday morning at the corner of Sixth Ave. and 24th St. They are Herman Silvers and Jack Regel. They were charged with carrying concealed weapons, large clubs being discovered up their sleeves. They were released in $1,000 and $500 bail by Magistrate Rosenhiuth in Jefferson Market Court.

Police authorities stated yesterday that one of the reasons for the mass arrests of pickets was to discourage non-strikers from joining the picket line. They said that those workers who picket in the morning before going to work, lose a day's pay when arrested. In this way the police department hopes to keep these workers from joining future mass demonstrations during the duration of the strike.

Two Students Nabbed.

Two students were arrested on the picket line yesterday morning. When brought to Jefferson Market Court they were released. They are Simon Gerson of C. C. N. Y. and Harry Himoff of the International Students' Club, Hunters College.

DIE-HARDS HIT BY U. S. S. R. BOYCOTT; LAUNCH RABID PROPAGANDA DRIVE

British Workers Jobless Following Break in Trade; Wool Barons Lose $25,000,000

LONDON, June 15.—Fake reports, emanating from Warsaw and Riga, about a "reign of terror" in the Soviet Union, are appearing in the Tory press—and deceive no one but the Tories.

The reports appearing in the die-hard press are particularly rabid because British industrialists are conferring with German industrialists with a view to extending credit to the Soviet Union. The determined attitude taken by the Soviet Union, in declaring an immediate boycott, has been a severe blow to British trade.

Hysterical Attacks

The conciliatory attitude of British manufacturers has driven the extreme Tory papers like the Daily Mail into hysterical attacks on the Soviet Union. Long and ridiculous accounts of "Bolshevik terror" appear daily.

British labor scoffs at these accounts. This afternoon George Buchanan, Labor member of Parliament was ordered from the House of Commons for branding as a lie the Tory statement that the British Government had nothing to do with spies recently captured in the Soviet Union.

Of Steel's Wage

(By Workers' Correspondent)

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., June 15.—Following months in the press, the United Mine Workers of America, Local 1202 (Coal Valley) has adopted a resolution demanding of the officials of the union and company that the check-off be restored, and that the fight for the freedom of the illegal and arbitrary jailing of the district officials be made, with a view to forcing the operators to bargain collectively.

"WHEREAS, the present system of picketing, where the union men are prevented from coming together in large groups and to speak to the strike-breakers is ineffective.

"RESOLVED, that we call upon our International and District Presidents to fight against this vicious order of the sheriff by organizing mass picketing at a number of mines in violation of the sheriff's orders and that our District and International Presidents shall lend this picketing in order to bring the question of the right to picket to the attention of all workers and the public at large."

The other resolution calling for more effective relief measures demands:

"1.—That we call upon the International officials of the UMWA to immediately place a 15% strike assessment during the period of the strike upon all miners now at work in the anthracite and the union bituminous districts, the money so collected to be used entirely for strike relief.

"2.—That we request the International officials of the UMWA to immediately issue a call for financial assistance for the miners and to urge the American Federation of Labor to issue a similar appeal.

"3.—That we call upon the district officers of District No. 5 to stimulate the collection of relief from labor unions and sympathizing elements in Western Pennsylvania, and should urge other districts of the UMWA to do likewise.

"4.—That local unions of the UMWA shall take the initiative in forming local relief committees in all mining centers to be made up of representatives of miners' unions and friendly local unions of other trades, for the purpose of raising funds for the relief of the miners on strike."

scoured wool, rags, yarn, worsted and woolen cloth have been lost to the Bradford woolen area of England by the police raid on the Arcos and Russian Trade Delegation Building.

This is the estimate given by the London correspondent of the Daily News Record, a New York textile paper. He is quoting Ben Riley, a member of parliament.

For the 18 months ending March 31, Russia had paid 4,900,000 pounds for Bradford goods, said Riley, and orders had greatly increased since. Thousands of workers were employed on Russian orders.

Build Air Squadron.

(Special to the Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, June 15.—Collections of funds for the air squadron "Our Reply to Chamberlain" are proceeding actively in all parts of the Soviet Union.

Workmen thruout the Union are donating their wages or working overtime for the purpose of contributing to the construction of the new squadron.

The Leningrad of Soviet authors has addressed an appeal to foreign authors urging them to protest strongly against the preparations for a new world war and an attack against the Soviet Union.

WE ACCUSE!

Millions of workers all over the world look upon Judge Thayer, who condemned Sacco and Vanzetti to death, as a coldhearted and cowardly murderer. Necessary, because he did all in his power to kill these two labor organizers merely because they threaten the profits of his class, and cowardly because he ran no risk, but was aided by the organized capitalist class and all of its agents.

its attention on New York and neglected the scattered locals, reversing the whole conception of the international union. Manager Ben Gold of the New York Joint Board in an hour's address reviewed the union's plight in the leading fur canters and called for a great organization campaign and for progress in amalgamating the needle trades. Eight thousand New York furriers are enlisted with the Joint Board, he declared, 4,000 having been enrolled as members before the strike and 4,000 joining during the present strike.

Gold exposed the claim of Matthew Woll that, 10,500 furriers had registered with the International pointing out that there are not that many furriers in New York City.

"The leaders of the International are desperate," their statement says, "and they are aware of the fact that they are fighting a losing battle.

He declared that 42 members of the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc., have made settlements with the joint board and asserted that the Joint Board has issued 4,900 striking cards, 2,200 to workers in Associated shops and 1,700 to unemployed workers.

Gold declared that the right wing expulsion and reorganization policy is demoralizing the union and called for peace and unity as the only hope for revitalizing the organization.

Won't Legalize Packed Convention

The Unity Committee decided that if the 31 right wing delegates from New York are allowed to vote on the expulsion of the Joint board unions, all its delegates will withdraw from the convention in order not to legalize its acts and proceed to New York, where great rallies will be held with the striking furriers. A conference will be sought with President Green of the A. F. of L. who responded cordially to the Toronto Joint Board's suggestion for peace and unity.

I. Shiplacoff, Pocket Book Workers, Morris Feinstone, United Hebrew Trades and Louis Berger, Neckwear Workers were brought down from New York today to bolster the machine's vicious onslaught on the left wing. Shiplacoff pledged 1,000 scab guards for each furrier picket in the present strike.

Abe Cahan and B. Vladeck of the Forward, invited to speak, could not be present but sent best wishes in the fight on Communism, and against the Left Wing furriers, that is, against the rank and file of the union.

Van Sweringens Flatly Refuse to Tell Little Stockholders Anything

WASHINGTON, June 15.—An impasse has been reached in the proposed Van Sweringen railroad merger and the full membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission may be called upon today to straighten out the tangle.

Persistent refusal of O. P. Van Sweringen, prime mover in the merger plan, to answer questions propounded by Henry W. Anderson, counsel for a group of minority stockholders of the Chesapeake and Ohio opposing the merger, relating to the steps by which he and his brother M. J. Van Sweringen and their associates, had acquired control of that road, brought about a situation that may have far-reaching effect upon the proposed merger.

MEXICO CITY, June 15.—Charging that some American oil companies are drilling in Mexico without government permission, the government announced today that if necessary it will use Federal troops to prevent new wells being sunk on lands which are in dispute under the new oil laws.

Locks have been broken and work renewed, the government charges, and announcement is made of the dispatch of troops to guard the wells which have been ordered closed.

Female Hasher's Troops Rout the King's Soldier

By A. C. WINDLE

CALGARY.—The King's Crown was knocked all awry. The famous Chair of Westminster tottered and the flag was trampled in the mud. All this on H. M.'s 62nd birthday—in a Calgary hash house.

It was about 9 p. m. when "international relations" became strained and war clouds darkened an hitherto peaceful horizon. The "Army" was engaged in a strenuous gastronomic attack on a nice juicy steak. It, (the Army) having decisively defeated the steak in the most brilliant engagement that has been fought since the defence of Ypres; inquired of the waitress if she were a "Canadian" or a "Bohunk."

The "Army" was told to tend to its own affairs. His Majesty's Forces thereupon severed diplomatic relations in an unprintable verbal "note." The "Amazon Artillery" immediately retaliated with its heaviest guns—or was it a salt shaker? Well anyway the war was on. Britain's military supremacy was valiantly (but only temporarily) upheld when a cavalry whip raised a welt across the waitress's shoulders.

The Soldier Has

The soldier of the King was driven from the field by a volunteer civilian corps. It seemed, however, that the engagement might be re-opened when the police arrived. But the spectators were sorely disappointed and all hope for the future of the grand old empire was lost when the "hero" of this great epic of modern warfare beat a hasty, disorderly retreat down 8th Ave. with the police in hot pursuit.

Devout British patriots wept bitterly in an agony of despot humiliation when they saw a mere constable of civic police forces and take him captively this proud descendant of the Bryn Dale. "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the King" were sung by the assembled throng.

Miners' Kids Of All Trades Too Poor, Union Testifies

WASHINGTON, (FP) June 15.—What part of the maintenance of the family of a coal miner's child was told in vivid terms in the arbitration case now before the Supreme Court between the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes. The report comes from a statement of the National Catholic Welfare Conference has analyzed this testimony in a press bulletin. The witness was Mrs. Minnie Harris, wife of a trackman living at Cynthia, Ky.

She showed that for a family of seven the weekly grocery bill was $20 to $24, leaving so little money for clothing that she had had no new dresses for more than a year. The last one had been made of 3¼ yards of material at 60 cents a yard. She had had no hat in two years.

No Milk For Children.

The children had had no milk in their diet in these years, and of course there was no saving for a day of sickness or unemployment. The company, in its generosity, furnished them with a section house of three rooms.

As low as 20 cents an hour, other witnesses, called by the company itself, said was paid to some groups of workers on the road and its subsidiaries. These companies were non-union, and they arbitrarily fixed the wages without consideration of the cost of living.

The bulletin argues that the showing made in this case is a new justification of the doctrine of trade union negotiation and a fair living wage, set forth in Pope Leo XIII's encyclical on labor.

Chaliapin Still Citizen.

MOSCOW, June 15.—Official denial was made today of reports that Feodor Chaliapin has been deprived of his Russian citizenship.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

Lewis in Pittsburgh To Defend Separate District Contracts

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 15.—While the United Mine Worker district officials in his home town, Springfield, Ill., are slurring politicians with the employers for a separate agreement for Illinois, thus permanently breaking the solidarity of the miners' union and its ability to strike as a unit, International President John L. Lewis has arrived here to make a series of four speeches.

The policy of separate agreements to be defended by Lewis. He promises the workers in this rather radical section of the country that they will receive all the support of the union in their struggle with the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal and the Pittsburgh Coal companies, both of which are trying to run open shop, without any union agreement at all.

Lewis, in an interview, stated that "the strike is progressing satisfactorily."

policeman. Suddenly the car swerves to the curb and two of the yeggs leap out. A steel bar flashes in the sunlight. A human frame crumples up. The car speeds away.

A group of workers gather; first aid is administered. A horrible gash oozes blood. The police break into the group and arrest all those nearby. Obstructing traffic.

One sees them mingling in the crowds. Dope fiends, professional sluggers and "carvers."

A patrol wagon loaded with strikers dashes by at break-neck speed. They sing defiantly,

Solidarity Forever,
The Union makes us strong

—Arrested.

There were over 200 strikers arrested yesterday. Here and there one saw a torn coat or a face twisted with pain, eloquent testimony of the Cossack method employed by the New York police.

For two hours these thousands of strikers offered their show of power to the Association of Fur Manufacturers. In the face of murderous brutality and the threatening hoofs of the mounted police they held the line. A more splendid show of grit and class-consciousness would be difficult to find.

Here is an indefinable something that grips the guts. Here is a courage that belittles battlefield heroism. As one load of truly heroic strikers are being hustled off to the police station a colored porter of a nearby building shouts, "Give 'm a hand—dems the boys." The passersby cheer and wave their hats.

A few hours later in the Jefferson Market Police Court the sounds of singing and cheering floated up from the cells into the dingy court room. The court is crowded with sympathizers and fellow strikers.

Hovering about one sees the enemies of these plucky fighters. Who are they? Vicious-faced policemen. Pallid, shuffling gunmen, snivelling rats, the human offal of a great city. Hugh Frayne and Edward F. McGrady, the cringing stool-p'geons for the American Federation of Labor and the Association of Fur Manufacturers, come into the courtroom. As though it were prearranged there is bursts of singing from the cells below. It is quite audible.

On the Line! On the Line!
On the picket, on the picket line.
And let Frayne kick.
He's the bosses' pick.
Come and picket on the picket line.

Later in the day all but six of the 200 arrested strikers were dismissed by Judge Rosenbluth. The six were sentenced to one day imprisonment.

"I have been in court, but I have yet to see anything which will compare to the indomitable courage and pure dogged pugnacity of the striking girls and women who picket the

They are—thousands of them—performing a useful purpose in the present struggle. China, like America in 1776, is striving to shake off the shackles of British domination and imperialism. And her small boys are taking no small part in the fight.

Thirty thousand boys between the ages of 6 and 18 are organized in Boys' Corps in Nationalist China.

Clad in neat khaki, red handkerchiefs twisted about their shoulders, sturdy staffs in their hands—you find these youths everywhere—on Duty.

"An astonishing activity that is being carried on by these boys," one official report states. "is to persuade all women to unbind their feet."

You see these small lads early in the morning, marching to factories in crowds, carrying banners inscribed—

"We want a shorter working day—eight hours are enough."

Late at night you find them keeping order at revolutionary street meetings.

Mass Meeting.

At a great mass gathering recently, when 200,000 people met in celebration, and 10,000 members of the Boys' Corps acted as guards, a group of foreigners was inadvertently caught in a rush for the gate.

"To have stumbled in that great mass of moving people would have meant certain death," an American girl, a member of the party told later.

"My shoes were trampled from my feet—the crowd seemed to have lost sense of direction and milled back and forward in horrible confusion—yet, I was never too frightened. Always somewhere in the multitude, I could see the khaki uniform of a Boys' Corps member, trapped just as I—but every valiantly waving his stick aloft, calling out directions to the crowd—attempting to subdue the confusion. Eventually, the boys were successful."

The Boys' Corps movement may be divided into three types: the Boys' Corps of the working class, the Boys' Corps of the student class, and the Boys' Corps of the peasant class. Altho these boys are of three classes of people, yet their objects and methods of organization are identical—to fasten the working spirit, promote community life, develop the spirit of sacrifices and bravery, and to further the interests of laborers and peasants.

Surprising Progress.

Besides the development of the Boys' Corps during the last three months in Hupeh province, there are in Shanghai about 10,000 youths, in Hunan 5,000, and in Kwangtung 5,000. The other provinces have not yet organized, but the students' unions, the labor unions, and the peasons' unions in the various provinces have adopted measures to organize Boys' Corps in the immediate future.

Although the organization in Hupeh was formed only three months ago, it has made surprisingly rapid progress. The following is the creed of the Boys' Corps, or rather the rules which they must obey:

1. Boys must be obedient to their officers; they must protect the interests of the laborers; they must be friendly to one another; they must not drink, smoke, gamble or entertain any superstitious ideas; their slogans are "Down with Imperialism, militarism;" and they must become masters of the world.

The flag of the boys is five and a half feet long and three feet and three inches wide. Whenever they march in public they must carry it. Wherever they go, they must take their staffs with them. Training of the "Day shift" boys corps is conducted by the labor unions from 6 to 9 a. m.; training of "Night shift" from 6 to 9 in the evenings.

The first group of boys was formed last September at Changsha, Hanhow, Thereafter all of the districts followed the example. On February 26, the Hupeh Provincial Organization was established at the headquarters of the Provincial Labor Union.

The total number of Boys' Corps members in Hupeh, it is estimated, is about 30,000. During the past three months, they have been carrying on drilling, singing, lecturing, studying revolutionary knowledge, and other boys' activities as tailoring, cooking, propagating laborprs' and peasants' movements. An astonishing activity that is being carried on by these youths is to persuade all women to unbind their feet. As a result, foot-binding has been remarkably diminished in Wuhan recently.

To Eradicate.

In order to eradicate the oppression of imperialists and to further the welfare of the working class, the lads have pledged themselves to carry out the following program:

1. To strengthen the Boys' organizations in Wuhan, to form red cross corps, bands, and propaganda groups.

2. To establish an institute for training leaders and workers for organizing Boys' Corps.

3. To collect and compile materials for the boys of the working class to study.

4. To hold health propaganda weeks.

5. To, exterminate all fendal influences, superstition, and medieval thought in China.

6. To teach the relationship between the workers and the labor unions.

7. To demand factories to shorten the hours of work for boys.

Besides the Boys' Corps organized and directed by the labor unions, there are Boy scouts in various schools in Wuhan. These boy scouts will be organized by the Wuhan Students' Union. The methods of reorganizing these boy scouts, their creed and principles, and works will be the same as those of the Boys' Corps just organized among the workers' children and relations.

The following is a table showing the number of Boys' Corps members in China:

Hupeh	20,000
Shanghai	10,000
Hunan	5,000
Kwangtung	3,000
Total	48,000

WELLS RAPS FASCISM AS MENACE

"Italy is now the Sick Land of Europe, a fever patient, flushed with hectic resemblance to health and still capable of much violence," writes H. G. Wells, British author, in a current periodical.

"She has fallen out of the general circle of European development: she is no longer a factor in progressive civilization. In the attempts to consolidate European affairs that will be going on the next decade, Italy will be watched rather than consulted. She has murdered or exiled all her K peans.

"The deadliest thing about fascism is its systematic and ingenious and complete destruction of all criticism and critical opposition. It is leaving which it is in contact. . .

Fascism is holding up the whole apparatus of thought and education in Italy, killing or driving out of the country every capable thinker, clearing out the last nests of independent expression in the universities. Meanwhile its militant gestures alarm and estrange every foreign power with industrial slum of Europe

"Yet no European country is less capable of carrying on a modern war than Italy; she has neither the coal, the iron, the industrial sunassary, and equally is she incapable of developing a modern industrialism without external resources. 'Her population increases unchecked; and beneath oil the blare and bluster of this apparently renascent Italy there accumulates a congestion of underemployed and what will soon be underfed millions.

Bleed Workers and Peasants

"It seems to me that the burlesque of Italy reads something after this fashion: This romantic, magnificent patriotic fascist party, so exalted and devoted in its profession, will continue to grip the land; but of necessity, it must become more and more the servant of foreign and domestic capital, and more and more must it set itself to reduce its dear and beloved Italy to a congested country of sweated workers and terrorized peasants, until at last it will be seen plainly as the in-

Free State in Political Chaos After Election

The heaviest gains in the elections were made by the Irish Labor Party which now has 22 seats as against 15 in the late Dail. Reports that the Labor Party would enter into a coalition with the Cosgrave government were denied by deputy Morrissey of Tipperary. His denial, however, would indicate that the right wing of the party intends to have an unofficial understanding with Cosgrave and that they will give the government conditional support.

Victorious in Irish Elections

Countess Markievics.

Countess Markievics acquired the title thru marriage with a Polish count from whom she separated owing to differences of opinion over the war. She belongs to the more radical wing of the Republican movement and considers herself a Workers' Republican. She took part in the Easter Week rebellion with James Connolly and other leaders and was sentenced to death, a sentence afterwards commuted. She was the first women ever elected to the British house of commons but refused to take her seat, since she did not recognize the right of the imperialist parliament to legislate for the people of Ireland. She has just been elected to the Dail from South Dublin, in opposition to the Cosgrave government.

CHANG TSO LIN DECLARES MARTIAL LAW AS NATIONALISTS NEAR PEKIN

Report Nationalist Victory

Reports from Wuhan state that Nationalist troops have won a decisive victory over Yang Sen's army. (Yang Sen is a lieutenant of Chang Tso-lin's) and occupied Yenyuan.

Trade unions and other workers and peasant's organizations are protesting against the dispatch of British and Japanese troops to Shantung and American marines to Tientsin, reports from Wuhan state.

Labor Conference Scores Imperialism

The Pan-Pacific Trade Union Congress has published an appeal to the workers of the world, declaring that only an energetic protest can prevent the dispatch of imperialist troops to China.

The opening of the All-China Trade Union Congress has been fixed for July 19th. (Last year's congress represented more than a million organized workers; it is expected that this year's congress will represent close to three million organized workers.)

Open Labor Ministry

WUHAN (Hankow), June 2 (Delayed).—The Agricultural Ministry was solemnly opened a few days ago by Tang Ping-chan.

In his address he placed the problems of the peasantry into three categories.

In north China, he said, the principal problem of the peasantry is the struggle against the militarists; in Honan the chief problem is co-operation with the revolutionary army (the capture of virtually all of Honan by General Feng changes the problem for the Honan peasantry); in Hunan and Hnpeh the chief problem is the organization of the peasantry.

Call For War On Chiang

SHANGHAI, Juno 2. (delayed).—The Shanghai Trades Council which was dissolved by Chiang Kai-shek in April issued an illegal manifesto on May 30th, Commemoration Day for the Shanghai massacre.

The manifesto appeals to the working class to fight against Chiang Kai-shek "the new militarist and traitor to the working class."

War Lord Alliance Fizzles

PEKING, June 15.—Reports of the success of the negotiations between Chang Tso-lin, Sun Chuan-fang and Chang Tsung-chang eliminate the possibility of the formation of war lords including Chiang Kai-shek, renegade Nationalist.

Although Chiang Kai-shek has declared his willingness to ally himself with Sun Chaun-fang from whom he took Shanghai, he is unwilling to enter in combination including Sun Chuan-fang. Shantungese war lord.

The failure of the Chiang Kai-shek-Chang Tso-lin negotiations makes the advance of the Nationalist troops even simpler than they had expected.

The capture of Peking by the Nationalist troops is imminent, and there is talk here among foreigners of recruiting a band of foreign brigands and adventurers, most of them White Russians, to fight the Nationalist menace of the city. Reports from Berlin state that General Wrangel is recruiting an army of white guards for service in China.

Egypt Used as Base For British Anti-Soviet Propaganda

CAIRO, June 15.—How deeply British imperialism has sunk its fangs into the life fabric of the Egyptian nation is evidenced by the open usurpation of police and military officials and their filtration into the highest positions in the domestic administration of the Egyptian Government. To accomplish its purposes, the conquerors are using here, as elsewhere, white guard Russian mercenaries.

In Alexandria the police force is frankly under British control, and in Cairo, Russell Pasha is Chief of Police. There is an unconcealed traffic between these British agents and the Russian emigre White Guards, who are eager to sell their services as agent-provocateurs. To facilitate this commerce, a "Russian Bureau" has been established by the police, who have placed at its head the Czarist ex-general consul, Petrow.

Thousands of counter-revolutionary Russian emigrants have found sanctuary in this hotbed of anti-working class and imperialist intrigue, and it continues to be the scandal of the nation that even at this late day the Egyptian Government still recognizes the White Guardist mission as the official Russian representatives.

An active anti-Soviet and anti-Bolshevist propaganda is carried on by these emigrés, subsidized by and under the protection of the British Government agents, and it is stated here, on good authority, that only recently a sum of 10,000 pounds sterling was assigned to the local authorities for the avowed purpose of waging war on "Sovietism and Bolshevism," to be devoted mainly to anti-Soviet espionage and propaganda.

The Labor Movement of India

ARTICLE II.

Activities of All-India Trade Union Congress.

With the general increase of organized workers in India, the last year shows us a certain numerical strengthening of the trade union center, the All-India Trade Union Congress and its five provincial departments. At the 6th Trade Union Congress held in January, 1926, 52 unions with a general membership of 125,000 were represented. (At the 5th Congress, February, 1925, 37 unions with 90,000 members were represented.) At the present moment the numerical strength represented by the congress is considerably greater than the foregoing figure of 125,000 workers.

At the 6th Congress held, as stated earlier, in January, 1926, many resolutions were taken, the most important of which are as follows:

I. To find out whether the unions desire the formation of an Indian Labor Party.

II. To demand the introduction of an 8-hour day in India.

III. To demand that women be prohibited from working underground.

IV. To insist that workers' organizations have the right of electing their representatives in the legislative organs of the country.

At the present time there is a system by which workers' representatives are appointed in the Indian Legislative Assembly and in the provincial Legislative Councils.

A few salient features distinguish the Congress. For instance President Giri in his speech gave a fairly exhaustive account of the trade union movement of India as developed in the different branches of industry, which can be considered a novelty in the history of these congresses. It was at the 6th Congress and for the first time that the question of the necessity and importance of organizing the agricultural workers of India was raised. The number of agricultural workers reaches 21,676,107.

In the current work of the congress we notice that during the past year a stubborn fight was put up by the congress to have workers' unions recognized by government institutions and private enterprises. Much work was also done to put into effect and to introduce in the government legislative organs the scheme worked out by the congress on a labor government. It is necessary to point out here that actually the congress plays an unsignificant role in the trade union life of India, although locally it is moving slowly ahead to widen its sphere of influence.

Labor Legislation.

After having been dragged out for two years, after prolonged discussions the Legislative Assembly and the India State Council finally confirmed the "Bill on registration of trade unions" on the 2nd of February, 1926. The new law legalizing the registration of trade unions (the law admits the principle of voluntary registration) giving certain advantages (for example, the right of forming special funds for political objects), actually has set up a careful government control on registration of workers' organizations and in a most dishonest fashion limits their freedom. (Details on this were published in our publication "International Labor Movement" No. 18-19, 1926.) But even against such a narrow and limited law—it came into force only in April, 1927—the employers' organizations fought long and stubbornly.

Besides the law on trade unions another law is now being prepared stipulating when wages have to be paid and on fines. The law on arbitration, despite the demands of workers' organizations, has not moved ahead up to the present time.

Employers and T. U. Movement.

After the law on trade unions had been finally adopted the employers endeavored to immediately fit in with the new situation and to get as much benefit from it as they possibly could. The new low had not yet been adopted, when in Madras a "Union of Factory Workers of Buckingham and Karnatic," made its appearance, formed by the employers and totally under their control and influence. From the very first day of its existence this union commenced a stubborn struggle with the existing Madras Workers' Union, and in spite of a campaign carried on against this employers' union, the All-India Congress and Bengal Trade Union Federation continues to exist.

Similar cases were reported from the Great Indian Railroad where the management stubbornly and continually endeavored to organize "councils of workers" to be under its influence, to take the place of the existing trade unions.

Labor Movement in the Local Governments.

A wide strike movement among the most backward and oppressed strata of the Indian proletariat characterized 1926, which movement was chiefly taken up by the workers of the local governments. For an example of this, we draw the attention of the reader to the textile strikes in the provincial governments of Bihar and Nagpur (see No. 18 "International Labor Movement," 1926). Both these strikers were well organized and carried out in a comradely fashion. This evidently bespeaks the break now taking place in the temper of the backward and unorganized masses, and demonstrates the growth of their class-consciousness. In both strikes, despite the fact that experience and a good war chest are lacking, the workers nevertheless achieved tangible results: In Indor the 14 hour working day was abolished, in Mayor, wages were partially increased. As a result of these strikes strong unions have been organized in Mayaor and Indor, which immediately drew in comparatively large numbers of workers.

Repression Grows.

The growing activity of the working class and the stubbornness with which they defend themselves against the onslaught of capital, was counteracted by the government with ruthless and oppressive measures. The following facts will illustrate this:

(1) Large numbers of striking metal workers in Bombay were arrested in August, 1926. (See "International Labor Movement" No. 43, 1926.)

(2) A peaceful gathering of striking workers were shot down in Bengalor (4 killed and 14 wounded).

(3) The raid on the building of the Railwaymen's Union in Negapatam, where documents were rifled and members of the union management arrested.

Altitude To British Miners' Strike.

News of the British miners' strike was welcomed by the workers of India. Throughout the country meetings were held at which resolutions of sympathy and collections were made. Especially active were workers' organizations in Bombay. To help the British striking miners a committee of action was formed by the Bengal miners, which, by the way, suggested a solidarity strike, but were unable to carry it out.

The Amsterdam International, British Reformists and the Indian Labor Movement.

Especially during the last year have the activities of the British reformists in India, which have a comparatively long history, been energetically carried out. The British Labor Party took all measures to control the developing British trade union movement and to guide it through reformist channels. During 1926 the following leaders of the British labor party and Trade Union Congress visited India: Graham Paul, Johnston, Byas and Rosenfeld. At the present time there is a delegation of the International Federation of Textile Workers, headed by its secretary, Tom Shaw, is visiting India. Also member of British Labor Party and member of parliament, Lawrence is on a visit too. The chief purpose of all these visits to India is to study the political and industrial position of the country, labor conditions of the Indian workers, trade union development in India and, mainly, to set up connections with the Indian labor movement and guide it into reformist channels.

The British reformists are using two methods to get control of the Indian trade union movement: By drawing the Indian trada unions into the Amsterdam International and by forming an Indian labor party after the model of the British "Labor Party". It le necessary to notice that at the present time some results have been achieved by them. By the end of 1926 the All-India Railwaymen's Federation, Bengal Sailors' Union and Union of Indian Sailors in Calcutta joined the Amsterdam International. Besides this a National Labor Party of India has been formed in Calcutta, which actually is not a party of the working class, but a bourgeois-philanthropic society.

The successes of reformism in India are due in great measure to the Indian "labor" leaders. The latter energetically preach the idea of close cooperation between labor and capital and take all measures to curb revolutionary activity which le rousing the Indian proletariat to take part actively in political life. Of course it need not be said that the Indian working masses took no part in carrying the decision on entering the Amsterdam International or to create the so-called "Labor" Party. Under the directions of the British Labor Party all this "work" was carried out by the leaders of the Indian trade union movement, among whom are quite a number of direct agents of the Anglo-Indian bourgeoisie and government.

In general, the struggle between labor and capital is strengthening; and the class-consciousness of the Indian proletariat is growing. The most backward ranks of the working masses are preparing to enter the struggle, and the number of workers organized is increasing, while the gap between petty-bourgeois representatives and the workers is growing wider and cutting them off from the masses. The Indian proletariat is now gathering strength in new gathering conflicts for future great battles. And under the Indian proletariat is [illegible] in the political line of the country.

Plain and Fancy Editorial Lying.

In a copyrighted article the New York Times informs its readers that Moscow is in a state of panic, that foreigners are fleeing the city, that deep gloom pervades the whole. A careful reading of the article reveals the Times' sources of information. The article carries a London dateline, which indicates that much of it was concocted by that utterly unprincipled liar, Ernest Marshall. But even Marshall, expert prevaricator, does not take full responsibility for the article. He takes some parts of it from a Warsaw dispatch to the Daily Mail, other parts from a Riga (headquarters of white-guard lie factories) message to the same paper.

There may be a degree of truth in the statement that there is panic in Moscow, but it is not among the masses. If there is any fear of impending calamity it is among those miserable hirelings of imperialism who realize now, since the execution of the murderous conspirators against the workers' and peasants' government, that their game is up—that they must unconditionally stop their activities or take the consequences.

Lindbergh Now a Megaphone for War-Mongers.

All hopes that young Lindbergh would follow the footsteps of his father, who opposed this country's participation in the world war, have gone glimmering in the past twenty-four hours. That he is now a conscious part of the war machine, is plain to everyone. Tuesday evening at the Commodore Hotel, before the assembled Tammanyites and the plutocrats attending the banquet arranged in his behalf by the "mayor's reception committee," and on Wednesday before the New York Chamber of Commerce, comprising New York's biggest financiers, merchants and their legal lights—the corporation lawyers—Lindbergh made typical jingo speeches calculated to advance the interests of the dollar patriots who cheered him to the echo.

"The City of New York," he told his hearers, "would be the most vulnerable spot in this country in the event of war." Using the usual banal twaddle that characterizes all imperialist spokesmen who try to conceal their murderous aims behind the mask of pacifism the young flyer added: "We don't want war in this country. One of the surest ways to prevent it is to be prepared for it." The young man may be courageous in his flying feats, as he undoubtedly is, but his remarks prove that he has no thoughts of his own. Every miserable penny-a-liner who turns out press dope for the patriotic societies of the country repeats the identical language used on these two occasions.

Lindbergh's present actions are an insult to the memory of his father and shows that he and his mother deliberately strive to undo the work against Wall Street that the elder Lindbergh so courageously, in the face of war fanaticism, carried on. His feat was, after all, not an individual achievement, but simply the result of the technical development of the airplane, a social development to which unnumbered people contributed.

This wave of intensive war propaganda serves one purpose, however, and that is to dramatize the important role that will be played by bombing planes in the next war.

It also is a warning to the working class to begin at once preparations for combatting with every means at our command the conspiracies of the imperialists who are preparing for the next world slaughter, which will be more ghastly than the last because of the perfection of greater instruments of destruction.

Appropriate Honors for Mr. Stimson.

Colonel Henry L. Stimson, ambassador extraordinary of Calvin Coolidge, the National City Bank and other plunderers of the South and Central American republics, has been signally honored by a university that is fit only to honor such a person. As personal representative of Mr. Coolidge, Wall Street's white hope, Stimson declared a private war on the liberal government and, with the assistance of American marines, overthrew it in the interest of Wall Street's puppet, Diaz.

He was given the degree of doctor of laws by Syracuse University, which Upton Sinclair, in his "Goose-Step" refers to as "the university of heaven."

It is eminently proper that this of all universities should honor Stimson because of his alleged achievement in bringing peace to Nicaragua—the peace of the desert, the silence of death.

This university has a rare tradition, being sponsored by as rare a bunch of pirates as ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat. Among the luminaries in this galaxy of stars appears the name of John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil Company; Huyler, the candy king; Samuel Browne, the cod-liver oil faker; L. C. Smith of typewriter fame; Louis Marshall, corporation lawyer of New York and Edgar T. Brackett, one of the leading political crooks of Saratoga Springs, the great gambling and red-light resort. Added to these worthies are a dozen or so pulpit pounders, Elmer Gantrys in various stages of development, who sanctify with their stale platitudes the rich thieves who direct the institution. Truly it is the university of heaven—the golden shore—that has thus honored the ex-secretary of war for his part in overthrowing a government of Nicaragua that dared challenge the power of his brigand masters on Wall Street.

Carrying Civilization to the Chinese.

In view of the fact that the return of Lindbergh near flag day has been utilized as an excuse to lengthen the usual observation from one day to six days, thereby establishing "flag week" in order to have more time for intensive militarist propaganda, it is timely to expose some of the pastimes of the gunmen of American imperialism in China. These messengers of light and liberty, christianity and civilization, are regular patrons of Chinese brothels maintained within the boundaries of the international settlement at Shanghai where fifteen-year-old girls live horrible existences in order to satisfy their bestial desires.

The Chinese women of Shanghai, through the Women's Department of the Koumintang (nationalist party) have protested against this white-slavery. They assert that "one of the objects of the revolution is the emancipation of women and it is humiliating and gruesome that China's womanhood should be trampled under the iron heel of foreign imperialism."

Mothers and Fathers! Now is the time to place your sons in the clutches of the imperialist military machine so that they may be taught to be clean, healthy young men and bring to the heathen their high ideals in the form of brothels harboring female children.

Those who have sons in Uncle Sam's army ought to be proud of their exalted pastimes!

THE British press is busily engaged in reporting executions thruout the Soviet Union. The idea is to create the impression that the Russians are discontented with the government and that the latter is using terroristic methods against the people. Whatever executions have taken place there, have been officially announced by the government. When Britain talks about terror we do not forget her bloody policy in India. Rarely a week passes by, that some Hindoo nationalist is not put to death for trying to free his country from British rule.

Lovestone to Speak At Cleveland Picnic

CLEVELAND, June 15.—The Workers (Communist) Party picnic on Sunday, June 26, will be a big one. It will be held at Avondale Garden, Stop 25, Kinsman Road, and a big crowd is expected. There will be fun of all kinds, races, dancing, competitions, and baseball.

Jay Lovestone, General Secretary of the Party, is expected as speaker. Hence, the picnic will be a great treat for everybody.

DRAMA

Provincetown to Produce Aeschylus' "Seven Against Thebes"

Four new plays by American authors, and "Seven Against Thebes" by Aeschylus are listed for presentation by the Provincetown Players next season at their little theatre, on Macdougal Street. Paul Green, winner of the Pulitzer prize for his play "In Abraham's Bosom," is included in the program for a new play. Aeschylus' "Seven Against Thebes," the announcement reads, will be produced in a new manner. These new plays will be selected during the summer months from manuscripts submitted by American authors.

"When the Provincetown Playhouse starts its thirteenth season next fall," the new prospectus reads, "it will be one of the few remaining non-commercial theatres in New York where young American playwrights, directors, artists and actors can get a hearing and find a welcome. In the past our playhouse has rendered important service to the American drama, has given basic direction to the development of the American stage, during the last decade. Eugene O'Neill, Susan Glaspell, George Cram Cook, Edna St. Vincent Millay, among others, and this season's Pulitzer Prize winner, Paul Green, author of 'In Abraham's Bosom,' testify to the successful fulfillment of our mission of discovering and giving to the theatre new playwrights, and new and fruitful impulses."

"In Abraham's Bosom" will close at the Provincetown Playhouse this Sunday night.

Mysterious Pinchot Subpoena.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 15.—Gifford Pinchot, former governor of Pennsylvania, was served with a subpoena at his home in Milford, near here, today by a United States Marshall representing the Northern District of California.

Pinchot was ordered to appear as a witness in the case of the Government against Cornelius Conway, at San Francisco, June 27.

Cleveland to Demonstrate.

CLEVELAND, June 15.—A mass demonstration staged by the Workers Communist Party and the Young Workers League will be held in Cleveland on Saturday, July 2, at 2:30 P. M. at Public Square.

Cleveland's workers have manifested considerable anti-war feeling and this will be an occasion for them to demonstrate against imperialism and imperialist war, against the schemes of American imperialism in Nicaragua and the West Indies, against the plans of the imperialists in China and the attempts to draw Soviet Russia into war. The workers must be prepared against the oncoming war.

Cleveland Picnic Sunday

CLEVELAND, June 15.—Young Workers League, Branch 1 will hold a picnic Sunday, June 19 at Avondale Gardens, Stop 25 Kinsman Road. Directions:—Take Kinsman car to end of line. Buses will be there to take you to the picnic grounds.

Textile Workers of Brooklyn on Strike Against Wage Cut

By a Worker Correspondent.

For the first three weeks the broad silk weavers of the Perfect Silk Co., a mill located at 1426-37th St., Brooklyn, have been out on strike.

The Perfect Silk Co. is a Syrian concern employing 60 workers, chiefly Syrians.

The present strike came as a result of an attempt on the part of the concern to force a wage cut upon its workers.

During the past year the conditions in the silk industry have grown steadily worse. Not only has there been a rapid extension of the vicious three and four loom system, but close upon its heels, in fact as an inevitable accompaniment, a decrease in wages and increase in hours from 8 to 10, 11 and 12 hours a day.

Conditions Among Worst.

Conditions in the silk industry are among the worst existing in any American industry. The average weekly wage of a weaver is $20. For this miserable wage the textile weaver slaves 10, 11 and 12 hours a day!

How unbearable the situation had become can readily be seen from the fact that the Syrians, the backbone of the 3- and 4-loom systems, and long time in New York, have walked out on strike against their employer, who is their countryman.

Lack of Organization.

The reason for the rotten conditions prevailing in the textile industry can be found mainly in the lack of organization among the workers. Only an insignificant number of silk workers are organized in trade unions.

A local of textile workers with headquarters at 51 East 10th St. known as Local 1615 United Textile Workers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor has been recently organized in Greater New York. This union has as its aim the organization of all textile workers in Greater New York regardless of craft.

Only through organization can we do away with the abominable conditions in the textile industry.

Renegade Union Print Shop Seeks Injunction

CHICAGO, June 15.—(FP)—Hearings are proceeding in the petition of the White (Regan) Printing house for a permanent injunction against 5 unions that are fighting a lockout enterprise declared April 18. Attorneys for the concern, which changed to the open shop practically overnight after many years under union agreements, closely questioned editor Andrew Bruce of The Federation News, official Chicago labor organ, on the source of his news stories about the lockout. He mentioned The Federated Press and other sources.

The unions in the struggle are Typographical No. 16, Printing Pressmen 3 and 4, Bookbinders 3 and 30.

Protest Passage of Negroes at Meeting Sunday Afternoon

A mass meeting to protest against forced Negro labor in the flood districts will be held next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Abyssinian Baptist Church auditorium, 138th St. and 7th Ave., under the auspices of the New York Section, American Negro Labor Congress.

Among the speakers will be Richard B. Moore, Scott Nearing, A. Harris of "The Messenger", Ray Lancaster, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Pat Devine, of the I. L. D., and Cornelius Jackman, of the Negro Foreign-born Citizens' Alliance.

William L. Patterson, New York section of the American Negro Labor Congress, will be chairman.

Workingclass Women Expect to Hold Their Conference June 25th

Labor and fraternal organizations, women's auxiliaries, and women's organizations of New York, New Jersey and vicinity are being invited to attend the annual conference of the United Council of Workingclass Housewives to be held at 1 p. m., at "The Little Hungary," 258 East Houston St.

At this conference reports will be made of relief activity in the textile strike of Passaic, the strike of the paperbox makers, an other important struggles.

Johnston Workers Back Council to Protect the Foreign; Cheer 'Lindy'

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., (FP) June 15.—Steel workers cheered the name of Lindbergh at a big mass meeting of the Johnstown Council for the protection of Foreign Born Workers. Jeannette Pearl, field organizer, evoked applause when she lauded the feat of this young descendant of a Swedish emigrant and said his flight would bring the workers of Europe and America closer together.

The Council's fight against the proposed finger-printing and registration laws for alien workers are awakening a keen response in Johnstown. The population of the town, drawn from all the nations of Europe, labors in the mills of the Cambria steel plant, a Bethlehem enterprise. These alien workers were hunted like dogs during the great steel strike and the Palmer "Red Raids" that followed.

Labor is backing the Council. Heading its advisory committee is H. Baumer, state senator and on the list are William J. Cavanaugh, county commissioner, and Judge John H. McCann. McCann, elected by a coalition of the Labor Party and the Democrats, is an outstanding laborite and has turned down the requests of coal operators for injunctions against the United Mine Workers.

Building Trades Head Calls for Industrial Czar

Seen as Wedge in Drive For Open Shop

A new speculative offensive in the building trades is now being inaugurated under the guise of advocacy of a "Czar" for the industry. Declaiming that "Bolshevikism is still in existence," C. G. Meranus, head of the Building Trades Employers' Association who is violently attacking at the 18 weeks' strike of the Brooklyn plumbers, is leading the campaign for an official autocracy which will be the entering wedge for crushing the workers' organizations.

These facts become evident at the second day's session of the New York Industrial Survey Commission which is hearing testimony with the view toward recommending the appointment of a building trades czar, who will be expected to safeguard the interests of "the public."

It is evident that the appointment of the "czar" of the industry would ultimately involve the appointment of a committee which would enforce compulsory arbitration. Similar committees have been composed of representatives of the bosses, labor, and the "public." The representatives of the "public," however, have inevitably been drawn from conservative business groups.

Outlawry of all strikes would be a natural consequence of this commission, it is pointed out.

Progressives in the building trades union in this city declare that the present hearings have been inspired by the Building Trades Employers' Association of this city, and form part of a propaganda program to beat down the wages and working conditions of the workers.

It is pointed out, that only an amalgamation of the building trades which will present a united front to the proposed attacks of the employers will enable the various unions involved to safeguard the victories that they have thus far achieved.

THIRD LECTURE ON CHINA TO BE GIVEN ON FRIDAY

The third of the series of four lectures on China will be delivered at the Workers' School this Friday evening by H. M. Wicks. This will deal with the development of the Nationalist liberation movement before and after the world war, showing the different stages through which it has passed to its present stage, with particular emphasis upon the effect of imperialist exploitation in China.

Lectures Well Attended.

The lectures on China have thus far been the best attended series ever delivered at the school, there being about 200 for each lecture. This lecture will start at eight o'clock sharp and those who come late will have only themselves to blame for the part they miss. Each lecture, though part of a course, is also complete in itself so that the full benefit is derived whether you have attended the previous ones or not.

Plumbers Return to Work With Issues Being Arbitrated

The 12,000 Brooklyn plumbers have decided to return to work pending final settlement of the strike by arbitration.

The demands of the workers included an increase of the daily wage from $13 to $14, and a 6-day week of 48 hours.

Announcement of the decision was made following a conference between Thomas Cosine, president of the union, and Thomas E. O'Brien, president of the Master Plumbers' Association.

All the peaks will be immediately discharged, and the company union, called the "Employees' Plumbers" automatically dissolved as a condition of the return of the union men.

Over 15,000 plumbers' helpers of Greater New York who struck April 1 for union recognition and increase of wages are still out.

Mussolini Plans Jugoslav War; To Seize Dalmatia

D'Annunzio Gets Secret Orders for Coup

LONDON, June 15.—Plans for a Fascist coup in Dalmatia are being made and supported by Premier Mussolini, it was learned today. D'Annunzio, Fascist war-horse is provided the fuel for a new Balkan outburst, and the proposed coup may push the Balkans, and possibly the world, into a new war.

Gall For Jugo-Slav War.

The instructions to D'Annunzio are believed to have been contained in a sealed package which was delivered by Secretary General Turati of the Fascist party to the poet. Many leaders of the Fascisti are said to be associated with D'Annunzio in the plans for the coup.

In a recent speech to army volunteers, Signor Pescosolido, president of the Italian Volunteers Association, declared:

"Mussolini will sound the reveille and nobody will be able to stop us and prevent us from going where our Dalmatian brothers are suffering."

In Venice Fascists recently paraded in San Marco Square denouncing Jugoslavia and demanding the annexation of Dalmatia. Many of the Fascist papers contain vicious attacks on Yugoslavia.

Hugo Air Program Urged by Lindbergh in Luncheon Speech

Col. Lindbergh has been taught his stuff.

Yesterday noon, at a luncheon at the Astor given in his honor by the New York Chamber of Commerce, the famous aviator spoke publicly definitely in favor of extending the "militaristic program of the U. S. war department.

"We do not invite war," he declared, "yet one of the surest ways of averting it is to have a trained personnel which can be mobilized quickly in case of war. A commercial air service will give us that personnel in the matter of fighting planes in case we are forced into conflict."

The Old Stuff.

Going in for some jingo boasting, Lindbergh, whose father repeatedly exposed the imperialistic war aims of the U. S., declared that "our planes in the army air service are the most developed in the world, although we have very few of them; there is no doubt, however, that our pilots have no equal in the civilized world."

As a preliminary to the national war program Lindbergh urged that airports be developed in each town and city of the country as soon as possible.

AT THE NEW YORK PICKET LINE

In the fur workers' strike now going on in New York, the unionists not only have to fight the bosses, but are slugged by police, right-wingers and thugs hired by the international officers of the union or by officials of the American Federation of Labor. It is a united front of the state, the employers and Right Wing a gainst the strikers, with the strikers winning. Above photo shows a group of strikers ready to go out on the picket line, wearing steel helmets to keep off the gangsters' iron bars, and wearing placards, "Our Heads Are Not Safe." They are standing in front of union headquarters.

A large number of the professional patriotic societies are still resting on the laurels achieved during the late war. At that time they secured the permission to print the names of many editors, professors, lawyers and others on their letter-heads, thus acquiring "prestige."

"Professional Patriots" is edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley.

One paragraph from this pamphlet is worth attention, and needs no comment:

"A committee of The National Civic Federation, which has spent two years studying the revolutionary movements in this country, was greatly disturbed to find the extent to which they have penetrated all groups making up our national life. Not the least disquieting feature of the situation is the fact that so many men in high places have little realization of what is going on about them. For instance, it was learned that, under the very dome of the Capitol at Washington, there was an organization made up of a hundred and fifty secretaries to senators and representatives which was completely in the hands of the Reds. It had been in existence for two years, holding its meetings in the caucus room of the House, and yet few persons, even in Washington, had ever heard of it! But Moscow and the Red 'liberal' press of all nations had heard of it and knew and exploited the fact that the 'United States Congress, Jr.' had voted in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia."

In conclusion Mr. Easley laments:

"We, in the United States, seem to be fighting alone the battle against the Red-ism of the world. If the flood of propaganda against patriotism continues unchecked, its effect will surely be the undermining of our national virility and the extending of an invitation to the bandits of the world to 'come and help themselves,' for we shall be left defenseless. The question before us to-day is: 'Shall we shrink from the great task which lies before us?' Or, a hundred times no—unless we are utterly faithless to our children, to our children's children and to those who 'sleep in Flanders fields'!"

That this hysterical propaganda is not accompanied by any real work for patriotism is testified to by that zealous organ, the Woman Patriot published in Washington. In an article in 1924 entitled "Embalmed Patriotism," the editor says:

"Get up and say something! . . . You people of patriotic organizations, in addition to looking after Memorial Day and the Fourth of July observances, should appoint committees immediately to fight this Red army in our midst!" These remarks of William J. Burns, director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, before the Allied Patriotic Societies at New York, February, 7, would not have been made by a trained investigator, had not the facts as to patriotic organizations justified, at least in part, this criticism.

"The honesty and good intentions of patriotic organizations are not questioned, but unless they 'get up and say something,' or do something for law enforcement, and against radical legislation and propaganda, they ought to close up shop. . . . We could name half a dozen patriotic organizations, whose sincerity nobody would question for a moment, in the past, whose excellent facilities, are actually doing nothing but following this policy of trying to 'look like patriots' and all the rest of it, with 'a good deal of talk about the Constitution,' 'our forefathers' and 'the flag of our forefathers.'

"For example, one patriotic society is deeply concerned about the correct use of the Flag—while apparently unconscious that the agents of a murderous foreign government, in charge of our laws, are organizing to destroy this nation. Another is worried because only 28,000,000 Americans voted in 1920, but apparently unconcerned with what George Washington called 'the basis of our political system' 'the right of the people to make and alter their Constitution.' A third deplores unconstitutional legislation, but cannot afford to get into any 'controversies' about it!

"That is a serious exception to facts about the Constitution but assures us that if it discussed current legislation it would 'get into hot water at once with its members.'

"A fourth wants to know why charges with specifications were filed against Communist leaders under Federal Statutes when it would have been so nice to talk about the Soviet Invitation to Congressmen who have declined to accept it!"

While we would not suggest following up with deeds the words that constitute the propaganda of professional patriotism, we note the truth of this indictment by one of those inside.

So much of the literature has been loose and hysterical that it has resulted in suits for libel, or in successful demands for public retractions. These instances are numerous, and only a few need be cited.

The United Americans, in a pamphlet charged the Committee of 48 with being a Bolshevik organization. The Committee, a progressive political group without connections with any other party or movement, at once sued for damages in the name of its chairman, J. A. Hopkins. The case was settled out of court, the United Americans paying the Committee $1,000, and publishing a retraction as well.

R. M. Whitney of the American Defense Society, author of the series of articles on the "Reds in America" first published in the Boston Transcript, charged Capt. Paxton Hibben, a United States Army Reserve Officer, with disloyalty to the interests of the United States by alleged pro-Soviet and revolutionary views, and made charges also against his personal character. Capt. Hibben at once sued the Transcript for $100,000. While the case was pending for trial, Capt. Hibben was investigated by an army board, and completely cleared of all charges. The Transcript thereupon published the findings with its own retraction, and the suit was dropped.

Two suits for libel are now pending in the New York courts, one, with four complainants, against the American Defense Society and Fred R. Marvin of the New York Commercial based on the Society's pamphlet "Socialism, LaFollettism and the Reds," which charged La Follette supporters with being Bolsheviks under the control of Moscow. Each of the four suits is for $25,000 damages. They were brought by Arthur Garfield Hays, Morris Coleman, Mrs. Era Frank and J. A. Hopkins, all active in the LaFollette campaign in New York. The other suit was brought in 1925 by Madam Rosika Schwimmer of Chicago against Fred R. Marvin and the New York Commercial for charging her with being a German spy during the war and with being a Bolshevik after it.

Professional Patriotic Journals.

Only two periodicals are devoted exclusively to professional patriotism—the Woman Patriot, published in Washington by a group of the old anti-suffrage crowd headed by Miss Mary Kilbreth, former president of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and the Patriot recently started as the monthly personal organ of Mrs. Jacob Cash of New York, founder of the United States Patriotic Society.

Flood Disaster a "Help" to Negro Peons

By WM. PICKENS.

As soon as we heard that the Mississippi River had decided to get out of bounds this year, like every other person who really knows the South we knew exactly what was going to happen to the colored people there without waiting to see it happen; but like very few others, we immediately wrote the President of the United States and warned him that these things would happen unless the national government exercised its authority at once to prevent them—by appointing some conrageous colored men, RESPONSIBLE TO THE U. S. GOVERNMENT, to look after the interest of the Negroes of the Mississippi Valley.

Well, the President wrote us that he was sending our letter on to the Red Cross and the "dictator." You see, our President is a very cautious man: he never meddles in anything that's none of his business. Then the somebody to whom the President sent the letter, wrote us that he was sending it to somebody else; and so on thru several other such evolutions, until we finally got a long and very clear letter from the Flood Relief Headquarters, Memphis, Tenn.—signed by Henry M. Baker, the general director of relief. It is a good and frank letter, encouraging in its disclosures. But it contains one naive, and of course honest, sentence to which we call attention: assuring us that the treatment received by the Negroes in this disaster is "much better than the treatment received by the Negroes under normal conditions."

The most impressive thing about that statement is that it is true. A great disaster, actually the greatest calamity in the history of those regions, is an IMPROVEMENT on the condition of its Negro poons under "normal conditions."

No comment need be written: that one sentence is a complete commentary on the "civilization" of that valley.

And that does not prove that the Negroes are being treated well now, either. That statement is of only relative value. We have just read from a daily (white) paper of Greenville, Miss., the perfectly savage "regulations" for the colored refugees: that they are to be tagged and guarded; Negro women and children are not to receive any rations "unless they have no man in the family," which fact must be "certified to by a white person," who is apt to know least about colored families; and where there is receiving more than a dollar a day for his work (for instance, if he gets one dollar and ten cents a day), his family will not receive any rations, whatever the number in the family (in other words, the Red Cross is going to compel Negro men to work for white people for one dollar or less per day, while this advantage is held over these workers); Negroes and only Negroes are to be conscripted to unload and haul and carry all the provisions for everybody,—etc., etc.

In other words, the flood and the Red Cross are to be used to reduce Negro wages and make them in every way more dependent upon the favors of their "good white folks." And yet this is better than the "normal condition."

Evidently the "normal condition" is plain hell!

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER VI—(Continued).

The Coal Mining Industry.

The miners' union, their locals being situated in small camps, has become not only a defensive economic organization of the members, but to a degree, the center of their social and political life. The members of the union all work together in the same mine when employed. It is an industrial union. The technique of the industry is far advanced, the employers well organized. An issue there cannot be localized to certain groups of workers, but becomes of vital concern to the union as a whole. Hence, the general great solidarity of the rank and file members of the coal miners' union and their advanced political level. The present status of the union, with general great unemployment and ever growing larger unorganized territory, a corrupt bureaucracy and the constant threat of the "open-shop," makes apparent the need of slogans which correspond with these elementary issues.

The Steel Industry.

The steel industry is perhaps the most highly developed industry organized into one gigantic trust while the workers remain practically entirely unorganized. Only one union exists, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, with less than 12,000 members, mostly highly skilled. There are a multitude of craft divisions, great variances between skilled and unskilled as far as wages, conditions and even political outlook is concerned. The greatest handicap for organization has been the jealousy between the craft unions claiming jurisdiction and the powerful, ferocious opposition of the employers.

Naturally, here the one vital need is the organization of the unorganized. The issues of organization become primarily the question of low wages, long hours and the high pressure of exploitation. The existing unions have not shown any genuine desire to organize the industry. They must be pressed into action. But yet, due to the present small degree of organization, the closest co-operation between the trade union fractions and party nuclei within the steel mills becomes necessary.

As an instrument of organization the development of shop committees is an imperative question.

The Building Trades.

The building industry while also technically highly developed, as far as construction methods are concerned, is nevertheless the classic field of craft unionism. While building construction is becoming ever more concentrated into the hands of large concerns, the contractors of the various trades, generally speaking, maintain contracts and agreements with the unions largely on a purely craft basis. The industry is not yet trustified. The employers are organized primarily on a craft basis and the unions have thus been able to gain considerable points of advantage through old time craft union methods. Jurisdictional disputes are common occurrences.

Our fractions in the building trades unions advance the slogan "Unity and Amalgamation of these craft unions." But it is necessary simultaneously to bring forward the issues of the crafts and to propose progressive trade measures as a means of establishing contact with the rank and file members and advance their interests. For example demands in regard to agreements, handling of tools and material, amount of work to be performed, hours, wages, union made material, union shop, etc. It is necessary more so because the building of a progressive movement, the fight against corrupt, reactionary officials and the organizing and strengthening of the unions is yet primarily on a craft basis.

It would be well at this point to mention the fact that in the clothing industry we find a much more developed trade union membership. This in itself, in many respects, changes our methods of work, as well as our policies and tactics, considerably from the other examples mentioned. Our general principal, however, remains unchanged.

Trade Union Fractions.

The structure of our Party trade union fractions follow the structure of the trade unions. As a basis, the local fraction is formed of our Party members in the local union. The local union fractions are connected along the line of the various unions by trade and by industry throughout the city, extending through the district or state and connected on a national basis. The main thing, however, is to build from the bottom in the local union and concentrate the life of the fractions not in Party offices but right in the unions. In central councils and joint boards our fractions are formed in the same manner. Each fraction, local, trade and industrial, should have its executive committee. It is as important here as for our nuclei in general, that the executive committee becomes a real leading body and initiates the proper measures corresponding with the problems of the fractions.

WITH THE Young WORKER

HOW THE YOUTH IN U. S. S. R. CELEBRATE MAY DAY

We are reprinting a letter by a member of the Young Communists of the Soviet Union to a comrade in America on how the youth in that country celebrate May Day or International Labor Day.

May 1st, 1927
Saratov, U.S.S.R.

Dear Comrade Aida:

Today is the day of international solidarity; have just returned from our May Day Demonstration and you will no doubt be interested to learn how we, the students of U.S.S.A., together with the peasants and workers of our country have celebrated this great international holiday, as you have had the opportunity to witness one of our May Day Demonstrations last year when you were with us.

The demonstration this year, however, seemed so much greater and so much more powerful as any previous one for the numerous organizations and public masses that have joined unanimously to protest against the imperialist policy in China. The day passed triumphantly and an exceptional spirit was felt by everyone observing the joined protest and solidarity of the masses. It particularly felt to fly over on the territory of China and together with these huge mass stage this protest and lay end to the outrageous slaughter waged by the imperialist powers on the innocent Chinese masses, and to wipe out the rotten nest built on the backs of the Chinese workers. I hope that this was felt by all the workers of the world who will pretty soon administer the dose of labor power to the capitalists of the world, who think that they are destined to rule the world forever. And I also hope that this great protest and international solidarity will serve as the great inspiration to the toiling masses of the world to fight until victory is achieved.

I understand that you too have had in America this May Day demonstration, but unfortunately not in such peaceful surroundings as we, the workers and peasants in U.S.S.R. In Russia the workers and peasants returned from their demonstrations happily singing and tell of the great achievements we have accomplished during this short period of our reconstruction, whereas in America probably not one of the classconscious workers were jailed, who dared to expose the injustice of the existing order, and how many fathers were jailed and taken away from their children, because they have dared to demand that which they produce.

In Russia the fathers marched with their children, the former in the columns of the fighters and the latter in the columns of the pioneers.

I would tell you more about this great day, but I believe that it is quite vivid to you, dear comrade, how we the workers and peasants in Russia celebrate this great holiday, as you have had the opportunity to be with us on one of these demonstrations. I also hope that you have related to our American Comrades what you have personally witnessed and experienced in this first Workers and Peasants' country.

With Comradely greetings to all comrades in America, I am always ready.—E. C. Easey.

LABOR SPORTS UNION

Cubs Strengthened By New Deals.

By trading Tony Kaufman and Jim Cooney to the Phillies for Harold Carlson, and securing Eddie Pick from Kansas City, in exchange for Freigau and Roy, the Chicago Cubs have materially strengthened their lineup. Carlson is considered one of the most efficient twirlers in the parent circle, having won 17 games for the tail-end Phillies last season. Young Pick is said to be the outstanding third baseman in the American Association, a hard hitter and brilliant fielder. In addition to these deals the Cubs have secured Wayland Deal, promising young pitcher, formerly with the Giants and Phillies. The Cubs have been playing hard ball during the last few weeks, and the addition of these men should enable them to give the Giants and Cards a real scrap for runner up to the Pirates.

Labor Sports Union to Stage 30 Events in Its National Meet.

In laying out the program of events for the National Track and Field Meet the Committee has scheduled over 30 different competitive stunts, for men and women. Also there will be wrestling, baseball and soccer. Three individual prizes are awarded in each event, and $300 is being spent for the medals and trophies. Labor organizations and clubs are being called upon to donate, and the Finnish Labor paper "Pyrmies" has already set an example by donating a sum of money. In addition to the regular awards, honorary medals will be given to the athletes for all-around proficiency. All labor sportsmen are being invited to partake in the meet. All entries must be turned in by July 23rd. No entry fee is being charged.

THE BEGINNING OF A NEW WAR! HANDS OFF CHINA!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

AN irate subscriber objects to some of the cartoons that appear in this paper. One of the pictures that made her toss purple was a splendid sketch by Ellis of a worker with a sledge hammer rolling up his sleeves while in the act of starting out to get new recruits for The DAILY WORKER. The other was by Gropper, and pictured a hideous collection of things rigged out in capitalist uniforms on the way to slaughter the Chinese people.

NOW, strange the it may appear to those who only read what appears in this paper, we are neither blood-thirsty nor particularly disagreeable human beings. In fact even the members of the Bomb Squad that came here to arrest our editor and business manager almost turned away when they had a look at the human office staff. Even the slightly less refined editorial staff did not give them the impression that they were among savages. The truth is that we are as human as we possibly can be. The only difference between us and other people is a difference in the way we look at things.

THE gentle reader whose blood churned uncomfortably at the ghoulish monsters drawn by Gropper and the wrathy worker pictured by Ellis would feel more at ease had the artists equipped their figures with powder puffs and lip sticks and sent them forth on their different tasks bearing sticks of chewing gum to their foes. But this tough business of fighting for freedom or suppressing a fight for freedom is waged more frequently with sticks of dynamite and other means of destruction. This is exceedingly regrettable, since we all like a nice warm sand heap by the surf with all the other attendant features that please the senses.

SO let's hurry along with the social change that will enable us to enjoy having our ears tickled with the sweet tones of a wild bird's song rather than the rattle of machine gun fire and the hoarse words of command issued in battle. Our subscriber may see our point of view better if she will take the trouble to read in the capitalist press about the subjugation of Nicaragua by the Wall Street government and the slaughtering of innocent people in China by the foreign imperialists. This is the reality that our artists picture. They cannot help it if some of our people like to live in a fool's paradise.

NAIVE people who expected that the United States government was toting a pacifist around in the person of Charles Lindbergh, our present national hero, will have a shock or two coming to them when they read the speech he delivered (no doubt it was written for him by the war department) at the banquet given in his honor at the Commodore Hotel in New York last Tuesday night. In his speech Lindbergh departed as far from the line of his anti-militarist father as the most ardent propagandist for a big air fleet would desire.

NOBODY but a political sap would expect that a young lad like Lindbergh could resist the mighty pressure of the militarist forces that are using him to inoculate the minds of the American people with preparedness idea. Preparedness for what? And against whom? This preparedness that our bosses talk about is for the purpose of defending the interests of the rich here and abroad and suppressing the exploited classes when they seriously undertake to expropriate the misappropriators.

HERE is an excerpt from what Lindbergh said: "In the meantime the most important thing for us to do is to develop the transcontinental branch lines which we already have. A commercial air service in America gives a reserve in case of war, which we can develop in no other way. Experienced pilots cannot be trained as quickly as airplanes can be built. We do not invite war; (old Uriah Rohum—T. J.) yet one of the surest ways of averting it is to have a trained personnel which can be mobilized quickly in case of war." And more of the same stuff. So those who picture the young hero rebuffing the militarists and refusing to be used by them were taken in by the surface phenomena and the meaningless phrases about peace that fell from the lips of all militarists except a Mussolini who has a war-hungry horde of disorganized cutthroats to play up to at home.

McGRADY CAUSES JUDGE TO DEMAND EXCESSIVE BAIL

116 More Furriers Are Arrested as Pickets

Mass arrests of pickets is the method being used by the police department in trying to break the strike of the fur workers.

One hundred and sixteen arrests took place yesterday morning; those taken into custody included four people who were passing by and were dragged into the police net. They had no connection whatsoever with the strike but that did not trouble the gallant defenders of the law.

Of the four, three were dismissed in Jefferson Market Court, while Bessie Glass, the fourth innocent victim of the zealous activities of the police, was paroled by the gracious court.

Want Excessive Bail

Due to the excessive bail asked by Magistrate Rosenbluth, 110 of the strikers are this morning still in jail only two girls of the entire lot requesting to be released. The others decided that they prefer to sit in jail than put the union to a terrific expense.

When brot before Magistrate Rosenbluth thirteen of the strikers were immediately sentenced to three days in jail. Altho the attorney for the union wanted to proceed at once with the other cases the district attorney had them postponed. Twenty-six cases for a hearing on June 21, the rest for hearing tomorrow. This coupled with the excessive bail asked for their release pending trial, is seen as a move to throw disorder into the ranks of the strikers.

This point of view is given weight

COMMUNISTPARTY OF CHINA FIGHTS FOR FARM REFORM

Asks Kuomintang Purging in Open Letter

HANKOW, June 16.—The Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party has addressed an open letter to the Central Committee of the Kuomintang regarding the situation in Hunan, where it declares, "the revolution is passing thru a critical period of its development."

"The fundamental problem in Hunan Province," the letter states, "is the realization of certain agrarian reform measures. The moment has come for putting into action the agrarian policy. This is the historical task of the Kuomintang. The future of the revolution depends upon the energetic action of the Kuomintang in this matter."

Referring to the betrayal of the revolution by Chiang Kai-shek, the letter continues, "The beginning of the agricultural revolution drove the reactionary elements in the Kuomintang to counter-revolutionary actions. The feudal militaristic elements took up arms in an open war against the peasantry and threatened the downfall of the Kuomintang and the Nationalistic Governments.

Soldiers Support Peasantry

"The aggressive actions of the reactionaries has caused some hesitation in revolutionary quarters. They fear that if agrarian reforms are effected the Nationalist armies will take a hostile position. This is not true. The soldiers are landless peas-

Nungesser Hoax Author Admits it Was Joke to Break Tedium of Woods

QUEBEC, June 16.—Just to relieve the monotony of life in the lumber camp village of Chicoutimi, northern Quebec, an accountant named Blais telegraphed to River Bend, about 100 miles north of here Wednesday and reported that Coli and Nungesser, missing French flyers, had been found.

The report was soon relayed to Quebec, and from there telegraphed and cabled to all parts of the world, and was eagerly swallowed by the metropolitan press.

"WITH AN AIR OF DAZED DIGNITY"

One reporter honestly stated during the enormous military and navy receptions given Lindbergh in Washington and New York, that he moved thru the proceedings "with an air of dazed dignity." He was merely the focus point of unlimited propaganda for the next world war, and after resisting persuasion to wear a uniform, has at last been prevailed upon to make a "preparedness" speech, on the theme that "a great war fleet in the air will save us from attack," the old and childish excuse of all militarists. Whether still dazed, or consciously a traitor to his father's teachings, Lindbergh is now merely a tool of the war mongers.

Gold Warns Convention

WE NEED MORE COMRADES TO JOIN THE FIVE HUNDRED

With the most brilliant display of class consciousness and solidarity comrades have answered the appeal of The DAILY WORKER to cover the five hundred dollar fine, which was fastened upon us by the capitalist court. Several hundreds have responded from the mines, mills, factories and farms in all parts of the country. They have eagerly shouldered in the finest collective spirit, the burden which capitalism has placed upon The DAILY WORKER.

With one great push we cannot only cover the fine but also have the nucleus for the sum necessary for our appeal proceedings. Comrades, we depend upon you to give that necessary push. We are waiting for it. Thousands of others have started the ball a-rolling. It is up to you to take the tip and put your shoulder behind the job.

William F. Dunne Freed in $1,000 Bail Pending Appeal to Higher Court

William F. Dunne, Editor The DAILY WORKER, was yesterday freed on $1,000 bail pending appeal for a new trial on a certificate of reasonable doubt granted by Justice Mullin of the supreme court.

When released he had already served 20 days of a 30 day sentence in the workhouse imposed in connection with the publication in The DAILY WORKER of the poem "America."

David Gordon, 18-year-old author of the poem, was last Friday sentenced to serve an indeterminate sentence from thirteen months to three years in the New York Reformatory. Yesterday he was also granted a certificate of reasonable doubt and ordered released on bail.

American Telephone, Cable Interests Acquire New Company in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 16.—The Chile Telephone Company, heretofore owned by English interests, has just fallen a prize to the octopus of American imperialism which continues to wind its tentacles around the vital industries of the South American Republics.

The International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, of which Col. Sosthenes Behn, of New York, is president, and which controls the telephone systems of Cuba, Spain, and other countries, has now acquired the ownership of the Chilean Company.

The All-American Cables and the Montevideo (Uruguay) Telephone Company are also a recent acquisition of the American corporation.

BARBERS' STRIKE LEAVES ONLY THE BOSSES AT WORK

Over 2,000 Fight For Higher Wages

Only the bosses were at work yesterday in part of the 500 barber shops between 59th St., and 242nd St., on the West Side where more than 2,000 barbers struck Tuesday.

The walk-outs followed close on the heels of a decisive victory won by 1,8000 Bronx barbers and manicurists several weeks ago.

Yesterday picketing began with the opening of the shops at 8 a. m. and continued until closing time at 8 p. m.

$35 Asked.

The men are seeking a basic wage rate of $35 weekly and a reduction of one hour on Saturday when they work from 8 a. m. until 10 p. m.

No individual agreements will be signed and only a collective pact with the Master Barbers' Association will be considered, the union leaders declared today.

Cal and Wife Put On An Act for Movie Cameras

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 16.—Rushing back from a successful fishing expedition, President Coolidge today met movie cameramen to re-enact with trimmings the scene of his arrival here last night.

2 Dying, Ask Pardons.

TRENTON, June 16.—The Court of Pardons is holding a special session today to consider the application for clemency for Daniel C. Bliss, 64, and Anthony Falcetano, 29. Both men are serving sentences for murder and are reported dying.

EXPULSIONS WILL RUIN FUR UNION, DELEGATES TOLD

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Leading up to a vote of expulsion of the four furriers' locals affiliated with the New York Joint Board, the International fur workers' convention in session here heard four of the New York leaders state their position.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, in an impassioned speech branded as false the "charges" preferred against it by the A. F. of L. "Reorganization Committee" headed by Matthew Woll, Edward F. McGrady and Hugh Frayne.

Makes Counter Charges.

He counter-charged that the present policy of expulsion, reorganization, and formation of scab locals being followed by the reactionary officials was destroying the International. Gold declared that the action to be taken by the convention in completely expelling the New York unions would fail to solve the internal problems.

"I am ready to resign as manager of the Joint Board," he challenged. "We want only peace and unity within the International. The cry of 'Communism' is raised as a bogey to cover up the dastardly efforts of International officials to break the spirit of the New York workers."

Will Ignore Convention Acts.

"The New York Joint Board and the 4,000 working members affiliated with it as well as the 4,000 on strike," he continued, "will refuse to recognize the acts of the so-called convention, pushed as it is with 23 men from New York representing nobody but themselves.

"We invite the regularly-elected delegates of this convention to come to New York to investigate for themselves the real facts in the situation there and to decide who truly represents the membership there."

Names Strikebreakers.

Gold cited specific delegates as strikebreakers in recent New York fur strikes.

Matthew Woll, chairman of the special A. F. of L. "Reorganization Committee", presided at the session which heard Gold and the other New York delegates.

Contrasting with previous stormy sessions, the convention listened practically without interruption to the

BRIAND'S ILLNESS EXPOSES PLAN OF CHAMBERLAIN TO BUILD "HOLY ALLIANCE" AGAINST SOVIET UNION

Germany Flirts With Conspiracy and Issues "Friendly" Warning to U. S. S. R.

GENEVA, June 16.—Premier Briand's sudden illness is given here as the ostensible reason for the hitch in Austen Chamberlain's grand plan for a union of all Western European powers against the Soviet Union. Briand has departed, and the negotiations remain where they were for the time being. League of Nations delegates refer to the conspiracy as a "Holy Alliance." Chamberlain has been holding ceaselessly private and secret conferences to arrange this alliance, so many of them that the delegates express surprise at their number.

The chief obstacle to Chamberlain's plan is that Germany has demanded partial disarmament of France as her price for entering the "holy alliance" and France has thus far refused.

REVAL, Esthonia, June 16.—Thirty White Russians are under arrest charged with plotting the assassination of M. Lorenz, Soviet ambassador to Esthonia.

MOSCOW, June 16.—Great indignation was expressed here today over the new imperialist attack on the Soviet Union in the form of a light sentence meted out to the murderer of Peter Voikoff, Soviet minister to Poland, simultaneously with the protest of the imperialist powers associated in the League of Nations against "Bolshevist propaganda."

Indignation is also expressed over the refusal of the Polish court to wait for the arrival of M. Rosenholz, who was en route to Warsaw as a special envoy. Pointing to the brutal prison sentences passed upon Polish labor leaders, observers see in the indeterminate sentence given to Koweeda an imperialist blessing to murderers of Soviet officials.

Tories Start "Protest".

The imperialist "protest" was made to M. Chicherin, Soviet minister, thru Count Brockdorff Rantzau, German ambassador to the Soviet Union. The "protest" was engineered by tory Britain as a feeble reply to the Soviet charges of British espionage in the Soviet Union and as a move to force Germany into an anti-Soviet bloc.

In a semi-official communique issued later, the German government announced that its action should not be construed as an act of hostility to the Soviet Union. Although the German government bears no particular love for the Soviet Union the Soviet Union is an important market for her industrial goods.

M. Chicherin received the imperialist "protest" in silence and announced that he would make no comment upon it until he had consulted the Soviet government. Chicherin is about to leave for Moscow.

Easy On Murderer.

Koweeda admitted during his trial that he had been ordered to murder Voikoff by a White Guard organization. Evidence given out by the Soviet government proved that White Guard organizations are in constant communication with British agents.

The court gave Koweeda an indeterminate sentence and recommended that the president commute the sentence to fifteen years.

FENG LEADS PEKING ATTACK; TENG WITHDRAWN FOR DRIVE ON CHIANG

Right Wing Shoots Down Canton Workers; Two Regiments Leave Chiang for Nationalists

BULLETIN.

PEKING, June 16.—Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian war lord, is now dictator in name as well as in fact of the Peking "Government".

The announcement that he had appointed himself head of the civil government came on the heels of the resignation of Wellington Koo as "prime minister".

The rapid march of the Nationalists on Peking and the growing Nationalist sympathy in the north makes the most rigid sort of dictatorship necessary for Chang.

(Reports received by The DAILY WORKER yesterday stated that Chang Tso-lin had established martial law in Mukden, Tsingtao and Tsinan.)

HANKOW, June 16.—General Feng Yu-hsiang, after conferring with members of the Nationalist government and leaders of the Kuomintang at Chengchow, has been placed in complete charge of the Nationalist drive against Peking. General Teng Seng-chi has returned to Hankow. It is rumored that Teng has been recalled in preparation for a campaign against Chiang Kai-shek.

Feng has convinced Nationalist leaders that, unlike Chiang Kai-shek, he is willing to submit to governmental discipline and to function merely as a military commander. Chiang Kai-shek, renegade Nationalist, insisted on encroaching on the functions of the Hankow government.

Celebrations are being held in the Wuhan cities for General Teng's victorious troops. Teng's troops, marching north from Hankow, along the Hankow-Peking railway, effected a junction with General Feng at Chengchow.

Peasants Attack Chang.

PEKING, June 16.—Honanese peasants, organized into the "Red Spears", have been cutting off sections of Chang Tso-lin's troops and interfering with northern militarist communications in the vicinity of Shuntsh-fu in Chihli Province. (Shuntsh-fu is one hundred miles west of Tsinan-fu.)

Right Wing Terror.

SHANGHAI, June 16.—Dispatches received from Canton state that the right wing is carrying on another terrorist campaign there. Police fired into a crowd of workers who had gathered in front of the right wing headquarters to protest against its labor-smashing campaign.

After shooting into the crowd, the police charged it with fixed bayonets. The number of killed and wounded is not definitely known.

Troops Join Nationalists.

Workers and peasants thruout Kwantung Province are rebelling against the vicious terrorism of Chiang Kai-shek's disciples.

Two regiments of troops in Fukien have revolted against Chiang Kai-shek and have declared their allegiance to the Hankow government. It is likely that this action will be followed by troops thruout Fukien and Kwantung provinces where there is a great deal of dissatisfaction with rule of the right wing.

A. F. L. Heads Strike at Industrial Unionism in Bakery Drivers' Dispute

SEATTLE, June 16.—The Central Labor Council has been informed by the American Federation of Labor that the Bakery Wagon Drivers belong within the jurisdiction of the Teamsters' International, instead of the Baker's Union as they stand at present and unless this ruling is recognized the Bakers are to be excluded from the Council. What action the local council will take is not to be determined.

Jugoslavian Political Crisis; King Alexander Aids Reactionary Coup

BELGRADE, June 16.—The attempt of the Radical Party to force the fall of the reactionary Vukicevitch Cabinet through the resignation of Minister of Education Subitch, who leads the Pasich "radicals" was thwarted today by King Alexander, who accepted the resignations, and formed a royal decree dissolving Parliament and ordering a new election on September 11.

This is hailed as the death-knell of the so-called Radical Party, founded by the late Premier Pasich, which has disintegrated through internal dissension and is now apparently split into two groups: One, under the leadership of M. Subitch, which will continue the Pasich policies; a Centrist faction, under ex-Premier Uzunovitch, and a Right Wing which will cooperate with Premier Vukicevich and the minority Nationalists.

Premier Vukicevich is making hay while the sun shines by weeding out his cabinet before the elections take place, much of the old "Radicals" who do not agree with his policies. The King has openly given his support to the Vukicevich group, and hopes to consummate, through this group, his long-sought aim of developing a centre party of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

Cal Coolidge, caught in the awkward act of trying to make posterity with READING what the plutocrats told him to say in his speech at Hammond, Ind. Coolidge's sudden desire for more wages for the poor workers, coming after he has slashed wages of federal employees and broken strikes right and left, sounds like the usual pre-election stuff, and is considered evidence that he intends getting a third term. Not even a trembling fight hand pointing suggestively towards the skies could make his steel city audience forget they had some troubles on earth.

Berry, Who Broke Press Strike, Reads Sermon On Loyalty to Bosses

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, June 16.—The Iowa State Federation of Labor convention here is a rather conservative body, but nothing it has ever done justified the punishment inflicted upon it yesterday. Major George L. Berry, the president by virtue of gang rule, of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, the man who imported scabs to break the New York strike, spoke to them several hours on the rights of employers.

Labor, says Berry, must remember that the employer has a right to a good profit on his investment and:

"Both employers and employes and a unity of interests, but there are employers in America—a noisy minority—who believe the trade union movements are formed for the purpose of engaging in a campaign for the confiscation of employers' property, and therefore the employers must be in a continuous campaign of retaliation and the precipitating of warfare among organized workers.

"The employer who thinks it is the function of trade unions to confiscate his property is just as bad as and no worse than the trade unionist, so called, who thinks that the property of capital should be divided piecemeal among the constituent parts of labor."

Berry himself is a big capitalist, altho he presumes to speak in the name of organized labor.

Theater Ticket Sharks Held for Federal Jury

Twelve theatre ticket agency heads were held for the federal grand jury by United States Commissioner Cotter yesterday on charges involving alleged income tax frauds.

Preacher Hides Girl Witness.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., June 16.—Rev. Benjamin Purnell's house of David cult today was charged with "openly obstructing justice" in "transporting and hiding" Mrs. Cora Lynch Bunday, of Gary, Ind., who had promised to testify in the state's suit to dissolve the colony.

After branding Purnell a "hypocrite" in a letter to Nichols, Mrs. Bunday freely volunteered to tell of her alleged experiences with "King" Ben in his "inner circle," Nichols said.

COMMUNIST PARTY OF CHINA FIGHTS FOR FARM REFORM

ants and cannot possibly be hostile to a peasants' movement, while most of the lower grade officers are members of the middle classes which will benefit by agrarian reform. Only the reactionary minority oposes agrarian reform.

"Under the revolutionary leadership the army will support the Kuomintang in the realization of agrarian reform. The path of the Kuomintang is the path of the revolutionary agricultural change; the path of the reactionary militarists is counter-revolutionary and opposed to agricultural change.

Guard Against Militarists

"The reactionary militarists have entered the path of open counter-revolution, as is indicated by the Hsiao Yu Ying revolt and the coup d'etat at Changsha. They are following the path of the southeastern militarists and declaring war on the labor and peasants' movement dissolving Kuomintang committees, etc.

"At Changsha a band of reactionary militarists rebelled against the Nationalist Government against the Central Committee and against the army. The Kuomintang must either defeat these counter-revolutionary elements or capitulate.

Communist Proposes

"The Central Committee of the Communist Party proposes the following measures to crush the counter-revolution:

(1) The Nationalist Government must issue a decree branding the Changsha committee as counter-revolutionary and calling upon soldiers to overthrow that committee. (2) The appointment of a lawful provincial government after the dismissal of the committee. (3) The immediate appointment of a punitive expedition to crush the rebellion and empowering of General Teng Sheng-chi to send troops to crush the counter-revolutionaries. (4) The dissolution of the local Kuomintang committee which usurped power and the appointment of a new committee. (5) The publication of a decree regarding the freedom of existence of workers and peasant organizations and the Communist Party in Hunan. (6) The Nationalist Government must issue a decree ordering that arms be returned to the workers and peasants guard. (7) Peasants must be armed as a guarantee against future reactionary outbursts.

"The Kuomintang must come closer to the masses and boldly lead them in a struggle against counter-revolution. Unless the Kuomintang and the Nationalist Government do this the revolution will be exposed to the greatest dangers."

Albany Traction Gang Given Permission to Mulct Ten Cent Fare

ALBANY, June 16.—After a prolonged publicity campaign the local traction interests have finally succeeded in putting over a fare increase. Beginning July 1 the people of this city, Troy, Cohoes, Watervliet and neighboring towns will be compelled to learn to pay a ten-cent fare instead of seven.

This has just been decided by the Public Service Commission. George R. Lunn, of Schenectady, dissented from the ruling of the body.

Albania, Pawn on Japs' Slave Frontier, Cowed

VIENNA, June 16.—Bombs dropped on a funeral in honor of Ahmed Zogu, Albanian dictator near Wednesday, and the Jugoslavian frontier guards. These are the reported latest developments in the mysterious attempt on the small Balkan State which has been for half of it from a complete subjugation with Mussolini and his blackshirts.

On top of this "incident," comes the news of the murder by Albanian bands of four Italian engineers north of Puka in Albania, which has now become virtually a colony of Fascist Italy.

Needle Trade Defense

How To Answer

A letter with 3 leaflets dealing with the work of the Defense Committee was received from Trenton. These leaflets calling upon the workers not to give their support to the Joint Defense Committee, and to refuse to help the furriers, were issued by the Right Wing Machine of the I. L. G. W. U.

Like all such previous attempts on the part of the Sigman clique to blacken the Defense Committee, this also had a contrary effect. Branch No. 77, Workmen's Circle of Trenton to whom this literature was sent, decided to reply not with words but by giving material aid to the Cloakmakers and Furriers Defense Fund. Immediately a picnic was arranged for next Sunday, June 19; the entire proceeds of which will go to the Joint Defense and Relief Committee.

That is the best possible answer to the provocations of Sigman and his clique. Let them continue their attempts to sabotage the work of the Committee. It helps the campaign. When the Forward came out with a demand to boycott the bazaar, the Star Casino was overflowed by the greatest attendance in its history. The result is the same with the leaflets. The workers of the whole country generally are very well acquainted with the methods used by the Sigman-McGrady-Woll gang, and pay no special attention to them.

The Joint Defense and Relief Committee which is raising funds for the defense of the arrested cloakmakers and furriers and the Furriers Strike Fund and Relief Committee which is supporting the furriers strike rely fully on the workers and that they will make every effort to help cleanse the unions of gangsterism and to unite the united front of the Sigman-McGrady-Woll clique with the bosses.

Now is the time to be on the alert! Close ranks around the Joint Defense and Relief Committee. Show your solidarity by sending help for the striking furriers and for the defense of the arrested cloakmakers.

It is the duty of every worker to buy at least one of the bonds ranging from $10 to $100 which were issued by the Furriers Relief Committee. Every bond is guaranteed, and is by installment payable on demand.

Every worker should at once buy a ticket for the Coney Island Stadium Concert which will take place July 16. The best reserved seats at $2.20 are now on sale at the Defense Office; general admission tickets are $1.00.

Breaking Chains In Newark

Next Saturday, matinee and evening, "Breaking Chains" will be shown in Krugers Auditorium, Belmont Ave. and Springfield. This will be the only showing in Newark. No worker should miss the opportunity to see this picture. The proceeds will go for the defense of the arrested cloakmakers and furriers.

Try One Like This.

The great heat of the last few days made it impossible for the busy Defense Workers to hold the usual meetings and affairs. The steaming populace could think of nothing but to run off to the parks and seashore for a breath of fresh air, which would have made any attempt at a regular meeting a failure. So it was decided that nothing could be done and no meetings were arranged.

However, the desire to help is so great that even in the parks the workers congregate into large crowds and discuss the Sigman Schlechtman betrayal. From this to regular organized discussion meetings with a regularly elected chairman and orderly discussion is but a step, and this step was first taken at Crotona Park.

Nevada Governor Indicted; Other Officials Left State Treasury Empty

Governor Fred B. Balzar of Nevada, who took office the first of the year, swore warrants several weeks ago for the arrest of George Cole, top right, retiring state controller; Ed Malley, lower right, state treasurer, and H. S. Clapp, cashier of the Carson Valley bank, alleging the embezzlement of $816,000 in state money. He also ousted Malley from office. Now Clapp has pleaded guilty and has been sentenced to the penitentiary for from five to fifteen years.

Structure of the Russian Communist Party

By KARL REEVE.

MOSCOW, June 1 (By Mail).—The departmental nuclei of the Communist Party nucleus are set up in larger factories where more than one department of the factory contains a sufficient number of party members. The departmental nuclei carry on the same work within the department, or separate shop of the factory, that the factory nuclei perform for the factory as a whole. "Within the department the Departmental Nucleus performs the same functions as are performed by the general factory nucleus within the confines of the factory." The departmental nucleus brings the party members closer to the process of production, enables the nucleus to develop more active party workers, and binds the party closer and more intimately with the non-party workers.

How It Is Worked Out.

In the Moscow River Textile factory, mentioned in the previous articles, which employes 1,500 workers, there are three departmental nuclei, one in the weaving department, one in the dyeing shop, one in the machine and operating department. The Bureaus of the departmental nuclei consist of 5 party members and two candidates, and the functionaries include, one secretary of the departmental nucleus, one organizer for work among women (over one half of the employee of this factory are women workers), an agitprop organizer, group organizers and a Comrade attached to the work of the Young Communist League. The bureaus of these departmental nuclei carry on the same work, within the department as is carried on by the bureau of the general nucleus of the factory (the work of the Bureau will be dealt with in the next article).

Recently the Bureau of the Kamovniki Rayon (section or district) party committee conducted an investigation of the work of the departmental nuclei in their district (one of the six sections or districts into which Moscow is divided, not only for party units, but for governmental institutions as well. For example each rayon has its post office. There is a rayon Soviet in each section) and after the investigation a resolution was passed summing up the work of the departmental nuclei. The Bureau came to the conclusion that:

What Is Accomplished.

"(a) the department nuclei help in the non-party workers; the party influence is asserted among them; the wants and opinions of the non-party workers can more easily be determined so that they can be gradually drawn into political social work.

"(b) the department nuclei help in extending the control of the general factory nuclei and extends the control over non-party workers engaged in working in the various departments. The closest contact is also established between the non-party workers, trade unions, social organizations, and the nucleus.

"(c) the departmental nuclei contribute a great deal towards the most full and expedient utilization of all the party members and mainly of young members and candidates who are engaged as bench workers. The activities of such workers must be increased as well as their knowledge, sense of unity; their education, their qualifications; their work must be submitted to the supervision and guidance of the entire factory nucleus.

"(d) The general party nucleus is brought into closer contact with the departmental nuclei and with the industry as a whole, because the meetings of the departmental nuclei discuss various topics taken directly out of the workers industrial life." (Resolution of Kamvniki Rayon Bureau.

The resolution proceeds to point out some shortcomings in the work of the department nuclei included in the rayon and to make recommendations for the bettering of their work. A few points from the resolution which illuminate the functions and activities of the departmental nuclei are given here. The secretaries of department nuclei are instructed not to treat administrators or foremen with favoritism. The work must be planned, and the duties must be distributed among the members, special attention being paid to drawing women into the work. Candidates to the party must not be admitted to the bureau of the departmental nucleus, only full party members being eligible.

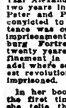
"Very often closed meetings of departmental nuclei are arranged and this is in the way of drawing into the work non-party active workers." The bureau and the general meetings of the departmental nuclei must merely "take notice" or "approve" by passing resolutions, they must not have a formal attitude toward questions debated but must really work their problems out. Industrial and administrative questions must also be discussed by the general meetings of the departmental nuclei. The department nuclei must guard against showing tendencies toward becoming guild organizations and against isolation from the general factory nucleus.

"Petty guardianship in the supressing of every initiative and activity must be avoided." One case is pointed out where this guardianship went to the extent of the general factory nucleus making up a stereotyped order of the day for all department nuclei which tended to decrease the interest of the members in these meetings. Reports on the departmental nuclei must be read at the bureau meetings of the general factory nucleus. The factory nucleus must give definite instructions to the departmental nuclei, not merely giving the instruction for the "working out of a plan" or to "take notice."

The resolution concludes, "The authority of the department nuclei must be asserted, thus aiming that the departmental nucleus should put before itself the same tasks as the general factory nucleus; the first doing it on department scale, and the latter, of course, on the scale of factory life as a whole." (This paragraph is quoted from the resolution of the 12th party conference).

In the Moscow River Textile factory, the three months plan of work for March, April and May, 1927, includes (point 3) a statement on departmental nuclei. It is planned, "To reorganize the departmental nuclei in connection with the transfer of a number of comrades from the bleaching to the weaving department and to organize a nucleus in the machine and mixture departments." A number of purely local problems relating to factory nuclei are then dealt with. A great deal of attention has been paid to the department nuclei in the Russian C. P.

Memoirs of a Revolutionist



By Vera Figner

VERA FIGNER is now seventy-five years old and is living in Moscow. She joined the Revolutionary Movement fifty-five years ago, and has lived to see the overthrow of the autocracy and the establishment of workers rule in Russia.

Vera Figner is one of the last Revolutionary Mohicans. She was a member of the famous Narodnaya Volya in the 70's, and in 1881 participated in the assassination of Tsar Alexander II. She spent two years in the Fortress St. Peter and Paul, and though convicted to death, her sentence was committed to life imprisonment in the Schlisselburg Fortress. She spent twenty years in solitary confinement in that famous citadel where some of the greatest revolutionary spirits were imprisoned.

In her book translated for the first time into English, she tells the story of her youth and how she became a revolutionist. She describes the early Revolutionary Movement in Russia and gives a graphic picture of her life in the Fortress during the twenty years she was confined there.

Every revolutionary home should have a copy of this book. In it is given the life story of a great revolutionist and idealist.

Graphic Editor, Up On Some Charge as Dunne, Has Much Similar Raps

In connection with the case in New York against the editors of the issue of the editors of The DAILY WORKER, Emile H. Gauvreau, managing editor of the Graphic is out on $100 bail while on trial for publishing prohibited matter in his paper.

When Dunne and Miller of The DAILY WORKER faced trial on a similar charge recently, they were held on $500 bail, and as soon as convicted, were held without bail and practically incommunicado, while awaiting punishment. After conviction, and serving part of his sentence, bonds for Dunne during appeal are set at $1,000, or just ten times the amount Gauvreau must put up.

Gauvreau is represented by Attorney Max Steuer, who pleads that the section of the statute under which his client is charged is unconstitutional, in that it specifies no standard of objectionableness by which to judge the matter printed. It might be compared, he argues, with a law prohibiting fast driving, without defining what speed is legal.

by the knowledge of a conference held before the opening court. It was attended by Judge Rosenbluth, Edward McGrady, A. F. of L. representative in charge of disrupting the Furriers' Union, and Samuel Markowich, attorney for the International.

After the close of the conference between the right wing and the judge, court was opened. Strengthened by his confab, the magistrate proceeded without further ado to sentence sixteen of the workers to three days each.

Lenient With Scab.

When a right winger was brot before Magistrate Rosenbluth for trial he sang a different tune. Charged by Clara Meltzer, a striker, with beating her brutally and using vile and indecent language, R. Kramer was immediately discharged. This was the magistrate's opinion in spite of the fact that several witnesses were ready to testify to the guilt of the scab, who yesterday morning at 29th St. and Seventh Ave. acted in the manner of a gangster.

The magistrate refused to listen to the witnesses and discharged the strikers.

Helped the Judge.

Samuel Markowich, right wing attorney stood near the judge during the entire time he was fearing the strike cases. According to many who were present he actually dictated what he was doing his utmost to send to jail those workers who support the Joint Board. In answer to a question, he said he would defend any gangster of the right wing that would be arrested.

After the close of the morning session Magistrate Rosenbluth held a conference with leader Shapiro, representing the Joint Board and Deputy McGrath in charge of the police in the strike district. The meeting was held for the purpose of seeing if some arrangement could be made in reference to future picketing.

The police inspector wanted the strikers to restrict themselves to 25 pickets on each side of each block. To this Shapiro would not agree, demanding the right of the union to have at least 50 pickets on each side of every block. The conference adjourned without accomplishing anything.

Look for Relatives.

Many relatives of the arrested strikers appeared at the office of the Joint Board last night to inquire as to their whereabouts. They were indignant when informed of the unfair attitude taken by the magistrate in asking for excessive bail.

Ford to Manufacture Super Plane, 3 Motors

DETROIT, Mich., June 16.—William B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor Co., yesterday announced the airplane division of the Ford company is now working on a giant plane twice the size the present three-motored Ford planes, which will carry 20 passengers.

The announcement came at a luncheon called by Postmaster Chas. C. Kelogg and the Aderaft Club to which 400 business men came to hear Col. H. H. Blee, business specialist of the post office department, talk on "Expansion of the Air Mail."

Forbid City Island Bathing

The Board of Health yesterday enlisted the aid of the police in an effort to prevent bathing in some of the waters about upper Manhattan and the Bronx.

This was announced at the office of Health Commissioner Harris, following the discovery that the water in the vicinity of City Island and nearby points on the Sound, and the Harlem and Hudson Rivers is polluted.

China Famine Now Unmasked

By LELAND DUDE, U.P. Special Press Correspondent.

Famine in China is paralyzing the organization of Chinese industrial workers, according to a report in the Chinese Labor Bulletin. The bulletin maintains that the famine has compelled farmers has reached 4,000,000.

"There are country districts," says the report, "in which already tens and hundreds of thousands of members are united in farmers' unions. Without the least doubt these unions will continue to increase within the next few months. During the last month it has been reported that the first farmer organizations in the province of Anhwai have come into being. They number tens of thousands. The increasing power of the so-called Red Spears of Honyv, the farmers' movements in Chihli and Shantung, prove that there is material ready for organization into unions."

The report shows the largest membership in Honan province where organized farmers number more than 1,200,000.

For representative districts the per cent of the farmers who can be classed as independent farmers, tenant farmers and agricultural laborers is given as follows:

Chinese farmers	Independent Per Cent	Tenant Per Cent	Laborer Per Cent
Honan
Boschin district	20	60	20
" ntsian "	20	70	10
" hensian "	17	58	25
Chende "	30	50	20
Lelan "	14	71	15
Maian "	27	63	10
Kiangsi
Wanxian "	45	50	5
Tsian "	10	85	5
Nankan "	10	85	5

The vast majority of Chinese farmers either possess no land or so little that they must rent additional ground to support their families. The customary rent is paid in farm products and ranges from 50 per cent to 60 per cent of the harvest. In many cases, according to the report, it is 70 per cent to 75 per cent, leaving the renter less than the barest subsistence.

Usurer Extorts.

The average independent farmi is so small that a single bad year places the farmar at the mercy of the village moneylender who normally charges interest at 5 per cent to 10 per cent a month.

"The demands of the farmers," says the report, "chiefly center round the following points: reduction of rent; abolition of taxes on tenants; reduction of interest on loans; abolition of illegal contributions and excessive taxes; storage of grain for times of drought and flood; reform of present official system; the organising of a self-governing board elected by the people in every village; the disarming of the village police and the formation of a people's militia."

The present upheaval in China has roots that extend below the newer industrial proletariat into the great mass of 360,000,000 peasants.

Pinedo Limps Into Ostia.

ROME, June 16.—Premier Mussolini will go to Ostia tomorrow to welcome Commander De Pinedo on his return from a four-continent flight.

A great reception for De Pinedo is being planned at the Chigi Palace on the Flyer's arrival in Rome, and premier Mussolini will pay him tribute from the balcony, with cabinet ministers and diplomats present. De-Pinedo has been thruout the flight a bragging, blustering advocate of fascism, and will be made into one of the newspaper heroes of modern Italy, despite the relative unimportance of his exploits and his frequent forced landings. At the time Pinedo was taking a tow from a sailing ship, the Lindbergh flight took place.

Weather conditions will be the only factors determining the hour when Commander Richard E. Byrd, famous North Pole flyer, will hop off in the Fokker monoplane, "America," for Europe, it was said yesterday.

Chinese Women Awake

(By Nationalist News Agency.)

HANKOW, China.—"We are fighting with you!"

That is the spirit of the women of Nationalist China who have plunged into the struggle for a "Free China" shoulder to shoulder with their men.

Soldiering, nursing, ploughing, organising labor unions, holding forth at "soap box" meetings, the sturdy women of the revolution tread unafraid any path and all traversed by the men.

Many Martyrs.

Many have died, martyrs. These are the women of the propaganda corps who have dared to invade north China, armed with revolutionary ideas and who have fallen into the hands of the dread militarists.

You see Chinese women of the revolution—slender lovely girls in the smart gray uniform of the military academy, taking training with the men for officership in the army; you see square-shouldered women, hair clipped man fashion, barefoot sometimes, armed with picket poles, acting as guards at great labor demonstrations, controlling the crowds; you see women massed, in neat blue coolie cloth uniforms, scarlet ties blazoning the front of their blouses, in labor union meets.

A New Power.

A hidden power a great strength is in these women, who, in their struggle for a free China, a China clear of foreign intervention, have not neglected to fight for the freedom of themselves from unequal Chinese laws.

In the ancient law of China, a man might exercise the power of life or death over his wife. She was his—to kill—to divorce—to cast off—to disinherit, as he saw fit.

Now—even as armies fight within a dozen miles of a city, these women are securing a complete revision of divorce and inheritance laws.

The Judicial Reform committee, a division of the Ministry of Justice at Hankow, is at work at a complete revision of Chinese law, with a view toward eliminating discriminatory legislation regarding women.

Hupeh Resolution.

To remind the committee that they are anxiously awaiting the reform, the women's movement committee of the Hupeh Provincial Kuomintang Union adopted the following resolutions recently:

Article 1.—With reference to divorce, the decision of the court should be based upon the following points:

1.—If a wife seeks divorce and the husband is unwilling to break the marriage contract, she may, if she has proper grounds, secure a decree, and remarry in accordance with the resolution adopted by the Second National Delegates' Conference. She may ask the local court to base its decision on this principle.

2.—If a husband seeks to divorce a wife who cannot support herself the man must continue to support his divorced wife until such time as she may remarry or no longer need his assistance.

3.—The wives and concubines of the wealthy who are often mistreated, may appeal for divorce and secure alimony if the decree is granted.

Article A. A young daughter-in-law who is cared for by her husband's parents may ask the local women's union to make an investigation in case of ill-treatment. The local court may give her legal aid by fining her husband's parents or by censuring them.

Article 3. With reference to the emancipation of oppressed maidservants there are three regulations as follows:

1.—If a maidservant is cruelly treated by her master, the local peasants' union may ask the local court to cancel the contract so that she may return to her family or her guardians or the local court may find a better master for her, one who can pay her for services.

2.—If a maidservant is beaten or injured by her master, the judge of the court should order the master to pay the medical fees.

3.—A master cannot take his maidservant as his concubine. If the maidservant is under the age of fifteen, the master may choose a husband for her if she agrees with his choice.

Article 4. Prostitutes should be emancipated from the oppression of their procuresses. In order to extend legal assistance to them, the local court may fine the oppressor or cancel the slavish contract so that the oppressed may marry or find some other work.

Article 5. With reference to the selling of an oppressed woman as a wife or to a house of prostitution, when such cases are detected by the Women's Union, the unscrupulous sellers will be severely punished by the court. Same punishment to those who sell the widows or orphan girls.

Article 6. The right of inheritance in acquiring property of deceased persons should be extended to women as announced by the administrative organs.

1. The only daughter has the right of inheritance in acquiring the property of her deceased father. None other can acquire it unless he obtained the will of the deceased.

2. The son or the daughter of a widow has the full right to acquire his or her mother's property. If a widow does not want to remarry, the family of her deceased husband should give her a pension, if they can afford to.

Art. 7. With reference to the relation between the women's union and the peasants' union, the labor union and the students' union, the regulations are as follows:

Ask Protection.

1.—A village woman who is a concurrent member of the peasants' union and under the direction of women's department of the peasants' union, may ask the peasants' union to protect her when she is oppressed by land owners, local rowdies or the gentry.

2.—Any women who is a concurrent member of the labor union, may ask the labor union to protect her when she is oppressed by her employer.

3.—Any woman who is a concurrent member of the students' union, may ask the latter to support her if she is not satisfied with her school.

Art. 8. As to the educational movement five points were made.

1.—To give relief to ignorant women and educate them.

2.—To organize reading committees and to give vocational education to ignorant women if possible.

3.—To educate ignorant women until they can read and write.

4.—Those interested in educational affairs, are expected to open schools for women, or write to the women's union, which may urge the government to open the schools.

Chicago Hands Off China Conference Elects Executive

CHICAGO, June 16 (FP).—More than 50,000 Chicago trade unionists were officially represented by delegates at the Hands-Off-China conference June 12. Pres. John Fitzpatrick of the Chicago Federation of Labor was elected chairman of the permanent executive committee, Clarence Darrow, vice chairman, Atty. Wm. H. Holly, secretary and Christian Madsen of the painters, treasurer.

The conference voted to present a protest against American policy in China to Pres. Coolidge when he stops off in Hammond, Ind., June 14 on his way to the summer white house in the Black Hills of South Dakota. The resolution to be presented to Coolidge demands withdrawal of American forces from China, abolition of the unequal treaties and protests against any intervention in China direct or indirect.

It was voted to make the conference permanent, with an executive committee to arrange mass meetings and co-operate with similar bodies in other cities.

Unions Represented.

Among the unions represented by delegates were the machinists, railroad signalmen, painters, hoisting engineers, teachers, metal polishers, switchmen, steam and operating engineers, window washers, ladies' garment workers, Amalgamated Clothing workers, wood carvers and lathers. A score of labor fraternal and other organizations also credentialed delegates. Several social centers, the Women's Intl. League for Peace and Freedom, the Workers party, Proletarian party, All-America Anti-Imperialist league and the Kuomintang of China, Chicago branch, participated.

The office of the Hands-Off-China conference is care of Wm. H. Holly, 109 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

British Labor in Protest Over Black-Leg Bill

LONDON, June 16.—Mass demonstrations are taking place all over England against the black-leg trade union bill of the tory government, and resolutions for a general strike are being passed by the more militant labor groups, who are not under the complete domination of Eggleston Square (right wing labor officials) or have deliberately broken with the milk-and-water policy of the labor bureaucracy in their soft-spoken opposition to the labor-strangling bill.

Urge General Strike.

The South London delegate meeting of building workers, in a united front conference held by the Borough Labor Party, the Bethnal Green Trades Council (disaffiliated for its refusal to oust Communist members), Chiswick Branch of the National Society of Painters, Liverpool No. 9 branch of the N. U. G. N. W., Methil District Trades and Labor Council, miners' meetings at Kimberley, Notts, and Hetton, Durham, and Walthamstow 657 branch of the Workers' Union, passed resolutions urging a general strike as the only effective protest.

For Sacco-Vanzetti.

Nearly a hundred delegates attended a conference of the I. C. W. P. A. (International Class-War Prisoners' Aid) to discuss arrangements for a monster demonstration in Trafalgar Square, on Sunday, June 26th. After submitting resolutions on the bill, on China, the persecution of the workers in England, and the attack on Russia, the demonstration will march to the American embassy to demand the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Splitting Tactics.

At the annual conference of trades councils held at Westminster, it was disclosed that Labor Party officials in the National Trade Union Defense Committee had been using the machinery of the party to weed out the more militant councils from among those invited to conferences, or to whom campaign material had been sent. It appeared that Wood, Green, Woolwich, Leeds, Manchester, Bethnal Green, and Hull Trades Councils, in all of which there is a strong minority movement group, had been more or less ignored.

Strong resentment was manifested at the conference, against the anti-working-class splitting tactics of the labor officials, and against the circular of the General Council addressed to the trades councils, threatening to excommunicate all those who remained in touch with the national minority movement.

Rumanian White Terror Raids Workers' Clubs

AMSTERDAM, (FP) June 16.—Information received by the International Federation of Trade Unions from Bucharest is that the Rumanian secret police at Temesvar raided a workers' club and seized and destroyed 7,000 "seditious" books. Among these were the works of Dumas, Victor Hugo, Balzac, Schiller, Goethe, Lenau, Cervantes, Marx, and other standard European authors.

Nungesser Report Fake

OTTAWA, Canada, June 16.—A message received at government headquarters from Chicoutimiate today say that the report of Nungesser and Coli being found is untrue.

New Yorkers Going to U. S. S. R. Will Visit Czar's Villa

The world-famous Tsarskoye Selo (Czar's Village) near Leningrad is to be one of the many points of beauty and historic interests visited by the American party, which will leave for Russia, July 14th, on the six weeks' tour arranged by the World Tourists, Inc., of 41 Union Square, New York City.

This was for many years the summer palace of the Czar, and it had the first electric light plant in Europe, and the first railway in Russia, which was built in 1837 to connect it with Leningrad (formerly Petrograd).

Health Resort.

Because of the dryness of its climate and its excellent sanitary conditions, this is considered the healthiest resort in Soviet Russia. Its former palaces and villas have been turned over to the children, and have become museums, schools, hospitals and saultariums for their exclusive use. Because in the summer the town seems to be one big colony of youngsters, it has been renamed Detskoye Selo (Children's Village).

In the trip arranged by the World Tourists, Inc., the party will be entertained at Detskoye Selo, and a special dinner has been arranged there by the U. S. S. R. Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries under whose guidance the tourists are to travel in Leningrad and Moscow.

This committee has also planned to care for all details of travel on the trip, provide interpreters, rooms, meals, transportation, visits to museums, factories and to theatres and concerts. All expense for this services are included in the cost of the six weeks' tour—$575.00.

This is one of the first opportunities offered to Americans to see Soviet Russia and it is causing tremendous interest everywhere. Further information about all details of the trip can be obtained from the office of the World Tourists, 41 Union Square, Room 803, phone Stuyvesant 7251. It is open daily from 9 to 7.

Philadelphia Labor to Meet on Unemployment

PHILADELPHIA, (FP) June 16.—A trade union conference on unemployment will shortly be called by the Philadelphia Labor College. Place and date will soon be announced. The Labor College recently held a 2-day conference on waste elimination that attracted national labor heads, technicians and representative Philadelphia union chiefs to its speakers' platform. Israel Mufson, college secretary, is making arrangements.

Clearing House for International Conspiracies.

The council of the league of nations is again in session at Geneva. Between sessions the powers carry on, sometimes openly but for the most part secretly, their intrigues, their efforts to create new alignments. Then at the league councils the schemers endeavor to use the sessions in their own interest.

At the session a year ago Britain was prepared to oust France from the Near East because of the frightfulness carried on in Syria by demanding that Briand surrender the league mandate for that country. France countered by inducing Turkey to make demands upon Britain which, if acceded to, would have been a heavy blow to English oil interests. The result was a compromise, leaving things as they were before.

Today Britain comes to the league council, faced with problems that she cannot possibly solve. In its desperation, because of the failure of its policy in China and facing ever-growing revolts in other parts of her vast colonial empire, the tory government of forgery blames its own failures upon the Soviet government of Russia. The very existence of the Soviet Union is unquestionably a tremendous factor in encouraging anti-imperialist action, as well as inspiring militant labor in the home countries. Unable to perceive the underlying economic contradictions that place the stamp of death upon the features of capitalism, the frantic tories strive to maintain their power by plunging into the most reckless campaign of intrigue and provocation the modern world has witnessed.

Since it gained a dominant position over France in the council of the league, Britain has used the league as an instrument for forwarding its own international policies. It came to Geneva with an elaborate program worked out—a policy of defense and aggression. Its mad policy of provocation and murder against the Soviet Union; its sinking back into a position of isolation in China after temporarily succeeding, in the Nanking bombardment, in obtaining unity of action against the revolution; its Arcos raid and breaking of trade and diplomatic relations with Russia; its attempt to destroy the British trade unions are all acts of madmen—imperialism goaded to the last extremety before its own irreconciable contradictions.

Today the tories enter the league council, hoping that their dominant position will enable them to align most of Europe behind its policy of terror against the Soviet Union, but on that front Britain also meets defeat; a defeat that they cannot face at home and which brings much nearer the day when the tory cabinet must go before the country in an election campaign.

Britain's defeat at the league council was due to the attitude of two governments, Germany and Poland. Instead of an identic note to the Soviet Union, protesting against "propaganda and espionage" carried on by the Communist International, Stresemann, German foreign minister, has been chosen to gently inform the Russians that such propaganda is resented by other nations—a complaint that has been repeated since the creation of the International and arises out of the imperialist desires to confuse the Communist International with the Soviet Union.

Germany is taking advantage of the British break to increase its trade with Russia and is not going to become the catspaw of the tories who must strive to save their faces at home as well as abroad.

As for Poland, since the rise to power of Pilsudski, through a coup d'état backed by Britain, the main tendency has been to be that of vassal of Britain. But this is at present affected by a number of strong cross-currents. In the first place Poland, created by the league as a buffer state between Bolshevik Russia and the revolutionary workers of Germany, has her own national existence to consider. Openly to break with Russia and plunge into a war will mean its almost instant destruction as a capitalist nation, and this not merely because of the mighty power of Russia but because of the unmistakeable signs of opposition in Poland itself. The recent Warsaw elections resulted in crushing defeats of the Pilsudski gang, in spite of the widespread terror and fraud invoked against its enemies. The fascist outfit in Poland in unprincipled and will sell out to anyone who is willing to pay them. While they serve Britain today they would much rather serve a more powerful imperialism if they had sufficient encouragement. That inducement is forthcoming in the form of a Wall Street loan of $60,000,000 which is nearing completion. Germany is to supply a like amount—obtained from the American bankers, who will not loan money to fight Britain's battles. These factors, taken together, outweigh the pressure of Britain and explain the remarkable statement of the Polish representatives on the league council that nothing should be done to "anger Russia," for fear of making a bad situation worse.

Thus, in spite of its dominant position in the league, tory Britain cannot overcome the contradictions of imperialism which have thus far prevented a bloc of fascist nations against the Soviet Union and which will act in the future to prevent such a consummation.

Then above all the contradictions, hanging like a Damocles sword over the heads of all the imperialists, is the growing revolutionary sentiment among the proletariat and peasantry of the home countries and the colonies, whose economic conditions must hurl them eventually into the ranks of the reserve forces of the Soviet Union and sound the death knell of capitalism.

Preparing to Smash the Traitor, Chiang Kai-Shek.

That the national liberation movement in China has the situation well in hand is evidenced by recent military maneuvers. Tang Seng-chi, commander of a powerful wing of the Nationalist forces, has been recalled to Hankow from the province of Honan, leaving General Feng Yu-siang in full command of the Hankow government forces in the northern drive against Chang Tso-lin, whom money is being thrown into Manchuria. This leaves Tang Seng-chi free to concentrate his forces for a drive against Chiang Kai-shek, the apostate who sold out to the imperialists in an effort to betray the Nationalist movement into the hands of the British butchers.

At the same time the new drive is being prepared the "Red Spears" (peasant military organizations) are cutting the northern communications in the province of Chili and moving northward where they will converge with Feng's troops.

The vast majority of all armies are peasants and this fact explains the wholesale defection of reactionary forces as soon as they come in contact with the revolution and learn what the fight is really about.

Even Chang Tso-lin is trying to save some of the wreckage of the Peking government by reorganizing the cabinet with a personnel that may try to reach a compromise with the victorious Nationalist forces, in face of the failure to consolidate an effective army out of the remnants of the various reactionary bandit gangs.

Meanwhile the imperialist forces of the United States, Britain and France remain concentrated at Tientsin, near Peking, thereby constituting a threat of imperialist war and imposing upon the workers of the imperialist nations the duty to demand the withdrawal of these forces so that China can settle its own affairs in its own way.

The counter-revolution could not last one week without the aid of the imperialists.

Calvin Coolidge Again Invades the Middle West

By R. M. WICKS.

FOR the third time in his career Calvin Coolidge journeys to the Middle West, bowing humbly that evil spirit the boys call it in the hope that it will be kind to arose from the presidential breast.

The first time he visited that part of the country he was not president; he was merely vice-president to the late Harding. He attempted to deliver a public address to the farmers at the 1922 Minnesota state fair in the Twin Cities. His grotesque efforts were rewarded with insulting interruptions that finally culminated in derisive howls that forced him from the platform before he had fairly started his harrangue. The second time he invaded that territory was in the early part of 1926 when, as president of the United States, he appeared before a conference of the farm bureau in Chicago, urging the election of a certain set of reactionary candidates. The delegates listened respectfully but silent. They then proceeded to defeat the Coolidge candidates by overwhelming majorities, before Calvin had left town.

Like most other mortals, Coolidge learns by experience—rather slowly, perhaps, but still he learns a trifle. He has again journeyed to the middle west, the seat of agricultural unrest, but if he indulges in any speeches it will be in the secluded Black Hills section of South Dakota, well guarded by federal police, and behind the microphone of a radio.

On his journey to his summer "white house" he stopped at Hammond, Indiana, to deliver a speech in dedication of a public park, where the steel trust police and the ku klux klan hooligans could be relied upon to protect his precious person from any effrontery on the part of the inhabitants.

His speech contained the usual piffle about life and light and liberty, with a brazen plea for militarism, wherein he made the profound ethnological observation that "patriotism is indigenous to this soil," and asserted that "such a people always respond when there is need for military service." Recounting the wars of the past half century, he showed that the industrial slaves of Hammond, Whiting, South Chicago and Gary had always done their share. Of course he neglected to state that most of the workers were foreign-born and were terrorized by the patriotieers into submitting to the war hoax, particularly the liberty bond fake during the late war in behalf of the foreign investments of Wall Street as a means of holding their jobs in the steel mills. In characterising that conflict the president, who is perhaps the chief source of the determination of whether an autocratic form or a republican form of government was to be predominant among the nations of the earth." which is one of the mightiest imperialism in earth concluded his sentence by asserting that "victory finally rested on the side of right." To the workers of his observation he boasted: "When America has drawn the sword it has always been the people who have won." This was indeed ironic in view of the bestial suppression of the steel workers by the armed forces under command of Major General Leonard H. Wood, who used a part of the army to aid the steel trust smash the great strike of 1919-20 and drive the strikers back into the frightful misery from which they endeavored to escape. When they attempted to realize some of the flowery promises made them during the war they were given a salutary lesson by the government, whose "liberty bonds" they had bought and in whose behalf they had suffered and slaved under the promise that the defeat of the Germans would bring freedom for all forever.

THAT Coolidge is actively in the field as candidate for president in 1928 was clearly revealed during his Hammond speech, wherein he said: "While we have reached the highest point in material prosperity ever achieved, there is a considerable class of unskilled workers who have not come into full participation in the wealth of the nation." The republican press of the country seized upon this assertion to proclaim in big headlines that Coolidge was in favor of higher wages for the unskilled. A careful reading of his speech fails to reveal one single utterance that gives assurance that the republicans have any desire to recommend action for improving the wages of unskilled workers. Certainly no one ever expects a lackey of banking and industrial capital to propose a minimum wage for unskilled workers based upon the cost of living. His helpful talk about "full participation in the wealth of the nation" is the cheapest sort of demagogism, to be elaborated upon during the coming campaign by the hired writers, stylists, aspirants to elective office and others who make up the republican machine.

His determination to become a candidate is announced today is the real reason why Coolidge makes his third journey to the Middle West and why he has established his "Summer White House" in the Black Hills.

IT is no secret and requires no great political acumen to perceive the fact that both the old parties in the United States have, within their own ranks, distinct groupings, representing conflicting economic interests. LaSalle street, the Wall Street of the Middle West, dominates those leading industries of that part of the country—the packing industry, the harvester trust, the grain and elevator trusts and some of the main trunk lines of railroads running westward from Chicago.

These bankers and industrialists oppose the imperialist policies of Wall Street—the European debt policy, the world-court propoitition, intervention in China, etc.—because they fear the effect upon their own industries of a revival of European industry and the developing of Asiatic industry with the aid of American credits. With such fury did this group assail the administration for steam-rolling through the senate and the house the proposition for the United States to join the world court that the fight for it has temporarily been abandoned.

The main support of the Middle West section of the republican party comes from the farmers and industrial workers of that part of the country. Since more than half the workers in the heavy industries are disqualified from voting by citizenship and residential qualifications the main appeal must be made to the farmers. For the past three years Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, son-in-law of the Pullman millions and a favorite of LaSalle St., has been striving to gain a foothold among the farmers. Many farm organizations have been used to stage political performances in behalf of Lowden. Governor Hammill of Iowa, the political creature of Mr. Harvey Ingham, has assumed the leadership of the republican forces of the corn belt who are for Lowden. Because of the veto of the McNary-Haugben farm relief bill at the last session of congress, Coolidge has become the symbol of all the ills from which farmers suffer. This fact makes Coolidge tial aspirants, even those with the shady record of a Lowden, to gain adherents. It is hardly likely that the presence of Coolidge in the Black Hills, where the farm discontent is particularly acute, will result in changing the resentment of the farmers into support for his ideas and aspirations. It is also questionable whether the Coolidge supporters and managers are greatly concerned over the Lowden candidacy. A revival of the scandal associated with his election frauds and vote bribery in 1920 will be sufficient to defeat Lowden, which leads inevitably to the conclusion that the Lowden candidacy is only a cloak to conceal the real candidate of the Middle West bankers and industrialists. Lowden is a talking horse for another candidate. That candidate is Vice President Charles G. Dawes.

Dawes is the ideal candidate for the republicans in 1928. Personally a LaSalle Street banker with heavy interests in the industries of the Middle West, he is at the same time a conscious imperialist who has already proved his worth to the House of Morgan by conniving, with Owen D. Young of the General Electric, to impose the Dawes plan upon Germany. His own gestures in favor of farm relief indicate that he knows the part he is to play and is actively a candidate for the nomination.

Dawes is also a tried and true militarist, a labor-hater and in theory, at least, a bit bizarre. He will appeal to the bosses of Wall Street as well as La Salle St., gain the support of the Hearst press with the exception of the petty-minded members of the klan, which is strong in the Middle West. Just what reward Lowden will receive in case of Dawes' election is problematical, but it will be nothing less than a cabinet post.

COOLIDGE'S journey to the Black Hills is not for the purpose of winning the farmers to his support in the pre-convention campaign, but in order to utilize the republican machine for his candidacy. There will be a steady stream of federal office holders—district attorneys, United States marshalls, postmasters, agricultural experts and other pay-rollers —so his summer white house, who will be charged with the task of lining up the Middle West delegates to the republican convention in order to defeat the Dawes-Lowden opposition and any other aspirants that may arise between now and the opening of the convention.

There are similar divisions within the ranks of the democratic party, with this exception, that the Middle West section of that party contain more strictly petty bourgeois elements than the republican party. The present trend in the democratic party points to the nomination of the Tammany governor, Al. Smith as the candidate, which will alienate most of the planters of the South and Middle West. The nomination of Smith will assure the victory of the republican party which will capitalize the anti-Catholic sentiment of those regions normally supporting the democrats, hence the main fight resolves itself into a struggle for control of the republican convention with Coolidge having a distinct advantage at present.

THE farmers can expect nothing from either of the two old parties. Their misery is used as a political football and the only way they can hope to gain anything for themselves is to aid those courageous elements of labor striving to create a labor party that will serve the interests of the workers and farmers. The utter futility of gaining advantages through "farm blocs" ought to be evident even to the dullest by this time, especially since it is plain to all that the La Follettes, Brookharts, Norrises and their associates devote most of their time in political horse-trading to secure committee appointments rather than fighting in the interests of the farmers.

DRAMA

Broadway Briefs

A new play by Joe Swerling titled "Whitney," will be produced by John Golden. The principal role will be played by Edward G. Robinson.

Joanne Ragois played her one hundredth performance in "Her Cardboard Lover" at the Empire Theatre last night.

This is the final week of the prize offer of $500 for an essay on "The Ladder" which is playing at the Cort Theatre. All essays must be in by Monday morning. So far over $8,000 has been given away in prizes.

"Bare Facts of 1917," announced to open this Saturday night at the Triangle Theatre, will not have its premiere until June 27.

"The" Badger Game," by E. G. Goldsmith, has been accepted by A. E. and R. R. Riskin, for reproduction next season.

Balleff and his troupe in a new edition of "Chauve Souris" will come to New York again next season. Following this the company will make a trip to the Coast. The Russian revue will probably arrive here early in October.

Screen Notes

Emil Jannings' first American-made film, "They Way Of All Flesh," is booked following "Beau Geste" at the Rialto sometime this month. Jannings' characterization in the new picture is said to be even more vivid than his work in "The Last Laugh" and "Variety." He is supported by Belle Bennett, Phyllis Haver and Donald Keith.

Janet Gaynor now featured in "7th Heaven" will play the leading role in the William Fox's screen version of John Golden's stage play, "Two Girls Wanted." Glenn Tryon and Earle Foxe will be seen in leading roles.

Another synchronization device, which is known as the Vocafilm, is being prepared for the screen with the cost of installation so nominal that even the smallest of theaters in the smallest of towns can afford it. In connection with the launching of Vocafilm, a lease has been taken on the Longacre Theatre beginning June 24, when the first presentation will be offered to the public.

Paint Painters Rock Critical Situation in Union, as Result of Graft of Officials

By Sam Marr and Dave Sapiro.

The Master Painters' Association, which is said to be the most powerful employers' organization in the building trades, is trying to force the entire membership of the painters' union to accept a wage cut of $1 per day, and other open-shop conditions that is now rife.

Julius Thomas Wolgin, the present business agent of the union, who was elected by the Rosenberg slogan, which is said to be the majority in the council, is doing everything in its power to thwart him out of the office. Every progressive move of Wolgin and his supporters is being sabotaged by the Rosenberg gang. No trade matters, no organizational questions are being taken up. The organization is now in a ruinous condition.

The leader of these grafters in the union is the socialist, Silverman. So open was he in his treachery to the members that the progressives called him to an open discussion before the membership of Local 906, at a special meeting on June 10. Koslorf and Matzkin, of the council made the following charges against Silverman, and challenged him to deny them: (1) That Silverman knew all about the pilfering of the treasury in the district council, but said nothing; (2) When the robberies were discovered, Silverman did nothing to expose them but on the contrary, when the report of the accountant was made, and some of the crooks arrested, he came out openly in their defense at the meetings of the council. At one of the meetings he even demanded that the council pay the $355 bonds necessary for raising the $6,000 bail for the Silverman gang.

Silverman represents the bosses in the council and on every occasion defends them. For this he has been rewarded with an expensive auto by the gang.

For refusing to join the Silverman gang and share in the booty, Thomas Hall was removed from his job as secretary, an office to which he was legally elected by the membership.

What was his reply?

"I am a stickler," he declared. "I am not a double-crosser." "We are all human," he declared.

(President A. J. Fischer and William Hartley of Dist. Council 9 are charged with using $50,000 of the union's funds for speculative purposes. Ed. Note.)

"We are all human," continued Silverman. "Suppose they did gamble on Wall St., with the council's money? Why not give them a fair chance?"

A fair chance for parasites, who, instead of fighting for the members' interests rob and betray them instead.

The hall was packed with pickets. It was a hot night. All were perspiring. One after another the workers got up and expressed their bitter feelings against the traitorous actions of Silverman and his gang.

The painters of New York must realize that their union is in a critical condition. Soon the workers will not be able to make even a miserable living. We must begin to act. We must save our union.

one hour speech of Gold. When he concluded he received applause.

The 32 New York Joint Board delegates were not permitted to enter the hall during this session.

Green Won't Parley

William Green refused to see Ben Gold, left 'wing' leader yesterday. When Harry Eaglander, president of the unity committee called upon the head of the A. F. of L. to arrange an appointment, he was met with a rebuff. The same was the result of his attempt to arrange for a meeting between Gold and Schachtman.

Eaglander was surprised at the attitude taken by Green as Edward McGrady, his New York representative in the needle trades situation had informed him that Green was in favor of holding a conference with Gold.

The right wingers held a banquet last night tendered to them by local 72 of Washington. Speeches were made by Woll, Feinstone, Berger, and Bearak.

Rockefeller Did Not Offer to Talk Union

WASHINGTON, (FP) June 16.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has denied the report that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had sent word to him that Rockefeller would deal with an industrial union covering all employes of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. properties in Colorado.

The report recently brought to Washington was that Rockefeller, tired of spending money on his company union which was formed after the Ludlow Massacre in his Trinidad coal fields, had challenged the A. F. of L. to show that it could organize a union speaking for coal miners, steel workers and all other groups in a modern coal-steel industry. Such a union would cut across ordinary trade jurisdiction lines.

Trade Union Women's Council Conference Saturday, June 25

The United Council of Workingclass Housewives will hold their annual conference on Saturday, June 25, at the Little Hungarian Hall, 350 East Houston St.

Invitations have been sent to a large number of labor, fraternal, and women's organizations to send representatives to the conference.

A number of vital topics will be taken up at the conference, including the organizations of housewives for participation in the struggles of the workers' jointly with other labor organizations and to render material and moral support to workers in time of strikes and lockouts; to help unionize the workers; to provide for cultural, educational and social needs of working class housewives.

Proposal for "Czar" of Building Trades Is Called Fascism

The proposed plan for a "labor czar" in the building trades was characterized as a fascist scheme by Assemblyman F. L. Hackenburg at yesterday's hearing before the State Industrial Survey Commission being held in the Bar Association building.

Hackenburg, a member of the commission, ridiculed the assertion of witnesses representing building contractors that the proposed official would have to have "the full confidence of the people."

Scheme For Open Shop.

"You mean a Mussolini," he shouted. "Such a plan would be fascism pure and simple. Others, including S. L. Snyder, president of the Plumbing and Piping Contractors' Association, and Henry B. Gombers, secretary of the National Heating and Piping Contractors' Association, testified to the need of the "czar" in order to eliminate "certain practices of organized labor which increased the cost of building."

Mild Progressive Wins.

SEATTLE, June 16.—According to an unofficial count of votes James Taylor of the Machinists Union is the winner in the contest for president of the Washington State Federation of Labor.

Workers Party Calls Strikes Successful in Argentina and Paraguay

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, June 16.—Workers' parties in Argentina and Paraguay today in response to the Sympathy Union's strike declaration called in protest against the sentence of Sacco and Vanzetti, were completely successful.

A huge demonstration was held at which speakers denounced the sentence.

4 Ku Kluxers Freed in Jamaica Court; Had Attacked Cops

Members of the Ku Klux Klan had an easy time of it yesterday when they were brought in Magistrate's Court in Jamaica yesterday in connection with charges of assaulting two cops during the Memorial Day parade in Queens.

Charges were dismissed against two of the Kluxers and two others received suspended sentences. Bail in $1,500 was continued in the case of two charged with assault.

The riots caused by the Ku Klux parade caused Police Commissioner Warren to announce that he would forbid demonstrations.

U.S. Government Makes Way for Private Profit Sells Air Mail Planes

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Uncle Sam became an auctioneer today and at a "public crying" in the office of Postmaster General New, auctioned off 26 Douglas air mail planes for $155,935, a fraction of their value. The planes formed the backbone of the transcontinental air mail route between New York and San Francisco, which the government will relinquish on August 1.

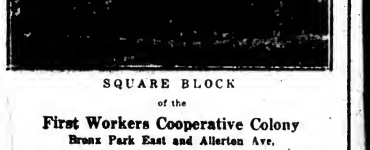
2,000 Protest Sacco Vanzetti Sentence In Seattle Streets

SEATTLE, June 16.—A protest meeting on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti with speakers representing the American Federation of Labor, Industrial Workers of the World, Workers' Party, Socialist Party, International Labor Defense, Labor College and Truth Seekers drew nearly two thousand people together in one of the downtown streets Saturday night.

The Sacco-Vanzetti United-Front Conference had planned to hold the meeting in a square facing The Seattle Times, arch-reactionary newspaper, but were notified at the last moment by the chief of police that this would not be permitted. The chief stated that a number of persons had protested at the meeting being held, that it might interfere with traffic and further, since Governor Fuller had appointed a commission, there was no reason in his opinion why the meeting should be held. Mayor Bertha Landes agreed on this last point.

Carl Brannin, chairman of the Conference pointed out that every afternoon Times Square is jammed with crowds watching the baseball scores and that those desiring the meeting had a right to keep the issue alive in spite of the opposition of certain individuals who might be disposed to set themselves up as censors. It was finally agreed that the meeting could be held one block north on a side street, where the Times would not be contaminated.

Resolutions were adopted calling for the unconditional release of the two workers and for the punishment of all parties guilty of the crime of keeping them in prison all these years.



U. S. Trade Gains, Says Government Report

WASHINGTON, June 16.—American exports for the five months ending June 1 amounted to $2,010,000,000, a gain of $141,420,000 over last year, the Department of Commerce announced today.

Imports were $1,768,000,000, a decline of $197,000,000, leaving a favorable balance of trade of $241,843,000.

The net import of gold for this period was $119,730,000.

...ers have been sent to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. The Daily News Letter of the Better American Federation, still going on. The American Observer published by the American Constitutional Association of West Virginia, for many years, but has since ceased, but is a monthly today. The same name is now issued by the American Citizenship Foundation.

A number of publications devoted to more general subjects specialize in this particular brand of hysterical patriotism. Among the former is the National Republic, which among them are the New York Commercial,* with the section specializing in daily reports of subversive movements; the National Republic (formerly the National Republican, which until 1924 was the official organ of the Republican National Committee), a monthly journal published in Washington by George E. Lockwood, the man who sent Blair Coan, detective and confidential political agent, to Montana in the spring of 1926 to get the "low down on Senator Wheeler."

Many daily papers and periodicals have taken up the super-patriotic propaganda in times of excitement over Bolshevism and Reds, notably the Chicago Tribune, and the Hearst-owner, which ran the Calvin Coolidge series on the Reds in the Colleges in 1921. Some of the worst of it was broadcast through the news agencies of the American Federation of Labor during its drives on radicals in the unions and its campaigns against the recognition of Soviet Russia. Mr. Ford's Dearborn Independent published the "spider web chart," and other fantastic material on the Reds—as well as the Jewish "menace." The Army and Navy Journal and other military periodicals have used the propaganda issued by the "patriots."

The former National Civic Federation Review, suspended in 1921, and the American Federationist under Samuel Gompers, with Chester M. Wright as editor, ran a great deal of Mr. Easley's material. There was also a short-lived periodical Industrial Progress, published by a Washington newspaper man, Henry Harrison Lewis, now engaged in selling another journal, Better Understanding in Industry, to busiess men and rich farmers.

The Woman Patriot was started in 1922 by the anti-suffragists, financed by Senator James J. Wadsworth of New York, who was one of the most ardent opponents of suffrage. Its editor is . S. Eichelberger, also an aggressive anti. The paper is dedicated to the "defense of the family and the state," and "against feminism and socialism," and attacks Quakers, women's peace movements, the Federal Children's Bureau, Judge Ben Lindsey, the child labor amendment, and such progressive women as Miss Julia Lathrop, first head of the Children's Bureau, Miss Grace Abbott, its present chief, Miss Jeannette Rankin and Mrs. Florence Kelley. Mrs. Kelley is described by Miss Mary G. Kilberth, the president of the Woman Patriot, as "perhaps the most legislative general Communism has produced," who has "steadily introduced socialism into the flesh and blood of America." The Woman Patriot broadcasts the propaganda of the Defense Society, the Civic Federation and other agencies, and is in close touch with the National Association of Manufacturers and its chief Washington lobbyist, Mr. James A. Emery.

The section of the New York Commercial* devoted to exposing "subversive movements," and headed the "Searchlight Department" began in 1922, with the advent of Fred R. Marvin, a newspaperman formerly with the Mountain States Banker of Denver. He reported the trial of the Communists in St. Joseph, Mo., and in several papers, speaking also in the neighborhood before business and other organizations on "the Menace of Bolshevism." His connection with the Commercial began immediately thereafter. The old paper, established as in 1795, and has long been known as reactionary in its political and economic views. It is strongly opeu-shop.

Those who read Mr. Marvin's column are invited to become "Key Men or Women" who agree to report and file under an elaborately nnmbered filing system each day's revelations. Each Key Man is promised confidential information, and invited to use it where it will do most good. He is modestly claimed for this Key Men in 1924 the credit of rendering "this nation a remarkable service in defeating socialism and communism which was manifested through the third ticket headed by LaFollette and Wheeler."

The New York Commercial announced in September, 1926, that the Key Men of America would become a separate organization independent of the Searchlight column of the paper, the object of which would be to unify with other patriotic bodies and that its aim is to supply all such organizations with "correct informatiou and data upon which they can proceed in their own way through their members." The Advisory Council of the new organization includes officials of the Associated Employers of Indianapolis, the National Founders Association, the National Clay Products Industries Association, the Citizens Alliance of St. Paul, the Employers Association of Jackson, Michigan and the Builders' Exchange of San Francisco. In addition represeutatives from practically all the patriotic associations are on the council as well as the leading lights of the Chemical Warfare Reserve and the Military Intelligence Association.

The organization announces that among other dnties its members should be prepared to "help stop the growth of Communism and Socialism," "work for industrial freedom," "keep informed through the Information Bureau of all subversive and radical movemeuts," "keep the Information Bureau posted on local activities of radical movements." and "assist local newspapers to secure and print information that will aid in this clean-up work." The membership fee in the organization is $12 per year which includes the "daily information service of the organization" appearing on the editorial page of the Commercial.

One of Mr. Marvin's latest feats is reflected in an editorial in the New York World (May 8, 1926) under the title, "Another Red Conspiracy Yarn":

"The Army and Navy Journal engages in a very curious enterprise when it prints an article under the headline 'Oil "Scandals" Engineered by Radicals,' by Fred R. Marvin. Mr. Marvin is introduced as editor in chief of the New York Commercial, who is 'accepted as the best-posted man in the United States on the origin, nature, purpose, methods and systems of the various radical and subversive organizations now infesting the United States and engaged in seeking to overthrow this Government.'

In effect, Mr. Marvin undertakes to make it appear, somehow, that the naval "oil scandals," as he calls them, were part of a Marxist or Communist plot. How, he does not show. He does suggest that after the Senate investigating committee got to work, "the publicity work which followed was guided largely by the Socialist and Communist movements in this country." Any such statement can hardly be charged to a faulty memory. But, as Mr. Marvin tells the story, when the cases went into the Federal Courts the truth came out: "There was no scandal. No one sought to rob the Government." Judge Kennedy, in the Teapot Dome case, he cites as holding everything was all right.

*Since this was prepared the New York Commercial has merged with the New York Journal of Commerce. Mr. Marvin is now associated with the National Republic in but the Key Men of America continues its work as before, now at 130 W. 42nd St., New York City. Subscribers to the Manhattan Republic receive Mr. Marvin's "daily sheet service" both for $6.00 per year.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

While the trade union fractions should work regularly in all cases as conditions necessitate, their executive committees must function regularly. It must be borne in mind that fractions are very often made from the basic Party units, the nuclei. The latter being the political units, take up all questions of general and specific activities and decide on policies and measures to be taken. The fraction works in direct contact with and under the direction of the Party trade union committees. It has no disciplinary powers, but it is to carry out the policies laid down by the proper Party units. It discusses the needs of the union, makes recommendations and carries out policies as decided by the proper committee.

In industries where workers who are employed in the same place also belong to the same union the fraction has at times been difficult for the comrades to make the proper distinction between the trade union fractions and the nuclei. This is particularly true of the mining territory where the shop nuclei and the fraction may have identically the same membership. In that field it is of importance to remember that the fractions concern themselves only with the work within the union. Otherwise

Pre-War Marriage and Adultery

"The Woman of Bronze," at the Lyric Theatre, Shallow and Out of Date

Reviewed by JOSEPH FREEMAN.

LOVE and marriage relations have undergone such deep changes in the past decade, that the revival of "The Bronze Woman" at the Lyric Theatre is the echo of primitive and almost incredible days.

Even six or seven years ago, when the play was first produced, it must have struck theatre-goers as weak and sentimental; last Wednesday evening the audience snickered audibly at several "touching" passages and showed obviously its restless spots.

Infidelity as old as marriage, and the wife whose husband is attracted by a woman younger and more attractive than herself remains a problem in real life and a good theme for the plays. Samuel Maugham's "The Constant Wife," now running on Broadway, treats the same problem from his own decadent, point of view. There are no hysterics, no wringing of hands and hearts, no false motivations. The betrayed wife recognizes the property nature of bourgeois marriage, and the changing nature of love in marriage. She handles the situation with wit and character, shedding tears, then of action by pursuing her own living, and repays the husband in his own coin by going off to Capri with a man she loves and who loves her. Throughout the play she remains mistress of herself and of the situation; she refuses to make her whole life and happiness hinge on the fact that her husband is her husband and friend and an excellent and secure source of income; or to succumb to the pressure of traditional morals.

Mr. Hornsey's play is cynical, it is a healthy cynicism which exposes the falsehoods and pretenses of middle-class life. The young wife, as depicted by Miss Bennett, is unbelievable as a modern attitude on the part of civilized people.

Why Murray Phillips chose to revive "The Bronze Woman" at this moment of all times is difficult to guess. Heather Paul Easter's clever adaptation from the French may interest a public for whom nothing could be new. It is a well-constructed vehicle. However, this a problem for theatrical producers and professional critics. What is interesting for us are the ideas of the play.

The wife of a sculptor, conveniently rich, devotes her entire life to her husband's career. The child soon stifled and her whole maternal instinct goes out to the man and his work. Flirtations of fleeting devotion and long years of loneliness finally drive the poor soul beyond the middle road, the gate and humiliation of betrayal.

The artist falls in love with a young musician who is portrayed as a typical modern flapper. As played by Miss Bennett, she is not sensitive, only unconscious; but her real villainy is shown by the fact that it is she who says "I love you."

The wife discovers the secret and is overwhelmed by nothing in all the literature of the declaration. She leaves in silence, with the assistance of the usual friend of the family.

The artist in silence, not only because the poor man husband and is [illegible] after the [illegible] to finish [illegible] the woman of [illegible] and the scene [illegible] the heights of [illegible] truth, and other [illegible] to be [illegible] to be [illegible] to be [illegible] to be [illegible] which, [illegible] the usual re-[illegible] artistic.

ALINE MAC MAHON

Will play Titania in the open air performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," at the Stadium, Forest Hills tomorrow night.

In a scene with the woman who has broken up her home, the wife points out the depth of her sin and depravity. End this scene been played by any less gifted and self-controlled than Margaret Anglin, it would have been one of the choicest satires on the infantile twaddle that proceeds from middle-class conventions.

Thus the play upholds not only the sanctity of the home, and the eternal triumph of the good woman, but vindicates the great privilege of the bourgeois gentleman to have his cake and eat it. He can with impunity desert his wife for a pretty girl, and then desert the pretty girl for his wife, while the wife "suffers in silence" and his "partner in sin" is cast out and reviled as a "thief," "vixen," etc.

Fourteen Shows Close Shop Tonight

Fourteen theatres will go dark after tonight's performance. Of this large number of closings, two Theatre Guild productions, "Mr. Pim Passes By" and "Ned McCobb's Daughter" will end their run this evening. The others are "Kempy," "Nantico Sea," "Wooden Kimono," "Triplet Crossed," George White's "Scandals," which ran for over a year, "Oh Kay," here eight months, "Two Girls Wanted," playing since September, "Castles," "A Very Wise Virgin," "Baby Mine" and "Cocoanuss," the Walter Hampden production which ran through the season. The Paul Green show, "In Abraham's Bosom" closes tomorrow night. No new plays have as yet been listed to take the place of the closed productions.

Broadway Briefs

Additions to the cast of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" which will be presented in the open air at the Stadium, Forest Hills, L. I., tomorrow night for the benefit of the Actors' Fund, are Reginald Goode, who will play Demetrius, Jay Fassett, as Philo, J. Malcolm Dunn as Philostrate, and Betty Lawford, as Peaseblossom. The other players are Stanley Harrison as Snug, Horace Braham as Oberon, Gay Nicholas as Starveling, Ernest Stallard as Snout, and Aline MacMahon as Titania. There will also be a ballet and chorus under the supervision of Alexis Kosloff.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

IN these days of Lindbergh's triumphant march through the world, we were wondering whether the daring hero of the air realizes the meaning of what is happening around him. Did he ask himself the question of how it came about that all the so-called "great and powerful" of today are anxiously trying to overdo one another in what looks like paying homage to his daring achievement.

For ourselves we are quite frank to say that, while we are full of admiration for the truly heroic and epoch-making deed of young Lindbergh, we cannot close our eyes to the fact that his wonderful achievement is being exploited for low and harmful purposes. We cannot celebrate together with Poincare and Briand. We cannot become enthusiastic in an affair managed by the British King and his cabinet. We fail totally to respond to the grand holiday-making of Wall Street and President Coolidge.

And we wonder whether young Lindbergh, the son of a sincere and courageous spokesman of farmers, at times does not have the same feelings as we have.

TO be more concrete and specific we will say this. Capitalist politics and imperialist designs have, in our opinion, played a determining role in deciding the attitude of the "great and powerful" towards Lindbergh and his historic achievement. The motives behind the reception given to Lindbergh in Europe by the kings, presidents, cabinet ministers and the rich generally are tinged very heavily with imperialist rivalry and purposes of capitalist exploitation. What we see in the homage-paying to Lindbergh by the rulers of the capitalist world is a conscious attempt to appropriate him and his deed for capitalism and capitalist exploitation.

The American government makes this the occasion to incorporate Lindbergh into its war-making machinery by having Lindbergh come back on a warship, and by surrounding his arrival and reception with military pomp and ceremony. Admiral Moffet rushes into press to explain that with Lindbergh's non-stop flying trip over the Atlantic, the old ocean is no longer a barrier to a quick attack upon the United States by a foreign power. Hence, the base is being laid for more military preparations for air warfare. The capitalist press calls him a "prince," and a "king." And the greatest exploiters of labor are feasting and banqueting him with much anxiety to make young Lindbergh one of their own.

When he came to New York, he was made to be a dinner guest of Clarence H. Mackay, millionaire head of the Postal Telegraph Company. And who were the other notables present? Here is a list of names taken from the press:

J. PIERPONT MORGAN.
THOMAS W. LAMONT.
ELBERT H. GARY.
JAMES A. BURDEN, host to the Prince of Wales on his Long Island visit.
JOHN W. DAVIS, democratic candidate for president in 1924, etc., etc.

Wall Street and the American plutocracy celebrates Lindbergh not for Lindbergh's but for its own sake. It was clamoring for the head of Lindbergh's father, who dared to raise his voice against the late imperialist war, but it is prostrating itself before Lindbergh the son, because of the opportunity to exploit his achievement for its own ends. We cannot and will not join them in their hypocritical game. Lindbergh's daring and glorious achievement marks a milestone on the road of human progress, but its full utilization for humanity, i.e., for the millions of toilers of America and the world over, will become possible only when the rule of the Morgans, Lamonts, Garys and their like will be abolished and the rule of the workers and farmers established in its place.

THERE are two subjects which invariably make William Green grow eloquent and pathetic. One is cooperation with the bosses, the other is the struggle against the left wing and the progressives in the trade unions. Green is doing his very best to promote both.

Prayer of a Patrioteer

O send us War, dear Lord!
That we may slake
In blood our thirsty sword—
And profits make.

Let cannon spit and roar—
Each shot means gold.
Let flow the tears and gore—
Guns must be sold.

On land and on the sea
Let terror reign.
Our mighty fleets must be Built not in vain.

Our honor—and our trade—
Shall be upheld.
So launch a bloody raid,
Let towns be shelled.

The might, it shall prevail,
Our power increase.
Put every man in jail
Who talks of peace.

Our glory shall be great,
Our coffers swell.
O give us War and Hate—
For Peace is Hell!

HENRY REICH, JR.

In the June issue of the American Federationist, he discusses the question of partnership—partnership, that is, between capital and labor. Not that any such thing really exists, or can be proven possible, but partnership in the ideal, so to speak. Here is how Green opens up:

> There is an appeal in the word "partner" that turns thinking at once from an idea of conflict to the idea of working together. This change of thinking brings a kindliness that of itself is worthwhile and in addition it introduces a new attitude toward the work problem.

What kindliness is Green talking about? And who is it that is adopting a new attitude toward the work problem? Where is this new attitude manifesting itself outside of the sweet and sickly preachings of Green himself?

We take Green's own weekly news bulletin. We pick an issue at random, dated May 21. And here are some of the items we find there.

Example of Kindliness: Number One.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 21.—Rev. William Gilbert Nowell, pastor of the Fawcett Methodist Church at Hills Station, has been evicted from a company house owned by the Pittsburgh Coal Company following his refusal to preach the anti-union gospel of this corporation. The coal company signed the Jacksonville agreement with the United Mine Workers and later repudiated its contract.

Example of Kindliness: Number Two.

Washington, May 21.—An average wage of $11.10 a week for white women working in 216 factories, stores and laundries in Tennessee is reported by the United States Women's Bureau. The average for Negro women was $6.96.

Example of Kindliness; Number Three.

Superior, Wis., May 21.—High school teachers in this city are asked to sign away their rights as citizens and to criticize educational methods only in the form prescribed by the board.

Example of Kindliness; Number Four.

Charleston, W. Va., May 21.—Newspapers of this state are printing columns of sob stuff on the heroism of the state mine inspectors and officers of the New England Fuel and Transportation Company for their rescue of dead bodies at the mine explosion at Everettsville, where 97 workers lost their lives. The victims and their dependents are overlooked by the newspapers and little space is given to the causes of the catastrophe or to a discussion of preventative measures.

Example of Kindliness; Number Five.

Chicago, May 23.—Mill workers affiliated to the Brotherhood of Carpenters were locked out following their refusal to accept a 10 per cent wage reduction. The bosses' ads involved. "The reduction means a loss of from $1.10 to $1.20 a day."

The above examples are taken bodily from the official news service of the American Federation of Labor. So the facts as related must be true. We ask Mr. Green: How much kindliness and feeling of "partnership" does he find in these cases? Is there none? And in the face of facts like these, how much basis is there for his assertion that—

This method (partnership) is the reverse of the idea that there is an irreconcilable conflict between wage earners and employers, and, eliminating the reasons for strife, establishes the brute power, the craftsmanship and the good-will of all in support of a common undertaking.

Yes, this method is a very effective means for the destruction of trade unionism and the intensification of capitalist exploitation. Particularly so when the reactionary bureaucracy of the A. F. of L. stands behind it and gives it its support.

A fine illustration of the utter futility of labor lobbying and of the "reward your friends" policy is to be found in the report of the National Legislative Committee of the four railroad Brotherhoods to the chief executives of these organizations. The reporters say that:

On the whole we fared reasonably well in the 69th Congress, since a majority of the measures we supported received favorable action and some were enacted.

Well, how about the Watson-Parker law? The Brotherhood legislative representatives are very proud of this law, ascribing its passage to their own efforts. They speak of this law as "the strongest and most far reaching piece of railway labor legislation that has ever been written into legislation in this country." But this is merely self-deception. The Watson-Parker law is in reality a defeat for the railroad workers. It is a piece of class collaboration imposed upon the workers and their unions a mockery of arbitration and mediation which is positively fatal to the growth of their organizations. Instead of strengthening the unions in wages and hours by outside intervention of railroad labor through the Board, they are only a small fraction of what the unions could accomplish through a free use of their economic power. Instead of the unions fighting their own battles, when other "achievements" have the legislative representatives to report?

One of the most striking achievements of the Congress, which is now in session, is the passage over the executive veto, of the bill providing for the construction of a bridge across the Columbia river at Vancouver, Washington, connecting the states of Oregon and Washington. The bill was introduced by Senator McNary, Republican, of Oregon, and Representative Johnson, Republican, of Washington, and was passed by the Senate, favorably reported by the House committee on commerce, and finally passed by the House, favorably reported by a small and powerful committee of the House of Representatives, to which the above bill was referred, and finally passed by the House over the veto of President Coolidge. This is the first time that the veto power of the President has been overcome by the action of Congress. The veto was based on the ground of "economy," labor legislation being the main issue of the political campaign in the 69th Congress and "economy" being the slogan of the Republican party.

It is to be hoped that the railroad workers seriously consider the question of INDEPENDENT political action and a Labor Party!

Plutocrats Abroad

By GEORGE H. SHOAF

ON a recent trip in an American liner crossing the Arabian Sea, going from Singapore to Port Said, I joined a crowd of men in the smoking room who had assembled to hear two business men discuss the Shanghai situation and commercial prospects in the Philippines. With the exception of a Christian Science practitioner and myself every man present was either a banker, a well-to-do business man, a number of the professional class or some one who had retired to leisured security. There was a diamond merchant from Antwerp, rich oil men from California, a rubber planter from Malay, bankers from Detroit, Pittsburgh, Denver and business men from everywhere.

American politicians and theologians are wont to declaim against the contention of the radicals that class lines are well defined beneath the stars and stripes. Had these gentlemen been present the outspoken expressions at this meeting would have been a revelation. Detroit bankers vied with California oil men in denouncing trade unionists as scoundrels and socialists as persons who should be given short shrift. The concensus of opinion was that Soviet Russia was a Red menace that should be destroyed utterly by the armed nations of the earth.

"Shanghai is a disgrace and China is an impossible situation," said one of the speakers. "The United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and the smaller nations of Europe should unite and send a force big enough to subdue thought and forever chain Chinese," he continued amidst uproarious applause. "After the fear of God has been put into their hearts and the Chinese shown their place then their country should be partitioned among the powers and the resources developed for the good of civilization."

That a high order of civilization had existed in China over four thousand years, that the land and resources of China belong to the people who occupy them and that foreigners have no more legal or moral right to invade the country than a highbinder has to commit acts of brigandage are matters which never to have occurred to either the speakers or the auditors.

Discussing the union labor movement a gentleman from the floor, who was an English officeholder of some kind said:

"I fought through the world war and I saw bloodshed enough to last me a lifime, but I want to say that had I any respect instantly to shelter my rifle again when the government decides, as eventually it must, to exterminate without mercy the gang of organized labor hoodlums who think they are going to get England by the throat and who are responsible for the present chaotic conditions of the British Empire."

"Hear! Hear!" cried one of the Detroit bankers.

"All I've got to say," drawled one of the Long Beach oil magnates, "is that we in America have got enough of strikes, and we are going to have no more! It would be almost as much as a man's life would be worth to sponsor a strike in Los Angeles, and we have laws on our statute books that make it practically a criminal offense to order a strike of any magnitude in California. Radicalism in America is at a low ebb and we reserve the right never see a repetition of the big-scale strikes of the past."

As to Soviet Russia, plutocracy here assembled was a unit. In their disposition of the Reds the speakers stormed the oratorical heights. Every adjective in the vocabulary of course abuse was employed in berating Soviet authority. Ignorant as they were of the philosophy and economics of Communism, nevertheless, these men were keenly alive to the fact that Soviet Russia was a real menace and that Sovietism was a constant challenge to the institutions of international capitalism. Their disposition of the Workers' Republic was similar to their solution of the Chinese problem—armed invasion by the allied powers, complete subjugation of the Russian people, and a partition of the country among the conquerors.

By way of parenthesis it may be said that the British government is doing its utmost to keep the news of the Chinese upheaval from reaching the masses of India, Malaysia and other portions of the orient which it controls. News is severely censored and the baggage of every passenger who lands at the numerous ports is searched for revolutionary literature and fire-arms. When found the literature is destroyed and the owner is placed under constant surveillance. Anyone caught attempting to smuggle ashore a weapon of any kind is arrested, flogged and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment at hard labor.

He who discussed the Philippines appeared to be familiar with his subject and spoke as one having authority. He condemned the agitation now going on in the United States having for its purpose Philippine independence, stating that those who wanted to free the Philippines were short-haired women and long-haired men, and that the native islanders who stood for a separate republic were irresponsible agitators ambitious for office. The mass of the people either in the United States or the Philippines cared little about the independence of the islands one way or the other, he said.

According to articles under which the governor-general rules the islands, but a certain specified parcel of land can be owned or controlled by any one person or firm. Land well adapted to the growing of rubber trees has been desired by the Firestone and the Goodyear rubber people for some time, but this land cannot be acquired in ten and fifty thousand acre tracts because of the article restrictions. That these articles should be abolished and the governor-general given supreme authority and the Firestone and Goodyear rubber corporations donated an much land as they could use constituted the simple solution of the Filipino problem as advanced by the class-conscious millionaires who seemed perfectly unaware that the native Filipino had some interest in the matter and should be consulted.

What impressed me most about this gathering was the sharply defined class psychology that pervaded it, the contempt in which the workers of the world were held, the determination neither to temporize nor compromise with radical movements and the constant appeal to force as the ultimate solution of all labor and social problems. At several stages in the discussion had I raised a note of warning or attempted to say a word in behalf of earth's disinherited I verily believe I would have been seized and thrown overboard. When met severally and individually, especially if the conversation related to matters of no consequence, the belligerent gentlemen composing this assemblage are uniformly courteous and considerate. At religious services held aboard ship Sundays, virtually every one of them is present to do homage to the Nazarine agitator who broke bread with beggars and slept in the brush. Furthermore, nearly all of them with their families are now on the way to Palestine to pay further tribute to their lord and master, Jesus Christ, who if he were to unexpectedly return, undoubtedly would denounce them as whited sepulchers and sanctified hypocrites!

Explain if you can this class attitude on the part of these plutes—their evident hatred and contempt of the workers of all nations—and their worship of the man who declared it was easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.

Is this glaring inconsistency a chronic condition or is it a temporary phenomena arising from the heat of the tropics?

QUOTING AND QUOTING

There was a time when I could quote
Full many a poet's wildwood note,
Before my sorrows thick and fast,
Came pouring down with chilly blast,
And nipt the blossom of my brain,
And chased the muse with all her train.

It's prices that I'm quoting now,
Reality has me in tow;
It's leading me I know not where,
To look ahead I do not dare—
The frigidaire demands I give My all for them that they may live.

—DONALD McKILLOP.

THE RED FLAG

Oh, many banners were unfurled
For glory, conquest in the world,
And many armies fought and bled
Around their flags, and many fled
And trailed their banners in the dust
Where guns and sabres turn to rust
But there is one bold banner still
To stir the blood and always thrill
The heart with loftier desire,
A banner flaming like a fire
The workers' and peasants' flag
Of crimson floats and ne'er shall lag
Until all classes have an end
And all the lords of earth shall bend
Their knees before the throne of man
And still this flag shall lead the van
To some more lofty, shining goal
Where highest strivings of the soul
Shall be fulfilled. Before my eyes
This banner fills the sunset skies
And soon a new and crimson dawn
Shall see all flags save this flag gone

VACATION—MEANS WHAT?

In about another week, vacation will be here. Many thousands of children, who have grown tired of school, tired of home work, tired of teachers, who beat and scold them, will welcome their summer vacation like a slave welcomes freedom. These children (most of them children of workers) will be glad to get away from the stuffy schools where they are taught to hate the workers, to be loyal to the bosses, to love God and country, and to join the Boy Scouts. They will be glad to get away, even the getting away from school means—what? It means for many going into shops, offices or factories to work for bosses and help support their parents. Not much of a vacation in that, is there?

For others who do not go to work, it means to swelter under the hot sun in the crowded city streets. Of these many will never go back to school: others will go back, but not the same as they left. Summer diseases and automobiles will find easy victims among these children. Not much of a vacation in that, is there? Some children who are more fortunate will go with their parents to farms in country places. Many of them where workers are, are usually over-crowded for children. Many of the children who come out to these places for vacation and fresh air remain to work on the farm under the blazing sun picking berries for almost nothing. That "ain't" much of a vacation, is it?

Well, that's the kind of a vacation you get in all countries that have governments OF THE BOSSES, BY THE BOSSES, and FOR THE BOSSES. And comrades, you needn't expect more from them because you won't get it. There is only one country where the children of workers are taken care of as is necessary. This country is Soviet Russia, the only country OF THE WORKERS, BY THE WORKERS, and FOR THE WORKERS. The government of this country provides playgrounds, parks, camps, and many other things which help to build up the children in mind as well as body.

Wouldn't you like to have such a government here in America? If you would, then you should join the Young Pioneers of America who are helping the workers to get such a government.

JOIN TODAY. DON'T DELAY.

THE LIVES OF THE POOR

Dear Comrades: Poor soldiers of U. S. are to fight for millionaires and lose their lives for the rich. While the rich are having a good time and do whatever they like, the working people can't afford anything but work all the time and have no rest. The bosses on high chairs are strong and wealthy, while the poor are weak. I hope everybody wishes China wins the war with U. S. and they will be FREE from the rich forever.—WILLIAM BIBIA.

WANTS TO HELP STRIKERS

Dear Comrades: One day in school we were making a poster. Each child was to think to help somebody. Some children said to help Community Chests, etc. I got up and said the strikers in Passaic. My teacher said that strikers are lazy people. They want to take a rest and say that the bosses do not want to give them enough pay. I believe that a lot of children know whom to help.—A GIRL FROM NEWARK.

DIRT — NOT NEWS

By L. Lsukkonea.

This picture shows the capitalistic (bosses') newspapers fishing for news. Some of the news that was caught is shone on the shore. This fisherman doesn't care for real news like the Sacco and Vanzetti case, truth about China, Soviet Russia, and so on. This news can only be found in workers' newspapers like The DAILY WORKER, Young Worker, Young Comrade, and a few others.

SACCO AND VANZETTI

By DAGMAR RUNNAP.

With the hours passing silently away
With no human men around
We are in prison today,
And with chains we are bound.

2.

We're waiting for our deaths, we're told.
And accused of murdering men.
We've seen in prison seven years unfold,
And no lamplight within.

3.

When will our freedom come around,
And when will the days come in sight.
But when will workers be off bare ground
And when will wrong be right?

THE ROSE-BUSH

"I don't belong to you!" exclaimed the Rose-bush. "Don't I belong to the person who has taken care of me and trembled himself about me? Then to whom do I belong?"

The man pointed with his head to the gleaming white house among the trees and replied, "To the gracious lady who lives there."

"That can't be," replied the Rose-bush. "I have never seen this lady. It is not she who has sprinkled water on me, loosened the earth at my roots, bound together my twigs. Then how can I belong to her?"

"She has bought you."

"That is something different. Then the poor woman must have worked hard to save so much money. Good! Half of my blossoms shall belong to her."

The man laughed a little sadly, saying, "Oh, beloved Rose-bush, you don't yet know the world, I can see that. The lady did not lift a finger to earn the money."

"Then how did she get it?"

"She owns a great factory in which countless workers drudge; from there comes her wealth."

The Rose-bush became angry, lifted a bough up high, threatened the man with her thorn-shove, shouting, "If you you enjoy yourself in my sunshine because I am still young and inexperienced, inform me naturally about the world of man. Still I am not an idiot, I have observed ants and bees, and know that to each belongs the things for which he has searched."

"That may be so among bees and ants," the man sighed deeply, "yet among man it is different. There the people receive just enough to keep them from starving—all else belongs to the master. They erect buildin splendid mansions, plants lovely gardens, buys flowers."

HE ROSE FROM THE BOTTOM

To be able to honestly admit that one has not read Theodore Dreiser is no mean accomplishment. A man of lesser note might hesitate to make such an admission lest he be classed among the unintelligent minority. But when, a person's reputation is so secure as it what it may—he can afford to take a chance on the hostility of the multitude. I have heard Dreiser branded as one of our foremost novelists and—Sidwash forgive me—I have boosted his books in many a parlious corner, because of the reputation he had made. But I never read a word of what he wrote until last week. And this is how the whole business came about:

It was a rainy day and gloomy as the hero of this tale, wrapped around his breakfast of petrified country sausage and liquid potatoes, washed down with two cups of coffee, stuck his battered velour hat into the grotty rawness of Greenwich Avenue. Various signs of life in a big city were apparent on the thoroughfare: strong men wheeling barrows of bricks or garbage cans. Children peering from the fastness of their homelets at hearty brewers deliverymen, modest hour to spankmaids, policemen tickling their clubs and wondering where the next beat was coming from, poets' cautiously home from their all-night revelries, loading babies to the nearest movie palace—a risky proceeding in the whole village.

With long easy strides our hero splashed himself across the thoroughfare of Greenwich Avenue where Wall Street was boring from within the earth for more profits thru the medium of another subway. The shiver of the pick and shovel worked as heartily on the sleeping townsfolk as the last seal of a 14th Egyptian soothsayer. Before our hero could analyse the very situation and draw the correct deductions from it, he was half way down the subway stairs. Change was no object now, so he plunged boldly in.

He had a nickel, so dropping it into the greedy maw of the money-snatch he clicked and passed by. Several other commuters were on the platform. Our hero, being a commercial person could not enjoy himself standing for a train. He wanted to sit down and read. So he went and found a seat. While in this position his eyes rested on a second-hand copy of the Herald-Tribune. Here was luck indeed. He could read regularly over the political news and the sport columns, but the feature page held his attention. There in bold face was the name of Theodore Dreiser. It was a situation such as O. Henry would like to tussle with his magic pen.

It was the eleventh and last of a series of interviews with famous men, telling how they jumped from being a vegetarian dinner and what not all kinds of fate loomed them into the big idea. Dreiser told a story and since I read the yarn I am no longer Dreiserite. Here was a man who was going to start a monthly newspaper. He actually printed many such editions to start the paper. The printed but the idea but no dough. Dreiser happened to be in the middle of one of his suicidal periods when he first pumped the gazettes and as people were already willing to consider an alternative to suicide he decided his outlet, went to the country and there, with the files bigger, better and more punishing out of business soaring in his mind, while countless files wandered anemically about.

Dreiser found himself as he now saw the editor, surrounded with the files bigger, better and more punishing plans he would be more palatable to his fellow men. Dreiser pulled out the gazette which was never able to locate his publication and which was never able to locate his subscribers.

Dreiser then told of that country editor that he was in his life. And all you imagine a country editor who was weary of the city and who came back from the life of excitement to the quiet of the country. Dreiser told of the [illegible] of two years a year.

Dreiser did not paint a picture of the editor who had stayed in the country. He let the United States Government paint it for him, more Dreiserese.

"CONTEST EDITOR?"

Brill would, in the midst of eating or reading suddenly shut his eyelids and allow this constantly recurring hallucination of success to pass thru his thoughts, which left him stupefied for the moment.

Whenever the door bell rang he would run into the vestibule, in the hope that it was the postman holding the coveted envelope for him. His anxiety increased, and his inquiries at the newspaper office in turn became more frequent.

At first Mrs. Brill was inclined to blame his behavior on "overwork," but as his actions developed into talking in his sleep, and incoherent mumbling during the day she became frightened. She sent her children to a relative and called in a nerve specialist.

During the examination Brill sat in an arm chair, seeming oblivious to the rapid questioning of the physician. His face was grimaced by an apparent stupor, and he caught's answer clearly. His wife went into the history of his strange metamorphosis. Irreverant muttering about pictures and names of presidents broke thru his maskline expression. He arose and paced up and down the room before regaining his seat.

In the hallway the doctor told her that it was a case of dementia praecox, which he explained was a form of insanity in which a patient loses contact with reality and retires into a world of his own imaginings.

"Can't we do something for him, doctor?" Brill's wife inquired. The elderly diagnostic was touched by the pathos in her voice. "These cases usually develop into an incurable mania," he told her frankly. Then to lessen the hurt, "However, if we can in some way make him believe that he won this ill conceived contest, it may bring him out of this trance." Mrs. Brill became pensive.

After a restless night she hit upon an idea, which she hoped would save him. In the morning she left Morton in care of a neighbor and hurried off to the office of the tabloid. There she asked for a sheet of paper. One was given her. Mrs. Brill hesitated:

"Please, I would like to have one with your letterhead on." Then feeling that an explanation was needed, continued, "You see, I am writing to a friend out of town about your paper, and would like to do it on your stationary." Color mounted to her cheeks, she felt that her lie was detected. The girl behind the counter gave her a curious look, but nevertheless produced what was asked.

She then hurried to a friend of hers who had a typewriter home, and between sobs, and a hurried explanation typed a letter. In the street she stepped into a drug store, parted a stamp on the envelope, which she slipped into her purse; intending to drop it into some letterbox, and hurried home.

In the morning Morton Brill received a letter which read in part:

Dear Mr. Brill,

We are glad to inform you that you are the winner of the ten thousand dollar prize offered by this newspaper for the correct solution of the "Know Your Own Presidents' Contest."

Yours truly,

CONTEST EDITOR.

Mrs. Brill watched her husband as his eyes scanned the letter, which he crumpled up, and with his clenched fists began a frenzied tapping against his chest, at the same time crying, "I knew it! I knew it." His mouth began to froth from the effort. Then his distorted mind ideas flowed with increased rapidity. He conceived peculiar objects which the association of fancies presented with a vivid illusion.

The illusion which he had so long nourished had finally eaten into his consciousness, and he was as a result a different person. His shoulders seemed to bend forward, and his eyes delved deeper into their sockets. Strange emotions stole over his face as he paced around the house, continually to murmur, "I knew it! I knew it!" and tap his chest.

His wife followed him from room to room, as he began picking up objects, and placing them where they did not belong. She grew alarmed as this grim game of tag kept up for upward of half an hour. She then phoned for the doctor. During this interval Mrs. Brill, wasted from constant worry, kept a strict watch over him. Her eyes were harrassed by a frightened look. She kept cupping her fingers, and reproaching herself for bringing on this fit of her husband's, believing that her letter caused it.

It was decided later in the day that they had best remove him to an institution as his abnormal raving did not subside. Mrs. Brill dressed to accompany him as an ambulance rolled up to the house. She opened her purse to extract some money. An instant later a shriek escaped her lips, as she collapsed in a faint. For there lying in her purse was that letter she wrote to her husband but forgot to mail.

BOWERY

Beaten, they stand in formless line;
(FREE SUPPER & PRAYER TONIGHT)
And being perished by hurry hope,
They slowly file into God's Mission House.

Hungry, they sit on hard, wooden benches;
And hearing themselves called God's Children,
They sing and pray and shout Amen
For a bowl of dirty soup.

Lindbergh As A Militarist Kite

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

WHEN young Charles A. Lindbergh landed in Roosevelt Field, after making the flight from the west coast in two hops the newspapers did not pay very much attention to him and when they did he was referred to as the "Flyin' Fool" as Mrs. Gibson in the Hall-Mills murder case was the "Pig Woman," and other celebrities that lend themselves to publicity but lack respectability are given sobriquets, on the short side of dignity.

Lindbergh then was more or less an "unknown soldier" a young aviator in the air mail service. Public attention was concentrated on the squabbles between Levine who was backing the Chamberlin flight and Bellanca the designer of the plane that was to make the trans-oceanic trip to Paris.

Suddenly the "Flyin' Fool" took the air and almost as suddenly landed in Paris.

Then the American government got busy. It saw in the feat of this daring youth the opportunity of putting on the greatest drive for militarism since Woodrow Wilson read his message of war against Germany before the joint session of congress in April 1917.

Soon Ambassador Herrick was running around like a chorus girl sticking his mug in front of every camera that tried to get a "shot" at the young airman. Even the ambassadorial pajamas that were conscripted to adorn Lindbergh's limbs occupied as much space in the newspapers as they would on a clothes line. Lindbergh, the son of a Minnesota radical suddenly became a world figure to whom kings and president were doing homage.

Lindbergh's feat placed him so far above the average king or capitalist potentate in courage and ability that they are not fit to wipe the grime of a day's flying from his countenance, but this was not the reason these parasites hailed the young flier. They wanted to bask in the warm rays of his reflected glory and leechlike suck into their degenerate political anatomies the popular life blood that a healthy, virile, pioneering aviator had inherited from his rebellious father who fought against the capitalists all his life and died with their curses on his lips.

The harpies of the decadent European aristocracy and of the equally parasitical capitalist class moved to extract the maximum advantage from the young man's accomplishment. The French government, the tool of the French money lenders, speculators and industrialists, saw an opportunity to put in a good word in behalf of the cancellation of the French war debt to the United States, but the American government, while hailing France in eulogistic terms and stressing the friendly relations between the two countries shook its head sadly at the suggestion that "glorious France" should assume the ignoble role of an international dead beat. "Nothing doing on debt cancellation" said Washington in effect, "we like you, but we must have our dough, or at least keep the bill hanging over your head to bedevil your sleeping hours and render you more amiable to concessions that our bankers, industrial capitalists may demand in their future dealings with you."

The King of All the Belgians—that is what the son of the libertine Leopold calls himself—got a "piece" out of Lindbergh to use the language of sporting circles. (Lest there be any misunderstanding, a little explanation of the term in quotes may be necessary. Boxers, wrestlers, runners, swimmers and other performers of this type are surrounded by hordes of professional promoters who live on those who take the punches, the half-nelsons and toe holds, those who crack their wind on the track or their lives in the swirling waters. Each human harpy gets from twenty to one per cent of the earnings of the professional athlete. This is what is called getting a "piece of him.").

The "piece" Albert of Belgium got out of Lindbergh was publicity and the opportunity to have his pictures taken with the young American. Perhaps the next time the monarch sends his agents to do a little panhandling in the United States, Morgan will have less difficulty in floating his loan when he reminds the investors that the king was a friend of the hero "Lindy."

Lindbergh went to England and visited the king in Buckingham Palace. I am not sure whether George consented to be snapped with the American birdman, but the Prince of Wales, who is equally at home in pub, dance hall or in front of a camera was hauled out to do a little bit of drumming for the empire. It also gave Ambassador Houghton a chance to figure in the news even tho by this time Lindbergh did not need any pajamas. It also gave the American ruling class a chance to take a couple of chuckles at the expense of their English "cousins" and an opportunity to impress upon the old empire the fact that their former colonial empire now has the ships, the planes and the aviators too, in case the old empire should try conclusions with her western rival.

Lindbergh talked peace and friendship between nations. Ambassador Herrick took advantage of the occasion to roar against Communism and the Soviet Union. All the capitalist jackals out of their lairs felt that this was the time, when the people of the world scanned the papers for news of this daring young man, to turn loose their blasts against the only government that is really for peace and against the revolutionary workingclass movement in all countries which would utilize aviation and aviators not to carry bombs for the destruction of human lives in crowded cities, but to bring the peoples of the earth nearer to each other and cut distance to a fraction of what it is now.

Our young hero returned to the United States on a warship. He was received in Washington with greater acclaim than was Admiral Dewey on his return from the conquest of the Philippines. Heroes have short lives, as heroes. The people forget, only those who cash in on their day of glory are the winners. And the winners in the "Lindy" case, besides the young hero himself—who by the way may be or was a "Flyin' Fool," but not so much so that he would turn down a wad of dough, newspaper liars to the contrary—are the militarists, the makers of airplanes and gas bombs and business in general from the vendor of gasoline to the badge-peddler.

Many people that Lindbergh's flight would be a peaceful influence. He said so. When he spoke in Washington he brought a message of peace from the French people. The French would prefer that he succeeded in lopping a billion off the war debt. But even while he was talking peace the militarists were busy preparing the minds of the masses for the big appropriations that congress will be asked to cough up when it reconvenes. And what better means could be devised to prepare the public mind than to get their words into the new national hero, the unassuming young fellow who had the nation in an orgy of excitement and admiration over his feat.

Soldiers, sailors, war planes, generals, colonels and politicians surrounded Lindbergh. There was little talk of the old Lindbergh, the aviator's father that this gang would have tarred and feathered during the war. The young eagle could fly higher than the parent bird, but his talons would be used not to rend the enemies of the masses, but the slaves of the ruling classes. Still there were reports that "Lindy" was not willing to be utilized for war and preparedness propaganda. But when he reached New York, the financial and commercial capital of the American empire, he did not leave us in suspense very long.

At a banquet given in his honor at the Commodore Hotel, Lindbergh repeated his speech with a few additions. This is where Lindbergh comes out in the role of a militarist decoy. We quote from a report of his speech that appeared in the New York Times of Wednesday June 15:

"In the meantime, the most important thing for us to do is to develop the trans-continental transcontinental air service in America gives a reserve in case of war, which we can develop in no other way. Experienced pilots cannot be trained as quickly as airplanes can be built. We do not invite war; yet one of the surest ways of averting it is to have a trained personnel which can be mobilized quickly in case of war. A commercial air service will give us that personnel in the matter of fighting planes in case we are forced into conflict. Our planes in the army air port are the most developed in the world, although we have very few of them. And I have no hesitation in saying, without the least exaggeration, that the pilots of the United States army have no equal in the civilized world."

Of course we admit that it would be utopian to expect that even a strong willed person, placed in the position Lindbergh is in at this period of the heyday of American capitalism could resist the powerful influences that are being brought to bear on him by the ruling classes. No well informed person would believe for one moment that Lindbergh would receive the necessary financial backing or government sanction for his attempt unless the capitalists were perfectly sure of him. His financial backers risked their money on the flight in the hope that success would make their factories hum with increased business and the government knew what a valuable salesman for larger military appropriations the first man to fly across the Atlantic would be. If Lindbergh were a pacifist or an anti-militarist, instead of a willing tool of capitalism his welcome, when he arrived here would consist of a customs inspector going thru his baggage.

Last Wednesday Lindbergh was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the State Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Association. The "fat boys" cheered him from the depths of their barrelled bellies. Lindbergh did not disappoint them.

This country did not want war he said. What "country does"? But the best way to avoid a war is to be prepared for it. So said the peaceful ex-kaiser of Germany back in the peaceful spring of 1914. We have not a sufficient personnel nor enough equipment for our air force. To quote him directly:

"Commercial aviation should be developed in this country. The personnel and equipment that would result from such a development would be of great value in the event of war.

"New York would be a vulnerable spot in case of war, because it has not a proper airport. I hope in the near future this will be corrected."

This is the cut-and-dried preparedness propaganda. And lest he might offend the feelings of the different class and the manufacturers of battleships, heavy artillery and shells, Lindbergh showed that he is a good diplomat. He said:

"The air force will never take the place of the army and navy, but the army and navy need a strong air force."

And those owners of billions stood on their seats and rocked the ceiling with their cheers. And well they might. Here was a godsend. The "Flyin' Fool" of aviation, had developed into the "Flyin' Tool" of American militarism.

The Chinese Revolution

By E. VARGA

The Significance of the Social Element

The opinion is often expressed in Social-Democratic circles that the Chinese revolution is purely a bourgeois movement. In refutation of this standpoint we may here cite some figures from Chinese, and even English, sources as to the profundity of the social fermentation among the population. (Our sources in this connection are the publications of the Chinese Government Bureau of Economic Information, which publishes a weekly and a monthly report in English at Peking).

The peasant organizations are rapidly increasing in number. At the beginning of March the number of members in Hupeh was as follows: ("Economic Bulletin" of March 2nd, 1927).

Kiangsiang	1,200,000
Kiangsi	50,000
Hunan	1,200,000
Hupeh	270,000
Honan	150,000
Fukien	25,000
	2,795,000

In many parts, where the work of organization has not yet been finished, the membership figures are not yet completed. The reasons for Fukien [illegible] are explained. The number of organized [illegible] in Hole etc provinces may without exaggeration be put at 3 millions.

The growth of urban peasant organizations is [illegible] in a monthly supplement British report ("Times" of February 8th, 1927).

"Immediately after the arrival of the Canton troops they started organizing [illegible] committees, which at present rule the entire province. They dictate the amount of the taxes, and any landlord that offers resistance [illegible] is killed, the workers' union forcibly [illegible] the landlord's dwelling or property, [illegible] the subject to to ransom."

The "Times" (Peking correspondent of February 22nd, 1927) tells of fights between [illegible] and peasants, of the latter 60 [illegible] to have been killed in the province of [illegible]. "The peasant associations now determine the rent and the terms of this report literally, and the landlords have to submit to them [illegible] as an "imperialist." One landowner [illegible] The old system of granting loans has been [illegible] and loans are now only contemplated, [illegible] of the amount falls [illegible] of the peasant organizations."

[illegible] the peasantry, since the peasant organizations [illegible] Hunan, Kiangsi, Honan and [illegible] have established not a little to the [illegible] of the Kuomintang.

[illegible] further facts. The movement [illegible] of a peasant revolution, [illegible] peasantry rose a hundred times and a [illegible] the workers' organizations. [illegible] of the workers [illegible] At Wuchang [illegible] the close of 1926 (as reported by [illegible] on November 27th, 1926) [illegible] unions organizations with a [illegible] from 30 to 1,000. (Apparently the workers of each individual factory were at that time still organized separately). Altogether, there were in the town no less than 200,000 organized workers. At Shanghai the trade unions were, alternately, either outlawed or dominant in the town: in the latter cases the workers were formed. In March there were 408 trade union organizations with 287,042 members, ("Chinese Economic Bulletin" of April 2nd, 1927) without counting the seamen, dock workers, and business employes. The total probably now exceeds 350,000.

In the course of the year there were 169 strikes in 165 factories employing 202,297 workers. The longest strike lasted 94 days, which is tremendously long for Chinese conditions. In one factory there were 9, in one 8, said in one 7 strikes in the course of the year; in 4 factories the workers struck 5 times. In a single month there were more than 50,000 workers on strike. This shows the intensity of the movement.

How heterogeneous the movement is, is demonstrated by the fact that the publication from which we quote enumerates no fewer than 71 different kinds of demands brought forward by the strikers. The most important of them were:

	Number of Cases
Increase of wages	71
Re-employment of discharged workers	35
Discharge or engagement of workers	26
Payment of wages for strike days	22
No discharge without adequate reason	24
Reduction or establishment of work-time	18

In reading this whole list of demands, we cannot but be struck by the very great number of "solidarity" demands (such as for the release of arrested workers in 10 cases) and the small proportion of demands for shorter working hours (only in 18 cases). The oppression of the workers is manifest by the fact that in 10 cases the demand put forward was for the abolition of corporal punishment!

The outcome of the strike movement was as follows:

	Cases
All demands refused	61
Demands partially granted	85
All demands granted	27
Promise of investigation of claims	13
Lockout	2
Undecided	5

In the towns in which the Canton government ruled, the labor movement was yet more extensive and successful. This is one of the main reasons why the British bourgeoisie is filled with such bitter hatred for the Chinese revolution; it lessens their profits. The reports in the British press reflect the fury of the British bourgeoisie. A report from Hankow, e.g., says: ("Times" of February 22nd, 1927).

"All categories of workers, from the houseboy to the coolie, are being encouraged to demand more and more wages. The workers in the foreign enterprises now demand the 54-hour week, an annual bonus equal in amount to one month's wages, and the settlement of all disputes by the trade unions. A large coal-mine, with a capital of 1.5 million pounds, is now under the sole control of the miners' trade union, which sells the daily output for the account of its members."

"Strikes and demands for wage increases to quite an extravagant degree, are now the order of the day." ("Times" of February 8th, 1927).

"Business has truly been paralyzed by the exorbitant demands of the trade unions." ("Times" of March 30th, 1927).

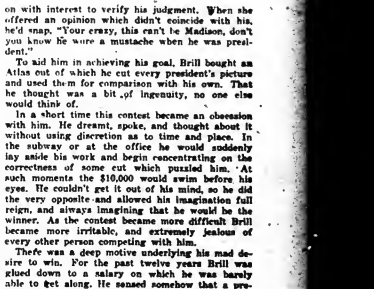
"The demands of the trade unions under the Canton regime in China have become exaggerated, so that business is largely rendered impossible." ("Times" of March 23rd, 1927).

There are innumerable reports of this kind in the British press, all showing how deeply the working classes of China have been stirred up by the revolution.

But not only peasants and workers, also the petty bourgeois circles have been affected. A special thorn in the eye of the British capitalists was the demands of the bank clerks.

"It was reserved for the trade union of Chinese servants and employes in the foreign banks to present a list of demands to their employers which exceeds anything ever experienced. All these employes speak English or some other foreign language and are fairly well educated. The majority of them surely possess learning enough to know that there must be a limit to working expenses if business is to thrive. The demands in question range from 60 to 570 per cent increases of salary." ("Times" of March 23, 1927).

In view of these demands, all the banks closed down. So says a report three days later. In reality, however, this step was taken for the purpose of disturbing economic life at Hankow by a sort of financial or credit blockade.



The class struggle has penetrated far into the ranks of the petty bourgeoisie.

"The chambers of commerce (organs of the great merchant class), on which the full weight of this campaign against property fell, have been substituted by commercial organizations founded on revolutionary lines (obviously retail tradeis' organizations), while the members of the chambers of commerce are persecuted as traitors and money-grabbers," ("Times" of February 22nd, 1927.

The 450 millions of people in China are in a process of revolution. With the exception of the feudal landowners and the military cliques, all classes of the population are taking part in this movement. By the treachery of Chiang Kai-shek, the bourgeoisie has separated itself from the revolution and gone over to the camp of the counter-revolution. By acting thus, the bourgeoisie has also betrayed the anti-imperialist emancipation movement for it is impossible at the same time to fight against the proletariat and the general mass of the peasantry on the one hand and against the imperialists on the other. The bourgeoisie has surrendered unconditionally to the imperialists. The situation may be said to be clearer now, inasmuch as China must either remain bourgeois under the yoke of the imperialists, or else become free under the lead of the proletariat and in opposition to the bourgeoisie. This state of affairs is a guarantee for the continuation of the revolution, even if a relapse sets in for the time being.

"Contest Editor" (A Story)

By ALEX JACKINSON

MORTON BRILL paid little or no attention to the many people who pressed against his knees as he sat in the crowded subway train. He was thinking, not of life's usual perplexities but of figures. Decimals, ones, and oughts formed curious links and danced grotesque rituals in his head. In front of him was the tabloid into which he gazed diffidently. Unable to concentrate on the news, he shifted his eyes to the right, where a girl was reading the same paper. He watched her turn the pages, then focussed his glance at the men and women, crowding to reach for a strap. Sometime later he looked thru the window as the downtown bound train rolled to a stop. It was 14th Street and he should have alighted at Grand Central. Hurriedly arising he pushed his way thru the center door, crossed the platform to the other side, and rode up one station.

At the uptown branch of Peabody and Wicks where Brill was employed as margin clerk, activity started. Upon arriving he exchanged "good mornings" with those who acknowledged his entrance and took his usual seat at a high desk table. From a drawer he extracted a green eyeshade which he fitted over his brow. A look of mild interest nestled over his face as he made an effort to concentrate on the numerous bond receipts lying before him. He couldn't, the figures still swam before his eyes, clogging thoughtful concentration.

The room gradually began to take on the aspects which characterise a bond broker's office. Runners carrying securities began filtering thru the door. Telephones buzzed. Clerks darted from desk to desk. Typewriters clicked noisely. Orders to buy and sell were heard, and news tickers began to reel out coils of price quotations. Holdings were imperiled! A tension of anxiety gripped everybody, even Brill soon relaxed into a state of busy occupation. The pen he was constantly dipping into an inkwell ran up and down the ledger in slow deliberate strokes.

It was nearing eleven o'clock. Another clerk working alongside of Brill winked his eye. "How's the old contest getting on Brill?" Morton made no reply, an enigmatic smile broke thru his lipe, which faded away in an instant. "Leave him alone, he's figuring out how to spend the ten thousand dollars," chimed in another. Still no answer, other than a grunt was evoked from Brill.

The staff's favorite sport, that of kidding Mr. Brill commenced, and promised to continue indefinitely. At times this jocular horseplay was justified, as there was something about his person that invited ridicule. Just what it was is difficult to determine, it may be attributed to the seriousness with which he took the jests, or, perhaps his appearance, yet Morton Brill was, much to his discomforture the butt of constant jokes.

This person Brill was a type, nay, more than that, a formula, symbol—a perfect example of the petty bourgeois circle he gravitated in. In the office, he, for reasons of antiquity became a fixture. People grew used to seeing him at his desk, as to the desk itself. He seemed to belong there. Lacking entirely in initiative or intelligence he be regulated his habits by standards. Brill did only what the "best people" did, and to him they represented the successful in life. The once to be looked up to, admired, and imitated.

His own life was so totally devoid of interest that for sheer want of something to occupy his time with he thrilled at other people's victories and grieved at other people's losses. Minding someone else's business was his chief source of enjoyment, and as a result his head became a walking almanac. He could tell you without a minute's hesitation how many divorce cases the Supreme Court handled last year, or the salaries and income taxes of famous movie stars. In this fashion he sublimated his mental vacuum into an illusory region, where he fancied himself being a man of importance.

His dress was orderly, usually a blue serge suit covered his spavined frame. He was partly bald, thin faced, and a pair of spectacles always stuck on his nose. To him, another genuine pleasure unfolded in strutting about exclusive hotel lobbies on Sundays. For such occasions he would wear an open wing collar and a polka dotted bat tie. He studied himself in the mirror before starting on his excursion. "I look like a banker with this hat on" would pass thru his mind as he fitted on some head covering. Simultaneously with such thoughts, a smile would animate his features. Brill really believed that people were impressed by his appearance, tho one look was sufficient to convince any observer that he was a poser, a mimicker indulging in a carnivalic pantomime.

His vices, if such they can be called, fitted in with his virtues. Whenever a play was about to be censored he made it a point to see it. Or should be read of a salacious book, on the verge of suppression by the authorities he would secretly read it in the library, tho openly age, "The younger generation must be safeguarded, even at the cost of liberty from this civilization." All such quotations he politely borrowed from the editorial page of his tabloid.

At a late age he learned how to dance, but never correctly, and as a result his wife seldom went anywhere with him, outside of the neighboring vaudeville house. In company, should the political situation be discussed, he would break in, with an authoritative tone. "I don't think Mr. So and So has a chance to become president. He lacks the fibre of which leaders are molded." Or, "Europe will never recover her economic balance unless our country cancels its debts." These sporadic outbreaks of learning only betrayed the complete ignorance he lived in.

Of such characteristics was Brill.

His one delight was participating in contests. It mattered not what the contest was about, he joined them all. If some company advertised for a slogan Morton Brill was certain to offer suggestions. This he kept up until it became his pet diversion. His vigilance was once rewarded by his receiving a suit of underwear from a concern for whom he composed a four line stanza. Another time he won a pair of theatre tickets for a correct crossword puzzle. This greatly inflated his fatuous pride, for Brill was one of those asinine beings in whose imagination little deeds swell to heroic proportions.

At present he was partaking in the presidential picture contest run by his favorite tabloid. Each day three different cuts were printed, and it was the task of participants to cut out those parts and reconstruct them, so as to make the correct face of a former president. Their next duty was to guess his name and in what year he held office. Into this contest Brill pitched in with a remarkable zeal.

Since its inauguration he laid everything else aside in a determined effort to win the first prize of "$10,000." Every evening, upon returning from work, he would clear himself in a room and begin to clutter up the house with fragments of newspapers. At times he would ask His wife, who looked on with interest to verify his judgment. When she offered an opinion which didn't coincide with his, he'd snap, "Your crazy, this can't be Madison, don't you know he wore a mustache when he was president."

To aid him in achieving his goal, Brill bought an Atlas out of which he cut every president's picture and used them for comparison with his own. That he thought was a bit of ingenuity, no one else would think of.

In a short time this contest became an obsession with him. He dreamt, spoke, and thought about it without using discretion as to time and place. In the subway or at the office he would suddenly lay aside his work and begin concentrating on the correctness of some cut which puzzled him. At such moments the $10,000 would swim before his eyes. He couldn't get it out of his mind, so he did the very opposite and allowed his imagination full reign, and always imagining that he would be the winner. As the contest became more difficult Brill became more irritable, and extremely jealous of every other person competing with him.

There was a deep motive underlying his mad desire to win. For the past twelve years Brill was glued down to a salary on which he was barely able to get along. He sensed somehow that a premature senility was beginning to hover about his middle age and wanted to safeguard against it. In an effort to do so, he at one time invested one hundred dollars in a stock of which he lost almost half. That cured him of further gambling.

As can be expected of one possessing his eccentricities, Brill was a staunch believer. Nothing could shake his faith in the belief that fate would finally reward him by bestowing the prize upon him. It gave him immense pleasure to think about it. He began to live on that one hope, which soon became the reef on which he clung to life.

Then came a day when the last of the series appeared. Brill stayed away from work then, having a cigar clerk whom he patronized phone his employer that he was ill. Instead he hied off to the library where he spent all day going over the pictures. He carefully fitted, refitted and pasted together the many parts, making slight changes here and there. Toward evening he finally sealed them in an envelope, and with a heart full of anticipation mailed them.

Following that came a long period of watchful waiting, sometimes varieted by agonizing despair. The very next morning he phoned the newspaper to see whether his contribution arrived. "No information given over the phone," drifted thru the receiver. He was crestfallen. A day later he called in person, and was informed that it would take at least a month before the winner was announced. Ere the week elapsed he called again.

During this time his mind began to undergo a complete change. Brill began to live in a state of unreality. He often visioned his name in bold headline, "Mr. Morton Brill winner of the $10,000 picture contest." He worked himself into a lethal fever thinking about it. His eyelids would flutter, and his mouth broaden into what once served as a smile as he did. This phantom chasing became an inseparable part of his daily routine. As a result he could no longer think clearly, and made constant errors in his work. He didn't even get the usual extra week's pay when he was fired.

To his wife he said that he was "laid off," but she instinctively sensed the true reason. His conduct was, if anything, more accentuated at home.

Mrs. Brill was a former choir singer who married Morton at a mature age. There was nothing romantic about their meeting, and subsequent marriage. Both believed in the "sanctity of the home," tho neither could explain what that meant. In time they adjusted their mental faculties to think in one direction, and their marriage ran smoothly thru the years. In Morton's placid demeanor Mrs. Brill saw something she alone termed as poise. And in her Brill saw the ideal wife, obedient, thrifty and virtuous. They had two children which partly filled the empty gaps in their lives.

Of recent days Brill's conduct took a turn for the worse. With the loss of his position came the increased desire to win, and he made no effort to find another one. "The ten thousand dollars will put me on easy street," he kept telling and convincing himself that such would be the case. Brill already figured out how best to invest the money. His wife attempted to cheer him by sympathetic noddings of her head, but then seeing that encouragement only increased his abnormal attitude she said nothing, but inwardly worried a great deal.

With victory Brill visioned himself becoming a man of men. His name would be read by millions, and envied by still more. This puffed his insatiable ego to lofty heights. One day he spent six hours writing a statement in which he credited his success to "clean living and a love for his wife." He believed the newspaper would want such a thing of him, and even dug up an old photo of himself to accompany it.

Just what brought about his complete breakdown cannot be ascertained, but symptoms of it began to show the day after he mailed his offering. It was now a month later, and as the days passed into weeks his department became more mechanical.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

As these lines are being written a flash comes over the ticker that an attempt has been made on the life of the Soviet minister to Estonia, a white guard satrapy of Great Britain on the Baltic. Thus the international campaign of assassination under the direction of the British government goes forward while the same government hypocritically pretends to be anxious to save civilization from the Soviet "menace" which persists in interfering in the domestic business of their countries.

THE young white guardist who assassinated the Soviet ambassador to Warsaw has been let off with a 15 year sentence which will no doubt be afterwards commuted to a shorter term. Indeed it is safe to predict that this murderer will not suffer the prison hardships imposed on ordinary offenders against the laws of the land. This is as we predicted recently in THE DAILY WORKER. The assassins of Soviet officials are looked upon as heroes by the imperialists and yet there are alleged friends of Russia either so naive or so dishonest that they express disappointment at the steps the Soviet government is taking in defending itself against the white terrorists.

THAT the assassination campaign is only part of the conspiracy against the Soviet Union can be seen from the Geneva dispatches that were prominently displayed in all the papers yesterday morning. That England is using diplomacy as well as the assassin's bullet against the U.S.S.R. is amply proved by recent events. Fortunately for the peace of the world and for the security of the Soviet Union the conflicts between different interests inside the capitalist states and the clashes between the various states, a hostile united front is difficult of consummation.

THE amazing thing is, in view of the provocation offered to the Soviet Union that even capitalist editors would have the impudence to accuse Moscow of provoking war. At the same time the Soviet government is in a position to defend itself and is ready to resort to all necessary measures to save the fruits of the revolution earned by the blood of the flower of her proletariat and peasantry.

IT is not surprising that the New York Times, owned by the bovine Ochs should constantly attack the Soviet Union at every available opportunity, but what about the liberal World? The latter is carrying on an editorial campaign against the U.S.S.R. and takes the position that if the Soviet Union is for peace it should die rather than shed any blood in its own defense. It would be rewarded in heaven.

IT is true that the meek inherit the earth—six feet of it, with their toes pointed to heaven and the worms having a glorious time exploring their decaying anatomies. Only when in that blissful state do they get a share of the common heritage, but those who would have their rights, must be ready to fight for them. As Arthur Brisbane pointed out in his column yesterday (for once in several months Arthur said something sensible) the threats of the League of Nations against the Soviet Union may be as effective as the alliance of European kings against the French Revolution. The Revolution licked them all.

REPRESENTATIVE Walter Vail 'of Denver, a member of the house committee on foreign affairs on returning from a visit to Spain observed that the sum of a million dollars was too much money for the site and building of our ambassador's palace at Madrid. We did not know that our ambassador in that beautiful land had any other business except providing American dancing partners for Alfonso. Why not put the money in dance halls and send our Spanish ambassador to an ollier country?

IT appears the the A. F. of L. labor fakers who are strikebreaking against the fur workers have not been able to deliver the goods. They volunteered to send thousands of trade unionists into the picket lines of the pickets who were unable to cope with the mass picketing of the strikers. The police were not, but the trade unionists did not respond to the call to come out and cook on their fellow workers. There are many things that a conservative union man may do because of lack of knowledge of the facts of the situation, but plain

LONDON, June 17.—That terrorist acts were directly instigated by Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the British die-hard Government, was learned today from confessions made of Sydney Riley, captured British spy. He said that he had received instructions from Churchill before leaving for the Soviet Union.

In a letter written by Riley, organized large-scale terrorism is advocated. "I am sure that terroristic acts on a large scale would make a great impression and arouse hope of the early fall of Bolshevism," the letter says.

K K K Expects Permit From Commr. Warren To Parade July 4th

Paul M. Winter, organizer for the Ku Klux Klan in Queens, announced yesterday that he expected to receive a permit from Police Commishioner Warren for a klan parade on July 4.

Whether official permission will be given or not is not yet known, tho Warren declared after klansmen had clashed with police in Queens during their Memorial Day parade that he would forbid all demonstrations in the future.

In magistrate's court Wednesday four of the klukers were freed of the charge of attacking the cops, and one was continued in $1,500 bail.

Landlords Free to Defy Tenement Law Witnesses Testify

Landlords violate the tenement house law with perfect immunity. Out of 2,139 case in Brooklyn magistrates' courts since the first of the year only convictions were found against only 18.

This was revealed yesterday during hearings before the Tenement House Commission.

Joseph H. Fink, secretary of the Housing Committee of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities bitterly attacked the recommendations made yesterday by the Real Estate Board which would sanction windowless rooms, interior bathrooms and no fire-escapes in converted single-family houses.

Bernard Newman, a Philadelphia housing expert, warned the commission of the terrific fire hazard created by cheap wooden houses in various sections of Brooklyn.

MANY DELEGATES WARN UNIONS NOT TO HELP THE STRIKEBREAKING POLICE

Denounce Circular Sent by Woll, McGrady and Frayne Asking Aid in Fight on Furriers

Action of A. F. of L. Committee Described As "Stupid, Childish and Ridiculous"

The local trade union movement has gone on record in opposition to the strikebreaking activities of Matthew Woll and Edward F. McGrady.

At a regular meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council held Thursday evening at Beethoven Hall they let it be known that they disapprove of the role the A. F. of L. is playing in their attempt to break the furriers' strike.

Ryan Raps Committee.

The council passed a vote of confidence in Joseph P. Ryan, their president, who stated that he refused to identify himself with the "special reorganization committee" which the A. F. of L. appointed to disrupt the furriers' organization.

The motion for the vote of confidence was made by Abraham Lefkowitz.

The discussion arose through a circular which Woll, Frayne and McGrady sent to the New York unions in which they asked, on behalf of the State Federation of Labor and the Central Trades and Labor Council, that protests be sent to the mayor and the police commissioner about their "leniency in dealing with the strike situation."

In the circular the previous accusations of the committee were reiterated, stating that the New York police are friendly towards the striking furriers and that the former were bribed by them.

Ryan was of the same opinion as a whole group of delegates who declared that none of these accusations could be proved. Ryan further pointed to the fact that Police Commissioner Warren himself had repeatedly asked for further proofs and that these were not forthcoming.

Pennsylvania Workers Resist Wage Cut

CHESTER, Pa., June 17.—Police of this city are desperately aiding the Irving Worsted Mill whose workers are talking unionism and threatening to strike against a wage cut of from five to ten per cent throughout the mill. Already 17 wool sorters are on strike and other departments are talking of going out. There are some 8,000 mill workers in this city who are very much discontented with their lot and considerable agitation for unionization is being carried on.

This morning five men were arrested by police before the mill gates for distributing circulars advertising a meeting of silk workers for this evening. The bosses fear the sentiment for action will be so strong that they will have a strike on their hands. Those arrested were Frank Feldman, Arthur Stats, James Reed, Morris Goldberg and Pat Devine. Three of the men were held under $2,000 bail and the other two on $1,000 each, which was secured and the men are all released prepared to take up the fight against the bosses at this evening's meeting of workers.

Unless We Win Our Appeal

WILLIAM F. DUNNE goes back to jail, David Gordon remains in the reformatory and our fine of Five Hundred Dollars stands. Through our energetic efforts we have thus far succeeded. We have secured the release of Comrade Dunne on bail. We have secured the release of Comrade Gordon also. Comrade Miller was given only a suspended sentence. It is very evident that the courts have bitten off more than they can chew. The case against The DAILY WORKER has involved them in a maze of legal technicalities, concerning the entire question of press censorship.

Let us press forward our advantage. Let us hit hard. The success of our appeal proceedings will be a mortal blow against the Professional Patriots, who thought they could easily destroy us. It will mean more than that. It will mean The DAILY WORKER has struck a blow for the freedom of the press from the interference of the self-constituted censors of public opinion. Remember that every contribution you send in now helps us to build up a strong case for our appeal. Appeal proceedings are expensive under capitalism, of course. Let us close our ranks all the tighter and by a renewed and greater effort carry through our case to victory.

Joint Board Given Drumhead Trial But Gold Still Able to Puncture All Charges

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Charters of the four New York unions and the Joint Board, representing three-fourths of the total membership of the International Furriers' Union, were revoked today by a so-called furriers' convention under the orders of Matthew Woll, acting president of the National Civic Federation.

Delegates from Toronto, Winnipeg and Philadelphia left the hall rather than give the color of legality to a vote dominated by the right wing "delegates" from the fake reorganized unions in New York. Forty-three bona fide delegates, representing New York, Newark, Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago are leaving tonight for New York to report to the striking fur workers on the fraud and farce of the so-called International convention.

Earlier in the afternoon a committee waited on President Green to test his sincerity in his letter to the Toronto Joint Board in which he approved the movement for peace and unity within the union.

The vote expelling the New York unions and upholding the General Executive Board's act in expelling 33 leading militants in New York came after five days of warfare in which the machine leaders quarreled bitterly among themselves. President Schachtman, utterly discredited by Manager Ben Gold in his dramatic speech before the so-called convention yesterday, announced today he will not be a candidate for re-election. A New York right winger, Stetsky, is slated for election before the convention closes tomorrow.

It was also charged that Lorenzo de Maria, head of the monopoly had gone to the offices of dealers in Far Rockaway and demanded that they raise their price from ninety cents for 300 pounds of ice to $1.25, so that local dealers, members of the "union" complied.

Reports from Canton state that the right wing officialdom is making every effort to crush the groups of Nationalists sympathizers operating in and near the city. Labor leaders and Hankow sympathizers are being executed daily. No news has yet been received about the four armies recently dispatched by the Hankow Government against Chiang Kai-shek.

Bids For U. S. Support

Reports received from Nanking state that Chiang Kai-shek will send a representative to the United States in an open bid for American support. Chiang Kai-shek is in financial difficulties and is unable to pay his troops. It is believed that the most important function of the representative will be to raise money.

It is rumored that Chiang will give American business men promises of valuable concessions in return for funds.

Memoirs of a Revolutionist

By Vera Figner

VERA FIGNER is now seventy-five years old and is living in Moscow. She joined the Revolutionary Movement fifty-five years ago, and has lived to see the overthrow of the autocracy and the establishment of workers' rule in Russia.

Vera Figner is one of the last Revolutionary Mohicans. She was a member of the famous Narodnaya Volya in the 70's, and in 1881 participated in the assassination of Tsar Alexander II. She spent two years in the Fortress of St. Peter and Paul, and though completed to death, her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in the Schlusselburg Fortress. She spent twenty years in solitary confinement in that famous citadel of which some of the greatest revolutionary spirits were imprisoned.

In her book translated for the first time into English, she tells the story of her youth and how she became a revolutionist. She describes the early Revolutionary Movement in Russia and gives a graphic picture of her life in the Fortress during the twenty years she was confined there.

Every revolutionary home should have a copy of this book. In it is given the life story of a great revolutionist and idealist.

Brooklyn Plumbers and Bosses Discuss New Pact, Monday

Conferences between representatives of the Brooklyn plumbers and the Master Plumbers' Association will be held Monday, it is believed. Jay Gee, of 41 Union Square, New York, which is preparing to conduct a tour to Russia on July 14.

In connection with the U.S.S.R. Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, World Tourists has arranged to take a group of Americans to Leningrad and Moscow for a general sight-seeing trip, and a study of social and economic conditions.

According to J. Jampoel, manager of the tour, no word has been received from Russia that there are any conditions existing which would make the visit of the party impossible, or even unwelcome. Plans are proceeding without change to set out on July 14, sailing on the Swedish-American liner "Gripsholm" direct for Leningrad.

This will be the first general tour to Russia in ten years, and it is attracting a wide-spread interest. The party is limited to 100 people.

JERSEY COSSACKS WANTON, BRUTAL, SAYS PROSECUTOR

14 Troopers Tried for Meaney Murder

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 17.—The New Jersey state constabulary today came in for a violent denunciation by public prosecutor Alters, who demanded that a verdict of manslaughter be returned against 14 troopers charged with the killing of Miss Beatrice Meaney, December 31.

Fired Shot All Night.

The young woman was shot when the troopers poured a flood of bullets into her farmhouse following an attempt to serve a warrant against her brother, charged with underfeeding his cattle.

"There was absolutely no justification for the wanton use of force under the circumstances," Alters declared.

The case went to the jury late this afternoon.

Austrian Mail Strike May Follow Break in Postal Negotiations

VIENNA, June 17.—A strike of postal, telegraph and telephone officials is imminent in Austria, unless the postal administration, which has been carrying on negotiations with its employes, can come to some satisfactory settlement with them on the basis of increased rates for overtime, night-work and Sunday-work, as well as concessions to other more minor demands.

$20 for tickets has been received from Stamford, Conn., for the Coney Island Stadium Concert. The workers of Stamford promise to buy more tickets and to attend the Concert to be held July 16th.

In addition to Stamford, Philadelphia, Boston, Newark, Jersey City, Yonkers, and many other cities and towns will be represented. This Concert will be the scene of a vast international demonstration of workers in America against the betrayal of the McGrady and Sigmans and for a class working class movement.

Not only will it be a great demonstration, but the affair itself will be the finest musical event of the season. The New York Symphony Orchestra with Ernz Rapper of the Roxy Theatre has been obtained for the occasion. A World Famous Ballet with a select group of opera stars will also be on the program.

Tickets are $1.00 and $2.00 for reserved seats. Buy them now. Proceeds from the tickets goes for the striking furriers, and the money is needed now. The best reserved seats will be sold first.

RUSH TO DEFENSE OF WHITE SPIES; TORIES TALK WAR

pandemic, five imperialist powers, led by the die-hard British Government, have decided to send notice to the Soviet Union, pointed out that "these suspicions have created an unfavorable impression."

Preceding this declaration Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, with an eye on an invasion of the Soviet Union, asked Dr. Stresseman for the views of the German Government on the passage of troops across Germany should Britain declare war on the Soviet Union.

Although the British Government made an attempt to deny that the fabricated murderous spy spies in its employ, the notes of protest are regarded as substantiating Soviet evidence. In the Soviet communique issued before the execution evidence was submitted proving that white guard spies were in the employ of Great Britain and had been commissioned by members of the British government to foment revolts and to carry on a campaign of terrorism.

Britain Menaces Peace

In reply to British charges of "Soviet propaganda," M. Chicherin, Soviet Foreign Minister on his way to Moscow is understood to have advised German officials that if there is any menace to European peace thru propaganda that Great Britain is the aggressor. He is also said to have charged that Great Britain has solidified the powers in an anti-Soviet bloc.

Poland Rejects USSR Demands

MOSCOW, June 17.—Poland has already rejected two of the three Soviet requests made in notes concerning the murder of Peter Voikoff, Soviet Minister to Poland, says the Izvestia, official Soviet organ today. The light sentence passed on Volkoff's murderer and the Polish disregard of the Soviet demands will provoke the just indignation of the people of the USSR, the editorial says.

Pointing out that the Pilsudski Government had not permitted the Soviet Union to participate in the trial and that it had passed an extremely mild sentence upon Volkoff's murderer, the Izvestia says:

"The Soviet Union awaits Poland's attitude toward the third demand namely the liquidation of the White Guard terrorist organizations in Poland, before drawing final conclusions concerning how far the Polish Government's avowed desire for good neighborly relations with the Soviet Union conforms with the facts."

Guided By Britain

Other newspapers here describe the sentence passed on Volkoff's murderer as a proof that Poland is acting under the direction of tory Britain. They point to the execution of a number of workers younger than Kowcedz, Volkoff's murderer, accused of assaulting a policeman and to the savage jail terms meted out persons guilty of passing out leaflets criticizing the Pilsudski regime.

Bare More Plots.

Soviet police are baring more anti-Soviet plots, many of them, it is believed, instigated by Great Britain.

Captain Klepikov, former commander of a battleship in the Baltic fleet, was executed today following conviction in the admiralty courts in Leningrad on charges of espionage for Great Britain.

Klepikov delivered Soviet navel information to British agents. Mme. Klepikov was sentenced to three years imprisonment for aiding her husband.

Three Polish spies were sentenced to terms of eight years imprisonment in Minsk.

St. Louis Fails to Turn Out for Flier Feted by Military

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—The Lindbergh celebration here fell rather flat. Only about 6,000 people were out to greet the flier on his loudly heralded return to the city that sent him to France.

The leaders of the pre-arranged celebration blame the poor turnout on the rain, there having been slight showers during the day, but even the Chamber of Commerce backers of Lindbergh have, some of them, expressed considerable pique over the way in which St. Louis adventure into high class advertising was taken advantage of by the army and navy, various statesmen and politicians, and everybody but the business men of St. Louis.

Lindbergh's recent definite switch to the side of "preparedness" and his advocacy of a big war fleet for the air has given a color of justice to the army's claim that he is their man, and has further buried the aspiring hopes of St. Louis that some increased commerce and more settlers will come its way.

ROCHESTER, Pa., June 17.—Because he rejected the fictions of the virgin birth of Mary and the resurrection of Christ, Rev. Frank Smith was ousted from the Lutheran ministry.

Henry Ford Aid Asked by White Guardists in Plot Against Chicherin

MOSCOW, June 17.—That White Guards attempted to secure aid from Henry Ford in the organization of murder and arson that they are waging against the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union, was made public today by the Soviet government.

The information was obtained from George Elvengren, captured spy.

Elvengren confessed that the White Guards had attempted to secure the support of Henry Ford for a plot to murder Georges Chicherin, Soviet Minister of Foreign Affairs. The white guardists attempted to get money from America thru the Grand Duke Cyril.

2,500 PAINTERS OF BROOKLYN TO RESUME STRIKE

Bosses' Injunction Will Expire Sunday

2,500 Brooklyn painters will resume their strike Monday morning.

The walkout was declared April 4, but was halted by an injunction granted to a group of painter bosses by Judge Stephen Callahan of the supreme court. In applying for the court order the employers declared that the strike was in violation of an agreement with the men which they asserted, was to expire on June 19.

Registration Today

With the expiration of the injunction a call has been sent out by the Brooklyn district council ordering them to quit their work, and report for registration this morning.

An increase of $2 a day is asked by the workers.

U.S. Ambassador Greets Mussolini on Return of Pinedo, Fascist Aviator

ROME, June 17.—Mussolini today received a message from U. S. Ambassador Fletcher expressing "the congratulations of President Coolidge and the American people on the successful conclusion of De Pinedo's flight."

The fascist flyer, a special favorite of the black shirt chief, has just completed a four-continent aeroplane flight. De Pinedo made stops in hundreds of cities, the occasion being utilized for fascist propaganda.

Manager Weil has called a two hours' meeting of the general executive board of the Joint Board of Furriers Union, to consider the New York chairmen. He declared the trade interests of New York would be endangered if the United Hat is to break the furriers strike at the same hour that New York Trades and Labor Council officials were declaring that "conference would do nothing of the sort. He recapitulated all the alleged sins of the Joint Board, even to the point of reading a faked letter from Morty Ellington, fur importer, who participated in the settlement of the 1926 strike.

Gold challenged Weil to permit a referendum vote of the New York membership and again invited the bona fide delegates to come to New York to investigate for themselves the truth of the situation there.

Schachtman rose to unexpected oratorical heights in defending himself against Gold's assertions that he had sanctioned the 1926 strike and had been an active leader in its earlier stages.

"Ben Gold wants to become the Zinoviev of America," Schachtman declared, displaying his own astute knowledge of who's who in the Soviet Union. "He wants to lead an Amalgamated Needle Trades' Union."

Gold punctured that statement with the declaration that he was ready to resign the editorship of the New York Joint Board Furrier, if the International Executive Board would give him the same privilege. The latter also allowed no rebuttal and was excluded from today's session.

Real Delegates Leave.

Harry Engleman and other genuine delegates left the so-called convention this afternoon when Englender was denied the right to amend the Executive Board report and to read a statement regarding the farcical proceedings.

The vote was taken immediately thereafter, all still left in the "convention" unanimous. There were 64 voting aye. Of these, 42 represented the fake New York delegation and other delegates contested by the Joint Board, while the others represented small out of town locals dominated by the International through its financial subsidies to them.

Cleveland Women To Meet Thursday

CLEVELAND, June 17.—The Women Workers' Progressive League of Cleveland is again getting on the job. Women in Ohio earn on the average of $13.80 a week, which is not enough to even pay for the board and room of a single woman, and means that the married woman has little to take home to the family. More and more women are entering industry, owing to the low pay of their husbands, and they are being exploited more than the men.

Several local issues, such as the failure of the school board to furnish proper playgrounds for working class children, will give the women a well-rounded program of work.

The next meeting of the Women Workers' Progressive League will be held on Thursday, June 23, at 8 p. m. at 5927 Euclid Ave., Room 13.

Volkoff Memorial, Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wisc., June 17.—"Why was Comrade Volkoff Killed?" will be the topic of a lecture to be given in the Russian language in Milwaukee on Saturday, June 25, at 8 P. LOCKOUT AND STRIKE CHARGED TO ATTACK SIGMAN BETRAYAL

Urge Needle Workers to Continue Struggle.

The latest attempt by Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union to use the bosses as a weapon to defeat the cloak and dressmakers is exposed in a statement issued yesterday by the Shop Chairmen's Council of the cloak and dress industry.

The statement, in full, reads:

"Abram Sigman has declared four months ago that all the cloak and dressmakers are registered with him, but he now, on the 37th week of the struggle, called a conference with the bosses, pleading with them to compel their workers to register.

"Sigman has no little faith in the workers that he considers them simple minded enough to believe that a union can ask favors of the bosses and at the same time confirm the union conditions provided for in the agreement, which has hitherto been completely disregarded. It is common knowledge to every worker here that Sigman caused and will not enforce the conditions of the agreement, because he has long ago given up the most important union conditions to the bosses as a price for their official recognition of his dead union.

Cannot Terrorize Workers.

"To Sigman's new attempt with the aid of the bosses to force the registration of the cloak and dressmakers to register against their will by threatening them with starvation, it will have as little significance to the outcome of the struggle as his former drives. The members are against Sigman and even if forced to register they will not become a part of the Sigman clique, will not accept his order, nor pay dues to the scab union.

"It is high time that the present heads of the International should learn to understand the simple fact that by methods of bull-dozing and coercion they cannot succeed in winning over the members. The Sigman clique still believes that it can hide its treacheries and provocations from the workers by the smoke-screen of Communism.

Will Continue Struggle.

"After the new drive for registration will be over, Sigman and his lieutenants will once more realize that the members are determined to continue the struggle until they have won the right to control the affairs of their own union and establish a strong and powerful organization, able to enforce the agreement for which they fought and struggled on the picket line.

"The Sigmans, the Schachtmans and the McGradys will sooner or later have to recognize the fact that even with the fullest support of the bosses they will not be able to force their hated and discredited leadership on the members.

Solidify Ranks.

"We call on all cloak and dressmakers to once more solidify their ranks in the present emergency and to strengthen their committees for self defense, and drive the gangster hands hired by the Sigmans, Shachtmans and McGradys out of the markets.

"The cloak and dressmakers will give the proper answer to the latest manoeuvres of Sigman and the bosses. The affairs of the union are the concern of the workers only, and they will be settled without the aid of the bosses."

Committee of 50 in Plea for Ending of Needle Trade Fight

The committee of 50 appointed at a mass meeting of cloak and dressmakers in Cooper Union, on May 23 has sent an appeal to workers' organizations, communal institutions, literary and cultural associations asking for their assistance in ending the struggle in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The statement tells of past struggles in the union and the need of ending them, how the committee wrote to the international officials and the New York Joint Board and the respectful hearing they received from the latter and how they were thrown out of the office of Morris Sigman.

"That the president of our International should allow himself to throw out loyal members from the office of their own union," the statement reads, "but even listening to what they have to say, is but an indication to what state of moral degradation our union has been reduced under the present administration."

U. S. has No Peace Plan.

GENEVA, June 17.—The United States will not present a definite disarmament plan for naval disarmament at the tri-partite naval disarmament conference which opens here on June 20, it was indicated today by Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation to the conference.

Call Gun Truce in Mine District; Arrest Shooting of Strikers

PITTSBURGH, Pa., (FP) June 17.—Coal and iron police are preparing a reign of terror in the coal areas around Pittsburgh, ordered by the coal strike. Strikers, miners and strikers and their families being evicted from their shabby dwellings here, by deputy sheriffs on the orders of the coal bosses, with several thousand gunmen arming their workers and doubling their guards, the whole region is taking on the appearance of bitter warfare.

Not far behind the privately paid coal and iron police is sheriff Braun of Allegheny county who has armed his deputies with high-powered rifles and given orders to kill strikers who may be armed. Coal and iron police admit having fired repeatedly at strikers, who in several instances have sought to defend themselves.

Union officials have advised Braun to watch the coal and iron police.

MINERS SHOCKED WHEN LEWIS SAYS THEY ARE LUCKY

CHARLEROI, June 17.—The miners here are still expressing their disgust over the speech made here by John L. Lewis, principle speaker at the rally at which the rank and file had hoped to hear some definite plan for breaking down the coal company terrorism here, and some heartening assurances that when they defy the orders of the sheriff and go on the picket, they would have the officials of their union with them.

Happy, Happy Miners.

Instead, Lewis and his henchmen, Phil Murray and Van Dittner, gave them a lecture on how well off they were. Lewis retiterated his famous declaration that the miners of America are the best paid workers in the world, getting not only far more than the miners of Europe, but drawing better money than the other skilled crafts.

Too many of the miners in the present lock-out have during their forced leisure come into contact with bricklayers and carpenters to fall for this line of talk, and the sorrowful silence with which the grey faced crowd listened to the fat Lewis' loud and patriotic heroics may have convinced even him that something is wrong with the old line of talk.

MANY DELEGATES WARN UNIONS NOT TO HELP THE STRIKEBREAKING POLICE

calf in the course of the debate was the anti-Communist delegate of the Teachers' Union, Abraham Lefkowitz, who termed the circular and the progressives of the American Federation of Labor in "reorganizing" the Furriers' Union as "stupid, childish and ridiculous."

"Do you mean to permit a McGrady or a Weil or whatever his name may be to come to New York and destroy our labor movement?" asked ex-Senator Lacey, who as a strike leader of the cloakmakers could testify from first hand experience the "friendliness" of the police. He brought out the fact that the police in this city were being asked by the A. F. of L. to practice their well known brutalities on striking workers. The internal strife must be settled by the workers themselves, he said.

Police Being Incited.

Preshil declared that the most one could say of the action was that it was "thoughtless." "The police are trying to tail us in fact," he said, "that we should go to the police and ask them to let loose with the greatest possible brutality against striking workers. It does not make any difference who these workers are. The American Federation of Labor should not have interfered in this local matter; rather, it should have been left to the local central body to find the right way out. We have here a case in which the police are being incited by an A. F. of L. committee against strikers."

Sullivan Refuses Signatures.

Ryan reported that the president of the State Federation of Labor, John Sullivan, was also urged to sign the circular and that he refused because he was not in accord with its contents. He then reported about a conference with Police Commissioner Warren and declared, "If we now demand imprisonment for Communists, what shall we do when we ourselves are in the same predicament? Should we expect consideration from the police?"

Urges Defiance of Officials.

Ryan urged the delegates and through them, all local unions in New York to take no notice of the circular sent out by the Weil committee and under no circumstances to protest to the city administration.

Amelia Lack of Activity.

When a report was given on the preparation for the Labor Day parade and it was announced that replies have been received from only five unions, Delegate Lacey bitterly attacked the absence of activities on the part of the council officials.

He assailed the lack of action, complaining that the council is not making an attempt to organize the workers nor do anything else of a constructive character.

member of the scab Greek union. He was arrested a week ago Tuesday for assaulting Alex Tappas, a striker. In spite of the fact that the screw driver he used in hitting the worker was produced in court, the strikebreaker was let go.

No strikers were arrested yesterday morning, the picketing taking place without any interference from the police.

Proof of Brutality.

Proof of police brutality against the striking fur workers were given to Police Commissioner Warren yesterday. In the form of affidavits they gave examples of specific cases where the workers were beaten up, in cases necessitating being taken to the hospital.

Deputy Inspector McGrath, in charge of police in the strike district, threatened to arrest the strikers wholesale in the future. "Next time they start mass picketing we are not going to run a few batches of them," he said; "but we're going to run them all in by the hundreds. We'll start their parade right for the West 30th St. police station and keep it going until it's all inside."

Well Attended Meeting.

Two large striking meetings were held yesterday afternoon at Webster Hall and Manhattan Lyceum. The speakers told of the action of the Central Trades and Labor Council in going on record in opposition to the policy of Matthew Woll.

The speakers included Charles Zimmerman, Louis Hyman, Isidor Shapiro, Meloch Epstein, Ben Lifthitz, Julius Portnoy, Fanny Warshafsky, and Juliet Stuart Poyntz.

RATIONAL LIVING
THE RADICAL HEALTH MONTHLY
B. Liber, M. D., Dr. P. H., Editor
At last it begins to be successful. Our sacrifices have not been in vain. Splendid response to our call. No, we're in no danger of becoming popular; only intelligent people have sent in the many new subscriptions.

If you're a worker you must know something about health from your own viewpoint. If a radical or revolutionist you can't postpone health until after the social revolution; your efficiency in the work for your ideal is diminished through ignorance. Are you a health owner? You're blind to all points of view but your own; you must free yourself from "health" prejudices and be intolerant of new and misbehaved and think you know it all? You are not going to have ignorance or error in real health matters, how you suffer through your ignorance and how your efficiency is thus hampered through handicaps which a rational viewpoint may prevent or correct.

Rational Living is a revelation in thought, personal life, hygiene and treatment of disease. It contains ideas taken from everywhere; but, not fitting into any system, they form a new philosophy.

A magazine published at a loss. No paid advertisements. No doctors, drugs, operations, quack methods to recommend. Its aim is to teach the reader how to become independent from them as possible.

JUNE ISSUE SOLD OUT. Use a copy 3 months' trial subscription $1. One sample copy free in five months.

REPORT OF CONVENTION MONDAY EVENING; BIG FOR PICKET LINE TO START WEEK

A report of the furriers' convention will be given Monday evening right after work at Cooper Union. The Joint Board delegates will tell in great detail what took place in Washington. The meeting will also protest against the mass arrests on the picket line.

In a statement issued yesterday the Joint Board calls upon all fur workers to be on the picket line Monday morning. It is the intention of the union to hold the biggest demonstration ever arranged this Monday.

Striking Barbers Picket 500 Shops

Enthusiastic mass meetings of the 2,000 striking New York barbers were held yesterday afternoon in Lesis Hall, 53rd St. and Broadway, in the Amsterdam Ave. Inn, 156th St. and Amsterdam Ave., and a number of small halls.

Picketing of nearly 600 shops between 59th St., and 242nd St., on the West Side was reported at the meetings of the strikers yesterday.

"No conferences are being held with the bosses, union officials told The DAILY WORKER.

Right Wing Disrupters of Amalgamated Give Up Plan for Sacco Meet

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—The Philadelphia Sacco and Vanzetti Conference called by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers that noble attempt to split the labor movement and rend Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair, whose first meeting in April was distinguished by a wholesale expulsion of progressive and radical labor elements, has now capped the climax to its brilliant career.

After accomplishing nothing during two months except, through its executive committee, to plan for a mass meeting, it has now called off the mass meeting until hearing the verdict of Governor Fuller.

This sell-out of the two workers needs no comment. Fortunately for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, their case is being brought before the Philadelphia workers by two other thriving conferences, one of Italian organizations, and the other called by the International Labor Defense of these elements excluded from the Amalgamated Conference.

DAUDET'S ARREST "PAINS" PREMIER; CODDLED IN JAIL

Contrasting Brutality to Communist Editor

PARIS, June 17.—Leon Daudet, Royalist enemy of the French Republic, after his recent comic "surrender" to the police, is now in jail, where with the permission of the government, he will continue his scurrilous attacks on the Republic in his paper, "L'Action Francaise," in perfect immunity from ill-treatment.

On the contrary, Premier Poincare has assured Mme. Daudet, his aged mother, with whom the family the Premier at one time enjoyed a personal freindship, that he and his colleagues, to whom the decision to arrest Daudet had been most "painful," "have taken every measure to assure that your son be accorded every consideration possible." His wife has been allowed to make arrangements through the restaurant which supplies food to the prisoners, to allow M Daudet to have excellent food, and any delicacy he may crave.

The painful contrast between this coddling of the Royalist Daudet, and the brutal treatment accorded M. Semard, Communist editor of L'Humanite, and Secretary of the French Communist Party, is bitterly commented upon in the Communist and labor press of the country. M. Semard was recently arrested on a charge similar to that which finally landed Daudet in jail, and was rushed off to prison without being permitted to say goodbye to his wife and family.

Lutheran Pastor Fired For "Deadly" Thoughts

Britain Revives Locarno Dispute on Troop Movements Against Russia.

Austin Chamberlain, British foreign minister, has revived at the meeting of the council of the League of Nations at Geneva the question of Article 16 of the league covenant which Germany refused to accept at the Locarno "security" conference in 1925. This is the article which stipulates that any league member has the right to move troops through a neutral country in case of an attack by a third nation. At Locarno, Stresemann, German foreign minister, was plainly told by the Soviet foreign minister, Tchicherin, that the acceptance of Article 16 would be considered a hostile move against the Soviet Union. Although not specifically excluded from the Locarno pact, notes were exchanged between the various ministers after the signing of the treaty to the effect that the disputed article would not be operative in the Locarno pact.

Now Great Britain, foiled in its attempt to induce the other powers to join in an identic threatening note to Russia, makes the ridiculous suggestion that Stresemann agree to permit British troops to pass through Germany "in case of a Russian attack against Poland." Although Chamberlain, minister of the tory government of forgery, murder, provocation and rapine does not mention Locarno, his demand is nothing more nor less than an attempt to revise that pact, which originally was conceived as an attempt to unite capitalist Europe against revolutionary Russia.

But, like other propositions of the frenzied tories, trying to salvage their battered empire from the outside and avoid the fury of the opposition at home, there are too many complications involved in this maneuver. Aside from the fact that a war against Russia under a spurious slogan to "rescue Poland from the Soviets," would meet determined opposition from the militant workers of Britain, whom the tory government has been trying to reduce to a condition of abject slavery, as well as from the industrialists behind Lloyd George, the attempt to move British troops through Germany would meet with insurmountable obstacles. No German government that would permit such a thing could possibly last in face of the fury it would arouse. And if Britain attempts to transport troops through Germany they will meet with such fierce resistance from the class conscious workers, under the leadership of the Communist Party and the Red Front Fighters, that they will be hurled back into France or into the Baltic, (depending upon their route).

But, even if we concede the impossible, and grant that the tories could overcome the opposition at home and sneak in through the so-called free city of Danzig, there is still the Polish proletariat to consider. Recent elections have shown pronounced Communist gains, despite the illegal existence of the Party and the mighty batallions of the Red Army of the Soviet Union thundering over the borders toward Warsaw would unleash the pent-up fury on the part of the Polish masses for the foul, blood-streaked fascist government of Pilsudski, and blast it to its everlasting doom.

In spite of the elaborate plans of the league of ineffable infamy to create Poland as a perpetual buffer state between Red Russia and the revolutionary working class of Germany the mad scheme of the maniacal government of Britain to invade that territory would be the signal for the next wave of the world revolution, which would involve both Poland and Germany at once, and give such impetus to the revolutionary forces in France, Italy, Hungary and the Balkans that European capitalism would sink in the red flood, never to arise again.

Let the mad-dog of Europe continue its course of violence against the revolution and try by might to turn the course of history. The workers of Europe will extract its venom and break its fangs before it continues much farther on its rampage.

Might as Well Try to Teach History to Henry Ford.

A very well-meaning, but infantile historian of Maryland hopes to teach Calvin Coolidge some facts regarding the history of former presidents. Mr. Edward S. de la Plaine states that Coolidge, in a recent speech, showed a lack of American history when he said that John Adams nominated George Washington for president. According to De la Plaine, it was not Adams, but a former governor of Maryland, named Thomas Johnson. The Maryland historian furnishes unimpeachable documentary evidence to prove that Cal is a dumb regarding facts of history as he is about most things that other people of average intelligence regard as essential.

But why waste time on Coolidge's ignorance of history. As the low yegg in "Revelry" observed of Cal's predecessor: "He's the president, ain't he?" That is sufficient for modern purposes. Some people who have a sort of respect for exalted office, no matter who happens to occupy it, imagine that the very fact of occupying the presidential chair endows one with at least ordinary intelligence. Others wonder why modern presidents have been so devoid of elementary knowledge of the history of their own country; why pigmies of today replace the giants of the past. The answer cannot be found in the illusion of the great man theory, but has deep class roots. In the early days of this country the capitalist class was a revolutionary force and its spokesmen, whom it developed were men of courage, intelligence and initiative—leaders of the conflict fighting to establish their undisputed rule, agents of progress.

Today, however, that class has reached the point where its very existence imposes fetters upon further development of society. It is now a reactionary class and its statesmen are mere puppets, without vision, without brains, repeating dead formulas of the past to justify their reactionary present. The president of the United States is not a leader but a symbol of a class dictatorship. Behind the political puppets that parade through the White House today stand the bureaucratic machinery of Washington, composed of innumerable heads of departments, clerks, automatons of high and low degree who are permanent fixtures until they drop dead. This is the real government that does the bidding of Wall Street. Changes in the presidency and the cabinet only register the increasing or declining power of certain groups in the ranks of the capitalist class.

To try to teach a modern president history is as pointless a task as to waste time on Henry Ford whose most famous observation is "History Is Bunk!"

Downright strikebreaking is not one of them.

THE path of the teetotaller is strewn with popped corks. He would evade the blandishments of the demon rum nowadays, had better hire himself a nice little cloud several thousand feet in the air. Lindbergh, our perfect hero and the young man without stain on his character whose abhorrence of liquor induced millions of cowboys and flappers to dash their hip flasks against the nearest immovable object, is not as dry as he thot he was. The chief who supervised the, banquet given in his honor in the Savoy Hotel, London, is grief-stricken because he used many fine wines and liquors in preparing the viands not knowing that "Lindy" was a tee-totaller. Perhaps the chef is sore because the hero did not appreciate his booze.

A WAVE of economy is cutting thru the army like a shears thru a shirt. The quartermaster general reports that by cutting off a little here and there Uncle Sam can afford to spend an extra million bringing the blessings of American imperialism to backward peoples via guns, bombs and bayonets. It is all the private soldier's expense. If a soldier's coat-tail can be curtailed without undue exposure of the soldier's posterior, off it goes—the coat-tail.

IF the maker of breeches wore opera glasses when cutting his cloth, and there are not enough Arbuckles to fill the vacancies, the garments are reefed in thus saving the space between the soldier and the inner frontier of the breeches. Likewise, if a soldier of extravagant tendency feels inclined to throw away a hat when it gets to look like an inverted garbage pail, the quartermaster general takes the headgear and has it blocked. The quartermaster has done well. But why the lack of originality? A soldier has a stomach, which it costs Uncle Sam thirty cents a day to appease. Why not cut out the darned thing and save a few hundred millions that could be more profitably used manufacturing bombs for the against the next saucy Latin American country that thumbs its nose at us?

The Felon-Setter.

In ireland during the days of the Fenian revolutionary agitation against British rule there existed a type of degenerate that, in return for a small sum of money set the hounds of the government on the track of the national revolutionaries. Since the government branded all those who opposed its tyrannical rule as felons, the informers became known as felon-setters.

Those perverts were a hissing and a bye word in the mouths of all decent people and even the officials of the government that hired them turned from them in loathing and turned them away with a kick when they had reached the limit of their usefulness.

The felon-setter has now made his appearance in America, not meekly and humbly but brazenly and blatantly. He does not work for a pittance and he does not receive it from a nauseated master at the end of a pole. He is held in high esteem and more often than not he is an official or paid flunkey of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

The particular felon-setter that we are now referring to is no other than Chester M. Wright former socialist and once editor of the deceased "New York Call," later on the paid lackey of Sam Gompers and government stool-pigeon during the war, still later vendor of an oil stock that even the prosperous fakers of the higher reaches of the A. F. of L. officialdom would not exchange their money for, and back again at his old haunts purveying lies about the Soviet Union, Communism and the left wing of the labor movement, to a clientele chiefly composed of weekly "labor" sheets whose editors could not intelligently ask for a yearly subscription in writing.

Wright is reduced to the extremity of being obliged to do anything no matter how contemptible for a meal ticket. It is true that his descent into the depths of iniquity was rapid and comparatively painless for him. Having exhausted his rancid brain for falsehoods about the left wing in the trade union movement and as a relief from assisting the department of justice to prosecute the radicals he now essays the task of forcing the United States government to follow the example of the British government and drive thte personnel of the Soviet trading corporation known as Amtorg, out of the country.

This low fellow has even lost his head to the extent of expressing his displeasure at the American business men whose desire for profitable trading with the Soviet Union is responsible for the presence of Amtorg here. Wright must be pretty darned mad when he dares slap business on the wrist. What angers this lackey particularly is that all his loud howls have not induced the government to pay any more attention to him than it would to the wailing of an amorous tomcat in a back alley.

Because the government is the servant of business, all other things being equal, or in the absence of important political considerations, as long as American business men can make an honest dollar out of trade with the Soviet Union, Amtorg will stay and Wright will rave for his price.

The last time Wright left a sinecure on the A. F. of L. payroll he took to selling fake oil stocks. The next time he quits for the purpose of bettering himself he will probably organize an up-to-date detective agency.

What the Daily Worker Means to the Workers

More Encouraging Contributions to Our Emergency Fund.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., June 17.—The Workers Party Forum comes to assistance of The DAILY WORKER.

That The DAILY WORKER is dear to the hearts of the militant workers had a novel verification at the Sunday evening forum conducted by the Workers Communist Party on June 12th.

During the discussion period following the speech of Edgar Owens on American Policy in China, comrade J. Bacchus stated that the only authentic source of information on the Chinese situation was The DAILY WORKER and that since The DAILY WORKER was facing great financial difficulties at this time, something should be done about it and that he had $5.00 Dollars that he wished to send in. The response from the crowd was immediate and the spontaneous collection amounted to $30.30. This followed the regular forum collection.

Woll and Wollism Must Go

By BERT MILLER.

THE meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council last night expressed a rising revolt against a plague which is choking the very heart out of the American Labor movement. Delegate after delegate denounced the tactics of Matthew Woll, McGrady & Co. The keynote of the session, expressing the general sentiment of the assembled delegates and the New York Labor Movement as a whole, was struck by ex-Senator Martin Lacey, of the Teamsters' Union, who said, "do we want McGrady or Woll to wreck our labor movement?"

It has long been evident that the policy of Matthew Woll, who has completely disassociated himself, practically and ideologically from the fundamental aims and purposes of the labor movement, can only bring ruin to the trade union movement. Woll has lost the will to fight for even the most elementary demands of the workers. He is thoroughly soaked through with the spirit of the National Civic Federation and the employers, whom he represents in the labor movement. If this were not true, it is inconceivable how he could have the downright brazenness to demand that members of the American Federation of Labor, should trample under foot its time honored traditions, by calling upon the police to attack peaceful strikers, as he did in his circular letter to the local unions.

THIS suicidal policy aroused the resentment of even the most mild and conservative elements in the central body. The Woll letter and policy was repudiated by Joseph Ryan, the president of the body, who also claimed that John Sullivan, President of the State Federation of Labor was not in accord with it either. As delegates Prechtl, of the Brewery Workers' Union, Donnelly of Pressmen's Union No. 51, and Lefkowitz of the Teachers' Union well pointed out, the infamous Woll letter practically calls upon the police to use their clubs more viciously against the workers. The eyes of the honest elements in the trade union movement have been opened to the full significance of the situation by the statement quoted from Police Commissioner Warren, who asked how A. F. of L. strikers could be distinguished from others.

UNDER the cloak of fighting the Communists, Woll demands that the police he called upon to smash the heads of striking workers. Under the cloak of fighting the Reds, he takes the lead in establishing a precedent whereby the police may with impunity beat up and assault workers on the picket lines. He has thus clearly and indisputably placed himself in opposition to the aims and principles of the American Federation of Labor, which has consistently stood for the right to strike and picket. There is room in the American Federation of Labor for differences of opinion on many questions. But there is no room in that organization for a scoundrel, who uses his official position, to stab the labor movement in the back. Let us hope that the last meeting of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council will mark the beginning of a determined fight on the part of the progressive forces in that body against the menace of Woll and Wollism.

Young Workers Gladly Hail Comrade Crouch, Released From Prison

By FRED HARRIS.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A rousing welcome was given on Friday night by the Young Workers League and the local branch of the International Labor Defense to Paul Crouch, recently released from the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Alcatraz Island, San Francisco Bay.

A spontaneous crowd of soms three hundred comrades and friends, informally assembled, greeted Comrade Crouch with thunderning applause as he took the speakers stand to relate his experiences in Honolulu as a soldier in the American army. He dealt with the causes for his arrest, the court martial trial and subsequent conviction to serve a prison sentence of 35 years, which sentence was later, at the tremendous demand of the American working class, reduced to two years.

His imprisonment at Alcatraz Island was briefly described by Crouch at the end of which he made a rousing appeal to all class conscious workers to rally behind the International Labor Defense and to enlist as active fighters in the battle against capitalism.

Comrade Crouch appears to be in a good healthy condition both mentally and physically, is full of expectancy and anticipation, and looks forward to the victory of the working class when production for profit will have ceased and with the workers in the control of the machinery of production, the factories and shops will be run for the use of the toilers and when parasitic capitalists will be in prison instead of the workers.

Paul Crouch, together with Walter Trumbull, both privates in the U. S. Army, stationed at Honolulu were arrested in 1925, for being members of the Young Workers League and for having disseminated Communistic literature among their fellow soldiers.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

UNLESS the working class of Europe, and particularly those of England, France and Germany are in a position to block the conspiracy of the war-crazy imperialists against the Soviet Union, we are on the eve of another conflagration which may bring about the birth of a new social order or reduce the workers of the world and the oppressed colonial peoples to a new low level of exploitation.

THE tory government of England, driven to desperation by the upbuilding of the people of China and the second loss of her world trade sees in the destruction of the Soviet Union and the re-establishment of a diluted tsarism, with her agents running the show, her only means of salvation from the doom that faces her. This is the explanation of her mad desire to forge a ring of hostile states against Russia preparatory to waging war.

LET no one make the mistake that there will be no war in the near future because the capitalist powers have not yet fully recovered from the last war. This is a delusion. England does not seem to think that she is incapable of waging war. If she is able to placate Germany at the expense of France; if she is able to throw a bone to Italy without endangering French interests; if she is able to satisfy the clashing ambitions of the small and large bandit powers in Europe and thruout the world, there will be a war against Russia. England will stake her all on it and only the workers of the world can prevent it.

IT is reported that Chiang Kai-shek, the former Kuomintang general who betrayed his cause and joined the imperialists, is about to appeal to the United States for recognition of the Nanking regime. He denies that he will join Chang Tso-lin, the polygamous Manchurian bandit, who is now ruling at Peking with the aid of the executioner's sword. The papers barely give a word to the Hankow regime, but judging by past silences it is safe to assume that the revolutionary armies are making headway and that as soon as Lindbergh gets out of the city we will hear good news.

THERE is now room on the front pages of the capitalist press for other news besides the effusions of politicians over the "Lindy" flight to Paris. We learn that our president, Calvin Coolidge, caught seven trout in a South Dakota lake and that one of them weighed one pound fourteen ounces. We are inclined to believe that "Cal" would prefer to have caught or recovered seven insurgent votes.

THERE was a good Coolidge story in the papers recently, I am told, and how it escaped me is beyond my comprehension, since I read the press carefully for such juicy morsels. It is said that the president was requested to speak from the rear of his observation car somewhere along the route, and having in mind his Hammond, Ind., effort, Coolidge decided that his old reliable policy of saying nothing was the better part of oratory. A bright idea struck him and he brought forth his dog who barked mildly at the audience. The farmers were delighted and gave the president an ovation.

NOW we have an inkling of the solution of a mystery that has been bothering the editors of our papers since Coolidge first occupied the White House. Who is the president's spokesman? Even such usually well-informed senators as the scatalongued Reed of Missouri announced his senatorial ignorance of this official's identity from the senate floor. Perhaps it was the president's spokesman that barked for his master on the way to the Black Hills of South Dakota.

COLLEGE presidents have received a terrible shock from the fact that Charles Lindbergh, our newest and most beloved hero, was pitched out of Wisconsin University because of his inability to acquire any of the various brands of knowledge served by that seat of learning to its customers. Almost every other industry got something out of "Lindy." What a gold mine it would be for the University of Wisconsin if its president could say that Lindbergh learned to make speeches there!

TALKING ABOUT DISARMAMENT AND PEACE

Today, at four o'clock, in Geneva, the Coolidge "disarmament" conference will meet. England, U. S. and Japan will be officially represented; France and Italy will be represented only by "observers." The conference will be partly for the purpose of forcing France to cut down her submarine fleet so that England can smash her when necessary to stop her competition in steel and check her progress in the Balkans. The U. S. capitalists rely on their superior wealth, and ability to build ships faster than European countries, and therefore took the initiative in calling the "disarmament" conference.

Report of Convention Will Be Given Furriers At Big Meeting Tonight

A report of the furriers' "convention" will be given at a meeting tonight, immediately after work at Cooper Union. The Joint Board delegates will tell in detail just what took place at Washington. The members of the Unity Committee will also be present and address the meeting.

MITTENS TAKING REST OF BANKS OFF BROTHERHOOD

CLEVELAND, June 19.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Convention here will be presented with a project to hand over to the Company Union outfit, the Mitten Management, Inc. of Philadelphia, all Brotherhood banks and real estate projects, except those already sold out to capitalists.

The Mittens, who have already taken over the union bank in Philadelphia, are in the market for the rest of them, and the delegates to the convention will be quietly tipped off that the propositions are on the verge of ruin. The possibility that mismanagement had a great deal to do with their ruin will not be emphasized, but all those on the inside will strongly suspect it.

The end seems near for Grand Chief Stone's most noted project of class collaboration, but the end comes thru the inefficiency of those who were most anxious to make such things work.

Brotherhood financial institutions involved in the proposed merger are:

UNITY COMMITTEE FORMED AT THE WASHINGTON "CONVENTION" GOING TO LEAD FUR PICKET LINE TODAY

48 Delegates Representing Bulk of Oragnized Workers Will Then Hold Conference

The picket line in the fur district this morning will be led by 48 seated and unseated delegates who have just arrived here from the Washington "convention" of the International. According to all indications the demonstration today will be of major size.

At 10 a. m. the Unity Committe organized at Washington will hold a meeting at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th St. The 48 delegates who represent the bulk of the organized fur workers of the United States and Canada will be present.

Will Lead Pickets.

"Matthew Woll must not-be allowed to boss the New York labor movement," asserted Harry Englander of Toronto, secretary of the Unity Committee yesterday. "Forty-eight delegates to the recent Washington 'convention' of the International Fur Workers' Union will be on the picket line Monday morning. They will be there in spite of all the attempts made by Woll to use the police to break the strike.

"These 48 delegates have organized a permanent organization to stop the internal strife in the International. It is the purpose of our group to bring unity in the ranks of the fur workers.

"The Unity Committee intends to reach every local in the United States and Canada and expose the union breaking policy of Woll. We will give the furriers an opportunity to see in a true light these men who are ruining our union and at the same time using it as an instrument to advance the interests of the bosses.

Open Air Meeting.

More than 4,000 needle workers, mostly women, held a demonstration Saturday afternoon at Rutgers Square and East Broadway. At the end the workers passed by the Jewish Daily Forward building, displaying their wrath at the strikebreaking acts of that newspaper.

The speakers were A. Zirlin, Margaret Cowl, Rebecca Grecht, Kate Gitlow, Fanny Warshafsky, Esther Polansky, Juliet Stuart Poynts, Pauline Morgenstein and Lena Goodman. Rose Wortis, presided.

USSR PRESS RAPS POLISH SENTENCE ON WHITE SLAYER

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, June 18 (Delayed).—The press continues to express dissatisfaction with the verdict of the extraordinary tribunal in the case of Voikoff's assassination.

The "Pravda" points out that the tribunal, especially by its request for the commutation of the sentence, did everything possible to emphasize its indulgent attitude towards such criminals.

"The gesture of the tribunal," says the "Pravda", "is a challenge to the public opinion of the Soviet Union. The Polish government has shown that it does not desire to fulfill the minimal demands of the Soviet Union and it has taken no measures to conduct an adequate investigation of the case. On the contrary, the tribunal has exerted all efforts in order that the murder which was prearranged as "an act of individual vengeance" should not be refuted by the judiciary inquest.

"The Polish government once more emphasized that in order to preserve friendship with the reactionaries, the elements of old Tsarist Russia, it will not hesitate to still further strain relations with the people of the Soviet Union.

"Rabochaia Gazeta" considers that the Polish government jumped at the bait offered by the British diplomats. The verdict will encourage intrigues instead of prevent the future activities of the mercenary whiteguardist assassins.

Subway Gang Fears Walkout

NEW $4,000,000 B.-M. T. SWINDLE IS MADE PUBLIC

Shy Witnesses Face Court Action?

A new traction swindle reaching to no less than $4,000,000 in the form of a "bonus" to the B.-M. T. is being planned by the officials of the company, it was charged Saturday by Samuel Untermyer in a letter which he addressed to former governor Nathan L. Miller, their attorney.

The B.-M. T. has made application for an issue of $20,000,000 in bonds to cover a so-called expenditure for new equipment which the company has been ordered to procure by the New York State Transit Commission.

Easy Profit.

In the past such permission was granted as a matter of course, but due to the present financial feud between the traction gang and Untermyer's committee, the necessary permission will not be forthcoming immediately.

The graft scheme of the company is laid bare by the fact that the bonds will be issued at par, sold to themselves at the nominal figure of $80 per share. Under the present active demand for these securities there is no doubt that they will in a very short time be able to dispose of them to the public at $100 a share, thereby realizing an initial "bonus" of $4,000,000.

League Rotten, Says Europe.

BERLIN, June 19.—From Paris to Moscow to Budapest the opinion seems to be unanimous that the League of Nations session was a complete fiasco, and that the league itself has suffered another blow to its prestige.

Hungary is so chagrined over the postponement of the decision in its quarrel with Roumania, that it openly threatens to bolt from the league. The Budapest press, apparently inspired by the government, charges that the league has not even been able to keep the treaty of Trianon a scrap of paper.

BUY THE DAILY WORKER AT THE NEWSSTANDS

PUSH THE APPEAL

The professional patriots who have thus far succeeded in securing the imposition of the Five Hundred Dollar Fine against The DAILY WORKER, and jail sentences for members of the staff, would like nothing better than that we should now meekly accept the verdict and behave ourselves hereafter according to their standards. We propose no such thing. We propose to continue our struggle against the forces of militarism and reaction. We propose to continue to fight our case until it is finally won. We propose to utilize every legal device we can employ to secure the reversal of the dastardly decision against us.

Now this is where you come in. It is the business of every comrade to do his bit to help us to raise the funds necessary to cover the expenses involved in making the appeal. A strong support of the Appeal Fund will mean that we will be able to put up a strong defense and thus give us a greater assurance of a favorable verdict. Continued and energetic efforts will mean victory for the DAILY WORKER.

18,000 MINERS IN PENNSYLVANIA MAY STRIKE SOON

(By Federated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—The fate of 18,000 central Pennsylvania coal diggers hangs fire for another week as the wage conference that was to have been held in Philadelphia June 15th is postponed.

If the operators abrogate the Jacksonville agreement a strike is almost certain. This field has been continuing on the old agreement under a temporary truce, while the miners in western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and part of Iowa were striking.

The 20 members of the central Pennsylvania scale committee are ready for a show down. At the close of the May conference, the operators issued a statement that amounts almost to an ultimatum. They threatened that unless the Jacksonville rates were abandoned the pits would be closed.

The New York Central R. R. is the dominating interest in central Pennsylvania union operations. And that fact brings hope of a continuance of friendly relations. The New York Central stood by its agreement with the U. M. W. of A. in 1894, 1922 and 1926 when many other big bituminous employers slipped from their pledges.

Half the men in this field are in the employ of non-union concerns, paying from 20 to 30 per cent less than the Jacksonville rates. If a shutdown of the union mines develops the success of the organization will largely depend on the curtailing of this scab production.

Soviet Soil Scientists Bring Valuable Exhibit To Washington Meeting

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Twenty-one agricultural experts, one of them a woman, are representing the Soviet Union at the International Soil Congress which opened here on June 13th. The delegation is headed by Dr. K. D. Glinka, Director of the Leningrad Agricultural College.

The delegation is the largest, and perhaps the most distinguished group of scientists at the convention. Dr. Glinka is perhaps the best known soil scientist in the world.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

25,000 TRACTION MEN MAY DECLARE FOR STRIKE HERE

Workers on I.R.T. and B.M. T. Are Involved

A strike on the lines of the I. R. T. and B.-M. T. involving at least 25,000 men is now an immediate possibility.

Encouraged by public resentment against the brazen admissions of labor exploitation and the plundering of the city treasury, organizers for the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, affiliated with the A. F. of L., have declared that the subway workers will soon make a sweeping attempt to free themselves from the tyranny of the company.

Will Smash Company Union.

The first step, it is asserted, will be the smashing of the "Brotherhood", the official company union, officered by agents of the I. R. T., and to which two of its 15,000 workers are forced to belong.

Subway workers told a reporter of The DAILY WORKER that sentiment is growing in favor of defying the injunction forbidding organization which the I. R. T. obtained in the supreme court recently. The order was aimed at Edward F. Lavin, Harry Bark and Joseph Phelan, leaders of last summer's subway strike.

Majority of Men Enrolled.

Citing Samuel Untermyer's recent denunciation of the I. R. T. company union and his advocacy of a "union affiliated with organized labor," John H. Coleman, organizer of the Amalgamated employes in this city, said that the enrolment of the subway workers was proceeding rapidly.

"A majority of the men have already signed up with us," he declared.

Nearly $2,000,000 was spent in crushing the strike of 1,000 I. R. T. workers last summer, James L. Quackenbush, counsel for the company, admitted during examination by Samuel Untermyer at the transit hearings recently. This amount was charged up to "operating expenses," thus robbing the city to that extent.

It was further revealed at the hearings that in 1921 over 12,000 I. R. T. workers "submitted" to a voluntary wage cut of 10 per cent.

SECRETARY WILBUR SHOWERS PRAISE ON OFFICER FOR SHELLING NANKING

Hold Anti-Imperialist Demonstration at Canton Despite Right Wing Terrorism

WASHINGTON, June 19.—For ordering the bombardment of Nanking, which resulted in the slaughter of several hundred peaceful Chinese citizens, Commander Roy C. Smith, Jr., has received the blessing and the praise of Secretary of Navy Wilbur.

Characterizing Smith's order for the bombardment of the city as a "timely action excellently executed", Secretary Wilbur, in a letter made public yesterday, commends the bombardment. Smith ordered the bombardment of the city after one American had been killed by Shantungese soldiers fleeing before Nationalist troops who entered the city. For several hours the American destroyers Preston and Noa poured a rain of shot and shell into the defenseless city.

Smith Slaughtered Civilians.

Although subsequent investigations proved conclusively that the much-advertised "attacks of foreigners" had been made by retreating Shantungese (northern) troops, the imperialist powers not only slaughtered several hundred Nationalists and civilians, but sent threatening notes to the Nationalist government demanding indemnities.

Eugene Chen, foreign minister for the Nationalist (Hankow) government, in reply to the imperialist notes requested that an international committee be appointed to investigate the events at Nanking. The imperialist powers took no notice of Chen's request, and for a time it seemed that the Nanking events might be made the excuse for an open war against Nationalist China.

Unlike Chen, Chiang Kai-shek, renegade Nationalist who is making a feeble attempt to establish a "government" at Nanking, has offered to pay the imperialist powers any indemnity which they might demand for "damages" sustained by them at Nanking. Chiang's proposal followed by the announcement that he will send a representative to the United States, is interpreted as an open bid for imperialist support.

Refuse To Pay Tribute.

Although the Nationalist government at Hankow has repeatedly announced its intention of paying indemnities for any damages actually done by Nationalist troops at Nanking, it has no intention of being blackmailed into paying tribute to the imperialist powers. It has furthermore announced its intention of making counterclaims for hundreds of civilians slaughtered and the property damaged in the bombardment of Nanking.

In commending Smith's action, Admiral C. S. Williams, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic "patrol," says in his report: "The commander-in-chief desires to express his unqualified approval of the actions of the senior American naval officer present at Nanking."

Ex-Premier Raps British Oil Imperialism

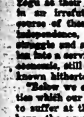
Makes Plea for Albanian Freedom in Address to the Countrymen of the large Italian immigrant colony present in this country to help liberate their native land from the yoke of Ahmed Zogu, the Tirana bandit, and Fan S. Noli, former premier of the little Balkan state and a graduate of Harvard, has signed the manifesto issued by the Albanian Committee for National Liberation. The manifesto says in part:

"Albanians: Those Nationalists who for some time past have proclaimed that the suppression of the rights of feudal boys—lords of medieval lands—is the first step toward the consolidation of our people, are absolutely right. The last two years of the reign of feudal boys, with Ahmed Zogu at their head, have proved this in an irrefutable manner. In the process of time the lands of the Albanian boys, the usual instruments of foreign domination.

British Oil Grab.

"As to Italy and England, the government of the feudal boys has ceded them the national wealth by hypothecating on our people the economic yoke of foreigners. England has obtained oil concessions on scandalous conditions. Italy has obtained, among other things, the concession of the National Bank, the flotation of a loan of 50,000,000 gold francs and the right to colonize Albania by means of the National Bank, Italy has gained entire possession of the economic life of our country. By means of the loan of 50,000,000 gold francs which the Albanian State has never deposited and never will deposit, Italy will realize in the shape of interest and amortization an annual tribute of more than 7,000,000 gold francs for forty years."

All Balkan Peoples.



Stressing the need of political organization and alliance with the other oppressed peoples of the Balkans, the manifesto says: "To succeed in this struggle (against the feudal boys supported by British and Italian imperialism) we must labor methodically and fundamentally again for organization and enlightenment among the Albanian masses. We must coordinate our movement with the movements for freedom of all oppressed Balkanic peoples, and we should also invite the support of all progressive international factors in the entire world."

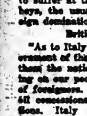
Memoirs of a Revolutionist



By Vera Figner

VERA FIGNER is now seventy-five years old and is living in Moscow. She joined the Revolutionary Movement fifty-five years ago, and has lived to see the overthrow of the Czar's regime and the establishment of workers' rule in Russia.

Vera Figner is one of the last Revolutionary Moderates who was a member of the famous Narodnaya Volya in the 70's, and in 1881 participated in the assassination of Czar Alexander II. She spent two years in the Fortress St. Peter and Paul, and though convicted to death, her sentence was committed to life imprisonment in the fortress of Schlusselburg Fortress. She spent twenty years in solitary confinement in that famous citadel where scores of the greatest revolutionary spirits were imprisoned.

In her book translated for the first time into English, she tells the story of her youth and how she became a revolutionist. She describes the early Revolutionary Movement in Russia and gives a graphic picture of her life in the Fortress during the twenty years she was confined there.

Every revolutionary home and library should possess a copy of this book in it, to be given the life story of a very great revolutionist and leader.

STRIKE OF 2,500 BKLYN PAINTERS ON THIS MORNING

3,000 Have Already Won Increase in Wages

Between 2,500 and 3,000 Brooklyn painters, members of Local 29, will strike this morning to enforce their demand for a $2 a day wage increase. It is likely that painters in Manhattan and other boroughs will become involved as a result of the walkout.

3,000 workers had already won the increase as a result of a strike declared April 4, and which was temporarily halted by an injunction granted to a group of painter bosses by Judge Callahan of the supreme court. These workers are now receiving $14 daily.

The court order expired yesterday.

Corporations Drop Schemes for Group Worker Insurance

Failures of the American Woolen Co. and its companies to continue the group life insurance which was provided for their employees in 1918 points to the need of legislation to give stability as well as general application to workmen's life insurance, according to a statement issued by the American Association for Labor Legislation.

"Announcement of the discontinuance of group insurance by the concerns centering in the American Woolen Co.," says the Association, "emphasizes anew the distressing element of uncertainty in such private schemes of industrial insurance. This uncertainly was also shown conspicuously in the plight of the former employes of the Morris Packing Co. who worked for years under a company pension plan, only at the end to be deprived of the benefits.

Should Protect Workers.

"Lack of stability of voluntary plans in industry for unemployment insurance was recently demonstrated by the suspension of the unemployment fund in the cloak industry of New York City.

"Public action through legislation is the effective, permanent, and certain method of protecting the industrial workers against the hazards of accidents, disability, old age and unemployment."

It was pointed out that while it is true that an option exists in all group life policies which provides for the continuance of the contract independent of the company, usually after years of partial premium payment the worker finds himself at an increased age with larger premiums to pay. At all group policies do not accumulate a cash value, as is the case with ordinary insurance policies, the worker finds himself "holding the bag."

JERSEY COSSACKS FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER OF GIRL

Manslaughter Verdict Returned by Jury

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 19.—Two members of the New Jersey state constabulary, Lieut. Daniel F. Rogers and A. K. Larsen, were yesterday convicted of manslaughter in connection with the death of Beatrice Meaney on December 31, who was shot when a contingent of 14 troopers poured a flood of bullets into her farmhouse following an attempt to serve a warrant against her brother.

The young man was accused of underfeeding his cattle.

Twelve other troopers and two agents of the "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals" who inspired the original charges were acquitted by the jury.

Brother Shot, Another Beaten.

During the course of the pogrom on the farm, James Meaney, a brother of the slain girl was shot and wounded by the cossacks, and Timothy Meaney, another brother, was beaten into insensibility.

After the brutal orgy of the troopers a coroner's investigation ended in a murder charge against the attackers, but the grand jury later brought in a blanket indictment charging the 16 with manslaughter.

In summing up the case the state prosecutor bitterly denounced the brutality of the troopers.

with the full original figure for the equipment, it automatically falls victim to the full cost of this "bonus" which the company is stealing.

Untermyer declared in his letter that he is planning to institute contempt proceedings at once against Gerhard M. Dahl and Thomas L. Chadbourne, the two largest stockholders in the B.-M. T. for their refusal to answer embarrassing questions during the transit hearings. Chadbourne simply took the boat and went off to Europe when the examination got too personal. Dahl, likewise, was hesitant about getting communicative about the family interest in the B.-M. T., including its reasons for purchasing I. R. T. stock.

Al Smith at Bottom.

The present hearings are brot about by the temporary break between Gov. Smith and the traction gang to which he had previously sold out due to their failure to support his presidential aspirations.

Untermyer, who is quite generally known to be the under-cover man of Smith, is utilizing this opportunity to further the governor's ambitions by taking a sideswipe at the traction interests.

Expect "Peace" Soon.

Sooner or later, it is expected, these "differences" will be adjusted, a "new unification plan" adopted, an increased fare will be put over and the workers of New York, as hitherto, will foot the bill.

U. S. Ambassador to Mexico Is Tired; Now Back in Washington

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.

WASHINGTON, (CPFA), June 19.—Dwight W. Morrow, Ambassador to Mexico, has arrived in Washington. He has not yet formally handed in his resignation, but departed from Mexico in the midst of 27 crates of household furniture and immediately hurried to Washington to confer June 17 with Secretary of State Kellogg.

Ever since his appointment in the fall of 1926, Sheffield has followed a "strong" policy in assisting that Mr. Mellon, secretary of the treasury and other heavy American investors in Mexican oil lands be protected from Mexican laws looking toward nationalization of natural resources.

Was "Indiscreet."

Rumors of Sheffield's impending resignation have been rife in Washington since last spring when documents revealing that he had actively encouraged enemies of the Calles government to start revolutions fell into the hands of the Mexicans. An international incident of the first water resulted with claims that instructions from Secretary Kellogg advising Sheffield how to apply the "strong" policy to Calles had been forged and diplomatic pouches entered.

Ambassador Tellez was recalled hastily to Mexico City and cable wires fairly sizzled with diplomatic assurances from the State Department that the contents of the instructions to Sheffield and his replies had been "tampered with" and were not true reflections of the American attitude. Calles graciously accepted the proffered explanation with the tacit understanding that Mr. Sheffield's sphere of usefulness had been quite ended and that he would be retired as soon as a convenient excuse offered itself.

Immediately thereafter both President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg moderated their blustering tone toward Mexico and sweet asanrances that the Mexican oil controversy could be worked out amicably were passed to the press. This contrasted sharply with previous statements of Assistant Secretary of State Olds, a law partner of Kellogg, to press associations in a non-quotable interview that Mexico was behind the Nicaraguan trouble, was seeking to create a "bolshevist hegemony from the Rio Grande to Panama" and was in general the enfant terrible of the North American continent.

Enemy Of Labor.

Sheffield is reported by American labor men who have been in Mexico during his tenure, to have found the workers and peasants movement there extremely distasteful. He hated the idea of the underlying population conducting a revolution and getting away with it. His respect for Calles and his associates darkly of undue friendliness toward the Soviet Union in recognizing that country and accepting Mme. Alexandra Kollontai as envoy.

Mexican officials themselves returned the compliment, declaring that Sheffield's blind and blunder policy lacked support in Washington, that when Messrs. Coolidge and Kellogg wanted Mexican advice they called in Charles Beecher Warren, former ambassador. Charles Evans Hughes, counsel for Standard Oil, and Dwight F. Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co., rather than listening on Sheffield's say-so. When he returned to Mexico recently after consulting with the State Department, Sheffield was greeted by a petty chief of the division of protocols although usually high officials turn out on such occasions.

Sheffield, held responsible for Kellogg's amazing assertion two years ago that "Mexico is on trial before the eyes of the world" for attempting to nationalize her natural resources, will be succeed by John W. Garrett, former ambassador to Argentina, according to State Department attaches. Garrett speaks Spanish, which Sheffield disdained to learn.

German Firms Race to Build Oceanic Planes

BERLIN, June 19.—A race is now on between the Junkers and Dornier to bring out the first trans-Atlantic airplane liner.

The Junkers are keeping their plans a guarded secret, though it is announced that "both German machines and motors are available for such a flight."

The Dornier works, a sister organization of the Zeppelins, is known to be putting the finishing touches to a mystery plane which the Dornier engineers declare to show even to Chamberlin and Levine, but which is supposed to be fitted with six motors of 1,000 horse power each, and able to carry 100 passengers for ordinary distances or cross the Atlantic wit henough freight and mail to pay for the trip. The plane would in addition be able to carry enough fuel to make the flight safe as a railroad journey from New York to Chicago.

The mystery plane is to have a crew of five men, a captain, two pilots, mechanic and radio operator.

the local that they should not work on outside construction jobs for the company which maintains its lockout of the miners, and underpays for outside labor.

Daisytown local (No. 2399 of the U.M.W.A.) is known as progressive, and the president, besides being a justice of the peace on a progressive ticket, was one of the candidates last year for teller of the union. It has been realized for some time that the employers—Vesta Coal is a subsidiary of Jones & Laughlin, a vicious union-hating concern—have wanted to break down organisation here.

An Excuse.

They took the first excuse of however flimsy a nature, and when they found President Harry Wadsworth and the mine committee talking to some of the ten men working on an addition to their power house, they arrested them all, and charged them with trespassing.

The men were taken to a justice of the peace ten miles away, the there is another justice close to Daisytown. The the justice given charge of the case is naturally suspected of being more friendly to the company than the nearer one, he released the unionists on their own recognizance.

Only a few members of the local were working on the power job. They were so far from being intimidated by the arrests that they held a meeting and agreed unanimously to quit. Wages were a dollar lower than the union scale for outside construction labor.

Two sons of Joe Edwards, formerly general manager of the Vesta, now vice-president, and a son of a mine foreman were working on the construction job.

Workers Arrested by Mines' Private Police

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 19.—The trial of Pete Musolin of Woodlawn, Pa., charged with violations of the Pennsylvania Flynn anti-sedition act begins Monday at Beaver County Court, Beaver, Pa.

Musolin, together with seven other workers were arrested Armistice Day, last year, after the local, state and the Jones and Laughlin police raided three peaceful homes in search of literature. The men were released on $1,000 bail each and charged with sedition. The indictment was quashed at a later date. The men were, however, rearrested the same day and charged with exactly the same "crime."

Quashed Second Time.

The attorney for International Labor Defense and American Civil Liberties Union succeeded to have the case quashed for second time. Several days elapsed when five of the eight men were rearrested for the third time and again charged with violation of the sedition act and held under $2,000 bail each.

The trial in Beaver begins at a time when a similar case, that of M. Salzkas, who was arrested March 15th in Wilmerding, Pa., while preparing to address a mass meeting of Lithuanian Literary Society, was quashed by Judge Gray of Pittsburgh.

Charged with Sedition.

Saldokas was charged with sedition and released under $5,000 bail after spending several days in jail. His case was quashed on the grounds that the indictment "does not contain any sufficient allegation to sustain a conviction."

The opinion of Judge Gray which was concurred in by Judges Ford, Cohen and Moore, was based on previous decision rendered by Judge Reeder of Beaver County in case of Mezzey of New York, who was arrested in Woodlawn and charged with sedition.

Same Crime.

It will be remembered that Ed. Horsack and ten other workers were arrested in Pittsburgh in May, 1923, and charged with same crime of sedition. They were held under abnormal high bail ranging from $5,000 to $15,000 each. Horsack's case was tried in November, 1925, and he was found guilty. The indictments against all of these Pittsburgh defendants are exactly the same as the indictments against Mezzey and Zadokas which were quashed, one in Beaver and one in Pittsburgh.

Big Textile Merger Proposed; Southern Competition Feared

(By Federated Press.)

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 19. Loss of business to southern manufacturers brought a group of leading rather than leasing on Sheffield's cotton goods makers from southeastern Massachusetts to a conference to discuss a possible merger.

The merger would combine the operations of several million spindles under one unified direction. Costs would be lowered by alloting one style of goods to one plant or group of plants, and other styles to others, thus stopping duplication of effort.

Fear Southern Competition.

The Davol, Granite, Bourne, Troy, Arkwright, Barnard, Flint, Merchants and Richard Borden Corp. were among those assembled. Most of the manufacturers are said to have opposed the merger proposal but the promoters of the plan are still hopeful of putting it over. They point out that Fall River has steadily lost ground to the south where wages are lower, hydro-electric power is abundant and freight costs are a smaller factor.

Merger talk is being closely followed by the local labor unions. The United Textile Workers and the independent American Federation of Textile Operatives are in the field but most of the Fall River workers are unorganized. Portugese are the largest single racial group.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Reports from Los Angeles that Charley Chaplin had entered negotiations with Lita Gray Chaplin for the settlement of her suit for a separation were denied today by Nathan Burkan, counsel for the comedian. Chaplin is still in this city stopping at Burkan's house.

No Strikebreaking for New York Trade Unionists.

The failure of the Woll-McGrady-Frayne trio of seaherders to induce local trade unionists to go out on the picket lines thrown by the Furriers' Union around struck shops and help the bosses break their strike is one of the most ignominious defeats ever inflicted on such characters in the history of the American labor movement.

The refusal of the members of the unions affiliated with the New York Central Trades and Labor Council to play the role of strikebreakers is just what we expected. After all, those men know from experience that the employers make no distinction between lefts and rights when it is a question of loosening up on their cash. They have experienced the rigors of class warfare and know that the clubs of the police have no more regard for the heads of the conservative trade unionists than they have for the heads of the radical unionists. They hold the scab in contempt and have imprinted this feeling on many a scabby anatomy.

It was therefore not surprising that when this unholy trinity of strikebreakers sent out a letter to the local unions affiliated with the central labor body of this city urging the members to supplement the efforts of the police in breaking up the furriers' picket lines that a roar of indignant protest should be the reply. This indignation found vigorous expression at the last meeting of the central body when even its conservative president Joseph Ryan, because of the rank and file attitude towards Woll's scabherder policy and for other reasons, urged the delegates present and thru them the members of the local unions to ignore the letter sent out by Woll, the vice-president of the National Civil Federation and his two errand boys, McGrady and Frayne.

This well-merited rebuke should serve notice on those renegade labor leaders that it is time for them to call a halt on their strikebreaking policy or else quit the labor movement.

It is also a warning to the yellow socialists that their belly-crawling to the extreme right wing of the A. F. of L. has not met with the approval of the rank and file of that organization. Honest workers may be conservative in their political views but they loathe the fink and the agent provocateur. In the long run the political party and the industrial organization that fights for the masses will receive the support of the masses.

The action of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council in repudiating the activities of Woll, Frayne and McGrady should serve to encourage the furriers in the gallant fight they are putting up for militant trade unionism. It indicates a revival of militancy in the labor movement in general and shows that the fog of misrepresentation and prejudice that has been spread over the trade union movement by the agents of the employers is being dispelled and that the workers of different affiliation are beginning to realize that solidarity on the industrial battlefront is necessary and vital to the needs of the members of the trade unions.

Coolidge's Black Hills Fishing Expedition.

Batteries of cameramen and mobs of hack writers overrun the Black Hills as did the Indians in days of yore, bent upon recording every gesture of the president of the United States who is spending his summer on a fishing expedition in those parts. His first day's catch of seven trout, with worms as bait, aroused the majestic scorn of Senators Borah and Reed. The Idaho senator, commenting upon the possibilities of a presidential order for a special session of congress, frankly admitted that he was puzzled. "There's no tellings what a man who will catch trout with a worm will do," said Borah. "Any trout that would lie on the bottom and bite at a worm is a degenerate trout," affirmed Reed. The general impression is that it is unpardonable to use worms to catch trout, and certain sceptics suggest that they probably were catfish instead of trout and that Coolidge doesn't know the difference.

Be that as it may, the republican national committee is doing a bit of fishing on its own hook and is not averse to using one whom as vice president it regarded with the disdain usually accorded worms. While Cal uses worms as fish bait, he is himself in turn used as political bait. Perhaps his republican and democratic detractors will insist that only degenerate politicians will bite at such bait.

On the same day the president performed his incredible feat with worm-biting trout, State Senator Robinson came to the summer white house and assured Cal his loyal support. Robinson is one who opposed the farm relief bill that Coolidge vetoed and knows that his game is up as far as reelection is concerned. Perhaps he will get a federal lame-duck appointment in case Cal remains in the white house another term. But the Robinsons are comparatively small fish; a judicious fisherman would throw them back into the stream. But there are better catches than Robinson.

For instance William Hale Thompson, recent victor in a spectacular Chicago mayoralty election, is to be one of the summer visitors. Thompson is the dominant figure in Illinois politics. And Illinois is the home state of Vice President Charles G. Dawes, candidate for president and his stalking horse, Frank O. Lowden. The chief capitalist newspaper of the Middle West, the Chicago Tribune, has for years reviled Thompson, while supporting Lowden and Dawes and other darlings of La Salle street.

It is not unlikely that "Big Bill" as Thompson is affectionately called by the Chicago hooligans who constitute the back-bone of his corrupt political machine will, for a consideration, agree to deliver the Illinois delegation at the 1928 republican convention to Mr. Coolidge, which would be a stinging rebuke to Messrs. Dawes and Lowden. "Big Bill" is fair bait for the farmers also. As a stellar attraction at country fairs he can manipulate the political shell game with the best of them.

All this cannot improve the distressful condition of the farmers. The presence of the presidential party will not raise the price of corn and wheat in the Middle West. The farmers will not be fooled by the Coolidge bait. They have too long observed his worm-like crawling before his Wall Street masters to mistake him as a substitute for a meal for them.

A Seamen On Land Duty.

I reported for duty at 9 A. M. yesterday at headquarters. . . . . and I were assigned to Battery Park to distribute leaflets and sell DAILY WORKERS. We arrived in time to see regiment after regiment falling into ranks and preparing to march up 5th Ave. I had a wonderful opportunity and started right in with a colored regiment and gave one to a colored private. He read the headlines. Then I didn't have any trouble handing them out. They came and took them from me like a lot of hungry men. It looked like a breadline in confusion. One of the officers seeing the commotion came to investigate. It was too late.

Some were already read and were being folded neatly and put away. This officer wanted to see one. He read it, tore it up and told me to shove off or I'll "get in trouble." On the sidewalk were hundreds of colored women and children from the Harlem districts. They saw what I had done and literally stormed me for leaflets. I also managed to work in a few DAILY WORKERS to the colored troops. They were all looking at me with that warm broad Negro smile. They understood.

Then I moved along and got the West Pointers. I passed out a few leaflets. After they read the headlines they started jeering me, but it did not discourage me, for the memory of the enthusiasm with which the colored troops took and read the leaflets was fresh in my mind. So I could only answer with a smile. Again the bystanders stormed me for the leaflets which were eagerly read.

. . . . . is a Seaman and is going back to sea. I am sending you a few dollars which I collected from the boys on board the ship. . . . . I will be in New York about the middle of next month and will call at your office. . . . . is a member of the Marine Workers' Industrial Union and we are going to try to get the boys on board the ship to subscribe to the DAILY WORKER. . . . . is very much interested in the paper and will do all he can to help it along. . . . . is also a member of the Marine Workers' Industrial Union and will do his bit for the paper

...WORKS TO WORK

...ers of the Yellow Labor Union, and the interests of their class is a very close one. The Yellow Unions in China are not as strong as those of Hongkong. In 1922, Yet during the months since the Chinese workers have gained control, in a anti-strike fashion, that they can use the strike weapon as effectively as any of their western fellow workers.

The workers in China have been using the strike and the boycott for a very short time. The first strike was that of Hongkong in 1922. Yet during the months since the Chinese workers have gained control, in a anti-strike fashion, that they can use the strike weapon as effectively as any of their western fellow workers.

The boycott is older, as a weapon of the Chinese masses. Still its use in industrial disputes is new for the Chinese. Here, as in the use of the strike, the masses of Chinese workers have shown progressive wonderfully effective.

Colonel Johnson has recently completed his investigation of the Chinese labor organizations for the British Independent Labor Party. Here are some of his more important findings:

The Modern Trade Union Movement is said to have originated in the South, when Dr. Sun Yat-sen and the Kuomintang were first established at Canton; although the earliest industrial strike on a large scale took place at the steel works of the Hanyehping Company near Hankow in the summer of 1919, when the workers won their demand for increased wages. In the same year 26 trade unions were set up in Canton and the movement spread to Hong Kong. A short but successful strike of over 5,000 factory and shipyard workers in Hong Kong in 1920 gave a great impetus to organization and unions of all kinds began to be formed. Later, in January 1922, the great Seamen's Strike, of seamen at Hong Kong and Canton, lasting 56 days and ending in the recognition of the Seamen's Union and increases in wages, stimulated the whole movement and led to the formation of unions in various parts of the country.

The organization of trade unionists on the railways began with a Conference of Railwaymen in Peking in 1922, and the strike of the railwaymen on the Peking-Hankow line, in the course of which many of the strikers were shot down by Wu Pei-fu and their leaders arrested and executed, had a great effect on the workers in North and Middle China and a number of unions were organised at Hankow and Wuchang. In Shanghai also the movement, which had existed in a struggling condition since the years of the Great War, when a propaganda office was established in 1916, went ahead during 1922, when it is alleged that over 60 unions were established in that city. As a National Movement, however, trade unionism dates only from the Shanghai shootings of May 30, 1925.

The following is a list of the number of trade unions and trade union members which I received from an organiser in China in June 1926. Since then, with the arrival of the Cantonese Army in the Wuhan cities (Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang), numbers of unions have been formed in those cities and probably at least 50,000 should be added to the numbers on the following list:—

Statistics of the Chinese Trade Union Movement.

Districts.	Unions.	Members.
Canton (City)	191	195,000
Hong Kong	119	207,140
Shanghai	48	149,400
During the May 30th 1925 shootings, there were more than 209,000 members at Shanghai.
Honan	24	60,300
Wuchang & Hankow	48	42,300
Shasi	5	20,000
Kwangsi	26	17,580
Hunan	—	80,000
Chihli	—	103,200
Shantung	—	13,940
Macao	—	4,484
Shiyian	18	3,314
Singapore	20	760
Amoy	—	13,340
Harbin	—	500
Kinkiang	—	640
Canton Province	—	111,200
Semmen	—	50,000
Railwaymen	64	95,000
Total	563	1,168,018

Trade unions in China may be said to fall within two groups, (1) "Red," or of Russian origin and/or inspiration; and (2) what I call, for purposes of distinction, "Yellow" or "not so Red" unions. I gather that the Yellow labor organizations have very little influence or vitality and are not for the present very militant; and that their origin is doubtful. The Railway Workers' Union on the Kin-Han (Peking-Hankow line belongs to this class. I was told that it was financed by a section of the so-called "Communication Clique" in Peking, and has it headquarters at Changsintien on the line. This "Communication Clique" appears to be a group of railway capitalists, who think it worth while to encourage moderate Labor organization as a safety-valve against something more

Young Pioneers Hold Dance for Their Camp

(By A Worker Correspondent.)

There was somewhat of a rumpus around the New Star Casino, where the Pioneers ran their colorlite ball last Saturday night.

I believe the whole audience enjoyed the story that was told to the Pioneers in the 4th act (as no one could hear a word of it in the house except those in the campfire scene). As some of those who came to have a good time said, "The kids can get away with anything as the house is theirs tonight." Then Juliet S. Poyntz came to the fore and summed up the camp drive in dollars and cents. It meant a collection and the signing of pledges for shares.

May Ask Van Sweringen Confession.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The Interstate Commerce Commission will meet in extraordinary session tomorrow to determine whether O. P. Van Sweringen, chief proponent of the billion dollar Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad merger, is to bare to the world the inside details of his many spectacular railroad-stock exchange coups.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

...support. They are also said to support the "Workers' Daily," the organ of the Yellow unions in Peking.

Activities in the various industrial centres vary according to local conditions. There is as yet no national organisation combining the activities of the disjointed Yellow unions throughout China; and probably as a result they have no international affiliations. The Red unions, on the other hand, are all closely allied to the "All China Labor Federation," which has its headquarters in Canton, in the area of the only Government in China under which trade union organization is legal and can therefore be conducted quite openly. They are also affiliated to the R.I.L.U.

There are Yellow unions in Hankow, Shanghai, Canton and other towns, but their influence is small compared with that of the Red unions. In Hankow Reds and Yellows worked together until 1922, when they split. It is perhaps rather inaccurate to speak of "unions" at all at the time that I was in Hankow, in the summer of 1926. For, Wu Pei-fu being then in possession of the district, trade unions were illegal, and the organisers were right at the beginning of their efforts, trying to organise quickly in textile, tobacco and other factories. Things in the Wuhan cities have changed considerably since then.

At the conference of DAILY WORKER representatives held on Friday evening, June 17, a number of exciting projects were discussed for the Coney Island Stadium Concert and Fair, which is being planned for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER, to be held on July 23 and 24.

Comrade Benjamin reported that the members of the Bronx Co-operative Restaurant have promised to organize an ice cream and candy booth, with all profits of the day going to the DAILY.

The musical committee states from Unit 17, Subsection 6B, which is the proud possessor of a concert piano and cello, which will be auctioned off at the Carnival.

A telescope for star gazing at night is also being offered, with the aid of which the New York comrades will be enabled to look at some of the other planets, which have no capitalists and exploiters.

A rumor is spreading that the Chinese comrades are concocting a splendid exhibition of Oriental dancing, which will no doubt be one of the finest features of the entire affair.

Workers Party units and working class organisations are asked to notify the Local Office of The DAILY WORKER, 108 East 14th Street, Stuyvesant 6584, of the plans they are making so that space may be reserved for them.

Labor and Fraternal Organizations

Symposium and Dance.

A concert and symposium will be given Friday at the Co-operative Auditorium, 2700 Bronx Park East. The symposium will be on the question: "Does the Present Educational System in the U. S. Meet the Needs of the Children of the American Workers?" The speakers will include Scott Nearing, Joe Freeman, Juliet S. Poyntz, and others.

The concert program will be given by the Young Pioneers. They will stage Mikhail Gold's play "Strike."

Entire proceeds go to build the Young Pioneer Camp. This affair is under the auspices of the Women's Council, Branch 11.

Hungarian Orchestra Needs Players.

The Hungarian Workers' Orchestra is in need of several players especially those who can play wind instruments. London Spoofs Cal.

LONDON, June 19.—Mr. Coolidge is a fish comedy." This heading identified a story of President Coolidge's efforts at trout fishing with worms, displayed in the London newspapers today. A cabled version of how the president landed a fish with "half a worm" was given front page prominence second to the news of the courts to be held by the king and queen the coming week.

Bosses Promise to be Good.

ARGENTINA LABOR DEMANDS TO FREE SACCO, VANZETTI

BOSTON, June 19.—The Argentine Labor Federation representing over 100,000 workers will boycott American products in case Sacco and Vanzetti are executed, the Argentine Anti-Red Bulletin radicals are asserted.

This was made clear in a letter forwarded to Gov. Allen Fuller from Secretary of State Kellogg.

A vigorous protest also came from the workers of Nice, on the Mediterranean, who in a fiery letter to the governor declared that Sacco and Vanzetti "must be wrested from the hands of the American executioners."

Miners Call Conference.

Four local unions of the United Mine Workers of America in Western Pennsylvania, 1610 and 1689 of Wilkes-Barre; 976 of Olyphant and 2585 of Factoria, representing 4,500 miners, joined in a resolution demanding the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti, and calling for an Emergency Conference to held in Pittston, Pa., on July 3.

"Innocent," Says Wells.

"All the world now knows them innocent," says H. G. Wells, British author, of Sacco and Vanzetti in a page article in the Sunday Express of London, just received here.

The proofs against the two radicals were no proofs, declares the novelist who reviews the evidence presented at the trial by District Attorney Ketzmann.

Of Judge Webster Thayer, he says: "What is the matter with Judge Thayer is not that he is a bad man, not that he is anti-moral, but that he is, to put it mildly, extremely obtuse, morally and mentally."

Plumbers Win Wage Increase.

SOMERVILLE, June 19. — The strike of the plumbers of Somerville ...ized Sunday has been settled, a contract having been arranged with the bosses. The workers struck on May 1, demanding a wage increase of $8 a day. The master plumbers have agreed on a $1 raise which the men have accepted, thus making the pay $11 a day.

Barbers to Strike.

NEWARK, June 19.—Members of Barbers' Union, local 877 are planning to strike shortly, according to B. Manger, secretary of the organization. All efforts at settlement with the bosses having failed, the men will declare a walkout for an increase in wages and for shorter hours.

The journeymen are now working 70 hours a week for $35. They demand a basic wage rate of $35 weekly and a decrease of 10 hours in the working schedule.

Doran, a Seaman

[illegible] took the subway and paid [illegible] which his companion had [illegible] on him as fare to the Brooklyn Navy Yards. Here he went aboard the Black-Diamond Line freighter, Oneko.

The chief mate was at the gangway watching the swilling of a heavy [illegible]. "Do you want any sailors?" asked Doran.

"No, I need one, where are your papers?" asked the mate in reply. Doran produced his able seaman's [illegible] ticket. "That won't do," said the mate, "I want ten good sailors from other ships." Doran produced them and the mate scanned them over. He was a dark, American Italian, six foot tall and heavily built. He had been a guard in Sing Sing Penitentiary. It turned out he had studied navigation and when the shipping board needed navigators for their vessels during the war they had given him the job.

"You can sign on at two o'clock, we sail at four for Rotterdam," said the mate. "The focsl is back aft and you will find an empty bunk there. Where is your bag?"

"I will be back in an hour with it," answered Doran.

"Well, don't be any longer, I want you to turn to work as soon as you come back aboard."

When Doran returned he took a few minutes to stow the ship over. She was a nine thousand ton steam packet of the well deck type. Her cargo was general merchandise and steel for Holland. She was a coal burner.

Doran went up the gangway across the afterdeck and into the focsl where he found an empty bunk. Here he deposited his bag. It was twelve o'clock and the crew came filing in. There were two Americans, two Filipinos, three Porto Ricans, and the boatswain was Maltese. They went to dinner, the firemen, coal passers and sailors ate in the same mess hall. The firemen were Spanish.

Dinner was served, consisting of boiled tripe, potatoes, and Sago pudding and coffee. At one o'clock the deck crew started covering the hatches and battening them down.

When everything was secure a full deck load of rotten onions were taken aboard. When the ship was well at sea the crew were put to disposing of the onions by hand. There were no shovels and this was hard work with a cold gale blowing and spray falling like ice over the men.

After the first day out the food that was served was terrible. Rotten meat and vegetables. The men started to complain about the food and when no attention was paid them they would either throw it into the scuppers or else leave it on their plates.

Doran stood this treatment for some time without grumbling but finally he also could not stand it any longer. On the tenth day out he stood up at the supper table and said, "Come on, boys, we have stood for this miserable and shabby treatment long enough. The officers and mates are getting choice cuts of fresh meat and taking it easy at the same time. We are working this ship, firing her, propelling her and even steering her and we get worse treatment than dogs." When he said this Doran was within the bounds of truth. The meat was unfit for even the ship's mascot to eat.

The crew had been grumbling for some time already. Now they stood up to a man and waited for Doran's next words full of hope, expectation and the blind confidence of men who recognize a leader. Doran and the crew sent a delegation to the captain which consisted of Doran and one of the firemen. At the same time the crew went up forward following Doran and the firemen.

The captain met them half way and stopped them off. When he heard their demands he was thoroughly astounded. "Don't you realize that this is mutiny?" he asked. "No this is not mutiny," answered Dogan, "we are merely demanding our rights as called for in the ships articles about food and sustenance." After remonstrating with the men for some time he conceded that the men were justified in their demands. He promised that they would get better foods if they returned to their posts without any further remonstrances. This promise was fulfilled for the period of time that it took the vessel to get to Rotterdam. The men were getting the same cuts that the officers were getting.

After the ship left Rotterdam, however, the captain again attempted to cut down on the food supply and place them on the former third rate supply of meat and vegetables.

The men assembled the crew [illegible] room but this time no [illegible] was made. To the captain [illegible] the men, especially the [illegible]

On the return voyage a fire spread in number two hold four days out of Rotterdam. The cause of the fire was spontaneous combustion in the coal. The fire soon spread through the heating of the bulkhead into the general merchandise until from a smolder it became a roaring, tearing hot flame that was eating up the general cargo of the vessel.

This took place in the midst of a rough Atlantic storm while the waves were dashing forty feet high and sweeping the decks beneath a smother of seas and foam. Into this the men had to plunge and rig up life lines, man the fire lines and attack the fire in the hold. They finally extinguished the blaze after using up every bit of cloth and even the suits and clothes of the seamen themselves. When the fire was over the damaged articles were set on one side for the insurance adjustor to see, but the clothing of the crew was never accounted for by the company.

This despite the fact that the officers were aware of the presence of the fire in the coal bunker even in Rotterdam. They thought that they could exploit the firemen and the coal passers to extinguish it by working them overtime.

When they returned to New York our modern civilized American justice wrecked its vengeance for an infraction of discipline. All of the crew were fired in a body and severely criticised by the Shipping Commissioner. Doran was pointed out especially by the captain and mates as being the instigator of all this trouble and he was called everything from an Anarchist and a Communist to a freak agitator.

Doran calmly and coolly pointed out that he was not any kind of freak agitator and that he was merely demanding elementary rights as called for in the articles for himself and the crew. No attention was paid to him, however, and he was heavily fined and a disgraceful record attached to his discharge.

So the crew returned once more to South St. and its denizens.

The change in Doran is startling: from a tolerant, easy going worker he has developed into a class conscious, clear-minded seaman who carries the gospel of organization and class struggle throughout the marine industry.

WOMEN AND WAR

The Lindbergh parades and celebrations have once more forcibly brought home to us the instability of international political relations and the ever-present danger of war, and the ideological preparations for it that are being made by the imperialists of the U. S. A.

There is no doubt that in the next war, women will play an enormous part. Already in the last war, many jobs that are ordinarily (in times of peace) not offered to women were open to them, both in factories and offices, releasing men for the front.

With the simplification and subdivision of labor, it is very easy indeed to introduce more and more women into the war industries.

The next war will be fought with an intensity and ferocity that the last war will seem by comparison as tame as a Y.M.C.A. picnic. The preparations now being made by all the leading powers (largest standing armies and reserves, increasing military expenditures, enormous interest in aviation), all show us that larger masses will be engaged in the next war. Where will these come from?

The men of the workingclass with comparatively few exceptions, will be sent to the front and the women mobilised for the factories. Exemptions for war service in industry will be given as sinecures to the favored scions of the bourgeoisie, except in the case of highly specialized work.

In modern warfare, industry is as important as the fighting at the front. A constant stream of products must go to the front. These include war material, food and clothing, and other indispensable things. Any interruption of this stream (such as strikes) means that the war machine will not work smoothly. The workingclass plays a decisive role in war, not only by being the principal source of cannon fodder, but primarily because of its position in industry, it can interrupt this stream of products. Machines are playing an even-greater role in war. The growth of the chemical industry and principally of aviation show to what extent the next war will be dependent on factories.

Since women will constitute the majority of the factory workers in war industry, it is necessary that in our anti-war propaganda we pay special attention to women. We must carry our anti-war message into the large factories which employ women.

Now is the time to begin to intensify our anti-war propaganda among women because later on it will be much more difficult.—M. R.

RECORDS BROKEN IN MEXICO CITY MARATHON

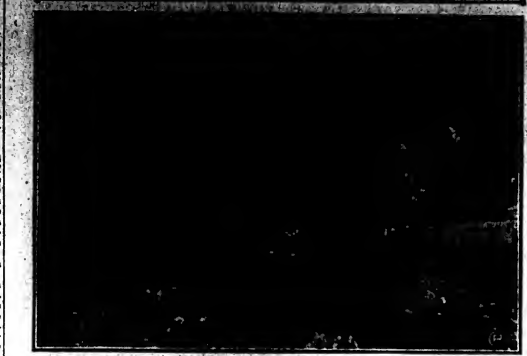

Photo shows beginning of race and beast of winner, Ciro Chapa, in Mexico City, in which all previous records for Mexico were broken for the distance—5,000 meters (3.10685 miles), the winner making it in 15 minutes, 12 3-5 seconds. Taking place on paved streets, the race was run under the auspices of the International Club, 604 athletes taking part.

All the patriotsering bodies hope to penetrate the schools, colleges, and universities in their drive against "Reds." The bulk of their literature is aimed in this direction and is calculated to produce "correct attitudes" toward the constitution and the history of the republic.

But the Russian conspiracy resulted in preventing "fuel-oil tanks at strategic points," and so on, from being used for the benefit of the navy.

Then Mr. Marvin's text, under the heading "Schemers Win Their Desires," comes this: "But the incident, played up as it was because it came with the magic name 'scandal,' accomplished what the original projectors of the scheme expected it would accomplish. . . . The 'strategic' play of Zinoviff was a success."

What is the conceivable purpose of publishing such fluff?

In connection with Mr. Marvin's articles the Army and Navy Journal ran an essay contest, the essays dealing with "the most effective remedy against pacifist propaganda." The announcement of this essay contest contained the statement that "the Army and Navy Journal will furnish the information upon which the essays may be based." Mr. Marvin signed this announcement.

Inter-Relations and Connections With Other Agencies.

It is perhaps to be expected that men so active in promoting their personal conceptions of patriotism should work with any and all organizations that express their bias. Interlocking directorates are therefore common. They prove nothing but community of interest, but since the professional patriots are continually hurling the charges of interlocking directorates against the organizations they attack, it is interesting to note how well they themselves know how to use the system. The late president of the National Civic Federation was on the executive committee of the American Defense Society, and vice-versa, not ex-officio, but just because Mr. Alton B. Parker and Mr. Elon H. Hooker were such earnest and substantial citizens. The late Louis A. Coolidge protested against the child labor amendment both as head of the Welfare Department of the Civic Federation and as president of the Sentinels of the Republic.

The societies all respond in about the same fashion and at the same time to any threat to their conceptions of patriotism—whether the occasion is a movement to recognize Russia or to push the child labor amendment. It is a natural community of interest. The interlocking directorates are effects, not causes. A union of forces is sometimes attempted as in the "Red clean-up week" attempted in 1924. But on the whole there is no organized coöpeation.

Lack of unity in this work has prompted efforts at federation on several occasions—one by the American Legion in 1924 to form a federation of several groups in Washington, ostensibly on Americanization, which came to nothing; and another by the Allied Patriotic Societies, a paper organization with no real backing.

The Woman Patriot has repeatedly urged closer coöperation, but with little effect. The Better America Federation in Los Angeles evidently works closely with the national agencies, distributing the Defense Society and security League pamphlets, and the attack on the Y. W. C. A. as radical, issued by the National Founders' Association.

They all lean on each other and use the pamphlet literature as well as their more "confidential information." For example, the National Clay Products Industries Association reports that it coöperates "with over thirty distinctly civic and patriotic organizations, many of which do not correlate their own efforts, hence our files have become sort of a 'clearing house' for practically everything that they issue."

Relations to Government Officials and Departments.

But far more significant than any relations between themselves is the relation of these organizations to government officials. The extent to which they can get confidential information in secret service files, their influence in promoting prosecutions or "Red raids," and their inclement influence on individuals in public offices—all are important in shaping public policy. On the other hand, public officials have made use of them for their own political purposes, quoting their alleged "facts" to justify some repressive measure or anti-red scare.

The story of these connections is too long to more than sketch. It was told in detail in the Senatorial hearings on the Department of Justice in 1924, and on the resolution to impeach Attorney-General Daugherty. It also came out in the investigation by a Senate Committee of Attorney-General Palmer's red raids in 1920. This investigation, which followed charges of illegal practices made by twelve eminent lawyers, brought out the following facts about the patriotsering organizations:

First, they had access to confidential files of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice during the regime of William J. Burns as chief, and used that material to spread that propaganda and defame many citizens;

THE CAPITALIST WORLD AND REVOLUTIONARY CHINA

By EUGENE VARGA.

SECTION TWO

The attitude of the imperialist powers to the Chinese revolution changes according to whether the bourgeoisie or the proletariat appears to gain the upper hand in the whole movement. For the purpose of a survey, the situation may be delineated as follows:

Under the pressure of the revolution, the imperialists as a whole would be inclined to renounce their special privileges to reconcile themselves to the creation of an "independent" capitalist China; that is to say of a China affording the requisite security for the investment of capital, under a bourgeois dictatorship; a China hostile to the Soviet Union, with a social system such as we saw under the rule of Sun Chuan Fang at Shanghai. For in such a China—even supposing the unequal treaties to be abolished—foreign capital would, in view of the weakness of the Chinese bourgeoisie, continue to exploit the country economically just as much as hitherto, albeit under another outward form. Hence the united front of all the imperialists, for the purpose of supporting the Chinese bourgeoisie against the peasants and workers, the right wing of the Kuomintang against the left wing, and Chiang Kai-shek against the trade unions and Communists.

Even in their entirety, however, the imperialists cannot submit without a struggle to the creation of a "non-capitalistic" China, since this would:

Firstly, prevent the possibility of the economic exploitation of the country;

Secondly, greatly strengthen the position of the Soviet Union, thus substantially diminishing the possibility of a successful attack on that country; and,

Thirdly, render inevitable emancipatory movements in all colonial countries, such as India, Farther India, Cochinchina, Corea, and the like.

There are no reliable statistics of the foreign capital investments in China. According to an estimate of the American "Foreign Policy Association", the Japanese investments are by far the greatest. Next in order come the British. The United States had invested roughly 70 million dollars in commercial enterprises and 80 million dollars in missionary institutions, hospitals, schools, etc. All the railways are directly or indirectly foreign property.

In the "Frankfurter Zeitung" of January 6th, 1927, Professor Lederer puts the Japanese investments in Manchuria alone at more than 700 million marks.

We should like to give a brief sketch of the position of the chief imperialist Powers.

The United States have occupied no territory of China and have no special privileges to defend there. Their capital investments there are very small—mainly in banking, wireless stations, necessary plant of the Standard Oil Co. On the other hand, exports to China have developed very rapidly.

The consequent policy of the United States is as follows:

"Open door" in China; no further expansion of the "spheres of interest" of the other Powers. Equitable treatment of the capital of the United States in all districts, including those occupied by Japan and Great Britain. Before all, the United States have at all times sought to hinder China from coming in any way under the influence of Japan ("yellow peril"). At the same time there is, as we shall see later on, a strong anti-British tendency. The United States have brought pressure to bear forcibly and successfully on Japan, so as to attain the evacuation of Shantung. (Washington Conference, 1922.) The bourgeoisie of the United States is amicably inclined to the Chinese anti-imperialist emancipation movement, in so far as it does not socially exceed bourgeois capitalist limits. The Americans hope to be able to defeat their competitors by virtue of their economic superiority in the event of the victory of the Chinese bourgeois revolution. They are opposed to all special privileges on the part of individual Powers, because they desire to conquer all China economically.

On the other hand, China is a question of the future for the United States, and no very urgent question of the day. Only 2.4 per cent. of America's exports go to China. Therefore, the United States were most reluctant to join Great Britain in what might end in a war with China. It is by no means excluded that their participation only aimed at getting a free hand, so far as Great Britain is concerned, for any imperialistic operations they may fancy in Mexico and Central America.

JAPAN. In contradistinction to the United States, Japan finds its most vital questions of existence involved in the Chinese problem. More than a quarter of the Japanese exports are directed to China, many thereof by way of Hong Kong. This is the only possible colonial area for Japanese capitalists, affording them the possibility of markets and raw material sources (cotton, iron ore, coal, soya-beans, etc.). Japan has annexed large portions of China, such as Manchuria, Formosa, and the like, as colonies), though its attempt during the world war to expand its colonial possessions in China yet further, had to be given up in view of the threatening attitude of the United States.

LINDBERGH JUST ANOTHER JINGO

Lindbergh, son of a fighting farmer of the Northwest, has fallen a victim to the war propaganda of the Jingoes. "The army made him" is the slogan used in the attempt to mobilize the youth into the army. Lindbergh, who only a short time ago was going around with his father to anti-war meetings, is now the chief speaker at war meetings. His father was hounded from place to place by our superpatriots and he is greeted with great ceremony wherever he goes by all the militarists of the land. The name of Lindbergh was at one time synonymous with and a contempt for imperialism. Today steps are being taken to align it with the militarist clique of the United States War Department through plastering his picture all over the country as advertisements of the Gre—at opportunities for the youth in the Army. To the young workers Lindbergh will be known by the great deed that he accomplished and prepareduess notwithstanding.

Hail to the deed of Lindbergh and down with the propaganda of Militarism.

SPORT

Wrestling Expose Continues: Corruption Dominates Game!

The recent quiz into professional wrestling has brought to light facts of crookedness and dishonesty startling to even the most suspicious fans. It seems that back in 1917 Lewis, Caddock, Stecher and Zybysko combined into a trust to make money out of tossing the title back and forth. Over 41 bouts were staged between these men and the title changed hands with the same frequency as the weather. Since 1917 the trust has been in control and pretty nearly every bout of any importance has been fixed beforehand.

So damning have been the exposures made, that pro-wrestling in and around Chicago has been discontinued. A match featuring Strangler Lewis has been cancelled. A bill has been presented before the Illinois legislature, aimed at corruption in boxing and wrestling. It has already passed the House. However, commercialism in sports is so deep rooted that it is impossible to eliminate it by more legislative action.

In order to make the LABOR SPORTS PRESS SERVICE a real live means of spreading news of labor athletic activity, it is necessary that reports of the many events that take place throut the country be sent in to the Labor Sports Service at 453 North Ave., Chicago. The Labor Sports Union appeals to all workers who are interested in labor sports, to send in the news of the activities in their localities.

CANTON, June 19.—Despite the opposition of the right wing supporters of Chiang Kai-shek in control of the city, a huge anti-imperialist demonstration was held in this city yesterday. An airplane dropped quantities of leaflets denouncing imperialist intervention in China.

There is wide-spread discontent with the right wing in Kwantung Province. Workers and peasants are forming armed groups for the purpose of resisting Chiang Kai-shek's labor-smashing tactics.

Mme. Borodin Tried.

PEKING, June 17 (Delayed). — Peking began the preliminary hearing case of Mme. Borodin and three diplomatic courliers. During the examination Mme. Borodin was shown a number of documents which she denied were hers, declaring they were unknown to her.

The same documents were presented to the diplomatic couriers as allegedly found in diplomatic mail. Among these documents were ten copies of proclamations in the Russian and Chinese languages allegedly issued at Vladivostok.

Brand Fake Documents.

The couriers emphasized that during the search which was three times effected in their presence, nothing was discovered. Diplomatic mail which was taken from them as a result of these searches contained no proclamations. To Doasler will be appended a protocol signed by the captain of ship in which was established the complete absence of anything prejudicial in diplomatic mail.

ONLY another parley! This is about the only comment worth making on the arms parley which opened yesterday in Geneva on the initiative of the United States. London papers have given a bare total of six columns to the parley and the admiralty is decidedly opposed to reducing the number of cruisers considered necessary to defend the imperial trade routes from the rest of the "civilized" world. Out of a sense of politeness the British and Japanese governments may send delegates but they will hold on to their daggers.

THE Monte Carlo casino is almost as good a paying proposition as an American oil well. The report for the fiscal year ending March 1926 shows an income of 29,000,000 gold marks with a net profit of 17,000,000 marks. The comparison with an American oil company is not so good. We will take an insurance company. The oil companies take a chance sometimes and always lay out some dough on development but the insurance companies like the gambling joint, invest nothing and take no chances.

THAT it makes no difference how one gets the money, provided he manages to dodge the hangman in getting it, is proven by the high esteem in which Basil Zaharoff, the multi-millionaire Greek, is held among the chancelleries of Europe. Zaharoff made most of his money running a gambling den in Monte Carlo. During the war he helped out the British and was honored by the British government. He was also behind various Greek revolutions in the interest of the British government. "It is interesting to observe," comments a Monaco correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune "that a number of shares of stock are owned by religious organizations." Afid so it is but not surprising.

THE "duce"—this is what the black-shirt dictator of Italy calls himself—has provided the unfortunate people of that country with another weekly sensation. He has issued a decree reducing rents. His famous "charter of labor" was at the expense of the workers and according to reliable information its promulgation was followed by strikes and by armed uprisings in several parts of Italy. If there is anything to Mussolini's latest move, it is merely an effort to placate the masses. Benito is sitting on a volcano. After all, a minority cannot forever hold the majority in check even by means of violence when the policy of the minority is detrimental to the interests of the majority.

AMERICAN PLUTES PLANNED TO KILL SOVIET LEADERS

Made Especial Effort to Murder Krassin

MOSCOW, June 20.—Eight to ten thousand francs was the price paid in advance to white guards by the imperialist, bank, oil and industrial magnates for the murder of well-known leaders of the Soviet Union, says Izvestia editorial commenting on confessions made by captured spies.

Particularly strenuous efforts were made to assassinate M. Krassin by the British Secret Service, Anglo-American business men and the Noble Company, the editorial says.

Referring to the howl of "indignation" that the capitalist press has raised over the execution of the twenty white guards, the Izvestia says, "Had not the signal been given for a new series of terrorist acts, many of the twenty executed white guardists would now be alive? Workers and peasants would have forgotten their great revolutionary responsibilities if they had not answered by a straight blow to these cowardly attacks from behind."

The Izvestia continues:

"The workers and peasants have given a terrible lesson to the capitalist world by proving that the big stick is not always in the hands of one class.

"Points to White Terror.

Answering charges of the hypocritical British press that the execution of the twenty White Guards was "barbaric," Pravda points out that in the first ten months of 1926, 856 Communists were killed and almost 10,000 imprisoned in Bulgaria; that in the United States during the first six months of 1926, forty-two workers were killed by the ruling class and 1,000 imprisoned today. The increased death rate was attributed to the influenza epidemic in the spring of last year.

Feng Prepares for New Advance on Peking

SHANGHAI, June 20.—Armed revolts against the right wing are imminent in Canton according to reports received here. Workers and peasants in Kwantung Province are reported to be arming themselves to take over the government of the province and end the right wing reign of terror.

A worker was killed by the police when the right wing authorities attempted to break up a huge protest meeting against the Chiang Kai-sheks terrorism. Following the murder of the worker, thousands of demonstrators proceeded to the government offices and demanded the immediate punishment of the murderers.

Reports received here from Canton several days ago stated that two regiments have revolted against Chiang Kai-shek in Fukien Province and had declared their allegiance to the Hankow government. Other dispatches received here report armed revolts against Chiang Kai-shek throughout the southern provinces. Chiang's fall according to these reports seems to be imminent.

CONFLICTS RISE BETWEEN POWERS AT GENEVA MEET

United States Resents British Demands

GENEVA, June 20.—The conference for reduction of naval armaments opened here today with representatives of three countries, the United States, England and Japan as regular delegates, while France had an observer and Italy had a "reporter," to inform the fascist murderer, Mussolini, of the diplomatic maneuvers carried on openly and secretly.

At the first session the antagonisms between the three powers flared forth, proving that the struggle in the Pacific for control of China and the Far East, determines their policies.

Extend Washington Program.

Hugh Gibson, chief of the American delegation, proposed that the ratio agreed upon at the Washington conference of 1921-22 be extended to cover all remaining classes of naval craft. That ratio was 5-5-3—equal forces for the United States and a three-fifths strength for Japan.

Following the cheap propaganda of the Coolidge administration which puts forth a crude pacifism as a cloak for its imperialist plundering and its preparations for new wars, Gibson indulged in a great deal of twaddle about peace, elimination of competition in naval armaments, etc.

Britain Opposes Plan.

The spokesman for Great Britain, the Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty in the tory cabinet of forgery, murder and provocation, proposed reduction of the tonnage of ships to 7,500, so that the maximum cruising radius from a naval base would be 2,000 miles. This is favorable to Britain because she has a world-wide chain of naval bases and the greatest distance that separates any two of them is 1,600 miles, while the closest United States base to Japan is 3,400 miles distance.

Japan Has Own Program

Admiral Viscount Saito, representing the new Tanaka cabinet of Japan, which favors the revival of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, scrapped at the Washington conference, opposes the application of the 5-5-3 ratio to auxiliary vessels and if the United States presses such a proposal in the tri-parite naval conference Japan will reserve the right to raise the question of naval bases, and will particularly suggest restrictions regarding the bases at Hawaii, it was learned today. Saito declared that the extension of the 5-5-3 ratio to lesser craft was dangerous. Such radical departure from existing conditions as may be calculated to shake the foundations on which a nation's sense of security rests should be carefully avoided," declared Saito.

The general shiftiness and evasiveness of the Japanese delegation

GOLD AND THIRTY-EIGHTH CONVENTION DELEGATES SELECTED FOR JAILING

Matthew Woll's Gangsters Use Iron Bars to Batter Wienick, Englander, Glantzman

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

Gangsters broke loose in the fur district yesterday and slugged and carved three officials of the Joint Board. Lead pipes, knives and steel bars littered the sidewalk after the attack as the yeggs fled from the scene of the outrage.

It is hard to indulge in impartial news reporting after a dose of New York's gangsters. Impartiality aids and abets the enemy.

The enemies are gangsters—tight-waisted and dapper, "hopheads" and sluggers from the dives on the east side. Kid Dropper's gang, Curly's gang, Frenchy's gang, Matthew Woll, A. F. of L. renegade—suave and "impartial"—McGrady—the Association of Fur Manufacturers—Cohen & Kalbfleish, boss furriers—Americanism—the New York Times—the blue-bellied cops armed with cold-looking gats—police connivance.

Wholesale Arrests.

As 38 of the left wing delegates to the Washington Convention of the International Fur Workers' Union appeared on the picket line yesterday morning the police swooped down and without the slightest provocation arrested all of them.

Gold in Police Net.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board was amongst those arrested. Gold's appearance on the picket line was the signal for an enthusiastic turn-out. The fur district between 22nd and 30th Street between Fifth and Seventh Avenues was jammed with thousands of fur strikers.

Delegates Slugged.

At 8.15 a taxi dashed to the east curb of Sixth Avenue between 22nd and 23rd Street. six gangsters hurled themselves upon a group of furrier delegates and in a fraction of a minute Sam Wienick, a Joint Board furrier delegate was lying unconscious on the sidewalk. Harry Englander, a left wing delegate from Toronto was bit on the shoulder with a steel bar and his clothing was badly torn. Phillip Glantzman, a New York delegate was brutally beaten on the body. Metal pipes beating on human heads make an ugly sound. Wienick was taken to a nearby drug store where first aid was administered. His clothing was splashed with blood and being of slight physique he wilted under the excrutiating pain. Not a sound escaped from his lips however. He continually asked that news of his condition be kept from his wife.

Morris Langer, another furrier delegate of Newark was also slugged.

400 Police on Job.

The police doubled their forces in the fur district yesterday. There were over 400 uniform cops on hand to see that "justice" was done. It was, as Wienick and co-workers will testify, a cordon of police, in some cases fifteen feet apart, ringed the district. It would have been impossible to sneeze without a cop being aware of it. Still a gang of armed thugs managed to wound and maim a group of peaceful picketing workers—and get out of the heavily policed area without an arrest. There were at least twenty police on every street in the district. There are none so blind as those who will not see.

They Brutal

They managed to spot over 150 picketers who managed to get into groups of more than five and were immediately hustled over to the 7th Precinct Police Station on 30th Street. During these mass arrests it is always interesting to contrast the fine, intelligent faces of the furriers with the brutal, beefy faces of their captors.

Armed Camp.

The fur district yesterday looked like an armed camp. Mounted police clattered and tore up one street and down another. Groups of newspaper photographers stood huddled about their flash pans ready for action. Reporters with blue cards in their hatbands accompanied the plain-clothes men in search of action.

The usual scene of police brutality was enacted at the 7th Precinct Police station as the arrested picketers were being shoved into the Black Maria. Fur fine points in brutal meanness go to a New York cop. A shove with his stick in the small of the back, a twist of a girl's wrist are but a few of the methods which are employed.

Courageous Girls.

As one girl was being jammed into the "wagon" a push from the back sent her sprawling on her face. Her comrades were singing the workers'

GOLD, RELEASED, SAYS CONTINUED PICKETING WINS

Gigantic Meetings Hear Of Fake Convention

The importance of a strong picket line as a means of victory, was emphasized by every speaker at two large enthusiastic strike meetings of furriers held last night at Cooper Union and Webster Hall.

When Ben Gold, who had just been released from jail after his arrest on the picket line in the morning, mounted the platform at Cooper Union the assembled workers cheered themselves hoarse for over ten minutes. Hats, newspapers and everything else available were thrown into the air as a means of showing the feeling of the audience.

Poke Fun at Rights.

Gold described the Washington "convention" in a humorous fashion. He mentioned that Oizer Schachtman the retiring president of the International felt very proud as he sat between William Green and Matthew Woll on the convention platform.

Gold told the eager listeners of a conversation he had with Green in Washington at which Green told of his opposition to mass picketing.

Only 50 Strikers.

"Green told me," continued Gold, "that only 50 furriers are on strike in New York. I volunteered to produce

I. R. T. PURCHASE BY CITY SEEN AS BIG PROFIT DEAL

Scheme Delights Wall St. and Tammany Hall

Samuel Untermyer's investigations of the traction situation has finally culminated in a concrete plan by which the city is to purchase a controlling interest in the Interborough Rapid Transit and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit companies.

The tentative plan, outlined by Untermyer to the Morgan and Rockefeller interests, and concurred in by members of the Transit Commission and the Board of Transportation, provides for acquisition of the I. R. T.'s property for a comparatively small amount of cash and the exchange of city bonds for bonds of the company.

Some Neat "Profits".

The scheme as described by the famous corporation lawyer includes the purchase of the stock of the I. R. T. at about 30, which would involve a payment of $10,00 ,000.

By a curious admission of members of the transit commission this figure is considerably higher than was paid by officers of the B.-M. T. when they began to purchase I. R. T. stock.

Big Cross Consulted.

The negotiations have gone beyond the stage of "conference," it being admitted that Untermyer has already discussed the plan with members of J. P. Morgan's firm representing the Interborough bondholders, and with the Rockefeller interests, which have heavy holdings in the Manhattan Railway Company, the elevated lines of which the Interborough operates under a lease.

It is thus easy to see why the so-called "unification plan" has evoked such unanimous enthusiasm in Wall Street and City Hall.

Call U. S. Railroad Act A Bosses' Conspiracy

The Watson Parker Railway Act was attacked as a conspiracy against the railroad workers and the entire labor movement, in a resolution bitterly condemning this act and instructing licensing officers to initiate a campaign for its repeal, which was adopted in the fourth day of the Switchmen's convention now meeting in this city. The resolution declares that the law was adopted in consequence of an agreement entered into between the R. R. companies and the chief executives of the standard railway unions, without the consent of the membership of these unions and that it embodies the most hateful features of the Kansas Industrial Law against which the miners of that state fought successfully.

For Joint Demands

Pointing out that Since 1921 when the railroad companies made heavy reductions in the wages of all the workers in the industry, the profits of the companies have been breaking all previous records and that in 1926 the profits of the companies were doubled as compared to the 1921 figure, the convention in another resolution, condemned as inadequate and insufficient the increases being granted by the mediation and arbitration boards that have been set up by the government with the consent of the union chiefs.

This resolution calls upon the officers of the Switchmen's union to communicate with the heads of other unions in the industry for the purpose of presenting joint demands for a general increase in the wages of all railroad workers.

For the Porters

Other resolutions adopted pledge support to the Pullman porters and urged that the new Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters be recognized as one of the standard railway unions; demand release of Sacco and Vanzetti; express solidarity with the Nationalist movement in China and call upon the government to cease its intervention in that country; condemn the company unions and call for an extensive campaign of education in the principles of real unionism and declares for a revival of the Plumb Plan Leagues as a means to nationalization of the railways.

Officials Appear Helpless

A lively discussion is expected on the special report of the International Vice Presidents who have reported on the standing of the organization and the decline in membership which has taken place in the last several years.

In their efforts to explain their inability to bring members into the organization and to keep many of those who joined, these "organizers" exposed their total bankruptcy. Some of them went so far as to say that there is no reason why switchmen should join the organization "that we could offer them no inducement to join." According to these officials the switchmen are interested in but one thing—insurance and if they can get cheaper insurance elsewhere they will refuse to join the union. The discussion on these reports will take place in another session.

But, at the adjournment of the session where they were rendered many delegates were heard to remark that the grand lodge officers have apparently been out of the yards too long and therefore unaware of the fact that the switchmen whose wages for eight hours are only $6.64 and whose work is both dangerous and difficult, have many grievances which they can eliminate only if they are organized for militant struggle against the companies. Other delegates remarked that the "Grand Lodge officers speak like insurance-agents rather than as union organizers and leaders."

Rank and File Eager

On the whole the convention shows that the rank-and-file representatives are eager to go forward to build the union and to win better conditions for the switchmen, their leaders are far to their rear and are unable to stimulate and initiate the necessary action. President Cashen, for example lamely answered a resolution from a local on the Great Northern R. R., which criticized him for failing to adopt an aggressive policy in the controversy between the company and the men. He pleaded inability to meet the situation because of the possibility that the members of the B. of R. T. might scab if a strike were called. Yet he had been unable to offer any proposition for meeting that situation.

MINERS CALL FOR SACCO-VANZETTI MEET FOR JULY 3

Huge Protest Meeting In Pittston, Pa.

PITTSTON, Pa., June 20.—Four local unions of the United Mine Workers of America in this district, representing a membership of over 4,500 have issued a call to all labor, political and social organizations to send delegates to the "Save the Lives of Sacco and Vanzetti Conference" to be held on Sunday, July 3, beginning at 11 in the morning.

Locals 1616 and 1689 of Wilkes-Barre; 975 of Olyphant, and 2533 of Parsons, have initiated the call for the conference in a letter sent to the organization who have been invited.

Huge Protest Meeting.

A monster protest meeting is being planned for the night of the conference. Speakers already announced include Bishop Paul Jones, Bishop William Montgomery Brown, Thomas Kenedy, Rinaldo Cappellini, Arturo Giovanetti, and Carlo Tresca.

"The adoption of only resolutions at this stage of the game will not save Sacco and Vanzetti," the communication reads. "Only the mighty arm of the working class can now save the lives of our brothers from the capitalist hangman. The labor movement and their friends cannot permit the execution of these men."

Delegates desiring credentials to the conference are urged to communicate with M. Borich, 58 Taft St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Elect Silverstein President

WASHINGTON, June 20.—After a great deal of chaos and disorder, Philip Silverstein of Brooklyn, was "elected" president of the International Fur Workers Union at the closing session of its "convention" here.

Many were nominated but declined, so in desperation a motion was made by one of the delegates to leave the office of president open, and allow the general executive board to select him later.

Otter Schactman, who was presiding, refused to accept the motion claiming that it was not constitutional. "If the convention cannot decide who they want for president and vote, to leave it to the general executive board, they will have to change the constitution," declared Schactman.

Plenty of Disorder

Confusion then set supreme in the convention hall. Seeing that the meeting was in disorder, an adjournment was held to "talk over the matter."

After the end of the recess it was announced that Silverstein would accept the presidency of the union.

H. Begcon was selected as general secretary treasurer. The other members of the general executive board are: I. Charles Geminar, Peter Loeb, S. Pelgera, Charles Stesky, Frank Corr, J. Mifsteing H. Kalmak, M. Fusha, M. Harris, I. Dessen and I. Winnick.

Feinstone Wants "Unity"

Morris Feinstone, of the United Hebrew Trades of New York addressed the "convention" as the representative of the red-baiting Committee For the Preservation of Trade Unions. LOSES JOB FOR LEAK IN PLANS FOR MEXICO WAR

Sheffield May Follow Military Attache

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Because he was careless enough to permit certain documents containing the state department's plans for fomenting a clerical revolution in Mexico, to get into the hands of President Calles, Colonel Edward Davis, American military attache to Mexico City, has lost his job.

The documents were a startling revelation of the state department's Mexican policy. They not only called for cooperation with oil barons and religious fanatics in fomenting a revolution in Mexico, but are said to have contained plans for the actual invasion of the country by American troops.

How the documents, which are beyond a shadow of a doubt authentic, got into the hands of President Calles, remains a mystery. It is known, however, that they were removed from the office of Colonel Davis—and Colonel Davis is as a result without his job.

Sheffield May Go, Too.

Although the war department has maintained the strictest silence about the incident, it is known that the secretary of war and Assistant Secretary of State Olds were considerably worried about it. Repeated conferences were held and Colonel Davis was recalled from Mexico City.

It is definitely known that Ambassador Sheffield and Secretary of State Davis have been conferring about the leak in American plans for an open war on Mexico. That Ambassador Sheffield will also lose his job as a result of the incident is more than likely.

Washington Resents Proposals

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Great Britain's counter proposals to the American naval program, presented at Geneva today, met an unfavorable reception in Washington today.

Public comment was, of course, withheld, but frank criticism of the British suggestions was voiced privately by naval experts and officials intimately concerned with the world naval situation.

The heart of the British program is considered to be the suggestion that the tonnage of cruisers be limited to 7,500, and that the armament be reduced from 8-inch guns to 6-inch guns.

Naval experts consider this proposal a clever move on the part of Britain's experts to gain for their country a marked advantage in cruiser strength. The "joker" in it is that Britain circles the globe with her naval bases, and long cruising radius is not vitally necessary to her because of the comparatively short distances between her bases.

Rasing Calvin Coolidge.

The political sharp-shooters in Washington see in the early collapse of the naval conference another chance to roast Cal Coolidge. Refusing to participate in conferences called by the other powers, the white house pee-wee decided to call one of his own. France and Italy received invitations, but flatly refused to participate. Only Britain and Japan accepted and at the first session, a very short one, the antagonisms between the powers were so evident that the confab is now referred to as a joke and speculation is rife as to what sort of an apology for its failure the republican committee will instruct its publicity agents to make to save the face of Coolidge.

Although the Pope did not specify any of the "heroic acts" of the clergy, it is presumed that he referred to the burning of a trainful of men, women and children by clerical bandits several weeks ago.

The Riffian Fight for Freedom Is Still On

By [illegible] (Madrid)

The French and Spanish imperialists, the successors of Abd-el-Krim, are now at the problem of Riffian domination. The Bank de France at Paris and the French colonies, the Spanish-African Mining Corporation, the Spanish business magnates, all thought that the moment had come for exploiting, unopposed, the rich resources of the mining belt in Morocco. Since June, 1926, numbers of Spanish and French industrial firms have sent their representatives to Morocco to study conditions there with a view to establishing commercial branches.

But Morocco is not yet a conquered country. The Riffian loves his independence; he takes his momentary defeat philosophically, and waits patiently for the moment when he can strike another blow to free his country from imperialist domination.

An Unexpected War.

Once more the Riffians have started war; this time before it was expected or wished by Poincare and Primo de Rivera. There is a recrudescence of rebellion in the whole of the territory between Targuist and Chechaouen, extending south to the frontier of French Morocco. All the tribes in this large area are well armed with rifles, machine-guns and field artillery.

Three Spanish advance posts have been captured in the Gomara tribe district by followers of Kaid Bondara. In the Beni Ider tribe district a post near El Tikta was attacked, 18 Spanish soldiers and war material captured. A column of Spanish troops, after desperate fighting, succeeded in relieving an advance post.

His Command Captured.

Major Ostaris, in command of a convoy, was attacked and the greater part of his command captured. The Ostaris column immediately turned back to the relief of the convoy, but fell into ambush and was cut up. The remnant of the column and the survivors of the convoy, in all about 400 men, were stated to be holding out with difficulty in the village of Adrian.

Under a vigorous Riffian counter-attack the Spanish were forced to retire northward. The Spanish posts of Tagsut, Ketama, Benizernal and Tabarran have been attacked with heavy casualties.

Line Fighters.

The Riffian is an individualist warrior. He knows how to fight by himself, and it is only when the situation seems to require the leadership of a Chief that the bravest of the fighters is chosen to lead.

Abd-el-Krim was a leader of extraordinary merit. In Morocco, due to his commanding personal qualities; but his defection has not left the Riffs entirely without leadership. About a month ago, Sheres Sulitin Klamlishi, formerly an ally of Spain and an important personage in Spain, seceded, with several members of his family, and went over to the Riffs. This brought matters to a head in the Shlaija district. The Ketama tribe, the protectorate, neighbors of the Beni Seddat, rose, and on March 30th invaded the tribe of Tarjut, which promptly joined the revolt. The Spanish Garrison of an important strategical post at Beb Sith, judging the position untenable, crossed the frontier and took refuge in the French protectorate. The effect upon the neighboring tribes was to induce them, also to raise the standard of revolt.

To cope with this vigorous attack of the Riffians the French and Spanish imperialists are preparing another military offensive in collaboration. Colonel LeGendre, of the French army, has been in conference with General Sanjurjo, the Spanish High Commissioner, and the counter-attack was scheduled for May. The antagonisms of the French and Spanish in Morocco, however, make it extremely unlikely that this collaboration will be effective. There is intense jealousy between the two nations, and the Spanish imperialists have constantly accused the French colonists of furnishing guns to the Spanish zone Riffians. It is only when the Riffians menace the "Protectorate Zones" of both countries that they combine for mutual defense.

A Marrocan Demonstration.

The last Riffian offensive took place when the discussion on Tangier at the Paris Conference was at its most critical point. After the surrender of Abd-el-Krim, Primo de Rivera, contending that Spain had "pacified" Morocco, proposed that the Tangier problem be "solved" by granting Tangier to Spain. This had long been one of the cherished dreams of the Spanish-African League. But before the end of the Conference, the Riffians had demonstrated in a very conclusive manner that Morocco belonged to the natives and not to the Spanish imperialists.

Must Be Independent.

In spite of all the conclusions signed at the Conference of Algiers in 1912, at Madrid in 1925, and at the recent Paris Conference, shining up Morocco and distributing it among the imperialists of Europe, the unregenerate Riffians continue to demonstrate, by force of arms and with intrepid bravery, that Morocco must be independent.

But the Moroccan war has not ended. The sympathy of the workers of the world, and particularly of the class-conscious vanguard in the Communist Parties of all countries, have always been with the Riffians in their struggle for independence. This sympathy, in the form of moral support, exposure of lying anti-Riffian imperialist propaganda, and financial and material assistance, must be sustained and strengthened to prevent the crushing of the struggle for liberty.

Protest British Imperialism in China

By THE HINDUSTAN GADAR.
(India's National Party)

INDIA'S nationalists, all over the world, in co-operation with the oppressed humanity, are interested in the destruction of British Imperialism. They know full well that unless it is destroyed, there can be no peace on the face of this earth; there can be no freedom for India and other enslaved countries.

It was Lincoln who said that there can not be such a thing as a nation half free and half slave. What was true of one country then, is true of all humanity today. Due to modern means of communication, mankind is functioning as one organism. Any one part of this organism can not grow healthy while other parts are paralyzed and diseased. A large part of humanity is suffering under the bondage of slavery on account of British Imperialism. This condition must be removed.

AS British Imperialism has taken, and is taking, a very dangerous attitude in its international affairs whereby no nation can make any move without disturbing this monster to its fury, it is this function of British Imperialism that should be destroyed before it destroys everything else worth while in life.

A small number of Englishmen have constituted themselves into the so-called British Empire. They have forced their will by fair and foul means upon one-third of mankind, and extracted the very life of the people in the subjected countries.

The gold acquired by unfair means from suffering mankind is being used to manufacture dreadnaughts, gas bombs, explosives, and other deathdealing devices for the wholesale destruction of Europe as well as Asia. The late war is a living example of this British scandalism in which the cream of western civilization was destroyed.

To protect this highly destructive and savage British Empire, every able bodied Englishman is conscripted against his will. Thus even the best element in England is destroyed, and only a few politicians are left free to play with human lives like pawns on a chess board.

IT is the duty of every liberty-loving person to help destroy British Imperialism which is the real enemy of human freedom and world peace.

By questioning the audacity of this gang of international conspirators, the British Imperialists, the Hindu Nationalists have provoked their fury. The British have called the Hindu Nationalists by different names at different times. During the late war the Hindus were called German agents. Now in China the Hindus are being called Russian agents. No one knows what they will be called in the future. The object of the British in calling the Hindus of China by names is to alienate the sympathy and friendship of the Chinese toward Hindus so that Indian Nationalists may not keep their fellow countryman (Indian soldiers) from fighting against China.

HINDUSTAN GADAR (India's National) party assures the people of China that the Nationalist Hindus are their true friends. All that the Hindus in China are interested in is to see that British Imperialism does not use Indian men and money against China. They have no business to interfere with China's internal affairs. We warn our Chinese brothers against the tricks of British propaganda.

Nationalists of India have tried to help China by advising their fellow countrymen who were brought over as mercenaries, not to fire upon the people of China.

The fact that the British Courts in Shanghai are busy trying several cases of "sedition" proves that the Hindus have done their best.

Several Hindus have been sent to jail for distributing revolutionary literature among the Indian soldiers.

WE hear that Bodah Singh who was known to be a British agent in Shanghai has been shot by Bhai Harbant Singh. The British have taken advantage of this incident. They have arrested men who were known to have taken part in the national movement. A charge of conspiracy has been filed against them.

[illegible] Singh, Bhola Singh, has been instructed to prove the charges. It is the common belief that these men are being implicated simply because they are Nationalists.

Two Indian revolutionists, Bhai Daswandha Singh, now a citizen of China, and Bhai Gulinda Singh, who were doing their duty toward China and India have been arrested by the British police on Chinese territory. Thus Britain has violated international law and has insulted China's sovereignty. The British who call themselves protectors of small and weak nations have proved by their actions in China that they do the opposite of what they preach.

Wa wish to emphasize the fact to the Chinese people that Brother Daswandha Singh who has been arrested along with Brother Galinda Singh on Chinese territory, is a citizen of China.

CHINA in her present situation may not be able to effect the release of these Hindu political refugees from the British, but she can certainly lodge a strong protest against this action. Decent public opinion expects this much at least from the government of China.

The Hindustan Gadar Party has filed a strong protest with Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek against this high-handed action of the British government.

We urge upon all the fair minded people of the world particularly our own countrymen to raise their voices in protest against this atrocious action of the British authorities.

We appeal to the people of China to do all that is in their power to have these Hindus released and to give the right of asylum to all those who are helping the cause of China's freedom.

Hindustan Gadar Party.
Munsha Singh, Secretary.

"The Were Wolf."

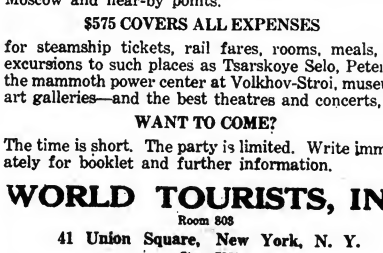
The other fascist organizations try not to lag behind the "Steel Helmet." There are other fascist organizations, just as influential, if their membership is somewhat less. Such are: the "Jung Deutsche Orden" with a membership of 60,000 and "The Were Wolf" supported by the automobile industrialists, with about 40,000 members, both of which organizations also endeavor to set up their nuclei in the factories. The former is able to boast of certain successes among the Thuringen leather workers. In some leather enterprises with 500 to 1,000 workers, the Jung D. L. has 50 to 100 members in its nuclei. "The Were Wolf" has gained some ground among the Helsenkirchen miners.

The fascist made zealous use of the sport organizations got up by the employers in the factories in the hope of reconciling the workers to the fascists. These Sport Associations have thousands of working-class members who are regarded by the fascist as reserves for their own organizations.

Scabbing Real Purpose.

It goes without saying that during strikes and other conflicts the leaders of fascist organizations force the members of their nuclei to scab. This adaptation to the direct advantage of the employers is the touchstone of fascist work in the factories. A succession of conflicts taking place during the last few months in Germany have already considerably shaken the fascist factory nuclei. Brought face to face with the inexorable fact of the class struggle many fascist nuclei showed themselves to be bankrupt. The last elections to factory-committees have shown that the workers, entering fascist organizations to better themselves rapidly, have begun to leave them as soon as this aim is fulfilled. In many enterprises with from one to two hundred workers organized in fascist nuclei, the fascist candidates got less than half of the nuclei membership in votes. The same rapid de facto withdrawal of the workers from fascist organizations was noticeable during the recent industrial conflicts. The strike of textile workers in the North-German Cloth-manufacturing Concern affords vivid testimony of this. The employers became involved in this conflict despite the boom in the textile industry, trusting in the assistance of the fascist nuclei in the Concern's enterprises. The workers were, however, solid, and the leaders of "factory fascism" in the enterprises of the Concern were thrown over by their own members.

It must also be remembered that, with the increase of the number of fascists in the factories it has become more and more difficult for the employers to give them privileged positions. All these points must be born in mind when the partial successes of the fascists in the factories are spoken of.



Fascism Degenerates.

German fascism has degenerated into an armed hattalion of the big bourgeoisie. It supplements the machinery of capitalism in the State and the army. This, in the main, explains the fact that the Reformists, a few years ago breathing fire against the fascists, no longer wage struggle against them even on oral campaign. This also explains the attitude taken up by the reformist unions and S. D. Party during the last "Steel Helmet" demonstration in Berlin. This demonstration, during which the fascists were admitted even by the capitalist press to have "run the gauntlet of the hostile Berlin workers," proved a fiasco entirely owing to the brilliant anti-fascist campaign waged by the Communist Party. The failure of the 8th of May Fascist demonstration shows that the broad masses are alive to the dangers with which fascism threatens them and ready to struggle with them. Fascism, springing up in a capitalist State in inherently incapable of being implanted in the masses of the workers for long. In the daily class struggle it is forced to show its true features, and stands unmasked as the traditional foe of the working class. None the less does the struggle with fascism become the most urgent task before the German working class, any blow struck at fascism being at the same time a blow at the whole capitalist State.

The Geneva Naval Conference Opens.

Doomed to failure to achieve its avowed purpose because of the insurmountable antagonisms between the great imperialist powers involved—the United States, England and Japan—the naval conference has opened at Geneva. Called by President Coolidge, who extended invitations to the powers, it was ignored by France and Italy, leaving only the three powers most interested in the Pacific to conduct the thing.

At the very first session the antagonisms between America and Britain stood forth in glaring relief. The American delegate, Hugh Gibson, proposed that the 5-5-3 ratio of capital ships accepted by Britain, America and Japan at the Washington conference (1921-22) be extended to include all naval craft. Britain, since the former conference, has been busily engaged in strengthening her naval power by concentrating on those war-boats not included in the agreement reached at Washington. Hence the United States desires to weaken its great imperialist rival through extending the ratio to apply to its smaller craft. In presenting its counter-proposals Britain, through its delegate, W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, proposed reducing the tonnage of the ships, so that the maximum distance from bases of supplies is 2,000 miles. This is a direct blow to the influence of the United States in the Pacific, whose nearest naval base to Japan is 3,400 miles, as opposed to Britain's world-wide chain of naval bases, the maximum distance between any two of its ports being only 1,650 miles.

There will be much talk at Geneva about peace, the preparations for the next world slaughter will be concealed by long speeches about commercial and industrial needs. But no one should be deceived about this conference or any other called by the imperialist powers.

It is quite true that capitalist and imperialist America must maintain a naval power equal to or greater than Britain. Its ships, reduced to a cruising radius of 2,000 miles, would be helpless in case of a war in the Pacific. Furthermore, although this country boasts of its self-sufficiency, the modern industrial area finds us ever more dependent upon the rest of the world. Without a fleet that can guard the commercial channels this country would soon be crippled in a struggle in the Pacific. American industry is dependent for a great deal of its raw material upon imports from overseas. The automobile industry must have continuous imports of rubber, most of which comes from across the Pacific. The steel industry, absolutely essential in warfare, must import manganese and other raw material or become crippled. Hence acceptance of the British counter-proposals are unthinkable from the imperialist standpoint.

It is particularly noteworthy that the three powers most interested in the Pacific held the conference in spite of the refusal of France and Italy to participate. Events in the Far East doom such a conference to failure and the powers involved know it. But they utilize it for the purpose of trying to get a line on the military strength of their opponents.

Japan's alleged position, stated by Admiral Viscount Saito, is to prevent expansion of armament, to prevent a mad competition in the building of naval power, "without at the same time endangering the national security of any party to the agreement." This is plainly an evasion and Japan has indicated as much by letting it become known that she will raise the question of naval bases and will demand restrictions on bases in Hawaii. Saito's open and secret diplomacy at the conference follows the line of Britain and again indicates that the Japanese cabinet of Tanaka is reviving the old Anglo-Japanese alliance that was scrapped with Britain's approval at the Washington conference because during the world war while the other powers were fighting in Europe Japan endeavored to seize for herself all of China through the imposition of her notorious "21 points."

The United States is interested in this conference as a means of endeavoring to ascertain just how far this new alliance has gone.

Geneva, headquarters of international intrigue, is today a checkerboard on which the three powers struggling for supremacy in the Pacific will try to gain advantages over each other. The sharp division revealed at the first session only emphasizes the contention that the powers are preparing to contest on the field of wars what can never be realized around conference tables.

It is the duty of the Communist press of the three nations involved to carefully watch this game at Geneva, expose its fraudulent character and emphasize the war menace arising out of the clash of interests.

While the imperialists are scheming to devise new methods of murder and sparring for time before they plunge the world into another mass murder the workers of the countries involved must strengthen their ties so that we can utilize the political and economic crises arising out of the war to turn the armed forces against the imperialist butchers.

Hoover's Criminal Neglect of Flood Victims.

After weeks of procrastination official announcement comes from Washington that Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, will again leave for the flooded area and start the operation of the machinery built up to relieve the victims of the flood disaster. The kept press has aided the criminal neglect of the government by killing Hoover, the buzzard whose career has been devoted to capitalizing calamity in war, famine and flood, as the savior of these victims, while the 600,000 homeless wandered in bewildered hordes over the devastated regions. Disease is spreading rapidly as the waters recede and the thousands of dead and decomposed animals and foul make the areas almost uninhabitable.

Meanwhile Coolidge carries on his political vacation in the Black Hills, instead of doing his obvious duty and calling a special session of congress to deal with the flood situation. This neglect is one of the most monstrous crimes ever perpetrated against any inhabitants of any country in the world. Every day powerful, with the most opulent ruling class on earth, the flood victims could have been relieved within forty-eight hours. But there is no profit to be gained from saving the poor prosperity and the lives of the workers and farmers of the cotton region.

The cynical disregard of these victims proves again that the American capitalist class places dollars above human life.

The only reason that at this late date Hoover is going to begin that relief that he has collected millions of dollars to put into effect is because the cotton crop is in grave danger. A drought in Western Texas has sent the cotton market on a bullish rampage, with prices soaring. Its rapid advance on the stock market during the past week is the outstanding phenomenon on Wall Street and with fully half of the land originally overflowed again under water in Mississippi and Arkansas, the cotton outlook is indeed gloomy. Also the bol-weevil, that pest that destroys vast areas in the cotton region, is more menacing than ever this year. It is for these reasons and not because the government has suddenly felt qualms of conscience for its criminal neglect of the flood victims that Hoover is making efforts to get the tardy relief started.

Smash the Traction Company Union.

While facts brought to light regarding the brazen steals, the monster profits and the frightful overcrowding of the subway and elevated lines are of first rate interest to workers, inasmuch as they expose the financial juggling of the directors, always pleading poverty, the workers will be interested chiefly in the revelations regarding the manner in which the traction slaves are forced into a fake union, dominated by company agents in order to keep them from organizing into a real union. On numerous occasions this spurious union has cut the wages of the traction workers and any who dared challenge its power were kicked off the job.

An injunction against the leaders of the brave workers who went on strike last year has aided the traction barons keep their workers in leash. But the revelations of the present traction investigation have given new impetus to union organization and every worker rejoices at the announcement that the majority of the workers are ready to break with the fake union and follow the leadership of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, in spite of the ravings of Tammany judges. Action should be taken at once against the tyranny of company unionism.

At this time, when the affairs of the traction combines are in turmoil, when the public is thoroughly disgusted with the revelations regarding the thieving practices of the companies, the workers should strike and strike hard.

They should refuse to heed the palaver in the Wall Street press about tying up a public utility and causing public suffering and inconvenience. Other workers will overcome traffic problems of going to and from work while the men who slave in the subways fight to establish their union or will even be willing to remain idle until the fight is won.

Labor in New York will be solidly behind a traction strike and if the leaders of the union have the courage to launch a determined strike against the company, they can win, hands down, in a short time.

Labor Party Gains in British Election.

Right Wing Labor.

Thomas Johnson, a native of England and leader of the Irish Labor Party is closer politically to the former government party than to the Republicans. He is an imperialist of the Ramsay MacDonald stamp but sometimes outdoes his Irish henchmen in nationalist contemporaries by his professions of love for Ireland. He represents the extreme right wing of the Labor Party, but is a clever parliamentarian and there being no organized Left Wing of any consequence, either in the Labor Party or in the trade union movement, Johnson's leadership encounters little opposition.

No Love For Empire.

But the workers and peasants who vote for the Labor Party members have no love for the Free State government or for the British empire that is behind it and this fact compels Johnson to make a pretence of opposition to the former Free State government.

William Cosgrave, president of the Dail, has declined to form a government, which means that political chaos will exist unless the anti-treaty forces form an alliance for the purpose of organizing a government or to demand a revision of the treaty that created the Free State. This would mean a serious crisis for Great Britain, since it is almost certain that the Republicans would put up a serious fight against being obliged to take the oath as a condition of participating in the work of parliament.

The Other Groups.

Besides the so-called government party (Cummann na Ngaedheal,) Fianna Fail, DeValera's party and the Labor Party, there are: the Sinn Fein Party, which was almost completely wiped out in the elections, the Farmers Party which elected 11 deputies, the Independents composed of stragglers from other parties—there are 14 of them, and the new National League Party, a revival of the old parliamentary party, which returned 8 deputies.

Unless Cosgrave, leader of the Treaty Party is able to come to an agreement with some sections of the opposition he will not be able to form a government, provided the republicans gag at the taking of the oath and refuse to take their seats in consequence. It is rumored that there are signs of a rapprochement between the Cosgrave and DeValera groups and that there is a possibility that the former may agree not to make taking the oath obligatory on the DeValera followers. The powerful influence of the catholic hierarchy is being brought to bear on the DeValera and Cosgrave factions with a view to bringing about peace between them.

Newspaper correspondents see signs of a rapprochement in the presence of both DeValera and Cosgrave at a catholic service whose aim was to secure the blessing of the holy ghost for the next Dail. What a mythical holy ghost can do in the premises may be understood by those who still believe in the spooky conception of the birth of the founder of christianity, but we are convinced it will take more than ghosts to solve the problems that confront the Irish masses.

For Big Demonstration.

What may happen next Thursday when the deputies arrive to take their seats is yet a matter of speculation. Orders for a giant Republican demonstration outside the parliament building on that day have been issued from the headquarters of the De-Valeralists. Whether the Labor Party is taking any steps to arouse the masses and draw them into mass political activity cannot be gathered from the meager reports that reach us. Very likely not. The conservative labor leaders demand only of the masses that they cast their ballots. For the rest they can leave the job

"The Beggar's Opera" Here Next Season

"The Beggar's Opera," as London revived it, is to be heard in America next season. Arthur Hopkins is booking the "unconventional" version for J. C. Duff, the London producer, who is now in London completing arrangements for bringing the entire company over intact, after a run of over four solid years at the Lyric Theatre in Hammersmith, London. "The Beggar's Opera" was written and first produced by John Gay and John Rich at the Lincoln's Inn Field Theatre in London in 1728 where it played for sixty-two nights which was thought to be a remarkable run in those days. The present tour will cover twenty-five weeks on the road followed by New York and Chicago runs.

The opera was first performed in New York in the fall of 1750. The Captain Macheath on this occasion was played by Thomas Kean. The first Boston performance of the operas was in 1796 and the part of "Filch" was played by Joseph Jefferson the grandfather of Joseph Jefferson of Rip Van Winkle fame. The "Folly Peachum" of the early American performances was Mrs. Marshall. The opera was last sung in this country in 1923.

It has been said by a well known critic: "If the Beggar's Opera were cast as 'low-brow' it would certainly give one the impression of being decidedly 'high-brow'." This reference is undoubtedly to the historical data and the famous names attached to the fine old masterpiece. Hogard painted it, Pupell, Dr. Arne, Handel and Dr. Pepuach were drawn on for some of the music. Dean Swift, Pope and Addison made suggestions and contributions to the plot and libretto.

In the revised version Frederic Austin wrote some additional airs and new settings for some of the old music and Arnold Bennett revised the libretto.

AN editorial writer in the Herald-Tribune, famous for its stupid editorials, wipes the Soviet Union off the military map with a few hundred clicks of the typewriters and explains why such powers as Germany desire to continue relations with the U. S. S. R. and even throw an occasional shoulder over the possibility of a Red Army trotting in the general direction of Berlin." . . the military traditions of the empire have led many European governments to take Moscow overseriously" says this scribe. Indeed! What were the military accomplishments of the Czarist empire against any serious antagonist? The slaughter of its own troops, and then a marathon to the protection of the swamps.

ON the other hand the Red Army, nothing but a skeleton in 1917, now developed into a formidable military instrument, waded thru several counter-revolutions and carried the red flag to the farthermost eastern frontiers of the old empire. And its accomplishments from the time of its origin until the last white guard venture bit the dust and the imperialist powers gave up the policy of open war on the workers' republic have left lines on the mental physiognomies of the imperialists that have not yet been eradicated.

MASS PICKETING ISSUED BY LEWIS

(By A Worker Correspondent)

NEW KINGSTON, Pa., June 20.—A mass picketing order was issued today by the United Mine Workers of America in which President Lewis, Vice President Murray, Van A. Bittner and Pat Fagan, Penn., U. S. could subpoena at least five thousand scabs to the meeting to hear those speakers, expecting to have something about picketing these scabs and also for relief, picketing at various other phases of the strike but they were very badly disappointed as not a word was mentioned about those all important subjects.

Instead of organizing a system of relief for the miners and leading mass demonstrations, as the miners now working, they said that the Pittsburg Coal Co. is losing money by operating with scab labor and that the Valley Camp Coal Co. is almost bankrupt. This is unimportant to the coal miners as they are not fighting just those two coal companies but all of the coal operators in the state of Pennsylvania and the rest of the United States. If those two companies would go bankrupt this would not change the miners' problems in the least.

The needs of the miners' union today are the two most important things that Lewis and the other speakers failed to mention, namely, mass picketing and relief for the miners and their families. Without relief funds no strike can be carried on for any length of time. At present there is little or no relief given with the result that there are many who are in actual need. But this did not seem to worry Lewis in the least. What worried him the most was if Jim Paisleys' god would justify the action of the Valley Camp Coal Co. in trying to cut the wages of its miners.

Need Picketing.

Another very important question which all of the speakers failed to mention was picketing. Without picketing no strike can be won. A few pickets can be easily chased away from the mine and therefore can do little or no good. But what is needed is an organized picket line under the leadership of the International, district and sub-district officers, taking in thousands of miners to approach the non-union men and induce them not to scab and break the strike.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Dr. George F. Slater, well-known physician, committed suicide in his home here by drinking poison. He was to have appeared by order of the county coroner, at the inquest into the death of a baby, the young mother, following an alleged "illegal" operation.

UNION PAINTERS OF BROOKLYN NOW RESUME STRIKE

The Brooklyn painters who were forced back to work last April because of an injunction granted by Judge Callahan to be effective until June 19, have been called on strike again and the response shows that the painters are determined to enforce their demands of April.

Not all the painters in Brooklyn are affected for the reason that the majority of them were not under the injunction ban and have already won their demands for increased wages and better conditions.

Most Sign Strike Roll.

Those affected in the present strike were forced back to work because a group of bosses, who organized themselves into an association, claimed that they had an agreement with the union that did not expire until June 19. Hence Callahan issued a court order forcing them to continue under the old conditions until the expiration of the agreement. Yesterday the District Council called out those who were forced to return to work. All of the members who had to obey the court order must stop work and report at strike headquarters, Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby avenue, Brooklyn.

Victory Is Assured.

There is no doubt that the strikers will easily win for the reason that there is a tremendous demand for painters at this time of year and the workers will not tolerate the association forcing its own employees to work below the scale of other painters in Brooklyn who are working under

27 Bricks Hurl on Building Job

The body of Percy Brighouse, 46, found lying in Harper's Row, Brighouse, by the Harper's Row Police.

It was taken there after fellow-workmen had succeeded in extricating it from under a ton of bricks, mortar and dirt.

Brighouse, a signalman, was killed instantly while a huge beam being used in the demolition of a ten-story building at 616 Canal St., snapped in two pieces.

2 in Serious Condition.

Twenty-seven other workers on the same job were injured, two of them seriously, as a result of being struck by flying bricks and mortar.

Another worker, Frank Blase, 32, had a miraculous escape from death. He was standing on one end of a long concrete beam which had just been fastened for removal. He crawled to safety on hands and knees in view of hundreds of horrified passers-by.

Professional Patriots

The "patriotic" organizations, ranging from the wholly reactionary groups like the American Legion to the comparatively patriotic societies. On the other hand, with the exception of the "United States Flag Association," which holds a place on its members' board "in memoriam" for Samuel Gompers, the other organizations make no claim to identify themselves with the official labor movement in any way.

Second, they inspired action by prosecutors and secret service agents of the government in cases that did not deserve attention, as later developments proved, and served only to give some color to hysterical charges about the plot of Reds to overthrow the government;

Third, they prompted various officials to espouse their notions of patriotism in terms of the "Red menace" and to incorporate it in their speeches, reports, articles, and in one case—American Education Week—in an official program. Notable in this latter group were the articles published over the signature of Calvin Coolidge on the "Perils in our Colleges" in the Delineator, in 1921. The material was obviously furnished by these professional patriotic agencies.

Specifically under this general head are the following facts. Documentary evidence or admissions are of course difficult to get in so delicate a field of relations.

1. The personal relations of Mr. Easley of the Civic Federation and Mr. William J. Burns have been close, and were particularly close during Mr. Burns' incumbency in the Department of Justice. Mr. Easley is said to have taken credit for Mr. Burns' appointment.

2. Mr. Burns spent most of his energies in the Bureau attacking Reds, constantly using as an argument for increased appropriations the fact than only the secret service could know the danger and that the danger was so great that many more agents were needed. He officially stated in 1924 that there were "over 600,000 Reds affiliated with Moscow in the United States, ready to overthrow this government." He constantly gave out interviews to this effect, spoke at meetings of the patriotic societies as well as over the radio, attacking various liberal and progressive organizations.

3. Mr. Burns resigned after the retirement from office of Attorney-General Daugherty. Attorney-General Stone at once put the Bureau in its proper place as the legal investigating arm of the Department, and closed its files to inspection by private agencies. He stopped the anti-radical propaganda which had gone out from the Department under his predecessors, Palmer and Daugherty, and none has gone out since.

4. "Mr. Samuel Gompers, though long opposed to Mr. Burns as a labor spy and the representative of anti-union employers, had a common interest with him while he was in the Department. Both were fighting Reds—Mr. Gompers in the unions, Mr. Burns, anywhere. Mr. Easley was the friend of both. So there was, in effect, a most extraordinary alliance—the secret service, organized labor, and big business, all united in a patriotic effort to down radicalism. Mr. Easley in a confidential pamphlet says of the situation:

"It is important to recall here that in 1920, Mr. Burns, knowing of Mr. Gompers' patriotic activities during the war, and also of the fight being made upon him by the Reds, sent to his electrical engineer the employers of the country a confidential circular stating in effect: 'It is important at this time that the employers of the country uphold the hands of Samuel Gompers because the I. W. W. elements are fighting him at every turn; and, without over our opposition to Mr. Gompers' certain questions may be, there is no comparison between present conditions and those which would obtain if the I. W. W. policies should win and the A. F. of L. be destroyed.'"

5. Mr. Easley raised a considerable sum of money to help Mr. Burns finance work in connection with the prosecution of Communists in Michigan, which could not be paid for from public funds.

6. Mr. Burns cooperated with R. M. Whitney of the American Defense Society in publishing the material seized by the state in the Michigan case. This was the property of the government held under a search warrant, yet Mr. Burns allowed Mr. Whitney to use it before the trial, in newspaper articles for which Mr. Whitney was well paid. These articles, incidentally, occasioned a number of libel suits and retractions by the offending papers.

7. It is significant that while giving out information to these patriotic societies, Mr. Burns replied to a letter from the National Council for the Prevention of War requesting to see the evidence he had back of his charges against it:

"I must advise you that it has long been the practice of the Bureau to hold its files confidential and available for confidential use only; and I regret that under this rule it would be impossible for me to answer your inquiry."

THE MAD DOG OF EUROPE

By EUGENE KREININ.

The mad dog spreads venom
In a futile attempt
To extinguish a decade of accomplishments
But the red blood of resistance
Will hurl it back
Upon the head of its perpetrator.

The mad dog is raving.
Its bloody trail of suppression
Is impeded.
The peoples bled white
By unscrupulous blood-hounds
Are throwing off the yoke of banditry.

The mad dog is nervous.
Its age-long supremacy is crashing
On the granite of revolt.

Woe to the mighty lion
Who trembles for its skin.

Mississippi Governor Betrays South's "Fairness" to Negro

By WM. PICKENS

He did mean it to do that, and more. He simply sent the national government a telegram, "in governor's language," protesting against the appointment of Negroes to the Flood Rehabilitation Commission, altho Negroes make up 63 per cent of those to be "rehabilitated."

That one brief telegram from the governor, of Mississippi exposes the South's unfitness to be "let alone" in its dealing with the Negro better than any northern or Negro "radical" could ever have exposed it in a volume on the subject. This attitude of Governor Dennis Murphree (we do not know where he got his name, but he certainly knows how to expose the weakness of his position) exemplifies the best reason why intelligent Negroes should be placed on all the commissions that are to handle this flood situation and the rehabilitation. The best meanings of a foolish man's words are not drawn from their syntactical construction, but from their other implications. Think this over: Negroes will do about all the hard, forced, unscrupulous labor of this rehabilitation; they must slave and

We did our best to bring this situation to the attention of President Coolidge, Secretary Hoover and the Red Cross, even before it happened, by our ordinary reasoning and common sense; but, for having made the short cut clear that even a wayfaring fool could understand it, combined as to Dennis Murphree, "governor of Mississippi."

Will the national government back down before this arrogant attitude? Dr. S. D. Redmond, of Jackson, whom the administration was appointing on this commission, is as competent as any white physician of Mississippi, and is better known than any of them —and will doubtless be much fairer on all questions affecting the white sufferers than any of those other physicians will be on questions affecting the colored sufferers.

News from the U. S. S. R.

The 8th Congress of the Workers of the paper industry of the U.S.S.R., which coincided with the 10th anniversary of the legal existence of the Paperworkers' Union, open in Moscow on May 11th.

In 1917 the paperworkers' union numbered 5,000 members; at present the membership has increased to 43,200.

The paper industry of the U.S.S.R. has reached the pre-war level (the production in 1926 being 263,000 tons as against 220,000 tons in 1913). Together with the growth of the industry, the material position of the paper workers has also improved. The new spinning factory will help to break down this dependence on imported raw materials.

The Finnish Metal Workers' Union has made a proposal to the Metal Workers' Union of U.S.S.R. to sign an agreement by which on entering the union, a foreign trade union worker will be exempted from the payment of entrance fees and be considered a member of the union from the time he originally joined in his own country, and in the event of unemployment has the right to trade union benefit on equal terms with the local workers.

The Metal Workers' Union of the U.S.S.R. has expressed its readiness to sign such an agreement.

Not With Mussolini. .

The central committee of the union of postal, telegraph and telephone workers of the U.S.S.R. has declared against the participation of Soviet telegraphists in the world competition of telegraphists, which is being arranged for the autumn of this year in Como by the Italian Fascist Government.

Norway Workers.

The representative of the Norwegian paper workers, Comrade Sporpind, speaking at the opening of the Congress said:

"The Norwegian workers are engaged in a serious struggle with the employers. The lockout, recently announced by the employers has been going on for 13 weeks. As a result several thousands of workers have been thrown on the streets. The employers demanded a wage-cut of 25 and even 50 per cent. As the workers would not treat, the owners turned to the Government for assistance. A period of the Norwegian workers is very bad. They are carrying on a fight with both the owners and the bourgeois government.

"In conclusion" he concluded Sporpind "that the workers of the whole world and the Russian comrades will support us in our fight. Our workers are unanimously in favor of the creation a United International Organization of Paperworkers and of close contact with the Russian Union."

"The Swedish workers are very interested in everything connected with the U.S.S.R. On my return from the U.S.S.R. in 1923 I gave about 60 lectures which were attended by the workers who displayed great interest in them."

Clerks' Unions.

Representatives of the clerks' unions of Belgium, Germany and Finland were present at the opening on May 12th in Moscow of the All-Union Congress of Clerks. The British "National Union of Clerks" sent a telegram of greeting to the Congress, in which it was stated that the sharpening of the struggle with the new Bill against trade unions would not permit of their representatives being present at the Congress.

Hopes For Revolt.

Comrade Everling, representing the Belgian organization, in his speech to the Congress said, incidentally:

"I must say that previously we were somewhat mistrustful of the programme of radical changes and wide activity, but now, having had an opportunity, during our few days sojourn in Moscow, of seeing your institution, we can now only wish that we shall soon see in Belgium what we now see in the U.S.S.R. Our clerks are divided, in the class rooms there are only 8,000 members. Our clerks as a whole are far behind the working class, but we shall fight for UNITY, which will help us to direct the clerks' movement into the path of true class-consciousness."

The President of the Finnish Trade Union of Clerks, Comrade Laakso extended the Congress an invitation to the forthcoming Congress of the Finnish Trade Union of Clerks.

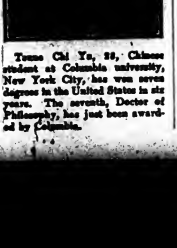
The first big paraffin factory has been constructed and has begun work in Gromy (Caucasus). Previously paraffin was either produced in Russia, nor in the U.S.S.R. The entire demand for paraffin was covered by foreign imports. The new works will not only satisfy the demands of the home market, but a considerable quantity will be put aside for export. Orders for paraffin have already been received from Germany, Turkey, and other countries.

The first works for the production of projectors has been opened in Moscow.

Spinning Factory.

In Danilovka, near Moscow, the foundation stone of a big spinning factory has been laid. The building of a new spinning factory indicates the success of the Soviet textile industry. In this industry because of this lack of spinning factories, the majority of weaving factories were compelled to work on foreign yarn. The new spinning factory will help to break down this dependence on imported raw materials.

Letters From Our Readers



Editor, DAILY WORKER:

Who said Lindbergh's welcome was purely for Wall Street Propaganda and Militarism? While the big parade going on near the battery with military band music and marching of soldiers and sailors with guns and bayonets in their hands to show how democratic we are and the great republic we are, and the great republic we are, and the great republic we are telling how great and strong we are, a seaman who thought great things to enlighten some people of real facts about these affairs.

His idea was to merely sell The DAILY WORKER, a newspaper just like any other newspaper for sale, only with different reading matter inside the pages.

A cop, loyal to his masters knows already his orders, he is not satisfied with telling the seaman to leave that place, but he confiscated the whole bundle of the DAILY WORKERS while other boys were selling their newspapers freely.

"DOWN WITH THE BOLSHEVIKI IF IT DOESN'T COST MUCH"

Briand

Premier Briand, of France, evidently wants to eat his cake and have it, too, and the strain of attempting to do both has made him sick. At the League of Nations Council, Briand's sudden illness interrupted a deal by which England, France and Germany, with others, were to unite against the U. S. S. R. for the purpose of sending a joint note protesting the execution of the assassins England had sent to kill Soviet government functionaries. Germany was demanding partial disarmament of France, as her price, Briand wanted the alliance but not the disarmament.

THE CAPITALIST WORLD AND REVOLUTIONARY CHINA

By EUGENE VARGA.

SECTION THREE.

Japan's Chinese policy is rendered more complicated by the fact that it is determined on the one hand to maintain its dominating position in Manchuria at all costs, and on the other hand to guide the anti-imperialist movement in China into channels which will promote Japanese interests, as those of a "kindred race," in their competition with Great Britain.

This twofold policy has so far been carried through with some measure of success by Japan. It poses as a friend of the Chinese revolution, the Bolshavist character of which it denies. Hence the ostentatious refusal to join in the British policy of intervention.

GREAT BRITAIN. Among the imperialist Powers, it is the bourgeoisie of Great Britain that is most hostile to the Chinese revolution, even in so far as the latter is bourgeois in character. In this policy, it has found the valuable support of the right Labor leaders, MacDonald, Thomas, and Snowden.

Three main reasons actuate the British bourgeoisie in this attitude:

a) Great Britain is the chief colonial Power in Asia. Counting its mandated territory, it rules over an area of 6.5 million square kilometres with a population of 330 million souls. India forms the mainstay of the world power of Great Britain. In all these colonies, Great Britain is fighting against the emancipatory movement among the suppressed nations and rests its authority on the feudal classes. Success on the part of the Chinese revolution and a humiliation of Great Britain would be extremely dangerous for the latter's position as an Asiatic colonial Power.

b) Any success of the Chinese revolution, even under bourgeois leadership, strengthens the position of the Soviet Union in Asia in its relation to Great Britain.

c) All privileges ensured the bourgeoisie of foreign countries by the "unequal treaties," in the first place benefitted the British bourgeois class.

A few remarks on this last-named point.

Great Britain has not annexed any large portion of China, but it has the chief commercial centres, Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Hankow, in its power. It subjected the Yangtze valley to its authority, effectually if not formally. Apart from Manchuria, as an external territory, the great bulk of the foreign investments in China are British. The British bourgeoisie, in the first place, govern the international trade of China, while even the export and import trade of the rival foreign Powers passes to a great extent through British hands, via Hong Kong and Shanghai. The profits of British capital in China from international trade, navigation, and banking are very great. Chinese finance is so greatly in British hands, that the closing of the British financial institutes at Hankow, organised as a "counter-stroke," proved a very effective economic weapon.

In this entire realm of commercial activity, such rights as are guaranteed the British bourgeoisie in their dealings with the Chinese by the "unequal treaties," are of the very greatest economic importance, being immediately convertible into hard cash. Hence the tenacious maintenance of the status quo, particularly by that section of the British bourgeoisie which is established in the concessions and is directly interested in Chinese business. These people have grown so accustomed to their privileged position and feel so far above the yellow race, that—even against the will of the wiser portion of the British bourgeoisie at home—they insist on the necessity of an armed intervention for the purpose of crushing the Chinese revolution. The attempt of the British Government to arrive at a peaceful solution of the problem with the Southern Government at Hankow, an attempt, it is true, which was sincerely meant, seeing that the British were forced to undertake it in view of the low water level of the Yangtz, during the winter, which prevented troops from being sent to Hankow, met with the most virulent disapproval on the part of this Anglo-Chinese bourgeoisie.

VICARIOUS

By LEBARBE.

Do you remember yet, that afternoon
(so long ago my memory must reach to hold it still), when on the silver beach we sat and watched the waves roll? Soon you said, "The waves are marching ghosts returning from lost lands to rest again on old familiar shores. The waves are hosts conscripted in the army of the rain! . . ."

I never shall forget that in your eyes
I saw a deathless dream, and that your hands, sifting so tenderly the whisp'ring sands,
were beautiful with visions as your eyes.

Yet you, whose soul went venturing to sea,
sat there content upon the beach, with me!

BOOKS

A REVIEW OF A REVIEW OF "OIL!"

Yes, I was probably prejudiced in favor of this book by my respect for and admiration of, its author, because of the crudeness of his other books, particularly those ponderously "polgnic."

Next: Upton Sinclair writes very "neat" works of art, in my opinion (but do remember that prejudice leering in the offing) I speak more affectionately of his less chastifully polemic volumes. The more "polemic" they are the better this prejudiced person likes them." Is Vern Smith one of these "art-for-art" fanatics who consider propaganda rather inartistic, altogether in bad taste? I would advise a good dose of Sinclair's "Mammonart" to clear away the cobwebs.

Again: Upton Sinclair does not pretend to be a novelist in the "academic sense of the word." "He's too good a proletarian for that! If you look in the dictionary, however!

Further, I have always found the "pieces" of his structures unusually interesting." Indeed, the egregious Smith saw fit to point out two which seemed to interest him a trifle. One, the drowning of the oil-worker, the other, the outrage at San Pedro.

Smith says, "Sinclair gets his results by piling up the evidence and his 'novels' have little enough of plot, nothing of that closely written narrative that sustains interest from one episode to another."

I never noticed lack of "plot," rather an abundance, and as for the "narrative," it never failed to "sustain" my "interest." But then, of course, I liked the book and so am "prejudiced" in its favor and should keep quiet about it. How dare I contradict the unprejudiced Smith?

The statement that the "story of Oil! was pretty slim" seems entirely false to me.

In saying that Bunny was "a decent lad, Sinclair's own type, presumably," Smith must have meant that Sinclair was soft and undecided, softness and indecision being key-notes of Bunny's character. I wish to call Smith's attention to these facts:—that black is white, highway crossings should be greased, and water runs up hill.

Of course, Sinclair might very well be called a "decent lad" by Vern Smith, whom I therefore assume to be an "aged, aged man" whether "a-sitting on a gate" like the elder in Carroll's fairy tale, or in a swivel chair.

Smith later says, "We have to praise Sinclair's restraint," but it seems that he cannot, wholeheartedly, do anything but condemn him. He makes it evident that he would have preferred that, in writing of the San Pedro affair at the I. W. W. ball, Sinclair had mentioned not only that the children were thrown into boiling coffee, being thus crippled for life, but that the raiders had brought scalding grease with them to use in torturing the children. In this case, it seems that the propagandist in Smith got it all over the artist.

I seem to remember reading in O'Flaherty's column that Sinclair Lewis was a better propagandist than Upton Sinclair because of the sugar-coating he casts on his propaganda. Now Upton Sinclair gives us in Oil! Communist arguments, sugar-coated for the children and one of them complains that there is bitter (propaganda) under the sweet. So that's what you want? Just candy! Alright, darling, muvver tells it where to find its lollypop. Try the American Mercury!

Paul, not Bunny is the central character of the book and carries the weight of Sinclair's argument, and Smith doesn't even mention him!

Smith says of Sinclair: "He builds up a hanging case against the bourgeoisie and then sentences them to social service, a new liberal newspaper or something equally piffling." Smith does not seem to be sure what the sentence is. I'll make bold to tell him. It is true that he builds up a hanging case against the biters but he neither hangs them nor sentences them to anything "piffling" as Smith so choicely expressed it. He sentences the idle class to assimilation into the working class. Do you, Smith, find fault with that?

The last paragraph is of a part with the rest. Sinclair, in short, said, "I regret that the workers must use force." Smith seizes the "I regret" and pounds his chest like an ape till he has beaten his temper to a boil. This is all very diverting but it is not good Communism.

Now, I regret that we must use force. Does Smith take exception to the regret? But, as Upton Sinclair takes pains to make clear thru his character, Verne, the besses have no intention of handing us our rights on a silver platter. We can take them (or have taken them for us) "Judd" Sinclair offers one solution we could use if we had the brains. I have come quite recently to the conclusion that too many of us have not. There is too much emotionalism and too little logical reasoning. So I understand why Upton Sinclair seems to believe that Communism, regrettable as is the necessity for it, is our way to victory. He offers all the assistance he can give when the crisis comes. Right now he is doing all in his power to show us just where we stand. He spares no efforts to encourage the workers, no pains in fighting their battle.

Critical reporters like this Smith, without even following a single one of Sinclair's arguments to its conclusion, see fit to come out in the most prominent workers' paper with an unbalanced, ill-considered attack on their best, most fearless friend. I am annoyed. Let us have no more of this one hundred and ten per cent jingoistic Communism.

E. T. BENNETT.

REVIEWING A REVIEW OF A REVIEW.

The fact that out of the thousands of DAILY WORKER readers there was one who enjoyed "Oil!" as a serial, is of course an addition to the sum of human knowledge, but it does not require further comment, any more than do Comrade Bennett's curious speculations as to the age of the reviewer.

Little more important is it that Comrade Bennett takes umbrage at my praise of Sinclair as essentially a propagandist and not a literateur. But as nearly as I can make out from the above, Bennett agrees with me that it is a good thing to write propaganda fiction, and is only mad at me because he thinks I that Sinclair did not know the art of propaganda as well as Bennett thinks he does. And that's a matter of taste. I was under the impression that restraint was a good thing, under the circumstances.

But what is really serious is that Bennett seems to say this "Oil!" is a Communist book in disguise. I don't think that Bennett really believes that the book is tricking the reading public into Communism, because even a child would see that an article exposing such a strategem would ruin it. Bennett is merely defending Sinclair any way he can, and needlessly.

But still worse is the evident delusion of Bennett that the secondary character, Paul, is the heart of the story, and a true picture of what a Communist should be. Paul is undoubtedly what Sinclair, in all friendliness to Communism, thinks is an ideal leader for a Communist Party. He makes him one of those captured at Bridgeman, sends him on secret missions to Russia, and "plays him up" in all the ways that the regular capitalist newspapers "play up" Bolsheviks. He makes him a labor leader, and a staunch defender of the Bolshevik revolution, but whenever Paul argues for a Communist party in America, he is immediately checked by arguments against it, placed in the mouths of the Socialists, which same Socialists also approve, in "Oil!" of the Communists—in Russia.

Paul has a sister, also a Communist, and Bunny, who plays the part of sympathetic, unprejudiced judge between the warring Reds and Yellows (p. 493) seriously considers marrying her, but finally decides in favor of her Socialist opponent. (p. 503.) He decides on political grounds.

Sinclair has the martyr psychosis had; that's nil right for him, he can afford it, but when he tries to make out that one of the reasons workers join the Workers Party is so that they can get more publicity when they go to jail (p. 416) he goes a little too far.

Still the real bitter center, which is too much for my stomach, is Sinclair's insistence that Communism is mostly an emotional reaction to the horrors of civilization. "He was a case of shell-shock from the war,"—says Rachel, Bunny's final choice, about Paul, and that is probably Sinclair's view, even yet.

Sinclair has his little joke, you know, about Paul. He makes Paul blood brother to Ely, the crazy evangelist, and son of the religio-maniacal Watkins couple, with their "jumps" and holy-rolling. Lest you miss that point, consider this "piece," which I confess, "interests me a trifle" but which I do not like at all:

"Paul was haggard; one does not take a trip to Moscow to get fat, but his sober face was shining with a light of fanaticism—the same thing which his brother Ely called the glory of the Lord! Dad would have said there were two of these, equally crazy; but it didn't seem that way to Bunny, who mocked at Ely's god but believed in Paul's—at least enough to tremble in his presence."

This is the regular petty-bourgeois, half-baked intelligentsia psychoanalytical explanation of revolution. That bitter thing you tasted in Sinclair's pie was a cockroach, Bennett!

"Oil!" is a good attack on capitalism, not, a good interpretation of Communism. —VERN SMITH.

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty.

THE three principal sea powers are again jockeying for position—this time at Geneva. When Charlie Evans Hughes, then secretary of state, made the great gesture for a reduction of naval armaments in 1921, our liberals sent up prayers to their favorite gods and hailed the neatly whitewashed one as a dove of peace. They were almost as pleased as when Woodrow Wilson went to war to end war. But it is not necessary to state that these gestures of the ruling classes have not brought us a whit nearer peace. In fact each new conference is merely another straw that shows which way the war-storm is blowing.

THE United States, Japan and Great Britain are sitting down at a conference table with France and Italy looking on. Britain insists on retaining supremacy on the seas. Japan insists on retaining naval supremacy in the Orient. The United States, the wealthiest empire of them all, does not see any good reason why England should not pass over Neptune's trident to her and recognize the logic of facts. It is a great game, a nice peaceful confab with rounds of gayety to break the monotony of the conversations.

THE United States threatens—unofficially of course—that unless Great Britain and Japan show a more conciliatory disposition, that is, recognize the preeminence of the United States in world politics, Uncle Sam will turn around and build the biggest navy in the world. Our imperialists will do just that. They have the money and they are leaving no stone unturned to prepare the public mind for their plans. Lindbergh's flight to Paris was utilized for that purpose. We repeat that there can be no peace under capitalism.

THE Rev. William Sunday, evangelist, while paying a visit to Governor Fuller of Massachusetts, took advantage of the occasion to urge the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti. "Give 'em the juice" shouted this zealot whose clownings in the name of religion have netted him enormous sums of money. The itinerant preacher blew off his usual frothy raving against foreigners coming here and telling us what to do. But the most unforgivable insult offered by the bible whacker to Sacco and Vanzetti was mentioning the two labor leaders in the same breath with the preacher Richardson, who was electrocuted some fourteen years ago in the same state for having murdered a trusting young girl after having seduced her. "If Massachusetts executes a murderer why not Sacco and Vanzetti!" asked Sunday.

THE ranting of this gutter evangelist would not be worth commenting on did it not present a true picture of the mentality of a large section of the population of this country. This type of mind has furnished innumerable to every organization in America that had or has for its object the diminishing of enjoyment and the abolition of collective recreation. Their god is a monster who delights in the contemplation of suffering. They have no healthy joys but revel in behinde-scene perversions. To hide their moral cesspools they wear an exterior of piety and demand punishment on earth and hell fire when life passes for all those who think life should be something else than a pilgrimmage thru a charnel house.

A fellow by the name of de Witt—why the "half" was omitted from his cognomen is a mystery to me—clowns a weekly column for a weekly socialist paper published in this city. This half-witted jester usually makes the Soviet Union the butt of his buffooneries. He was unusually idiotic last week when he volunteered his services in the defence of the U. S. S. R. He would pray that the leaders of the Soviet government would be restored to what he calls sanity, which would make it possible for de Witt to tolerate them. Otherwise he is liable to let the imperialists go ahead and punish Russia for treating the Czar so rudely. "Truly only mitigating circumstances we know of that might be offered in extenuation of de Witt's imbecility is that he has been a "poet" for some time.

BUYING the capitalist out of business is not such a simple task as it seemed some time ago when banks were popping up like mushrooms a few years back. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers had banks all over the country, also other enterprises. Warren S. Stone, a one time progressive, turned the brotherhood of which he was grand chief into a big business corporation. He sat with his fist under the same table with the biggest bankers in Wall Street. It was a grand and glorious feeling and

CHINESE TRADE UNION CONGRESS OPENS

SACCO-VANZETTI WEEK SET ASIDE; PLAN BIG DRIVE

I. L. D. Sets 50,000 More Signatures as Goal

BOSTON, June 21.—Signatures numbering close to half a million, attached to petitions addressed to Governor Alvan T. Fuller requesting him to intercede in behalf of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, will be presented to the chief executive at the state house tomorrow, the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee announced today.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Independence Day this year will not only be the occasion for the usual celebration of the American Revolution which freed the American people from the oppression of Great Britain, but will be the culmination of a national, intensive drive lasting one week, to mobilize the sentiment for the freeing of Sacco and Vanzetti, according to plans announced today by International Labor Defense.

In response to a number of requests, the International Labor Defense has arranged to set aside the week of June 27 to July 4 as Sacco-Vanzetti Week for the gathering of signatures to petitions addressed to Governor Fuller of Massachusetts in behalf of the two labor men. The petitions have been sent to all parts of the country and it is expected that tens of thousands of signatures urging the freeing of Sacco and Vanzetti will be gathered.

The Buffalo movement for Sacco and Vanzetti has already laid its plans for the gathering of 50,000 signatures during the drive and other cities are making similar arrangements. Through the office of International Labor Defense, alone, thousands of signatures have already been sent to be forwarded to the Governor. In addition to this, tens of thousands of signatures on the petitions have been gathered through the land and forwarded either directly to the Governor or to the Boston Defense Committee.

Circulate Petitions.

It is pointed out that the investigation committee appointed by Governor Fuller after the innumerable demands for its institution had been made, is a star chamber committee and not a body which is investigating

Victory Looked For Soon in Strike of 2,000 N. Y. Barbers

A large number of 500 shops affected by the strike of 2,000 New York barbers have practically closed down, and in many of them only the bosses are at work.

Enthusiastic meetings of the strikers were held yesterday afternoon in Leslie Hall, 83rd St. and Broadway, in the Amsterdam Avenue Inn, 155th St. and Amsterdam Ave., and a number of small halls.

Systematic picketing of the shops between 59th St. and 242nd St., on the West Side was continued yesterday.

Bosses Conferring.

At the meetings yesterday strike leaders reported that the bosses were now conferring with a view toward agreeing on a collective agreement with the workers.

The demands of the workers include a basic wage scale of $36, and fifty per cent of all income over $45 daily on each chair. They now work from 8 a. m. until 8 p. m., and until 10 p. m. on Saturday. They seek one hour reduction of work on Saturday.

Nearing Will Speak on "The Danger of War" at Bryant Hall, Tonight

Scott Nearing will lecture tonight, 7 p. m., on the Danger of War.

The meeting is being held at Bryant Hall, Sixth Ave. near 42nd St. Juliet Stuart Poyntz will preside.

All workers are invited to attend and hear an interesting lecture by one who is well acquainted with the subject. Admission free.

Introducing Section Two New York!

Section Two is composed mainly of needle workers, those who are engaged in the thick of the fight against the police, the bosses and the right wing bureaucracy. It consists mainly of furriers, dressmakers and cloakmakers. These comrades daily run the risk of arrest, and imprisonment. The Industrial Squad and the police persecute them mercilessly for their activity on the picket line. Many of them have been unemployed for weeks and months. The demands of the relief committee are extremely heavy upon them. Yet this section has already brought into this office for the Defense and Sustaining Fund over $1,500. Individual units have brought in as high as $200 and $300. This is the splendid record of Section Two for the past few months.

Section Two, Workers Party, New York, should be an example for units of the party, throughout the country. If these comrades who have to bear the burden of the fiercest fight now going on in the labor movement, can write for themselves such a splendid record, then surely we should expect at least as good results from units which are not pressed so hard. Tighten your belt now. Start now to emulate the record of Section Two, New York.

Special Workers Party Meeting Tomorrow Eve. At Manhattan Lyceum

An important membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party will be held tomorrow evening, 8 p. m. at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St.

The meeting is called for the purpose of listening to a report and discussing the situation in the country in general and the New York situation in particular. The attack on the unions, the left wing and the party will be taken up.

Admission by membership books only. All party members must attend.

DEEP CONFLICTS CAST GLOOM OVER NAVY CONFERENCE

U. S. Proposals Vigorously Denounced

GENEVA, June 21.—Of all the farcical performances on the international checkerboard the tri-partite conference in session here will probably be the most amusing. But the imperialist conflicts which show here mean an even more serious threat of war. The conference called by Coolidge is already a muddle, with contradictions piling upon contradictions. Try as they may to assume an attitude of blopefulness the first rift that became apparent at the first session yesterday is wider today, after the opinions of the conflicting powers have become public. From the capitols of the three powers directly involved—the United States, England and Japan—and the two powers with observers present—Italy and France—come reports of dissatisfaction with the proposals.

The American delegation has declared strenuously to oppose the British proposal for six-inch gun 7,500 ton cruisers to the exclusion of the eight-inch gun 10,000 ton class.

The British proposals, if accepted, American experts state, would force the United States into building small cruisers, which would be utterly useless considering the distance between naval bases.

American delegates cannot conceal their gloom at the turn the conference has taken from the start. Although they realize that everyone will eventually make concessions the proposals are so far apart that no compromise can bridge them. Furthermore, the fact that Japanese and British proposals are much closer indicates that there has been some sort of pre-arrangement between these two old allies on Pacific policy.

The Japanese proposal to reduce the age limit of auxiliary ships below what the United States naval experts consider a program of auxiliary ships would give her an advantage on

BROTHERHOOD BANKS TURNED OVER TO SCAB MITTEN MANAGEMENT

Game of "Labor-Capitalism" Breaks Down and Reveals Shameful Betrayal of Workers

By JACK KENNEDY.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

CLEVELAND, June 21.—In an effort to stave off defeat at the hands of the convention in session here, the officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have concocted a scheme with the non-union Mitten Management outfit of Philadelphia to take over all the Brotherhood banks.

With their $50,000,000 financial edifice swaying dizzily through unwise speculation, the officials of the Brotherhood are trying to unload the whole trade union capitalistic mess to prevent an astonished and indignant rank and file from kicking them out of office as incompetents and grafters.

The story of the investment of the hard-earned savings of locomotive engineers in crazy and ill-advised speculative enterprizes is an amazing tale of foolish plunging through which runs a broad trail of downright corruption.

Dizzy Financing.

It was in the fall of 1920 that President—then Grand Chief Engineer—Warren S. Stone committed the Brotherhood to the banking game by opening the Cleveland "co-operative" bank, shortly after his companion, William H. Johnston, now thoroughly discredited, started the Machinists bank in Washington, D. C. Followed a mad orgy of new banks, investment companies, securities corporations, holding firms—the whole apparatus of financial legerdemain. More quietly Stone and his clique began organizing private ventures, Park Lane Villa, Cleveland's ritzy apartment hotel, sand and quarry companies, watch companies, scab mining concerns, and what not.

Things sailed beautifully until the old boy kicked off in 1925. Then suddenly Stone's closest associates began to reveal quietly but effectively the real financial situation in his privately-organized firms. One after another they failed, leaving thousands of engineers holding the bag. A "co-operative" mail order company blew up with a loud explosion, the scab Brotherhood mines in West Virginia passed dividends.

The officialdom who had participated with Stone in feathering their own nests, turned against the dead man, blaming all their mishaps on him. But they had been careful not to plunge

Judge Calls Bluff Of Bus Company in Injunction Action

Justice Townsend Scudder in Brooklyn supreme court yesterday listened to an application for a temporary injunction to restrain the Long Island Coach Co. from operating buses through Averne and Hamels, Queens.

"You can't pull the wool over the eyes of the court with that bunk," shouted the judge when Frank H. Patterson, counsel for the company declared that it "is doing a great service for the Rockaways, serving 250,000 people despite the fact that it is operating at a loss."

$25,000 Profit in 6 Months.

The judge added that he had proof that the coach company had made a profit of at least $25,000 in the last eight months. "The coach company is not philanthropic," he said. "It is not giving away something for nothing."

T. U. E. L. Members of All Trades Holding a Meeting Friday Evening

A meeting of the Trade Union Educational League of all trades will be held Friday evening right after work at Webster Hall, 11th St. near Third Ave.

All workers who are affiliated with any T. U. E. L. group must attend, as an important question will be acted upon.

Big Picket Line Is Brooklyn Painters Method for Victory

Systematic picketing by the painters of Brooklyn who resumed their strike Monday after it had been temporarily halted by a supreme court injunction will begin this morning, according to Joseph Shafer, secretary of District Council 29.

Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby Ave., was jammed yesterday afternoon with painters, who voted unanimous support of the re-organized strike committee. A resolution was also adopted expressing gratitude to District Council 9 of New York for its moral and financial assistance.

In the reorganized strike committee are represented all the locals directly involved in the present strike.

3,000 Already Victorious.

About 3,000 painters are already working under the new wage agreement by which they get $14 a day as against $12 which has been the prevailing scale.

Registration will continue every morning at 10 at the strike headquarters, according to Paul Kaminer, president of the council. Mass meetings will be held each afternoon at 3, and details of the progress of the strike will be given.

Bishop Denounces Herrick.

LIMA, N. Y., June 21.—A bitter denunciation of American ambassador Myron C. Herrick for his reputed action in serving champagne at an American Embassy dinner in Paris given in honor of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, was voiced today by Bishop Adna Wright Leonard of Buffalo, speaking at the commencement exercises at the Genesee Wesleyan seminary here.

(Special Cable to Daily Worker.)

HANKOW, June 21.—The fourth All-Chinese Trade Union Congress opened here Sunday.

Four hundred delegates representing four million organized Chinese workers are attending the daily sessions of the Congress. Last year's congress held at Canton represented only a little more than a million organized workers.

The Congress has recommended that a propaganda campaign be carried on in preparation for the coming Hankow Congress of the anti-Imperialist League and for international solidarity.

Reports from Chengchow state that the vanguard of Feng Yu-hsiang's army has crossed the Yellow River and penetrated Chihli Province. The capture of Taminfu is also reported.

Reports from Shanghai state that Sun Chuan-fang has evacuated Hai-

Anita Whitney Freed After 7 Years Fight; Many I. W. W. In Jail

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 21.—After a seven year fight, Miss Charlotte Anita Whitney, prominent Oakland radical, has been pardoned by the Governor of California. Miss Whitney was arrested with hundreds of members of the I. W. W. in the patriotic hysteria following the war.

"Because the abnormal conditions attending the trial go a long way toward explaining the verdict of the jury," Governor C. C. Young pardoned Anita Whitney.

About fifty members of the I. W. W. are still in California jails on the charge of having violated the criminal syndicalist law. They were convicted under similar conditions of hysteria.

NATION-WIDE MOBILIZATION DRIVE PLANNED BY FUR UNITY COMMITTEE

Police Department Is Presented With Evidence of Brutality Against Pickets

Plans for a wide-spread mobilization campaign were laid yesterday by the Unity Committee formed last week in Washington by 48 of the seated and unseated delegates to the "convention" of the International Fur Workers' Union.

The Executive Board of the committee representing eight cities, announced after its conference held yesterday afternoon that its immediate activities would include:

(1) The employment of a field organizer; (2) the despatch of a communication to every local of the furriers' union and to the entire labor movement explaining the aim and purpose of the Unity Conference and calling attention to the employment of gangsters by the International Fur Workers' Union.

To Arrange Meetings.

(3) Mass meetings of fur workers in the various cities, and conferences of all progressive elements in the labor movement; (4) the payment of regularly monthly dues of 25 cents and a tax of $1 for the New York fur strike by all those sympathetic to this unity movement; (5) a semi-monthly bulletin, in Jewish and English; (6) an eastern conference to be held in the very near future.

Personnel of Committee.

The Unity Committee's Executive Board consists of J. Sonnenshein, Chicago; H. Englander and I. Dirchinsky, Toronto; George Pearlman, Boston; L. Guberman, Montreal; M. Langer, Newark; B. Gold and S. Liebowitz, New York; Sam Burt, Philadelphia; S. Stanley, Winnipeg.

To Continue Investigation.

A continuation of the investigation into the assaulting of fur pickets is to be made by Police Commissioner Warren's office, according to Inspector Valentine who heard the testimony of Joint Board members who appeared at the commissioner's office yesterday afternoon.

With Isadore Shapiro, chairman of the Strikers' Law Committee, there appeared Gordon Steinberg, Samuel Cohen and Leo Ackerman who had witnessed the assault made on Aaron Gross on June 9th; and Max Wallman and George Perdicaris, who were brutally beaten by members of the industrial squad in a room in the 30th Street Police Station on June 6th.

Tells of Assault.

Steinberg related how he had been walking arm in arm with Gross, who is chief business agent of the Joint Board and a former vice-president of the International. He saw two men

KINGS HOSPITAL NEST OF RACIAL HATE, IS CHARGE

Ugly charges of anti-Semitism and persistent persecution of Jewish physicians as well as patients at the Kings County Hospital were made yesterday by a committee of six prominent Jews who submitted detailed evidence to Bird S. Coler, Tammany commissioner of public welfare.

The "hazing" early Monday morning of three Jewish internes by six doctors at the hospital has developed the present situation, which may result in an official "investigation" by the city authorities. The internes charge that the doctors broke into their rooms, forced them under ice-cold showers, tied them to bed-posts, beat them, and finally covered the bodies of two of them with shoe blacking.

Yesterday afternoon the six attackers who are free on $500 bail were suspended by the medical board of the hospital, following a secret hearing which lasted all day.

K. K. K. Influence.

It is rumored that several members of the attacking party are members of the Ku Klux Klan. During the entire day preceding the "hazing" the accused men together with a group of internes had tried to incite the Jewish doctors to fight, according to Dr. Hyman Solovey, one of the three victims of the attack.

SHANGHAI, June 21.—Reports from Hankow and Changsha indicate that the Nationalist armies are in full accord with officers in Changsha have invited to confer with Nationalist officers on the question of China. Feng Yu-hsiang is taking charge of the drive against Peking in co-operation with the Red-shan, who is advancing from Honan. Tang Sheng-chi, the Hunanese general, and Chang Fa-kwei, the former leader of the "iron army" from Canton, will be used in other revolutionary work south of the Yellow River, according to the reports. The co-operation of the Yen Hsi-shan means the Nationalist acquisition of a large and prosperous province and gives the Nationalists an opportunity for a direct drive also march against Peking.

Political committees for Honan, Shensi, and Kansu were appointed at a special meeting with five members of the presidium of the political council present at the Chenchow conference. The five leaders were: Sun Fo, Wang Ching-wei, Kou Meng-yu Hsu Chien, and Tan Yan-kai. Feng Yu-hsiang was appointed as chairman of the Honan committee, Yu Yu-jen of the one in Shensi, and Liu Ju-ming of the committee in Kansu. A sub-political committee is to be in charge of party work in the three provinces named and was appointed with Feng Yu-hsiang as chairman.

The entire conference was concluded within three days of intensive work, without formalities and banquets, those concomitants to political confabs used to prolong and render conferences thoroughly futile. Members of the Chenchow conference spent eighteen hours a day at the conference table to settle every question on the long agenda.

The Hankow officials were gone a week. Returning they were greeted at every station by troops, the people, the Red Spears, Boy Scouts, and by representatives of public bodies with great ovations.

Among the matters arranged at the conference was the re-opening of the Honan railways by Sun Fo, the Minister of Communications. The Kin-Han and Lung-hai lines will be re-opened to regular traffic as soon as troop movements permit. Re-opening these lines will materially relieve the economic situation, as Hankow's prosperity depends upon the movement of merchandise. Bumper crops are reported in Honan. Shensi, and Kansu.

At the conference Feng-Yu-hsiang reiterated his allegiance to the Wuhan Government and Central Executive Committee. He stated that he will carry out all orders, resolutions, and policies of the Nationalist Government and fight to put into effect the three People's Principles of Dr. Sun throughout China, and will carry on the war against Chang Tso-lin without compromise.

Brothels Kept by British.

Regarding the denial by Lokker-Lampson in the House of Commons of the report that fifteen-year-old Chinese girls are employed by brothels for British soldiers in the International Settlement of Shanghai, it is pointed out that the houses here are operating openly, guarded by British Military Police, and frequented by British soldiers. There is every evidence that the brothels are carrying on with official sanction despite the fact that prostitution is illegal in the International Settlement.

Bronx Co-operative To Build 3d Block Of Workers' Homes

A decision to commence the building of the third block of homes for workers at Bronx Park East and Allerton Ave., was made at a meeting of the United Workers' Cooperative held last night.

The new building will contain 2, 3 and 4-room apartments with the most modern improvements. About 400 families are now living in the colony which has a modern experimental school, a theater, library, gymnasium and children's nursery.

Also Operate Camp.

Plans are now also being made for the establishment of a group of cooperative stores to serve the residents of the Community. "Nigedaiget," a summer camp for workers organized four years ago, is also under the supervision of the United Cooperative.

Cash Disappears at Bank

Police yesterday investigated the mysterious disappearance of negotiable bonds worth $70,000 from the offices of the Garfield National Bank, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third St.

PRICE OF MURDERERS GOES DOWN

In Cleveland, Ohio, a bootleg war is being waged. Picture shows favorite chance for killings, Woodland Ave., and East 25th St. Insert is a picture of Chief of Police Jacob Grant, whose force admits that due to the strange inability of the chief to capture many of the killers, the wages of a hired murderer have decreased from $50 a kill to $25. Murder is a risky safe occupation in other Ohio towns also; in Canton, Ohio, the ex-chief of police is indicted for participating in the killing of an editor who was exposing police graft in connection with bootlegging.

More Workmen's Circle Branches.

We have already announced Workmen's Circle Branches are giving wonderful support in the present struggle of the Cloakmakers and Furriers. The following are a few more examples: In response to an appeal by Brother Ginsburg, Branch 548 bought $100 worth of Bonds. The same evening Branch 344, with Brother Ginsburg present, donated $10 with a promise to give more. Branch 611 forwarded another $10 collected at their meeting. Independent Workmen's Circle, Branch No. 16 of Boston, sent in $10. Brother Nelson delivered $10 from Branch No. 199 for the Defense. Tolmer Branch, No. 188 Workman's Circle collected $75 loans for the Unity Committee. Branch No. 548 sent $100 more on to $20,000 Workmen's Circles.

Dr. Liber to Lecture.

Branch No. 548 Workmen's Circle, has arranged a lecture for this coming Friday, June 24th at which Dr. Liber will speak on "The Life of the Family, Today and in the Future." The Branch has already sent in $100, a preliminary payment on the proceeds. The lecture will be held at Ambassador Hall, 3rd Ave. and Claremont Parkway, Bronx.

This will be Dr. Liber's only public appearance this summer. He is very busy and does not often appear in public, but as the entire proceeds of this meeting will go for the striking furriers, Dr. Liber made an exception in this case. All workers of New York and the Bronx are urged to come and hear Dr. Liber speak.

Deep Conflict Casts a Gloom Over Geneva

what the present comparative figures show.

Jap Proposals Favor Britain.

Guessing at what Japan means, American experts computed that, if the Japanese proposal were adopted, it would give the Japanese a ratio in auxiliary ships and submarine of approximately 3.7 to the United States five, while the British ratio would be still even higher than that of the United States.

Failure Is Seen.

If Great Britain should insist upon serious consideration of her proposals in toto it is believed here that it would be necessary to defer action for several years until France and Italy can be brought into a new conference to reconsider the problems of the Washington treaty.

There is no plenary conference scheduled for today and the delegates are meeting informally to decide upon methods of procedure.

Washington Rejects Proposals.

WASHINGTON, June 21. — The American delegates at the Geneva Arms Conference will not deviate very far from the program of limitation formulated in Washington and presented to the conference. It was said today, that the program presented by Hugh Gibson goes as far as it is possible to go without putting the United States navy in a position of decided inferiority to Great Britain and Japan. Some give and take will be necessary, it is anticipated here, but the basic features of the American program are not likely to be altered.

The British counter-proposals are wholly unacceptable to the United States. The more closely they were examined today by naval experts here the more unsatisfactory they became. Japan's proposals, being somewhat vague, are not understood in Washington. Japan apparently is insisting upon a ratio of auxiliary ships greater than that allotted to her in capital ships under the 1921 agreement. This, of course, is unsatisfactory to the United States.

Japanese Press Hostile.

TOKYO, June 21.—Editorial opinion in leading Japanese newspapers is against the acceptance of the proposals sponsored by the United States at the Tri-Partite Naval Conference now in session at Geneva.

"The American proposals involve a reduction in the present strength of the British and Japanese navies," protests the "Hochi-Shimbun." "Japan is unable and unwilling to accept the American suggestions."

The Japanese plan, according to the "Hochi-Shimbun," is the fairest proposal before the conference.

The newspaper "Jiji Shimpo" objects to the American prospectus on the ground it means expansion and not reduction of naval armament.

France Also Rejects Plans.

PARIS, June 21.—The French foreign office was reluctant today to make any comment on the British disarmament proposals as set forth at Geneva, having received no report from M. Clauzel, the French "informer."

"It is natural to expect that Great Britain would ask the maximum at the opening conference," said the foreign office spokesman, "in order to bring forth American and Japanese counter-proposals. Future discussion of these proposals will greatly reduce them. If the British proposals tend toward revision of the Washington treaty we know that nothing will be done without the three powers notifying France and Italy. What is signed by five nations cannot be changed by three nations."

PHILIPPINES ON VERGE OF REVOLT AS WOOD ROASTS

Governor General Talks Of Island "Bliss"

By JOSEPH FREEMAN.

Serious political disturbances are taking place in the Philippine Islands, according to dispatches in the American press. Although these dispatches make every effort to conceal the real nature of the disturbances, enough has leaked out to indicate that they are agrarian uprisings.

Last month the press reported that 400,000 natives revolted under Flor Intrenchendo, described as a madman with delusions of grandaur who had proclaimed himself emperor. Intrenchendo's followers were overpowered, and the "mad emperor" himself confined in an asylum. Over 500 of his followers were arrested.

The "Red" Bogey

A week after this episode, the Philippine constabulary shot and killed Sultan Raya, a well known opponent of American imperialism. The press merely reported that he "resisted arrest."

Five days later Admiral Kittelle, American naval commander in the Philippines, published sensational charges that emissaries of the Soviet government are in the Islands plotting to blow up the American navy yard there. He based his charges on documents alleged to have been found in Chang-Tso-Lin's raid on the Soviet embassy in Peking. Although the admiral never proved his charges, he used it as an excuse to break up the organization of navy yard workers. The leaders of the union denied the charge. Individual locals continue to function. A week after this incident, Admiral Kittelle reiterated his charges, once more involving the Soviet government and China.

Admiral Kitelle, Strikebreaker

Close on the heels of these charges, came a strike of 2,000 stevedores in Manila. Admiral Kittelle sent a force of strikebreakers at once.

This week one of the leaders of the Intrenchendo revolt of May was sentenced to life imprisonment, and twenty-three others to smaller terms.

The most recent dispatch describes the concentration of "religious fanatics" on Siorgao and Dinagat Islands. It is reported that the constabulary is "alarmed" and that reinforcements have been requested.

General Leonard Wood, governor of the Philippines, has just arrived in Canada on his way to visit President Coolidge. In an interview with newspapermen, General Wood said:

The Old Bunk

"They are a peaceful, prosperous and happy people throughout the Philippines. There is a large balance in the treasury and a heavy balance of trade in favor of the islands. I really think that the people in the Philippines are the happiest people in the world. I am going to see President Coolidge and the Secretary of War. We will discuss the Philippine situation thoroughly. There is no sign of Red agitation in the islands. There are no labor troubles to speak of either, for labor is well paid and treated."

There has been a tremendous increase in rubber and sugar production, General Wood said, as well as in coffee, tobacco, and hemp. He refused to discuss the recent report of an American politician, who after a visit to the Philippines, declared that the natives were critical of the militaristic atmosphere prevailing in the islands.

Thus the governor of the Philippines not only contradicted Admiral Kittelle's sensational charges, and ignored the stevedore's strike, but would create the impression that the present uprisings of the Filipinos are due to pure happiness.

Van Sweringen Told By Court to Expose Deals With Morgan

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Minority stockholders of the Chesapeake & Ohio, who are opposing the merger of the road with the Erie and Pere Marquette, won an important victory today when the Interstate Commerce Commission ruled that O. P. Van Sweringen, creator of the merger plan, must furnish a statement showing the monthly averages of deposits of the Vanesa Co., a Van Sweringen subsidiary, with the Guaranty Trust Co., and J. P. Morgan & Co., since Jan., 1923.

Henry W. Anderson, counsel for the opposing group, charged that Van Sweringen, as chairman of the Chesapeake & Ohio board, was wrecking the road. He also charged that Van Sweringen had taken $129,000,000 of Chesapeake & Ohio assets, transferred them to small holding companies which he controlled and used them as collateral for market trading.

Radio Monopoly to Face First Legal Test in D. C. Court

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Preparations were completed today by the Federal Radio Commission to defend two court actions which challenge the authority of the commission and the constitutionality of the 1926 radio law.

Following the demand of station WMAQ, Madison Square Garden, New York, for an injunction against the commission, station WGL, operated by the International Broadcasting Association, has taken an appeal to the District of Columbia court of appeals from a wave length allocation decision.

This case is the first instance of an appeal from a decision of the commission. The result will be the first actual test of the constitutionality of the law, according to justice department officials, who are cooperating with the radio authorities.

The radio commission was created by special act of Congress, and has been busy assigning valuable monopolies of the best wave lengths to stations that will stand for the established order in every way, and will be able to make good use of any new inventions in the way of power transmission that may appear in the near future.

Lawyer Pleads Guilty To Swindle of Million In Auto Finance Deals

David Dentsch, a lawyer of No. 2 Columbus Circle, who was indicted on four charges of forgery in the second degree growing out of an alleged wholesale auto finance swindle, pleaded guilty to one of the charges before Justice Levine in general sessions today. He will be sentenced June 30.

Through alleged fake mortgages Deutsch is alleged to have swindled investors out of close to $1,000,000.

BRITAIN ENLISTS FINLAND IN WAR ON SOVIET UNION

USSR Denies Executed Spy Was Finnish

MOSCOW, June 21.—The Soviet government today dispatched a caustic note to Finland in reply to the Finnish "protest" against the execution of Captain Evelgren, white guard spy, alleged to be a Finnish subject. The Soviet Union emphatically denies that Evelgren is a Finnish subject and expresses amazement at the tone of the Finnish note.

The hand of tory Britain is seen by observers here in the Finnish note. In its effort to goad the Soviet Union into a war, Great Britain is operating thru Finland. Her efforts to provoke the Soviet Union thru the murder of Voikoff was a complete failure and she is now employing other Baltic states in her provocatory campaign against the USSR.

The government communique published after the execution of Evelgren cited evidence proving that he and a number of other Russian white guards has been engaged in espionage for Great Britain.

Blind and Maimed of Great War Parade in El Paso for Relief

EL PASO, Texas, June 21.—More than a thousand disabled American veterans of the great war passed in review here today.

The parade preceded the opening of the second session of the disabled veterans' national convention.

A pathetic feature of the parade was the blind section, numbering about two hundred men. The wounded men want a little better treatment from the government, and are holding a convention to consider problems.

WORKERS PARTY ISSUES CONVENTION STAMP; URGES ALL COMRADES TO BUY THEM AT ONCE

The Workers (Communist) Party has issued its convention assessment stamps for the convention scheduled for July 10th, 1927. This stamp has been sent to all unit organizers all over the country. The sale of the stamp should be pushed and immediately any of them have been sold the money must be forwarded, half of it to the district office, and half to the national office.

Any member of the Party the organizer of whose unit has not received these stamps should immediately communicate with the unit organizer and with the national office. The organizer of the unit should also communicate with the national office at once, because in many cases the printers of units have been changed or they have changed their addresses. Any slowness in selling these stamps, or in paying for them to the national office, may result in the disfranchisement of many members of the Party in the election for the forthcoming convention. Therefore it is the duty of all functionaries and Party members to see to it that these stamps are sold to every member of the Party and the money forwarded to the national and district offices at once. No comrade will be permitted to vote for delegates to section, city, district or national conventions without having this paid up, and the money properly forwarded.

The stamp contains the words: "Build the Party Fund, Convention Assessment 1927, $1.00" and the seal of the Party.

The assessment is for the purpose of paying the expenses of the district and national conventions. Therefore 50 cents for every stamp sold should be sent to the National Office and 50 cents to the district office, except in the case of members at large, who send the full amount directly to the national office.

Memoirs of a Revolutionist

By Vera Figner

VERA FIGNER is now nearly fifty years old and is living in Moscow. She took part in the Revolutionary Movement fifty-five years ago, and has lived to see the overthrow of the autocracy and the establishment of workers rule in Russia.

Vera Figner is one of the last Revolutionary Mohicans. She was a member of the famous Narodnaya Volya in the '70's and in 1881 participated in the assassination of Tzar Alexander II. She spent two years in the Fortress St. Peter and Paul, and though convicted to death, her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in the Schlusselburg Fortress where she spent twenty years in solitary confinement in that famous old Russian bastile, one of the greatest revolutionary spirits were imprisoned there.

In her book translated for the first time into English, she tells the story of her youth and how she became a revolutionist. She describes the early revolutionary movement in Russia and gives a graphic picture of her life in the Fortress of St. Peter for twenty years she was confined there.

Every revolutionary home should have a copy of this book. In it is given the true story of a great revolutionist and ideals.

400 Newark Barbers On Strike; 600 More Expected Out Soon

NEWARK, June 21.—Over 400 barbers, members of local 877, went on strike this morning, and 600 more are expected out by the end of the present week.

Conferences have been held with the bosses during the past few days, but no agreement was reached on the demands of the workers for a basic weekly wage of $35, and 50 per cent commission on all income over $45 a chair daily.

The journeymen are now working 70 hours a week. They demand a reduction of 10 hours in the working schedule.

An enthusiastic mass meeting attended by the striking barbers was held this morning with M. Tartamella, L. Ortarie, S. Ripolo, and John B. Manger, secretary of the union, as speakers.

TO NEW FIGHT

Conference Accepts Hodges Resignation

By Our London Correspondent.

Determined spirit of the miners' delegates, at the first conference held since the lockout, was revealed in their challenge to the Baldwin government over the anti-Trade Union bill.

The delegates at Kingsway Hall, London, unanimously decided to carry on their tasks of strengthening the Miners' Federation and of carrying on their trade union tasks to fight for their members irrespective of whether or not the Trade Union bill is passed by the government.

I saw A. J. Cook yesterday and he emphasized the determination of the miners' delegates to fight the government both on the Trade Union bill and the 8-hour act.

"The only opposition to the official resolution," declared Cook, "was a demand for militant action. This was voiced by a Durham delegate, Louis Martin, of Felton Fell, who showed that the government got such a fright during the General Strike that it was anxious to see that a similar strike would be impossible in the future. He urged for militant action to oppose the bill. As a result of rank and file pressure the resolution against the bill was strengthened and its effect now is that the miners will ignore the bill and carry on with the work as if it had not been passed.

"Our conference also realized that capitalism has completely broken down in the coalfields as elsewhere.

"As a first step towards a practical solution of the mining situation, with its private ownership and chaos, the delegates agreed upon the policy of nationalisation of mines and minerals without compensation for royalty owners.

"In the reports from the districts it was shown how the miners and their families are suffering. Those who are employed, in many instances, are only working three days per week. Some men are only working one day per week. Thousands are unemployed—and in nearly every instance these are the one who were the best fighters in the Federation.

"Victimization does not end with starvation. Evictions are taking place too, and forms of persecution.

"Soft words and eloquent appeals to the government and employers will not stop the persecution now taking place in the coalfield.

"We must get power in the shape of the Minors' National Union backed up by a 100 per cent organization. Then we will be able to speak to the owners and the government in the only language they understand.

"One of the most remarkable things that took place in the conference was the detailed criticism and exposure of Frank Hodges made by W. P. Richardson. The report announcing the resignation of Hodges as international secretary was carried unanimously.

No Pals for Hodges.

"Not one voice was raised to defend him. This shows that the British miners are determined to have a fighting international—and one that will include our Russian comrades.

"The government should pay attention to the determination of the miners' delegates to strengthen their contact with the Russian Workers. This decision was arrived at in the same week that the Soviet representatives were driven from Britain. International Labor unity will prevail over the national hate and treachery of the Baldwin government.

"International unity and action in conjunction with nationalization will end the chaos and misery now existing in the coalfields of the world.

Another Wage Attack.

"Last year I said, reduced wages and increased hours would not help the mining industry. We now see what has happened. The miners are faced once more with attack on their wages. The explanation is simple. With lower wages, longer hours, and intensified production British coal forces down wages in other countries.

"France, Belgium, Germany, America, Poland, are all faced with wage reductions and unemployment. The French government has retaliated by closing their doors to British coal.

"The only way out is for an international Miners' organization that will engage upon a struggle to arrange the hours, wages, and working conditions. This would end the present cut-throat competition that is starving the miners in every capitalist country in the world."

This is the [illegible] imperialists are anxious to use in China, for raids on the Soviet Union embassy.

The Present Situation of the Kuomintang and the Wuhan Government

Following upon the plenary session of the Kuomintang in March of this year, democracy and the supreme position of the party were re-introduced in the Kuomintang and the Wuhan (Hankow) government, which had been for some time dependent upon Chiang Kai-shek. In place of the dictatorship Chiang Kai-shek held all the five leading posts as chairman of the party, of the Political Bureau, of the Supreme War Council, of the Organization Department and the Soldiers Department), the committee system has been introduced and the return of the popular leader, Wang Ching-wei, as president of Sun Yat-sen, was decided upon.

Old Fossils Follow Chiang.

With the defection of Chiang Kai-shek, of 36 executive members, 7 went with Chiang, of the 12 members of the Control Commission, 7 went with him, all of them being very old. When Chiang Kai-shek tried to call an executive session of the Kuomintang in Nanking on the 15th of April, in order to dismiss the Wuhan Central Committee and the government from the party, he was not able to obtain the necessary quorum, so he decided to act on his own together with such people whom he had previously in Canton arrested and dismissed as counter-revolutionary elements working together with the imperialists, as Wu Chow-chu, Wu Tiet-chen, Sinkevich, etc., and to form a new government and a new party in Nanking.

The Wuhan government is composed of the following persons: Chairman of the government, Wang Ching-wei; his substitute, Tan Yen-kai; Foreign Minister, Chen Yu-yen; Justice Minister, Hsu Chien; Finance Minister, Sungrewen; Transport Minister, Sun Fox. After the plenary session in March, the following were added: Agricultural Minister, Tang Ping-chan; Labor Minister, Su Chow-fei, and Minister for Education, Kuo Ming-yu. In contradiction to all other reports, all the ministers have remained loyal to the government.

At the same time as Chiang Kai-shek's defection, the governor of the exemplary province of Chansi, Yen Chi-san attached himself to the Wuhan government and subordinated himself to the supreme commander of the national-revolutionary troops in China, Fang Yu-hsiang. The Wuhan government now controls the following Chinese provinces: Wuhan, Hupe, Kiangsi, Honan, Shansi, Shensi, Kansu, Northwest Shnyan and North Kwangtung. An area which stretches from the south to the north of China crossing both great rivers, the Yangtse and the Hoangho. The most important railway lines are also in this district.

The Chinese Areas of War.

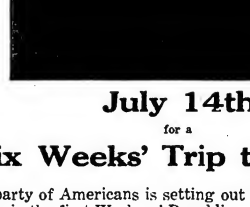
The advance of the expedition against the north which was temporarily held up by the defections of Chiang Kai-shek with Chang Tso-lin and the defection of the former from the Wuhan government, was resumed on the 19th of April of this year. The plan was that the soldiers of the southern front under the command of Tang Sen-yi should advance against Chang Tso-lin along the railway line Hankow-Peking, and the troops under the command of Fang Yu-hsiang should advance along the Lunghai line. The aims of the movement were: The unification of the Feng army with the Wuhan troops, the final destruction of the Chang Tso-lin cliqus and the conquest of Hsuchow, the railway junction of the Lunghai and Tientsin, Pukau railway with a view to destroying the forces of Chang Tsung-chang. It was assumed that the forces of Chiang Kai-shek would dissolve of their own volition after the unification of the forces of Feng and the Wuhan troops and their joint victory over Chang Tso-lin, for Chiang Kai-shek only has the first army corps of the national-revolutionary troops which is scattered over a long front from Fengtien to Hankow, whilst the greater portion of his army is composed of deserters from the armies of Sun Chuang-fang and Wu Pei-fu, troops which for years have changed their masters according to the fortunes of battle. No action was taken against Chiang Kai-shek in order not to force the vacillating troops under his command to take up a directly hostile attitude towards the Wuhan government.

Only Foreigners Save Pekin.

The Fang Yu-hsiang troops and the Wuhan troops are now united near Chowchow. The remaining forces of Feng which were left in West Shuyuan have united with the Yenchisan troops from Shansi and are advancing along the Kaigan-Pekin line. Another section of the Shansi army is advancing along the Tsyuan Dientien line towards Pekin. Apart from the numerous troops of Chang Tso-lin who have gone over to the revolutionary army, the main forces of Chang Tso-lin are in full flight towards Manchuria. Unless the foreign powers interfere, Pekin will be taken by the Wuhan troops in a very short time.

In the war area along the Tientsin-Pukau line, the troops of Chiang Kai-shek and Chang Tsung-chang are facing each other. After the defection of Chiang from the Wuhan government, Chang Tsung-chang advancing from Hsuchow has recaptured the town of Pukau (opposite Nanking). This means a direct threat to the Chiang Kai-shek government in Nanking and a vital danger for those vacillating generals who have gone over from Chang Tsung-chang to Chiang Kai-shek with their troops. Recently Chang Tsung-chang has executed a number of backsliding generals. Chiang Kai-shek and the generals therefore undertook an energetic counter-action and are now stationed in northern Kiangsu. Chiang Kai-shek intends to press forward towards Shangtung and Chili in order to finish off Chang Tsung-chang finally. There is little possibility of Chiang Kai-shek taking Pekin. His forces are too far south and apart from this, he has only one column in action against the north, whereas the Wuhan troops are operating with three columns and are already carrying out an enveloping action against Pekin.

Japanese Economic Influence in China



Since the world war, the economic influence of Japan in China has increased very much. It extends over the whole of Manchuria where formerly Russia competed with Japan. It also extends over the one-time German sphere around Shantung. Further, in the south, Japan has entered the Yangtse district from Shanghai. The Japanese have invested considerable capital in China:

(one Yen - 2 shillings)

In Manchuria	1,322,055,000 Yen
Shanghai	315,600,000
Tsingtau	88,000,000
Wuhan (Hankow)	46,710,000
Tientsin	34,600,000
Klukiang, and other ports	25,000,000
Total	1,831,965,000 Yen

[illegible] BANK'S TURNED OVER SCAB MITTEN MANAGEMENT

boarding opportunities—they had had the good sense to take political positions in them while allowing the engineers to throw their money into "capital stock."

Promoter's High Finance.

The leading officials, soon after it was decided to build the 21-story bank building opposite the 14-story office building, bought up real estate on the adjoining corner, which rapidly soared in value when the Brotherhood's building program became known.

At this time William Prenter, Stone's successor, was buying an estate in Cleveland Heights valued at $250,000, located on the corner of Coventry Road, where Cleveland's wealthiest exploiters live. His wife had just died, revealing an estate of more than $100,000.

Other international officials either kept up lavish mansions or lived in the Park Lane Villa, on the edge of Rockefeller Park.

The Palace of a Fakir.

George T. Webb, executive vice-president of the whole financial hokus-pokus of the Brotherhood, and the real boss of the Brotherhood, was the kingpin in lavish luxury. He took a great mansion on Magnolia Drive, Cleveland's Gold Row near Wade Park. This great house is so big that an ordinary camera can snap only one half the structure. It has baronial towers, porticos, connecting cloisters, private gardens. Conservatively valued, it is worth at least $500,000 but probably nearer $750,000.

A White Elephant.

Webb was the evil genius of the Brotherhood. When he discovered that the $7,000,000 bank building was just a big white elephant, only one-third of whose offices could be rented, he turned around for a chance to clean up quick in order to keep the whole financial structure from tottering into bankruptcy. The bank building, incidentally was erected in a part of the city practically stagnant. It is surrounded by small, cheap structures. The real development of Cleveland is a mile away, up Euclid Ave.

To retrieve the stupid blunders in adding more banks to the chain that could possibly be supported and the final error of building a huge structure which may never be able to pay, its upkeep, Webb conceived a brilliant scheme which meant millions—positively and right away.

The Florida Paradise.

Florida! Magic word! That was in 1925 when Florida was El Dorado indeed. Fortunes were being coined by mere signatures of the pen. Land values were soaring higher than real estate sharks had ever dreamed they could—even in the palmiest California days.

The Brotherhood should plunge in Florida, clean up ten, twenty, thirty millions in a year. And Webb could be sure that he would clean up a[illegible]

Accordingly it was announced to the world that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers had bought 80,000 acres of choicest Florida land there a "model city—Venice—would arise. This near a swamp and wilderness 20 miles from the nearest town. Next year the Miami of the Florida Gulf Coast.

Bravely the sand scows, the dredge diggers, the stump pullers set to work. Within a few months "avenues" and "boulevards" had been staked out in the wilderness. A few more months and a lonesome but imposing "Spanish" hotel graced the site, along with tumble down shacks and more rising to house non-union Negro labor.

But back home the "brothers" were grabbing up choice lots six miles from the seashore. All the best real estate promotion tactics—churbs, pictures, a fairy city, rapture over the Riviera of America, dream homes, farm land, manufacturers, busy industries—all the wild, idiotic nonsense of the Florida promoters done over for the benefit of locomotive engineers and others.

And lots sold. Not so many as has been expected, but still some.

And then——

The Big Smash.

Bloosie—and the bubble of Florida real estate promotion collapsed overnight. The roads were clogged with autos seeking to escape the ruins. Grass began to grow on the "streets" of million dollar promotions. The real estate gentry escaped Florida in a flood which swamped all the Pullmans which could be rushed from the North.

And there was Venice—disconsolate by the waters. Millions sunk in the city, millions more to be sunk before a penny could be realized.

Scab Labor Builds On.

There was nothing for Webb to do but keep at it. Orders went ahead for the non-union building mechanics to continue work. The construction company demanded cash. No more credit. And Webb bravely went along, signing checks in the six figures and sending out hurry up calls for the "grand officials" back home to order the membership to kick through for lots—and do it demand quick.

It got so that every one of the 90,000 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers knew he would receive mail every day—from Venice. A fresh lot of letters sailed into every railroad town, pestered division meetings, buttonholed bronzed old engineers, told them their last cent should go into Venice "for old age."

Then the New York banks had to be sold. Had to be sold to raise the funds to pay the non-union contractor. No cash, no work. Millions just sunk in the ground. Work had to continue.

The few lousy millions lasted a while, but more needed. Very well, the various Brotherhood holding companies and securities corporations began passing dividends.

Tenantless Scab Houses.

Not enough, not enough, cried the contractor as Venice began to assume the prospects of a real sure-enough city. Hotels, apartment houses, business blocks and Temples of Toil. The town dead. But a change would come. Florida was "sound," if only we can hold out a few years, everything will go all right.

Then another bank had to be let go. Philadelphia, it was, with the notorious non-union Mitten Management sworn foe of the Street Car Men's union, taking over that bank.

Then a suit started out in Seattle. Investors were afraid the elaborate Pacific Coast financial edifice of the Brotherhood was shaky.

Workers Ask Questions.

And then the convention, the tri-ennial meeting with angry delegates from every division in the country demanding to know what the hell is the matter. Plain, honest workers. Didn't know much about finance but they could see something was rotten. No dividends from the West Virginia coal mines. . . . None from the securities corporations. . . . None from the holding companies. . . . ????

And now the final stroke. Mitten Management, princes of "labor management," friends of the toilers, the better-than-union experts. We'll take over your banks. We'll rescue you. We'll let you have a few more millions for Venice.

An alliance between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, oldest of the regular labor unions, and Mitten Management, most successful of the anti-union "labor managers."

Trade union capitalism has flowered at last into full blossom.

Brother Engineers. Kick out Prenter, Daugherty, Webb and the rest of the rotten, corrupt gang. Take them by the scruffs of their fat necks and throw them either into Lake Erie—or into the penitentiary. Rescue what you can from your "investments" in trade union capitalism.

And take a solemn vow as workers and good trade unionists that if you need more money you know where to get it. Put in a militant trade union leadership which will get you the money you need for old age—and from fake investments—but from the enormously rich railroad companies. They owe you and the rest of the railroad workers untold millions in wages.

There's plenty of money in the United States. Use your union to find out just where it is—and then take what you are entitled to as workers.

The Right to Picket Is Endangered by the Action of the Special A. F. of L. Committee.

The right of workers to picket in an effective manner the premises of bosses who are fighting a union or unions is being destroyed by the Tammany Hall police department of New York City—in the face of the recent state supreme court decision legalizing picketing.

The police are arresting furriers' strike pickets en masse. Even orderly patrolling of sidewalks in the fur district is treated as unlawful by the police and hundreds of workers are jailed daily under the flimsy pretext that they are blocking traffic. The whole picket line is taken to jail and the hardboiled fur manufacturers and their scabs left undisturbed by even so much as a reproachful look.

As every trade unionist knows, the right to strike is not of great value if picketing can be made illegal by statute or impossible by the use of mass mobilization of police.

The labor movement of New York city and state must either support the struggle of the furriers for the right to picket or acknowledge that it is establishing now a precedent of passivity which will be remembered by the courts and police department the next time some other section of the labor movement is on strike.

The Central Labor Council has turned down and denounced in an energetic manner the request made by the Woll-Frayne-McGrady committee for strikebreakers with union cards to take the place of the police and prevent the furriers from picketing. But this committee at once finds another method of demonstrating its contemptible and reactionary character. Once again, as in the Mineola case, its members turn police informers and bring forward framed-up charges of assault against strikers which they hope will result in prosecution and imprisonment for the workers selected as victims.

While a small army of police officers are breaking up the picket lines, the special committee of the American Federation of Labor is making ready to secure mass p[illegible]utions of strikers.

Since the strike is for the purpose of securing better wages and working conditions and union shops, the Woll-Frayne-McGrady crew is united with the bosses to break the strike.

What is the New York labor movement going to do?

Will it be satisfied with the repudiation made at the last meeting of the Central Labor Council? Some of the officials may consider that enough has been done, that the record has been made.

But we believe that there are thousands of union men and women in New York who will not be satisfied that the danger to the integrity of the labor movement has been averted by verbal repudiation on the floor of the Council.

More than this is needed.

First, there must be support for the furriers' strike and militant defense of any worker whom the A. F. of L. police informers succeed in framing-up.

Second, the whole American labor movement must be informed in a systematic manner of the treacherous activities of the special A. F. of L. committee and of the danger in the situation to the unions, in the attempt to destroy, by the police and courts, aided by bosses and prominent A. F. of L. leaders, the right to picket in a struggle for wages and working conditions.

It is established now beyond any doubt that, far from being only an attempt "to purge the labor movement of 'reds'," the activities of the special A. F. of L. committee are directed against elementary trade union principles—that its activities are good only for the enemies of the labor movement with which it is aligned so openly that the Central Labor Council has had to refuse to cooperate with it any longer.

Stoolpigeonism in the labor movement must go.

There Must Be No More Nanking Massacres When the Next Big Victory of the Kuomintang Is Won

Bearing out the predictions made by us more than a month ago, dispatches from China now show clearly that, contrary to all the estimates made by the imperialist journals, the Wuhan government, representing and leading the mass liberation movement, has extended and consolidated its power and influence—political and military—until today it is, in spite of the desertion of Chiang Kai-shek, a force which imperialism and its allies cannot defeat.

Back of the Wuhan government stands the overwhelming majority of the trade unions, the peasant organizations and the armies.

Chiang Kai-shek is almost completely isolated and must enter into an alliance with the Wuhan government, in which he will be a subordinate figure, or become a minor lackey of the northern militarists and Japan.

A number of recent developments substantiate these conclusions. They are:

First, the agreement reached by General Feng Ysiang and all the leaders of the Wuhan government and the Kuomintang. A complete economic, political and military program was worked out and preparations made for an extension of the victorious drive on Peking.

Second, General Feng has been sent to Soochow to arrange a military alliance with Chiang Kai-shek. The dispatch of Feng is an indication that Chiang has little to do but accept the terms of the Kuomintang since Feng now holds the post of commander-in-chief of the Kuomintang armies formerly held by Chiang.

Third, the opening of the convention of the All China Federation of Labor in Hankow, the delegates representing between three and four million workers, is of fundamental importance as showing the stability of the Wuhan government, the powerful base it has in the working class and the tremendous growth of the labor movement which at its last conference included only some one million, two hundred thousand workers.

Fourth, the great strikes and demonstrations in Canton in favor of the Wuhan government show that it is a matter of a short time and the carrying thru of a not difficult military action in the south until Canton's government becomes part of the Kuomintang government at Wuhan.

From the camp of the northern militarists, whose untenable position has forced a regrouping under the dictatorship of Chang Tso-lin, come the usual futile fulminations against "bolshevism" and "Russian influence."

The growing popular strength of the Wuhan government is a guarantee that the defection of Chiang Kai-shek has been more than discounted.

But as the Chinese liberation movement gains in power, as it becomes certain that the militarist allies of the imperialists cannot halt this process and that the Kuomintang government has such strength that even carefully planned treason from within with imperialist backing cannot destroy it, the danger of open armed intervention increases.

The solidarity of the masses in the imperialist countries with the Chinese liberation movement must be shown more concretely than ever before.

Hands Off China must be made to mean a China on whose soil there is not a single imperialist soldier and in whose ports there is not a single imperialist warship.

American troops and American gunboats must be withdrawn. There must be no repetition of the Nanking massacre for which, with true imperialist arrogance and brutality, the secretary of the navy has just decorated the American officer who ordered the butchery to begin.

Exit the Brotherhood Labor Banks.

Delegates to the Cleveland convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers heard from the lips of their own leaders the somber obituary of labor banking. The vast edifice of the Brotherhood banks and its subsidiary financial ventures comprising eleven banks and seven investment companies went crashing about their heads. In spite of the fact that the Brotherhood banks were nothing more nor less than plain capitalist institutions, indulging in the most brazen exploitation of labor and fighting against union organization of its ventures, the servile lackeys of capitalism at the head of the Brotherhood could not keep abreast of the game. Their scab mines, scab buildings and general union-wrecking policies were up to the approved capitalist standard, as is revealed in Jack Kennedy's article in this issue of The DAILY WORKER, but even then they could not hold their own.

Even during the life of the late labor lieutenant of capitalism, Warren S. Stone, the structure of labor banking was tottering. The Communists alone, as far back as 1922-23, exposed in the Weekly Worker, forerunner of our present daily, the palpable fraud of all labor banking schemes and declared that such venfures must operate on a purely capitalist basis as a part of the parasitism of Wall Street in order to survive. We proved then that such ventures were a positive detriment to the working class and that such banks could never in any manner aid the workers in their struggles. We showed that the principal income from modern banking is derived from participation in the sale of stock issues; that through the banks the workers must become involved in the most repulsive features of class collaboration; that their banker-leaders would abandon any semblance of struggle against the employers because through participation in industrial stock issues they would be striking as workers against their investments as capitalists. In order to avoid a crash at that time Mr. Warren S. Stone became a partner in the Wall Street concern of the Empire Trust, so that the Brotherhood banks could get their share of the profits derived from discounting stock issues.

After the death of Stone his successors continued his policies, enriching themselves by speculative plunging in the most approved capitalistic style. But the crash in Florida where they had invested heavily in real estate (the best of all securities, according to Peter J. Brady, Sydney Hillman and other apostles of labor banking) brought the labor bankers face to face with a situation where they would have to confess failure and get kicked out of office by the membership, or persuade some more powerful capitalist concern to come to their rescue. Their saviors proved to be the notorious scab-herding, strike-breaking Mitten gang of Philadelphia, which for years has conducted a training school for scabs to be supplied to all traction lines desiring to break the street carmen's union.

Just what shady transactions took place between the Mittens and the Brotherhood officials may never be known. The Philadelphia traction barons are interested in the Brotherhood ventures principally because of the mine holdings in West Virginia. They can use the scab Coal River Colliers Company to furnish coal for their scabby traction lines and, of course, continue the banking business along the old lines.

This crash should be sufficient to silence, for a time at least, the contemptible scoundrels and traitors to labor who are inducing the workers to have confidence in such institutions as labor banks, all of which are at the absolute mercy of the Wall Street bandits and can be crushed as a gorilla crushes an eggshell the moment they desire to do so.

It is to be hoped that the convention in Cleveland, after getting rid of the banking business, turns upon the fakirs and drives them from the labor movement into the ranks of the avowed lackeys of capitalism where they will in future get their pay from those they serve instead of from the workers they betray.

The worker's only savior is the working class of the world.

What the Daily Worker Means to the Workers

More Encouraging Contributions to Our Emergency Fund.

A picnic organized by the Arnold and New Kensington Street Nucleus for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER netted $50.00. "We are sending this to save our Daily Worker," say the comrades.

The Lettish Singing Society of Newark, N. J., sends a check for $15.31, collected for the DAILY WORKER Fund.

O. Daniels, Lakewood, sends $5.00 for "the battle with abomination" to keep the DAILY WORKER going.

Local Grand Rapids, Mich. sends a check for $50.00 and assures the DAILY WORKER that they are still on the job collecting further pledges.

A. M., foreman in a big Minneapolis factory, sends $12.50 collected in the shop. "I would feel myself isolated from the rest of the world," he says, "if the dark forces of reaction would succeed in silencing the DAILY WORKER."

Comrade J. Lanza, of Rochester, in spite of hard times, renews his subscription to the DAILY WORKER and sends an additional contribution of $2.00 to help it go on with the struggle.

Russian Branch of Haverhill, Mass. has collected $36.50 to "smash the attack of the Bosses."

Street Nucleus of Verona, Va., sends a contribution of $20.00.

Street Nucleus No. 30, Section 6, Chicago, sends a collection of $30.00 with apologies for the small amount and a promise to do better.

The Rumanian Workers Club of Chicago enclosed a check for $50.00 "to help save the DAILY WORKER."

$30.30 was collected for the Daily Worker Sustaining Fund at an Open Forum of the Workers (Communist) Party held in Chicago on June 12th.

Comrade M. Whittier, of Williamstown, Mass., sends a postal order for $25.00 "to keep the only fearless and sincere mouthpiece of the workers in America ever fighting for the proletariat of the world."

Street Nucleus No. 1, Seattle, Wash., sends a check for $25.00, net proceeds of a social and dance given for the Daily Worker sustaining fund, and promises to send more soon.

CURRENT EVENTS

the idea began to grow in the trade unions that the days of strikes were over that the golden days of harmonious unionism had arrived.

THE first big explosion in business unionism has taken place. The gigantic interests of the B. of L. E. are being peddled to the capitalists. Thomas E. Mitten, who controls the transit system in Philadelphia is dickering with the brotherhood to take over their banking and other business enterprises. In fact there is reason to believe that the deal is already made and that nothing remains but to secure the sanction of the brotherhood convention which is now in session in Cleveland. Business for profit and trade unionism do not go hand in hand.

DRAMA

Civic Repertory Planning Five New Plays

The Civic Repertory Theatre announces five new productions for next season and the continuation of seven of its successful plays of last season in its repertory program.

The first production which goes in rehearsal August 1st, and which will open the season in October, will be "The Good Hope," a play from the Dutch of Herman Heijermans, translated by Lillian Saunders and Caroline Heijermans-Resvicki. The play is realistic drama of the sea. It was first produced here at the Empire Theatre in 1908 with Ellen Terry.

The second production of the season will be a comedy from the Danish called "Two Plus Two Makes Five" by Gustav Weld, translated by Ernest Boyd. The other plays are: Jean Jacques Bernard's "Invitation au Voyage," also a comedy. Clare Eames will probably be the guest director. Miss Eames will also alternate with Eva Le Gallienne as "Hedda Gabler" in the Ibsen play of that name. An American play, also a comedy is now in consideration as the fifth production.

The plays retained from last season are Goldoni's "La Locandiera," Ibsen's "Master Builder" and John Gabriel Borkman, Sierras "Cradle Song," Tchekov's "Three Sisters," Susan Glaspell's "Inheritors," and Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

Broadway Briefs

Lynn Starling, author of "Meet the Wife," is making a dramatization of "A Pleasant Sunday Afternoon in August," one of the short stories in Thyra Samter Winslow's recently published book, "People Round the Corner."

Winthrop Ames's next Gilbert and Sullivan revival will be "The Mikado," and the tentative cast includes William Gordon as Pooh-Bah; Fred Wright as Koko; Lois Bennett as Yum-Yum and William Williams, as Nanki-Poo.

"The Hell Cat," by Guy Bragden, will be presented this coming season by J. and J. Oppenheimer, owners of the Lyric Theatre.

EVA LE GALLIENNE,

Director of the Civic Repertory Theatre, who announces the presentation of five new plays next season.

Pioneers Agree to Work Conditions

Illinois Coal Miners Drift Toward Wage Cut

CHICAGO, June 21.—Confirming the completion of the opposition to the Lewis-Fishwick machine in the United Mine Workers of America, that theme leaders meant to force the miners of District 12 into a wage agreement in which concessions to the employers as to conditions of work go so far as to actually amount to a cut in wages, the District 12 policy committee, headed by President Fishwick, today handed its "best terms" to the employers.

The operators retired from conference to consider the proposals and then rejected them. They are asking an open cut in wages, but may be induced to take advantage of the union official's offer to camouflage a wage cut. They have refused the present offer by Fishwick, but have the door open for further negotiations.

Separate Agreement.

The conference now being held is to settle the strike in District 12, Illinois, leaving the rest of the union still locked out by the companies. Working conditions have been so bad in this district during the Farrington and Fishwick regime here that anything worse would mean that a great deal of work is done for no wages at all, and that more miners will remain unemployed.

Once the striking power of the union is ruined by the policy of separate district agreements, initiated by International President Lewis before the lock-out started, it will be easy to utilise the force of unemployed miners in District 12 and other districts to reduce the wages, also, any progressive miners opposed to the present plan of their officials.

It might be possible even to further cut down the efficiency of the union by substituting before long subdistrict agreements for union agreements, and perhaps even separate mine agreements.

tention to the attacks of our workers and said he intended to carry the investigation further and only upon its conclusion, if necessary, of those who is still in a very serious condition.

Hadley Denies Charges.

Police Commissioner Whalen said: "Inspector Valentine gave close attention to the attacks of our workers and had the records. They are not true. Only $1162 was collected in the campaign and that was turned over to the treasury of Queens who is still in a very serious condition.

Hadley denied charges from police officials that the Workers Ex-Service League was behind the demonstration. "We have no information to that effect," he said.

Mayor Walker refused to comment on the charges.

Only 1 Arrest.

One one fur picket was arrested yesterday morning. He is William Cohen who was taken into custody at the corner of 28th St. and Seventh Ave. Brot before Magistrate Rosenbluth he was fined $5.

About 90 pickets arrested Monday morning in the fur market returned to Joint Board headquarters yesterday afternoon after serving their two day sentence.

They were a whole line of "singing jailbirds" as they marched down 22nd St. to Number 22 East 22nd. One worker, Morris Plakin had gone on the picket line provided with sheets, a pillow case and some sandwiches. The sandwiches came in handy, but unfortunately the police authorities objected to private lunches and insisted that the worker check it until he left jail yesterday.

New Right Wing Trick.

A. Skolnick, one of the workers arrested on the picket line Monday reports a strange incident which occurred in the 54th St. jail early yesterday morning. About 3 a. m. a keeper came to his cell and called "Skolnick come on out." Skolnick asked what was the matter and was told that someone was there to pay his fine and he was to be released. Skolnick could not understand why he was being taken out, but he got up, said good-bye to his cellmate, Miller Lester, and went out to the wire screen which separates the visitors from the prisoners. There he saw a strange man, who was the person offering to pay his fine.

"Who are you," Skolnick asked. "Never mind who I am, I'm going to pay your fine. Come on out." But Skolnick was suspicious and insisted on knowing who the man was. He would not tell, so Skolnick went back to his cell and served the rest of his sentence. The belief of the workers is that this man was a gangster who had some confederates outside and wanted Skolnick out in order to assault him. Other workers are urged to beware of such a trick.

Bankers' Lies, Says Zimerman as Witness Called

Denies That the Joint Board Destroyed

The first statements lodged by Julius Hochman, right wing opponent in the International Ladies Garment Workers Union that the Joint Board (Red) union destroyed the property of their headquarters, 130 East 25th St. when they vacated them Monday as a result of a court order, was answered by Charles B. Zimmerman yesterday.

"The accusations of Hochman are false. When he and his group claim that we have destroyed the property of the union they are charging us with crimes of which they themselves are usually guilty of. It is the policy of Sigmanism to destroy the union and its property, and to claim that we have done so is an absolute lie," said Zimmerman.

Have Witnesses.

"Before we left the building we called in Joseph Fish, former right wing secretary of the Joint Board, also a reporter of the Jewish Day, and let them examine the building for we had an inkling that the Sigman gang would come out with a story along the lines that they did.

"We have intentions of again occupying the 25th St. offices and therefore it would be stupid for us to destroy something that we intend to use. This charge is in line with all, past statements of the Sigman crowd, 100 per cent full of lies."

Result of Court Order.

The Joint Board was compelled to vacate their offices as a result of a municipal court order that demanded that they pay at once $12,000 back rent and $2,000 a month in the future.

The Joint Board was unable to make payments due to the tactics pursued by the right wing group in the union and the necessity for using funds for strike relief.

Until the Joint Board gets in a position to reoccupy their former office, they will use the headquarters of Local 2, 128 East 24th St. as the Joint Board offices.

Serve Injunction on Joint Board.

An injunction was served on the officers of the Joint Board yesterday by Salvatore Vinfo, manager of local 48, "prohibiting the Joint Board or any of its officers from levying taxes or collecting dues from the members of local 48."

According to observers this is another attempt on the part of the right wing to use the courts as a weapon against the members of the union.

Cloak and Dressmakers Will Hold a Meeting at Cooper Union Tomorrow

The question of reorganization, the strike and other important matters will be taken up at an open meeting, called for tomorrow, 1 P. m. at Cooper Union by the Joint Board, International Ladies Garment Workers' Union. All unemployed cloak and dressmakers should attend.

the frame up publicly to give an opportunity to the defense workers to present facts and documents which would prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that not only are Sacco and Vanzetti innocent of the crime charged against them, but that they were deliberately framed up by the reactionary interests of Massachusetts with the aid of Department of Justice operatives. The petition demands that the committee conduct its sessions and investigations publicly.

The petitions will be circulated thru the labor unions and other working class organizations, thru the various united front committees and conferences that have been formed in dozens of cities, and special efforts will be made this time to obtain signatures by house to house canvassing. The I.L.D. is urging that special meetings be held during the Sacco-Vanzetti Week in sections of the city, where neighborhood sentiment can be organized for the drive.

Special committees in charge of the drive are to be organized in all cities which will in turn organize Sacco-Vanzetti Brigades for the collection of petition signatures.

The campaign will reach its height on July 4, Independence Day, with protest meetings, and the sending of resolutions and telegrams to the Governor, demanding a new trial and freedom for these two innocent workers, and to President Coolidge demanding a federal investigation of the illegal participation of the United States Department of Justice, in the case.

A bulletin will be issued during the period of the drive giving the results achieved in each city.

Will Point Out to Supreme Court Its C. S. Contradiction

WASHINGTON, June 21. (FP)—Justices of the United States Supreme Court have been asked to clear up the contradictions in two recent rulings on the Industrial Workers of the World, one of which sent William Burns to a California prison while another freed Harold R. Fiske of Kansas, although both were tried for membership in the I. W. W.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union have filed a petition asking for a rehearing and a stay in mandate by the Supreme Court on the Burns case, involving the constitutionality of the California criminal syndicalism act. This law, which has sent scores of workers to prison for mere membership in the I. W. W., is challenged on the ground that it violates the Fourteenth Amendment, which holds that "no citizen shall be deprived of his liberty except by due process of law."

Contradictory Rulings

In the Burns case, the Supreme Court ruled May 16 that criminal syndicalism is the intent of the I. W. W. and that membership therefore automatically places a worker in violation of the California statute. But in the Fiske ruling on the very same day, the court said that distributing the preamble of the I. W. W., soliciting members and even holding organizer's credentials imparted no criminality in Kansas.

Civil Liberties lawyers argue in their petition that if Fiske showed no criminality, then neither did Burns, whose activities in the labor organization were exactly the same. Weighty legal precedents aiming vital blows at rights previously held by workers are established by the ruling, declare the attorneys, who continue:

"Guilt By Association"

"When said objection to the statute is fully considered, it must be held that the statute as interpreted in this case attempts to write into the law the principles of guilt by association, and to establish the crime of conspiracy contrary to that principle and that crime violate the guaranty of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States that "no citizen shall be deprived of his liberty except by due process of law."

If the Supreme Court cares to grant a rehearing and stay of mandate, the California criminal syndicalism law will again be tested in the crucible of the American Constitution and Burns released from prison pending the decision. However, the court is under no compulsion to reconsider the case.

Poincare's Jingoism Bitterly Attacked In Press of Germany

"BERLIN, June 21. — Poincare's speech at Luneville on Franko-German relations has raised a small tempest in the German press. His statement that Germany still had designs on Alsace, and addcing the fact that they had a warship named "Elsass" as proof of their predatory designs is characterized as stupid and childish.

"It is not true," says the Tageliche Rundschau, "that Germany has not dissolved her military organizations, disposed of barracks and destroyed her fortifications. Poincare spoke without Celtic cynicism. He has learned nothing and forgotten nothing. His statements are palpably untrue. The paper points out that the S. S. Elsass, built in 1905, would have been discarded long ago if Germany had been permitted to build new ships.

Believe Flier Drowned.

RIO JANEIRO, June 21.—The fate of Captain St. Roman and his comrades, who hopped off from Africa several weeks ago on a trans-Atlantic hop to South America and have not been heard from since, now seems likely to be cleared up.

Portions of what appears to be a float made from aeroplane wings have been picked up outside of Parx, the National Telegraph Bureau reports.

Experts believe that St. Roman was forced down near the coast of Brazil and when his plane threatened to sink made a float of the wings of the plane and fought to keep himself and comrades afloat. They were picked up, but they drifted out of the ship routes and were finally forced to give up the struggle.

States that no citizen shall be deprived of his liberty except by due process of law."

If the Supreme Court cares to grant a rehearing and stay of mandate, the California criminal syndicalism law will again be tested in the crucible of the American Constitution and Burns released from prison pending the decision. However, the court is under no compulsion to reconsider the case.

Statement of the Communist Party of China

Communist Party of China, which assumes the responsibility of the Chinese revolution, declares that the split from the ranks of the Nationalist revolutionary armies, especially him from the party and order-

Chiang Kai-shek has become an open enemy of the National revolution and has allied himself with reactionaries. He has become a traitor to the revolution. Therefore he cannot be tolerated in the ranks of the revolutionary party of the people, he cannot be trusted with the command of the Nationalist revolutionary army. A traitor to the revolution, he deserves the highest punishment at the hands of the Nationalist government, under which he revolted and which he seeks to overthrow. The working class will energetically support the Kuomintang and the Nationalist government to purge themselves of all reactionary elements and to defeat the enemies of the National revolution.

Chinese Capitalists.

The conflict inside the Kuomintang that has resulted in this drastic, but very necessary action against Chiang Kai-shek has a deep social basis. It was not an individual that revolted against party authority, and turned against the revolution, Chiang Kai-shek and his clique are the spokesmen of a social element inside and outside the Kuomintang. Ever since its reorganization, the Kuomintang became the revolutionary party of the oppressed and exploited masses. Nevertheless, bourgeois and even reactionary feudalistic elements remained inside the party. All along, these elements sought to divert the Kuomintang from the path of revolutionary democracy. An inner struggle went on to decide the very vital question: whether the Kuomintang should be a class party or a peoples' party—whether its program and policies should be determined according to the interests of the upper classes (big bourgeoisie and feudals) or of the oppressed and exploited majority of the nation. This struggle is the social background of the crisis that became acute inside the Kuomintang as the revolution developed rapidly as a result of the north expedition.

By the coup d'etat of March 20, the bourgeois and feudalistic elements inside the Kuomintang overthrew the revolutionary democratic power in Canton. To do this they had even resorted to such base methods as individual assassination (of Liao Chung-hai). They captured power and planned to lead the revolution according to the interests of their class. To secure their power they began to destroy mass organizations which stood behind the revolutionary wing of the Kuomintang (attacks upon labor and peasant movements, dissolution of the Canton City Committee, etc.)

While the masses supported and made great sacrifices for the north expedition, as a means of developing the revolution, the bourgeois and feudal elements inside the Kuomintang looked upon it as the road to greater power. But the victorious march of the Nationalist army raised such tremendous forces of revolution as were alarming to the reactionary bourgeois and feudalistic wings of the Kuomintang. It became apparent that the success of the north expedition threatened to undo the coup d'etat of March 20. The masses challenged the feudal-bourgeois leadership and supported the revolutionary wing of the Kuomintang overthrow on March 20. The struggle for power became sharp between the feudal-bourgeois right wing and the revolutionary democratic left wing of the Kuomintang.

Role of Peasants.

The northern expedition greatly expanded the power of the Nationalist government. By reaching the Yangtze Valley the Nationalist forces threatened the main citadels of imperialism. It became self-evident that imperialism would not yield any vital positions without an open armed struggle. While negotiating with the Nationalist government on the question of concessions, imperialism prepared for intervention. To be able to meet the united forces of imperialism and its tool, native militarism, the Nationalist government must have the conscious and whole-hearted support of the masses whose power and sacrifice are the only guarantee for the revolution. In other words, Nationalist China must establish a revolutionary democratic power. This meant that the national revolution should primarily be an agrarian revolution. Eighty per cent of the Chinese population being peasantry, a revolutionary democracy cannot be established except through an agrarian revolution. The French peasantry supported Napoleon for 20 years because of the agrarian reforms made by the great revolution. In China, the peasant movement spread like forest-fire in the provinces through which the victorious Nationalist army passed. If the advent of the Nationalist army and of the Nationalist government change the conditions of slavery and misery under which the peasantry have tilled and toiled for ages, the victory of the National revolution will be guaranteed—the Nationalist army will be irresistible. The French peasantry helped Napoleon conquer feudal Europe. The Chinese peasantry will support the Nationalist government and the Nationalist army to free China from imperialism and militarism.

Prostrate Dr. Sun.

For the success of revolution which is indispensable from the National revolution is natural in the interests of the feudal elements and even of the bourgeoisie. Apart from the Canton handicraft industry and the peasantry the principal producing class at is the object of exploitation—feudal, imperialist and militarist—as soon as it became clear that the further development of the National revolution required an agrarian revolution and the mobilization of the Kuomintang recognized its necessity, the feudal-bourgeois elements inside the Kuomintang felt their position shaken. They gradually moved to the counter-revolutionary feudal - bourgeois reaction he declared war upon that Chiang Kai-shek represented. Ever since March 20 he had carried the banner of these elements. When he failed to make the entire Kuomintang an instrument of feudal-bourgeois reaction he declared war upon it. Should the Nationalist movement not go in the way recommended by the bourgeoisie which is linked up with imperialism, they would not hesitate to split it, to turn against it, to ally with militarism and imperialism in order to crush it. And Chiang Kai-shek did all these as the representative of the feudal bourgeois elements outside the Kuomintang.

The resolution of the Kuomintang depriving Chiang Kai-shek of his post, expelling him from the party and ordering his arrest means that the Kuomintang declares that the feudal-bourgeois elements inside its ranks have turned against the revolution, and therefore should be looked upon as enemies to be defeated for the complete and final victory of the National revolution. This resolution marks a stage of class differentiation which goes on as the revolution develops. The C. P. supports this resolution because the proletariat should not only strengthen revolutionary democratic power, but is its backbone.

When the consideration of feudal-bourgeois interests made Chiang Kai-shek declare war upon the Kuomintang, he chose the working class as the first object of attack. The wrath of the counter-revolutionary bourgeoisie was vented with ferocity upon the workers and peasants of Kiangsi, Chekiang and Shanghai. The C. P. became the object of his bitterest hatred. Chiang Kai-shek understands that the left power cannot be overthrown, the Nationalist movement cannot be a monopoly of bourgeoisie, unless the organized force of the working class is destroyed. On their part, the proletariat understand that Chiang Kai-shek is the hangman of the counter-revolutionary feudal-bourgeoisie. Destruction of Chiang Kai-shek requires the defeat of the feudal-bourgeois elements inside and outside Kuomintang. As long as the counter-revolutionary social forces that he represents, are not destroyed, Chiang Kai-shek may be overthrown only to be replaced by another more treacherous, more brutal, more bloodthirsty.

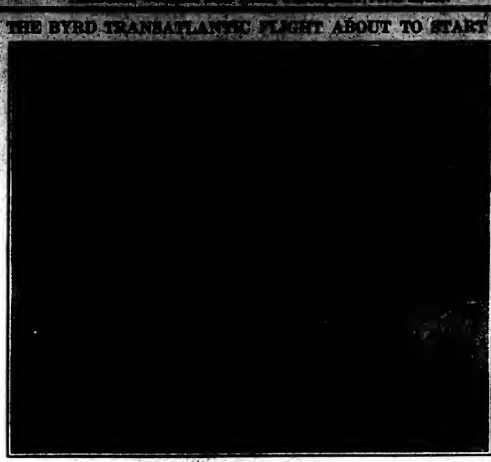
Clearing Kuomintang.

Feudal-bourgeois elements, that until recently marched half-heartedly with the Nationalist revolution, have gone over to the camp of counter-revolution. The Neo-militarism of Chiang Kai-shek has become an additional instrument with which imperialism attacks the Chinese people. Failing to capture the leadership of the Nationalist movement feudal-bourgeois elements sought to split the Kuomintang and set up a party and government which under the false color of Nationalism would betray the nation, unite with reactionary militarism and compromise with imperialism. The expulsion of Chiang Kai-shek from the Kuomintang does not remove the danger. He will still try to set up a rival "Nationalist government."

Even after Chiang Kai-shek is expelled from the party, roots of Chiang Kai-shekism are to be found throughout the Nationalist territories. They are the reactionary social classes—landlords, gentry, etc. In proportion as national revolution destroys these forces by means of radical agrarian reforms, Chiang Kai-shekism gets weakened. So long as the feudal-bourgeois elements marched with the National revolution, it was tactically necessary to develop class-struggle by stages. Now, they have declared class-war; no tactical consideration any longer restrains the attack on the reactionary class. This will be the most effective and only way of overthrowing the neo-militarism of Chiang Kai-shek, frustrating his efforts to set up a rival "Nationalist government" and forming a solid revolutionary democratic front to meet and defeat the united forces of imperialism, militarism and feudal bourgeoisie.

Down with Chiang Kai-shek, the representative of feudal-bourgeois reaction and instrument of imperialism!

Down with military dictatorship!



Long live the union of revolutionary democracy!

Long live the democratic dictatorship of the proletariat, peasantry and the middle classes!

Professional Patriots

High-salaried patrioteers have ever been in the vanguard in the fight for the open shop, which they like to refer to as the "American Plan." They fight all measures in the field of labor legislation, such as the child labor amendment, have taken a leading part in advocating the criminal syndicalism laws which are now found on the statute books of 36 states.

8. Attorney-General Daugherty and Mr. Burns' zeal evidently inspired the following announcement by Henry Harrison Lewis in his paper Industrial Progress. This is in the January, 1924, issue, under the heading: "If there is Bolshevik Activity in your Neighborhood, Notify the Department of Justice at Washington."

"Here is an invitation and a command to search diligently for every sign and vestige of efforts in plants and in daily contacts to promote the economic, political and social chaos that furnishes the fertile soil for Bolshevism. . . .

"Each has a duty that should be a patriotic privilege: to ferret out the sly agents of anarchy, to mark their hangings and goings and associations and to lead them and their dupes into the light of day. The Department of Justice of the United States, dedicated to the continued welfare of all the people, will welcome such aid on the part of energetic citizens, and a personal sense of duty to country well performed will yield to them a permanent satisfaction."

Captain Sidney Howard, dramatist, and author of the "Labor Spy," writing on the professional patriots in the New Republic, September 10, 1924, describes the close relation of these organizations to the government departments:

"The militant patriots were publicity agents for Mr. Burns. When he hadn't evidence to convict these 'so-called liberals' and worse, he turned the patriots loose in his treasure house of rumors and portentous subversive documents. There was meat for them and precious little danger of libel suits, too, with such authority behind them. Dwight Braman sat in the offices of the Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc., and boasted that he was in almost daily communication with the Department of Justice.' Ralph Easley printed the Burns assistance right out in his prospectus of the National Civic Federation's forthcoming Survey of Progress. A survey of progress, by the National Civic Federation, by the way, is not without certain elements of humor. But they had the co-operation of governmental agencies at Washington.' And no one, except possibly Mr. Whitney of the American Defense Society called more frequently than Mr. Easley on the Bureau of Investigation. These calls provided, one surmises, a convenient link between sworn enemies, Mr. Burns and Easley's pal, Samuel Gompers; provided, too, a convenient source of A. F. of L propaganda against renegade unions. As to R. M. Whitney he loved to write letters about his dependence on the Burns files. He proclaimed it to the lawyers of the Foster defense. And letters written to the Department in confidence by the National Student Forum came out in Mr. Whitney's pamphlets. You and I couldn't have gotten into those Burns files. But then we were not militant patriots, and therefore, of no use to Mr. Burns."

The Spider-Web Chart.

An absurd but irritating piece of propaganda which caused a widespread protest from women's organizations was the so-called "spider-web chart" prepared in 1923 by Miss Lucia R. Maxwell, librarian of the Chemical Warfare Service of the War Department headed by General Amos Fries. It illustrates the influence of certain hysterical professional patriots upon a highly important branch of a federal department. The chart was prepared apparently for the use of the Woman Patriot, for it is inserted to Miss Mary Kilbreth of that journal "with appreciation of her work." Its name refers to the web of lines between organizations and women leaders which are intended to tie together in an international conspiracy, directed, of course, from Moscow, all the chief women's organizations in the country.

It is aimed primarily at the National Council for the Prevention of War and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom headed by Jane Addams, and shows the connection with these two peace societies of women in organizations represented in the Women's Joint Congressional Committee, headed by Mrs. Maude Wood Park of the National League of Women Voters. The chart, which was distributed as a photostat copy of an ink drawing, about one by two feet, is headed "The Socialist-Pacifist Movement in America is an absolutely Fundamental and Integral part of International Socialism."

$1,200,000 to Fight the Unions

In West Virginia, about 20 years ago the "Yellow Dog" contract first appeared. Since then the state has been a haven for open shoppers and today elaborate plans are laid for keeping the unions out.

The Ohio Valley Industrial Corporation of Wheeling, W. Va., is an organization similar to a Chamber of Commerce with a dual mission. They have a cash fund of $1,200,000.00 for the purpose of keeping unions out of the district and they are thus fact as a bait to lure small manufacturers from New York to a sure slaughter.

From an "Industrial Report" prepared by the Ohio Valley Industrial Corporation, Wheeling, W. Va. it is evident that the manufacturing enterprises derive labor from the wives and children of the underpaid miners and steel workers in the district who are forced to slave in clothing factories in order to boost the family income to a point nearer the maintenance mark. Rent is exhorbitantly high and wages extremely low. Female and child labor are prevalent and unprotected. The municipal and state governments are owned and controlled by the manufacturers and the courts are known to be partial to them.

In a recent campaign to lure some New York clothing manufacturers into their spider web, the real estaters and bankers of Wheeling, W. Va., had the Ohio Valley Industrial Corporation promise as follows:

"Labor rates in the Ohio Valley District are low—we are in position to demonstrate to you that the average saving on labor alone will be approximately $25,000.00 a year for each 100 employes—the Ohio Valley Industrial District offers a large supply of non-union female labor at low rates." All of these females are wives and daughters of miners and steel workers who are no underpaid that they cannot meet the high cost of living in the Wheeling District. A glance at the comparative earnings and rents paid by laborers in Wheeling will show this very plainly.

"The wages paid skilled workers average from $15.00 to $25.00 a week of forty-eight hours.

"Laundry workers are paid a straight salary of $10.00 to $14.00 per week.

"Clerks employed in National Chain Stores average from $10.00 to $15.00 per week."

Negro women can be hired for four dollars a week and Negro men for six dollars a week, as in any Southern state.

"The following is the average rental scale of house rents:

"Houses suitable for white skilled employes (the ones who earn $18.00 to $25.00 a week, don't forget) $30.00 to $50.00 a month.

"Houses suitable for white unskilled employes (with earnings of $10.00 to $15.00 a week) $20.00 to $36.00 per month.

"Houses suitable for colored employes (you may depend upon it that a self-respecting pig would not want to live in these houses) $12.00 to $20.00."

From these figures it is apparent that industrial real estate brings handsome profits.

Sixty percent of the clothing workers are women and there is "an abundance of female labor, especially young girls."

To quote further from the Report, "We can assure you that you will not have any labor troubles in the District, as this is a strictly non-union District and the attitude of the Courts and the financial interests are centered towards protecting the manufacturer's interest."

Open Shop—No Strikes.

There are no strikes in the Wheeling District, we are told, because 85% of the labor is employed on the open shop basis. In 1921 the large steel mills broke the union which has never successfully re-organized.

Labor laws are framed to protect the manufacturers. The Commissioner of Labor has no power. Children above 14 years may be employed for eight hours a day. There are no laws at all regulating female labor, and the Workmen's Compensation Act is not compulsory but protects the employer, nevertheless.

The most foolish statement contained in the "Industrial Report" is that, "over 98% of the city's population carries savings accounts." Considering the low wages, high rentals and large degree of unemployment (stressed as the "abundance of labor—which is never scarce") that is indeed a miraculous accomplishment—or a downright lie.

—NORMAN SILBER.

A Prison Like Factory

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail)—"We hope that you will soon establish the Soviet Rule of the Workers and Peasants in your countries."

It was a peasant speaking. Not unusual you may say in the Soviet Union. But this peasant happened to be a prisoner in the Moscow Leforstvsky Isolator, a house of correction, as prisons are called in the Soviet Union. That rouses your interest.

Study The Boss.

I was leaving this class room where a group of peasant prisoners were studying bee culture. The translator had just explained to the prisoners, who were keenly interested, that our party going thru the prison was made up of students from the Lenin School, Germans, French, Americans, British, Bulgarians, and other nationalities, and that it included delegates from several countries to the plenary session of the Executive Committee of the Communist International just closed.

Many of the Russian words slipped past me. But the enumeration of the different countries was very clear. The faces of these Russian farmers brightened into smiles, while one of them, evidently a spokesman for the group, uttered the hope in clear, distinct Russian, for the triumph of the Soviet Power in all the lands from which we visitors had come. The translator passed the message on to us. We replied that the struggle was growing everywhere; that the day of triumph would come. Then the peasants returned to their discussion. We continued our visit elsewhere.

Not Locked!

It was difficult to persuade oneself that this was a prison. Call it a prison, if you will, and then realize that it is a prison without keys! I have been in many American prisons, I have been locked up in some of them. In American prisons one is always confronted with the turnkeys everywhere opening and shutting heavy, clanging doors, manipulating intricate systems of locks and bars, using methods by which long rows of cells are locked up by the working of a single lever; high walls ontside with watch towers manned by heavily armed guards, powerful searchlights stationed in strategic positions, with all the other paraphernalia invented and improved on to keep the victims of capitalism securely in chains.

Not Crowded!

Here I saw not a single key, in this Soviet "House of Correction" with only 381 inmates. It has a capacity of over 400. Strange anomaly this, a prison that isn't overflowing. For such is the case with practically every American jail and prison, with huge appropriations being everywhere frantically secured for new additions, or for entirely new structures. Vicious employers are declaring in strikes: "If the jails and prisons are not big enough, we'll build stockades. Prisons of the Soviet Union emptying; the last bastion of American capitalism choked ever more with their human prey.

We had gathered at the Hotel Lux at six o'clock in the evening. We had walked down the Tverskaya, across the Soviet Square, and then over into Sverdlov Square, one of the most beautiful in Moscow with its many flower beds blossoming into life. It was crowded. Here we got a tramway to take us out into a suburb. We were to go to the end of the line. On the car we got better acquainted with our guide who also acted as an interpreter, a Communist Party member who works in one of the large Co-operative Department Stores. He pointed it out to us as we passed.

Children Play.

Leaving the street car we passed down a street and then across a meadow where children were playing in large numbers on the green grass. It didn't look like the neighborhood of a prison. Then the buildings of the "Leforstovsky Isolator," as it is called, soon broke upon us from behind a row of giant trees, that stood guard in all the glory of their fresh spring foliage.

We walked thru the gate, that was standing open, and up into the administration building, unannounced. It did not take long before the warden himself appeared.

My first impression was of a huge workshop as we were taken into a long room where many looms were busy weaving cloth of many kinds and colors. The weavers were prisoners, under five to ten-year sentences, the cloth being the maximum in the Soviet Union.

But they didn't look like prisoners. No prison uniforms. Just as good wages paid as most workers outside received. And they were proud of their work. That was easy to see by stopping at their machines and showing an interest in what they were doing. And they talked readily of their task. There was no prison rule forbidding you to talk to them.

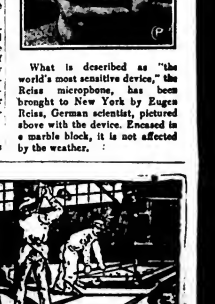
Like a Factory.

We went thru several such rooms of busy, throbbing machines. These prison workshops were run on a three-shift basis, the day shifts working eight hours, the night shifts seven hours, the prisoners receiving one-third of his wages immediately. The other two-thirds are either given to the prisoners' family, if he has one, or given to him upon his release. The Mostorg (Moscow Trading Co.) buys 100,000 roubles worth of goods every month. In the last ten months the profits on the goods sold has totalled 137,000 roubles. (One rouble is approximately 50 cents.)

Then we passed on into the main building. Here it was plainly to be seen that many of the workshops had formerly been the giant prison cells into which the victims of the czarism that is gone had been thrown wholesale.

Garment Shops.

The metallic purr of machinery providing useful work for idle hands, had replaced the groans of these once here entombed. One is recalled from reflections over the departed czarism, with all its horrors, to hear the warden tell of his latest purchase of German machinery, purchases over which he displays great enthusiasm. Here are four machines that cost 2,400 roubles apiece. There are two others that cost 9,000 roubles, fresh in their new paint and polish. They are being put into place. Soon they will be at work. In another room we come upon long rows of Singer Sewing Machines, imported from the United States. Here the cloth is made into goods of various kinds. The finished products were displayed by an "instructor," a prisoner. He was arrested in 1922, following the discovery that he had been a member of the czarist police before the revolution. He was very accommodating and didn't mind telling about his checkered past.



Then we pass on into the cell blocks, where the prisoners live, which are built pretty much on the order of American prisons, tier of cells rising on tier. We pass along the lowest tier.

We come upon a cell that was neat, it is explained, for the punishment of prisoners thru solitary confinement. Now it is a hath room. No black dungeons in this prison now.

We go thru the prison hospital. There is room for a dozen but on this evening there is only one inmate. Immediately cases become serious they are sent off to regular hospitals and given every possible care.

Then we come upon the prison "coop," the co-operative store where the prisoners may purchase what they desire. It is in charge of Hora, a former Czecho-Slovakian spy. He is dressed quite neatly and smokes his cigarette quite jauntily. One of the members of our Party is also a Czech from Prague. Hora is from Prague. He tries to minimize his crime by declaring that he had merely written a letter during the famine. But we were later shown some mass evidence against Hora, who was a Czech doctor, had worked himself into the Soviet Political Police and betrayed some of its secrets to the Czech white guards and the Czech Mission. He had been here six years, ont of an eight-year sentence. He took his imprisonment quite philosophically, said he had no complaints to make.

WE see in the society columns of the newspapers that Mrs. E. Morris de Peyster has purchased the Cross-ways Nursery the villa of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and is occupying it this season." This is at Newport. Mrs. de Peyster is pictured under a sunshade and with a troubled look on her countenance. No doubt the poor devil is worrying over the trials and tribulations of her next "at home." Supposing the bootlegger fools her on the gin!

ANOTHER intriguing bit of information for the hard-working stenographer is the reported marriage of Florence Gibb Pratt, daughter of two more Pratts, who was married in St. James's Episcopal Church. The couple will reside in Cheshire, England. The bride did not carry a bouquet, but instead a white prayer book. How perfectly pious! What the attendants wore and where they wore it was minutely described in the society columns. As if it mattered a damn!

CAN you imagine something like this appearing in the society columns?: "Miss Mary Feiteltoot, daughter of Mr. Moses Feiteltoot, well known rabbit-worker of Chrystie Street was joined in wedlock yesterday to Mr. Isaac Patrick Muldoon, son of Mr. Barney Muldoon, bodyguard of 481 West 46th Street by Rabbi Scholem O'Keefe. After the services, the happy couple subwayed to the Roxy theatre where they enjoyed "Thy Neighbor's Wife." Mr. and Mrs. Muldoon will live on the east side after they have made the proper connection with an installment furniture house." You can imagine reading this in a capitalist paper, but that's about as far as you will get. Another reason why it should read The DAILY WORKER for all the news that's not fit to print anywhere else.

THERE is something bookish in the atmosphere around Washington Square. One who has read the American Mercury, the New Masses and our Saturday supplement, and who therefore knows a thing or two about the world he lives in, cannot help being pitched into a ruminating mood as he looks at the quaint houses where now-famous writers, once spent their days in tribulation and indigence. And as if sensing the psychological effect of the environment on the book-loving pedestrian a number of go-getters have opened bookstores in the vicinity. This is a typically American trait. Regardless of what Sinclair Lewis said about Babbitt he knows his business. Of course Babbitts do not run radical bookstores.

HAVING become more or less responsible for the success of the Jimmie Higgins Book Store, I must announce that he has moved his wares from 127 to 106 University Place. This Jimmie is an elusive fellow. No matter how often you call on him you will be told that he is out. His assistant would give you the impression that he is always in need of money, and as a branch of a nationally known pawn shop is close at hand, you will be told that Jimmie is there trying to borrow money.

BE that as it may, he has a splendid staff in charge of the store, pleasant to the eye as well as to the ear. A nice place to spend a few hours examining the latest books. And it is very seldom that anybody will ask you if you need assistance which is another way of saying that if you have no money you will not be insulted by a suggestion that this is a bookstore and not a zoo. Yet I am told that Jimmie sells a lot of books.

THE smallest dog and the largest man that I have seen anywhere but in a circus stood outside the door of an up-town store a few evenings ago. In fact the dog was so small that at first I thot it was a discarded ice cream cone. But my curiosity was awakened by a piece of string that led from the tiny thing on the sidewalk to a hand that seemed to be away up in the air. The flunkey that held the string in his hand was uniformed and he stood at attention as if the slightest sign of canine displeasure would mean his economic demise. Shortly, a stout lady with a jimmy countenance came forth, picked up the dog and implanted three resounding smacks on its nose. She entered a limousine, and biting the pup's ears she was driven away by a uniformed chauffeur, the flunkey sitting beside him.

SACCO, VANZETTI EMERGENCY MEET TOMORROW NIGHT

Third Labor Conference at Labor Temple

The third conference of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee will be held at the Labor Temple, 244 East 14th St., tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The conference will discuss preparations for immediate demonstrations to be held in New York.

All labor unions and fraternal organizations who have not already appointed delegates to the conference are urged to do so at once.

Heighten Agitation.

The campaign for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, slightly abated during the private hearings conducted by Governor Alvan Fuller of Massachusetts, is again being resumed with increased intensity.

Realizing also that the advisory committee appointed by the governor after insistent demands had been made is a star chamber committee and is making no attempt to hear the facts of the defense, the International Labor Defense has called for the immediate resumption of agitation on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti on a nation-wide scale.

Deep Apprehension.

With the week of July 10, the date set for the execution of the two framed-up Italian workers approaching, deep fear is being felt by those who have been leading the campaign for their liberation.

The I. L. D. has announced from its national headquarters in Chicago that new petitions with signatures reaching into the hundreds of thousands will be gathered and forwarded to the governor.

The week from June 27 to July 4 has been set aside as Sacco-Vanzetti Week, and the campaign will reach its height on July 4, Independence Day, with protest meetings thruout the United States.

KLAN INFLUENCE WORKED TO KILL JEWISH PATIENTS

N. Y. Hospital Anti-Semites Sabotage

How the Ku Klux Klan element of the Kings County Hospital of Brooklyn mistreated Jewish patients of that institution is now coming to light as a result of the hasing of three internes there last Monday.

A Jewish woman of Brooklyn, former patient of the hospital will be one of a number of persons who have had dealings with the hospital to appear before the mayor. She will relate how she was left unattended for five hours, and how the interne who was in charge of the ambulance in which she was taken to the hospital called out with profane contempt, "Here's another Jew!"

Nathan H. Sweedler, council for the three Jewish internes, yesterday related how the nurses who worked with the internes refused to cooperate with them.

He said nurses were lax in wards in which Jewish internes had been assigned and not only insulted the internes but refused to carry out their orders, particularly if they concerned Jewish patients. And Jewish patients, Sweedler added, were insulted by nurses.

Sweedler charged openly that the Ku Klux Klan is directly responsible for the actions of the doctors and nurses at the hospital.

DEADLOCK STILL GRIPS DELEGATES OF THREE POWERS

Senators Sceptical of Geneva Results

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Early collapse of the Geneva arms conference unless Great Britain accepts the limitations for warships suggested by the United States is confidently expected in high official quarters here.

Whether the British will give under pressure or the threat from the United States to launch a building program is in doubt, officials declare. The impression is that they will not, or that if they do decide to make some minor concessions, these will be still so far from the American view as to be unacceptable.

GENEVA, June 22.—The tri-partite conference on limitation of naval armaments continues its deadlock. The disagreements between Britain and the United States on the first day are standing out in sharper relief than ever, after the delegations have had time carefully to analyze the real import of the various proposals.

It resembles more nearly a council of war than an effort toward peace.

"Experts" in Hot Debate

Spirited debate broke out in the experts' committee of the tri-partite naval disarmament conference this afternoon over the question of conversion of merchant ships into auxiliary cruisers.

Sir Frederick Field, British expert, ridiculed the idea that British merchant vessels could be converted into valuable wartime auxiliary cruisers.

Admiral Jones Assails British

"A merchant liner equipped with six inch guns can be made just as dangerous, if not more dangerous, than a cruiser," interjected Admiral Jones, U. S. N.

"Cruisers below a certain tonnage have armor plate just as fragile as the 'eggshell' hull of a liner.

"When you start reducing the tonnage of cruisers you rapidly reduce the thickness of their armorplate."

Japan Refuses U. S. Terms.

Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation, called upon Admiral Saito, head of the Japanese delegation today and it is known that Saito reiterated Japan's refusal even to consider the extension of the 5-5-3 Washington conference ratio to include cruisers, destroyers and submarines. It is understood that Saito stated he was prepared to make other concessions.

Declaration of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America

The stage is all set for a new world war. All of our warnings of the past two months are being verified. Step by step Great Britain has driven ahead towards the cementing of a united imperialist front against the Soviet Union.

The Coolidge government has shown by its actions that it is participating in this united front. The war danger grows daily, and at the rate that the situation is sharpening, the summer of 1927 gives promise of eclipsing the summer of 1914.

During the last few weeks, the attack against the Soviet Union has sharpened immeasurably while the acts of aggression against the Chinese Revolution have continued unabated.

The propaganda mills of the capitalist press are working overtime, as are the aeroplane factories and the poison gas and chemical warfare factories. The campaign of slander and hatred against the Soviet Union initiated by Great Britain, and energetically backed by the United States, has culminated in the brutal murder of Voikoff, the Minister of the Soviet Union to Poland. The real responsibility for this murder rests upon the international band of imperialist assassins that are attempting to plunge the world into a new war. The raid on the Peking embassy of the Soviet Union, the raid on Arcos, the lying stories circulated to the press of the entire world, the provocative speech of Ambassador Herrick on Decoration Day, the deliberate financing of bands of terrorists and spies by Britain and the United States, these are responsible for the Voikoff murder, greeted with approbation by the anti-Soviet Press of England and the United States. Poland was secretly encouraged to add insult to injury by a light sentence to the self confessed murderer, and a provocative note of reply to the complaint of the Soviet Union.

The very conferences which the imperialists pretend to call to maintain peace in the world have been systematically used to further the plans for war. At Geneva, during the past week, the government of Great Britain has vouched each of the powers with a demand that they join with it in a common war against the Chinese people and the people of the Soviet Union. Chamberlain openly requested from the German government permission to march troops over Germany to attack Russia when the war begins.

In China, the Coolidge government has openly accepted the place of leadership in this plot against world peace and against Chinese people which the Tory government of Great Britain has attempted to thrust upon it. It did this at Nanking, where American battleships opened fire on an unfortified city. It did this in the identic Five Power-note where our State Department joined with the Governments of our other countries in an impudent demand for a money indemnity for the Nanking massacres perpetrated by our battleships and those of Great Britain. Now our government has moved marines northward of Tientsin, taking the leadership in this new attack of aggression against the Chinese Revolution.

In the Orient, where 175 battleships and tens of thousands of troops of eight powers have assembled in Chi-

I. R. T. WORKERS RESENT COLEMAN "PEACE" TACTICS

Discontent Is Growing Among Sub Workers

Without invitation and on their own initiative Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and Patrick J. Shea and James H. Coleman, officials of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes visited Samuel Untermyer, special council for the transit commission, at his office on Tuesday and assured him that there was not the slightest foundation for rumors of an impending strike on the Interborough or any of the other subway or elevated lines.

This visit was prompted by widespread discontent becoming manifest among the slaves of the traction system on account of Untermyer proving before the commission that the Interborough management compels all its employes to belong to its scab company union. This was interpreted by some as incitement to a strike for a genuine union, although it is well known that Untermyer had no such intentions when he attacked the "labor policy" of the traction magnates.

SAY GOVERNOR SMITH PROMISED TO BREAK FUR STRIKE; TOLD MATTHEW WOLL MASS ARRESTS WOULD DO IT

Chief Executive of New York State Offers Aid of Tammany to Union Smashers

Police "Justice" Exposed When Authorities Try to Shield Right Wing Gangster

That Governor Al. Smith is responsible for the wholesale arrests of the fur pickets in the present strike is a rumor that gained circulation in Tammany Hall circles yesterday.

It is said that Smith has reached an understanding with Matthew Woll, who is the American Federation of Labor spokesman in the needle trades disruption campaign, by which the governor has promised to see to it that the strike is broken. It is alleged that Smith gave Woll a promise of the full support of Tammany Hall in this move.

Some Evidence.

Pointing to the conclusion that Governor Smith is directly back of the unusual police severity and the policy of mass arrests in the furriers' strike is an incident two days ago in the trial court where four workers appear daily as a result of these arrests. Two policemen admitted under a fire of cross questioning by defense counsel that they had orders to arrest whenever they found more than twelve striking fur workers on a block.

Who Is Boss?

It is known that the captain of the Thirtieth St. police station in charge would never dare to issue such drastic and illegal commands unless he had been given clear authority to do so by his superiors. It was also brot out in the last Central Trades and Labor Council meeting that Police Commissioner Warren was not acting as violently against the pickets as the Matthew Woll, anti-left wing A. F. L. committee expected. Question: who gave the orders, if not a higher than Warren? And who is the big boss, if not Governor Smith?

But this is only one of the bits of evidence, all pointing to the man who is determined to remain popular enough to run for president and solid enough with the monied interests to get campaign funds, and who would therefore do his strike-breaking quietly.

Another striking example of how the police are attempting to shield the right wing gangsters, was given yesterday when the police released Willie Rosenfeld, a foreman, after he had painfully cut the face and body of Paul Goodman, a worker loyal to the Joint Board.

Goodman had previously worked for A. Weickstein, 333 Seventh Ave., where Rosenfeld is a foreman. Leaving that shop recently Goodman got work elsewhere. At noon time yesterday, Rosenfeld went to the shop where Goodman is now working and cut him up. They were both arrested.

Anti-Japanese Boycott Looms; Losovsky Greets Opening of Trade Union Congress

PEKING, June 22.—Reports from Hsuchow state that General Chiang Kai-shek has agreed to operate under General Feng Yu-hsiang in a triple offensive against Peking. The offensive will be along the Tsinan Fu, Kinhan and Lunghai railway lines.

(According to persistent reports the Nationalists may form a temporary military alliance with Chiang Kai-shek in order to hasten the capture of Peking. STARVE IN DAYS HE WILL STARVE KANSAS CONVICTS

Hunger Revolt Treated With Still More Hunger

LANSING, Kansas, June 22.—"Let them starve," is the military sentence passed on convicts driven to revolt in Kansas' prison mine. "We had just such a mutiny here last year," says Warden Hudspeth, "and the convicts threatened to eat the mules in the mine if they did not get better food." Warden Hudspeth is used to having his shot-gun-guards and miners use the last desperate measure of a cornered mad and barricade themselves in their underground workhouse.

WH KH Them.

The men can't get out, and if they don't surrender they can die, and that's all he cares about it. He states flatly that conditions will not be made any better, indeed, the prisoners will be lucky if they are not made worse. The only reason he does not cut off the water is because some guards are held below, prisoners of the prisoners. Lights are cut off.

Kansas' prison is like all others, a nest of petty graft, and a place in which the food becomes unbearable in the summer. The present hunger revolution among the inmates came about when some of the men asked that Kansas' new law legalizing cigarettes be applied to prisoners, as it is in many other state prisons.

Tired of Bad Food.

They thot the use of a little cheap tobacco would break the deadly monotony of contracted prison fare—but the warden thot that the full penalty of puritanism, however rejected by the present generation in Kansas would make the convicts better, or kill them, one or the other; he refused the cigarettes, and the "mutiny," scarcely more than a hunger strike, took place at once.

Simultaneously with the outbreak of desperation below, and the warden's calm decision to starve all his 323 miners into submission, extreme measures of repression were undertaken against all sympathizers above ground. A fanciful "plot" to set fire to the twine factory was "discovered" by guards and dozens of men beaten up with clubs, one shot, and others confined to their cells. The most outspoken of those known to have complained about the food are in solitary dark cells.

Meanwhile the newspapers are praising the hard-boiled governor and discussing the "unreasonableness" of the convicts in expecting cigarettes as tho that were their only grievance.

Protest Cal's Unfair, Unsportsmanlike Ways Of Snagging the Trout

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 22.—In behalf of the Isaac Walton League of America, Edward G. Taylor of Chicago today lodged a protest at the executive offices here against President Coolidge's use of barbed hooks and worms as trout bait.

Taylor called such fishing "slaughter" and urged "in the name of good sportsmanship" that the president use barbless hooks so that those fish which he could not eat could be thrown back into the stream. "The only excuse for a man to use worms would be if he was starving," Taylor said.

Mayor Walker Won't Pardon Hauer, Tells It Is for "Advertising"

The fascists have made another convert.

Mayor "Jimmy" Walker who knows asbestos, our latest song hitler, and the art of vested graft making more terrible blood-bath before the summer is over, and that is—the unity of action of the workers and farmers of our country and of the entire world.

In all our land there is not one worker or one farmer who has anything to gain by this new war. In the whole mass of our people, there is not one who has any quarrel with the people of the Soviet Union or with the people of China. Only a handful of Wall Street bankers and their militarist tools are interested in driving our country into such a war. Thruout the land, the masses of the American people have begun to register their protest in Hands Off China meetings and in Anti-War Conferences. Anti-War Committees and Hands Off China Committees have sprung up in every industrial and rural center of the country.

The workers and farmers of the United States must rally behind these movements; must broaden them and unite them into a mighty protest against the war plans of our government must hear and heed:

"We demand the withdrawal of our battleships and marines from China!

"We demand the recognition of the Peoples' National Government of Hankow!

"We demand the recognition of the Soviet Union!

"We want no war!"

FIND 'SACCO CAP' IS PROSECUTION FAKED EVIDENCE

Link in Frame-up Chain Inserted as Afterthot

BOSTON, June 22.—(FP)—The "Sacco cap" that was supposed to be one of the crowning pieces of evidence against the Italian radical has been weighed and found wanting by George Branting, son of the former socialist premier of Sweden, who came to America for the sole purpose of studying the famous international labor case.

Thayer and Cap

This cap was a star exhibit at the trial. At the Brockton police station after Sacco's arrest he was compelled to wear the cap in the identification of identifying witnesses. The cap was said to have been picked up at the murder scene. Judge Thayer in his 1924 opinion, denying the first motions for a new trial, cited the cap as strong circumstantial evidence of Sacco's guilt.

But Branting has probed into the facts. He finds, first: that the cap was not discovered till 24 hours after the crime. And since from two to three thousand workers from the Slater & Morrill and the Rice & Hutchins shoe factories a few yards away had been beating up and down the public roadway on which the garment was supposed to have lain the case becomes peculiar. It is difficult to believe the cap could possibly have rested there 24 hours without being picked up.

Official Planted It?

The "finder" of the cap was an official of the Slater & Morrell shoe factory, whose payroll had been robbed and whose executives were interested in getting a speedy conviction. After another 24 hours the company turned the cap over to a Braintree policeman, whose name the defense now has.

The "Sacco cap" was either a fraud or a mistake, in the opinion of Timothy Collins, Boston Globe district reporter, who arrived on the scene a half hour after the murder. Quoting has Collins' story. Collins got the police facts at once. There was not a word about the cap the first day, nor the next and not till several weeks later.

Tha "Sacco cap" appears to have been an after thought of the prosecution—a link in the frame-up chain inserted at a late day.

Urges "Literary Clearing House"

Oliver M. Saylor, author of "The Theater and the Cinema in Soviet Russia," in a letter to Henry S. Canby, critic and writer, has suggested the formation of a "clearing house of literary information."

Saylor pointed out that this is necessary in view of the fact that "under existing conditions less important books frequently are given international currency to the neglect of more important works."

Dies After Accident.

After a sixteen-hour battle for his life, Harry Hendricks, thirty-six, yesterday captain of lighter No. 57 at the Booker Company, died in St. Vincent's Hospital, S. I. He lost his leg last night when his foot caught in a hawser as the lighter docked at Mariners' Harbor, S. I.

Maine Labor Condemns Prison

LEWISTON, Me., June 22. Deadlock Still Gripes 3 Power Conference than absolute equality between the British and American navies, ship for ship and class for class, such a treaty is foredoomed to death from nonratification by the United States Senate.

A canvas of senatorial opinion made this certain today. Without regard for party considerations, Democrats and Republicans alike declared that the basic principle of Anglo-American naval parity had been definitely fixed at the Washington arms conference in 1921, and that it will not be sacrificed at Geneva.

The unity of senatorial opinion on this point assures support for the state department in the rejection of the British and Japanese programs at Geneva. The British program of "tinkering" with the Washington treaty and lowering the tonnage and armament on cruisers would relegate the American navy to a position of decided inferiority, while the Japanese proposal of a naval holiday holiday would leave the United States in third position among the navies of the world insofar as cruisers are concerned.

Turkish President to Visit Constantinople, Boycotted Since 1919

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 22.—Speculation is rife here as to the political import of the expected visit of Kemal Pasha, President of the Turkish Republic, to the old capital of the Sultans and the Caliphs. This visit of Kemal to Constantinople, which is a hot-bed of anti-Republican intrigue, after an absence of eight years, is regarded as a possible challenge to the reactionary elements in the coming Parliamentary elections.

It is timed to take place while the foreign Embassies are ont of the city for the summer season, and is to be of a strictly unofficial character. Republican Turkey has not forgiven the allies for their attempt to throttle the young Republic at birth, and the fact that they still sabotage Angora, the capital of the Republic, retaining their Embassies in the old capital, is keenly resented.

It is notable that Soviet Russia is the only foreign power which has established its Embassy at Angora, and extended its hearty friendship to the Republic.

Nothing For Flood Victims.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The government's surplus at the end of the fiscal year on June 30—will be approximately $631,000,000, slightly higher than the previous estimates, the treasury announced today. Tax collections for the year will total $2,846,419,000, about $264,830,000 above last year. Collections for this month will reach $495,760,000, exceeding June of last year by $52,400,000. But Coolidge refuses to call a session of congress for flood relief.

Rule Scott Had Unfair Trial.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 22.—Russell Scott again dodged the noose when the state supreme court today granted his plea for a reversal of the verdict of the Cook County criminal court which held him sane and sentenced him to hang for the slaying of Joseph Manner, Chicago drug clerk. The reversal states that he did not have a fair trial.

Imaginative Cook About Ont.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 22.—Formal appeal action in the case of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, recently denied probation in the U. S. Circuit Court at New Orleans, will be taken before the United States Supreme Court within a few days, H. C. Wade, Cook's attorney, announced here today.

Dr. Cook, "Discoverer of the North Pole," is serving a 14-year term in Leavenworth Federal Prison in connection with oil promotion schemes. He had obtained a "probationary parole" from Federal Judge Thomas C. Wilson here and the government won an appeal to the Circuit Court.

Governor Smith Held Responsible for Arrests

Rosenfeld being released when brot to the 30th Street Police Station.

Workers Are Angry.

When officials of the Joint Board heard of this, they complained to the police, who, after exposing a great deal of doubt, arrested Rosenfeld on a charge of simple assault.

When many of the strikers were informed of this amazing procedure they expressed their opinion about how differently the police act towards the left wing. The left wing workers are charged with felonious assault, while in this case, they first left the foreman go, and then held him on a minor charge.

A. Kramer, another striker was attacked yesterday morning on 25th St. between Sixth Ave. and Broadway. He managed to have his assailant, Louis Klien arrested. When brot to the 30th Street Police Station he was identified by Sam Wlenick as one of the gangsters who attacked him Monday morning on Sixth Ave., between 22nd and 23rd Sts. At that time he had his head smashed, six stitches being necessary to sew his wound.

International Furnishes Bail.

Charged with felonious assault, Klien was released on $2,500 bail furnished by the International officials. Samuel Markowich, right wing attorney represented him in court.

Fifty-one strikers who were arrested last Thursday, were fined $1 each when brot before Magistrate Rosenbluth in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning.

Give Money to Union.

Four members of the United Council of Workingmen Housewives who were arrested on the picket line last Monday were released yesterday. They were given a choice of two days in jail or a fine of $5. They chose the latter. On their release they donated $5 each to the strike fund of the union.

They are Mrs. Bombkin, mother of three children; Mrs. Tabochnick, mother of one child; Mrs. Sarah Cohen, mother of two children and Mrs. Clara Kushner, mother of two children.

Shop Chairmen Meet Tonight.

An important meeting of all shop chairmen will be held tonight at 8 p. m. in Stuyvesant Casino, 2nd Ave. near 9th St.

The General Picket Committee and the Woman's Picket Committee will meet in Stuyvesant Casino at 2 p. m. today.

Greek Meeting Tomorrow.

A report of the Washington "convention" will be given to the Greek fur workers at Bryant Hall, Sixth Ave. near 42nd St. tomorrow evening. The speakers will be John Pappanius and George Piredicudas, Greek delegates to Washington and Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board.

Bare Cable Injures Man Sugar Co. Must Pay

A jury in supreme court, Long Island City, today awarded David Maloney, 30, of 67 East Twenty-seventh street, Manhattan, $12,000 in his suit against the Federal Sugar Refining Company of Yonkers.

Three years ago, Maloney, an electrical engineer, then living in Long Island City, was employed by the Westinghouse Electric Company and working in the sugar company's plant when he touched a live cable, suffering a shock which has left permanent effect, he asserts. The exposed cable, he said, should have been insulated.

Maloney sued for $50,000. The case was tried before Justice Mitchell May.

Baker Bosses Enjoined From Using Union Label While Workers Strike

The Massing Bakary Co. was yesterday in Brooklyn supreme court enjoined from further use of the union label on the products.

A strike in the shop of this firm and also in the Pechter Baking Co. has been on now for several weeks, but the label has been used without interruption.

The union has announced that it will now attempt to put a stop to Pechter's use of their label in view of the strike.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

WOOD MISSES JOB MAY BE FIRED AS PHILIPPINE CZAR

Leader of Ohio Gang Slated as Successor

Governor General Leonard Wood is slated to lose his job.

The usual bunk about "demands of health" is being handed out and implicitously swallowed by newspaper reporters. But ever since Colonel Carmi Thompson, Ohio buccaneer, "investigated" the Philippines for Harvey Firestone, rubber magnate, and Cal Coolidge, and criticised Wood in his report to the president, the removal of Wood has been certain.

Ruling eleven million people in the face of their well organized opposition is a difficult job and it takes a shrewder politician than Leonard Wood to do it. His tactics have only stirred the Filipinos to a more insistent demand for immediate independence, and he has failed miserably in carrying out the tactics of American imperialism in the Islands. His attempts to divide the Moros and the Filipinos and rule, have only crystallized the sentiment for independence.

Moros Queer Wood

The series of revolts which have recently taken place among the Moros have clearly indicated that American imperialism must fire Governor General Wood and get a new Philippines agent.

The rich rubber lands of the Philippines (located for the most part on the island of Mindanao) are inhabited by the Moros. And the United States wishes to retain them at any cost. (The Bacon bill, introduced in the House of Representatives would have given the northern islands their independence and maintained a brutal semi-feudal rule over the southern rubber-producing islands).

Wood's failure to successfully carry out the job assigned to him probably means that Colonel Carmi Thompson will become governor-general of the islands in the near future. Thompson is a member of the Ohio gang.

Reports from the middle west state that Wood is on his way to the Black Hills to "confer" with President Coolidge.

Detroit Picnic July 3-4.

DETROIT, June 22.—A two day picnic will be held here July 3 and 4 for the benefit of the workers press. It is being held jointly by 17 labor organizations. The program will include nationally known speakers, sports and games arranged by the Labor Sports Alliance. Also dancing, food and refreshments. The special feature will be a soccer game between a local and a Manaville, Ohio team.

The picnic will be held at the Rochester Picnic Park. Admission 25 cents.

Needle Trade Defense

All Workers Will Be There.

All workers sympathizing with the Left Wing and Progressive Movement in the trade unions should attend the grand concert which will take place on July 16th in the Coney Island Stadium.

This affair will not only be the finest musical event of the season where prominent artists will appear, but it will also be a monster demonstration of New York Workers against the betrayal of the Sigman-Farnard-McGrady clique. The 25,000 workers who will pack the Stadium, will be the answer to the united front of the bosses, Sigmans, McGrady's gangsters and police to break the strike of the furriers.

The proceeds from the tickets goes for the striking furriers. So buy your ticket immediately and thereby help win the strike.

Hare Is The Answer.

We have previously announced in the press that the Independent Workmen's Circle Branch of Jamaica arranged a picnic for the Defeneo in answer to provocations of the Sigman clique. The picnic was held last Sunday, June 19th. Two Hundred ($200) Dollars was realized which was forwarded to the office of the Furriers Relief Committee. More help is promised to the Furriers in their struggle.

Cloaks and Awnings.

Brothers Kesaln and Moskowitz found it impossible to get work at their trade as cloakmakers, so they were compelled to go as awning makers instead. Although they are in a new line of endeavor they have not forgotten their old union and forwarded $5 as a donation from their first earnings. Let us hope that soon they will be back in a bigger and better Cloakmakers Union.

More Help.

The Shirt Ironers Progressive Group forwarded $18 through Brother L. Klein as a first instalment on a pledge of $1.00 a week per member donation until the fight is over.

This Group has already made itself highly conspicuous by its fine work for the Defense and their example serves to show what can be done where there is a will.

Strike Has Hard Time Getting Himself Jailed For Selling His Novel

BOSTON, June 22.—The local courts here again evaded an attempt to shake a test case of their right to act as judges of current literature.

Judge Cread in the municipal court yesterday refused to grant a warrant for the arrest of Upton Sinclair to Lieut. David Hines of the police department, who had bought a copy of "Oil!" which has been banned because of alleged immoral passages."

The judge explained his refusal to issue the warrant by stating that the case of John Grits, the book clerk who was arrested for selling the book, has not yet been disposed of.

STRIKE OF 1,400 CITY ENGINEERS IS LIKELY SOON

Will Protest Tonight at Labor Temple

Subway engineers, members of the Union of Technical Men, have called a protest mass meeting tonight at Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave.

Their demands for a hearing consistently ignored by John H. Delaney, chairman of the city's board of transportation, tonight's meeting may result in a decision to lay plans for a strike.

Would Paralyse Construction.

A walkout would completely tie up all construction work on the Eighth Ave.-St. Nicholas Ave.-Washington Heights subway line.

$52 per week is the average pay of the 1,400 engineers belonging to the union. An annual minimum salary of $2,160 is demanded by the men.

These highly-skilled technicians are the only group deprived of sick leave, all other municipal departments being entitled up to one month's absence. Discrimination is also charged in the matter of working hours during the months of July and August, when a six-hour day prevails among other city departments.

Extra Work Minus Pay.

Several hundred field men have been working an extra hour daily for over a year without additional pay, according to the union officials. They demand either a return to the regular working schedule or pay for the extra time.

John H. Coughlin, Secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council and High Prayne have been asked to attend tonight's meeting. An invitation has also been extended to Delaney and other members of the transportation board to appear and defend their present tactics.

PLUMBER HELPERS GAIN MORE WAGES SINCE STRIKING

Backed Plumbers' Fight in Brooklyn

By ART SHIELDS, Federated Press.

Plumbers' helpers did not lose by taking a chance and striking in solidarity with the journeymen in the Brooklyn walkout lately ended. The first pay envelopes since the men went back show wage increases of 50 cents to $2 a day.

The helpers' gains are not guaranteed by any agreement. The new American Association of Plumbers' Helpers which called the strike has not yet won recognition. But a large percentage of the Brooklyn bosses have conceded the compromise scale of $6 a day finally set by the union, and others paying $4.50, $5.00 and $5.50 a day.

Were Badly Underpaid.

The old scale was only $4.00 a day a ridiculous wage, less than half that paid to steamfitters' helpers who do work requiring about the same amount of effort and skill. But the old $4.00 scale is pretty dead, even in Manhattan where the strike did not last nearly as long as in Brooklyn. Few Manhattan bosses are attempting to hire men for less than $4.50.

It was useless to continue a helpers'-only strike after the journeymen went back, say President C. E. Miller and Organizer J. F. Walsh of the new union. The strike was a great aid to the journeymen and they expect the latter to support them now. An encouraging letter from Thomas E. Burke, International Secretary of the plumbers' union says their application to join the international will be laid before the next meeting of the general executive board.

Building Union.

Meanwhile the helpers are consolidating their organization. A monthly paper, the American Plumbers' Helper, is now being issued from the headquarters at 236 East 24th St. It is a snappy 4-page tabloid.

Bare Prof's Research Bureau as Propaganda Organ of Rich Crooks

WASHINGTON, (FP) June 22.—Repudiation of the views advanced by Richard T. Ely's Institute for Research in Land Economics and Public Utilities is asked of the American Institute of Economics, now holding a four week summer session in Ely's Chicago headquarters. Benjamin C. Marsh, head of the People's Reconstruction League sponsors the request, pointing out that the co-operative body is giving national publicity to the Land Economics Institute.

"President over by Dr. Ely and supported largely by gamblers in real estate and corruptionist public utility magnates who try to evade Senate investigating committees, the Institute of Land Research is merely another dodge to disseminate misleading information and fool farmers and the public generally," Marsh warns.

Breaking of Relations with the Soviet Union the Signal for Murderers and Assassins

PILSUDSKI AIDS TORIES IN FIGHT ON SOVIET UNION

Supports White Bandits Sejm Member Charges

WARSAW, June 9. (By Mail).— That Russian monarchist bandits are being subsidized in Poland by the British for the purpose of organizing in the Soviet Union and for raids on the border districts of the U.S.S.R., and that this campaign is carried on with the full consent of the Pilsudski dictatorship, is charged in a statement issued by a left wing member of the Sejm.

The text of the statement follows:

In order to fully grasp the significance of the assassination of the Soviet Ambassador by the Russian monarchists, one must take the following circumstances into consideration:

Finance Bandits.

1. A section of the Russian monarchist bandits under the infamous General Bulak Bulakovitch is being financed in Poland with British money. This section is allegedly occupied in administrating the Baloroch woods which the Polish State has leased to a British firm. Another section is financed with the money of the Polish General Staff, just as the Petlura band. As recently as 1924 and 1925, the Polish General Staff utilized the second section for raids on the border districts of Soviet White Russia and the Soviet Ukraine.

2. Since the coup d'Etat of Pilsudsky, the activity of the monarchist groups has noticeably increased. The press of Pilsudsky has been in the habit of writing about the necessity of the creation of an "independent" Ukraine and an "independent" White Russia, naturally upon the ruins of the Soviet Ukraine and Soviet White of Russia.

Persecutes Communists.

3. Although the fascist regime of the dictator Pilsudsky persecutes all propaganda and the whole press of the Communist Party, and not merely that, but even the radical "Independent Peasants Party" and the radical national White Russian organization "Hromada." Although these two Parties which until quite recently were perfectly legal, are now illegal and persecuted, just as the Communist Party and their members of parliament are persecuted and flung into prison, and even quite bourgeois Polish papers continually suffer from the confiscation of their issues by the Censor, it is noteworthy that the propaganda and the press of the Russian white guardist groups enjoy complete freedom.

4. With regard to the breach between Great Britain and the Soviet Union, the Polish press wrote that Poland would remain neutral. But since then, the Pilsudsky organs have begun to write that the Soviet Union is not keeping its undertakings under the Treaty of Riga. The fact is of course, that the Polish anti-soviet front has been strengthened by the recent loan of 65 million dollars negotiated with Great Britain. This loan is to be followed by further investments chiefly in the war industries and for the extension of the strategic lines.

5. As soon as Pilsudsky seized power he began to reorganize the army in order to make it ready for war in the least possible space of time. To-day, the army in Poland is regarded as on a war footing or very nearly so. Pilsudsky also furthered the development of the war industry.

Following upon the renewal of the Anglo-French Entente Cordiale, the Polish anti-soviet front has become stronger and more stable than ever. All talk of the readiness of Poland to conclude a treaty of neutrality and non-aggression with the Soviet Union, cannot conceal the fact that under the leadership of Great Britain, Pilsudsky is working together with the Rumanian General Staff for war against the Soviet Union. All such talk is solely intended to mantle the feverish preparations for war.

Polish Army Aids Murder.

6. When all these facts are taken into consideration, the recent base hostile agitation of the Russian guardists and the Polish supporters of Pilsudsky against the Soviet Union, then one can see that the bullets which killed the Soviet Ambassador to Poland, comrade Volkov, were aimed by Great Britain with the support of the Second Division of the General Staff of the Polish Army.

This murder is the opening accord to the war which is in preparation. In all probability it will be followed by armed raids of the Balachov and Petlura bands under the direction of the Polish General Staff upon Soviet territory, or even direct military operations against the Soviet Union. The danger of war is drawing closer and closer.

U. S. Drunk, Says King's M. D.

LONDON, June 22.—"I have never seen in recent years drunkenness of such a terrible character as in America," declared Lord Dawson of Penn, the king's physician, in a speech in the house of lords attacking a prohibition measure introduced by the bishop of Liverpool.

"You will see far less drunkenness in this country than in America," said Lord Dawson. "It is really an outrage to call this country non-drinking. We are, broadly speaking, a wine country."

Greater and More Effective Efforts to Free Sacco and Vanzetti.

Rumors of a reprieve for Sacco and Vanzetti and the presentation of a petition whose huge number of signatures tends to be discounted by the fact that it asks only for a public investigation of the case, must not be allowed to slow down the agitation for the release of these two innocent workers whose sufferings have become a symbol of the persecution of their class.

It should require nothing more than the fact that in the face of the gigantic international popular protest and the widespread conviction that Sacco and Vanzetti are guiltless of the charge of which they were convicted, based on the mass of evidence showing the methods of this monstrous frame-up, Sacco and Vanzetti are still facing the electric chair.

Nothing has as yet moved the Massachusetts authorities to the point where they are even willing to assure the condemned men that they will not be murdered.

Nothing will move Massachusetts officialdom except a continuation and an extension of demonstrations showing the determination of the masses that Sacco and Vanzetti shall not only not die but shall be given their liberty.

Humanitarians and other well-meaning groups are easily deluded by the impartial pretensions of capitalists and their spokesmen who have murder in their hearts. July 10 approaches and no guarantees for the safety of Sacco and Vanzetti have been given.

It is clear that more decisive measures are necessary on the part of the working class. There must be an end to the dangerous tendency to regard the issue as settled because so many "prominent" people have said kind words for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Now more than ever it is clear that only the working class can save their lives and force freedom for them. This does not mean that the efforts of other sections of the population are without effect but the base of the whole protest, and its driving force, comes from the workers and their organizations.

With this fundamental rule in mind there can be no cessation of the campaign to free Sacco and Vanzetti. Whatever form the protest movements take, be they partial strikes, mass meetings and demonstrations, they can be made effective only if we never forget that we, American workers, can free our comrades and that we must free them if we are not to be the laughing stock of our enemies, and that if Sacco and Vanzetti are not freed there will be other victims seized from our ranks to make a bloody celebration of the victory of American capitalist justice.

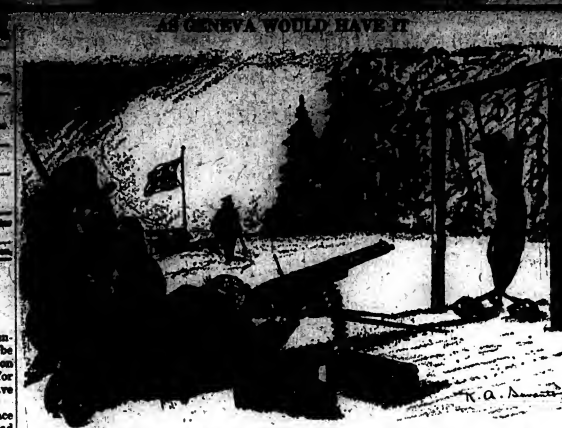
Traction Workers Should Demand Action.

The ruling class of this country, accustomed to labor leaders grovelling before them, is sometimes astonished at their shameless servility. Mr. Samuel Untermyer, conducting hearings before the state transit commission in an effort to break the Dahlgren-Chandler control of the Interborough and turn it over to the control of the House of Morgan, received an unexpected visit from three alleged labor leaders, Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and Patrick J. Shea and James H. Coleman, officials of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees. He expressed surprise at the visit and the assurances given him by the self-appointed delegation that there was no foundation for rumors of an impending strike on either the Interborough or the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit. It was too much even for Untermeyer.

The day before the visit to Untermyer these worthies, who profess to speak for labor, held a conference with Tammany appointees of the state department of labor and issued statements to the effect that no strike is contemplated.

Untermyer, in the course of his investigations, brought out the fact that the company union maintained by the Interborough is a plain fraud and that discrimination is practiced against organized labor. Whether he approves of it or not, the investigation paved the way for intensive organizational activities among the traction slaves. The most effective way to organize the workers who have suffered from a series of wage cuts and who work under most miserable conditions is to call a strike at once. Such a strike officially called by the Amalgamated, which is affiliated with the A. F. of L., would meet with almost unanimous approval and support on the part of the population. To fail to act now is to play into the hands of the traction magnates and give a new lease of life to the company union.

The contemptible action of Frayne, Shea and Coleman should be repudiated by those members of the Amalgamated in this city and a stern demand should be made for instant action.



By their servile crawling before the state labor officials and before Untermyer these "leaders of labor" have proved that they want to persuade the traction magnates that they can be depended upon to use their power to hold the men in subjection the same as the company union. In other words it is an offer to relieve the management of the necessity of maintaining such a union by playing the familiar role of labor lieutenants of capitalism.

The workers on the traction systems should join the Amalgamated now, as its officials are pretending to be conducting an organizational campaign, and should then force the officials to act against the company union and to obtain living wages, shorter hours and decent working conditions.

Jimmy Walker Decorated by Fascist Agent.

Tammany's male Broadway butterfly mayor, Jimmy Walker, received from Mussolini's ambassador to the United States, Giacomo de Martino, the decoration of the order of Saints Maurice and Lazarus, the most exalted within the power of the blackguard government of murder and terror to bestow upon any foreigner.

This is the same Walker who last year refused to take action against police terror in the traction strike, whose chief of police ordered the most frightful brutalities against the striking furriers,

CHORUS OF CAPITALISTS:—If we can only get along with each other, we will make only enough expensive guns to shoot discontented workers.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER VII

Members of a Communist Party should be equipped for leadership in the class struggle. They must not only understand its theoretical basis, but also possess the necessary knowledge of practical application of party policies and tactics. Our regular party training should, therefore, embrace the largest possible numbers and particularly be taken up in the nuclei so that education becomes available for all members.

Self-education can be practiced effectively in the nuclei. Shop talks at regular intervals by comrades selected for the purpose would be a good beginning. Such shop talks should be approximately 15 or 20 minutes and take up events in the shop in question, the conditions of the workers there, the methods of propaganda and activities pursued by our comrades. These talks could also be made on the experience of comrades thru their activities in trade unions or other working class organizations; the position of the organization in question, its struggles, and the methods and tactics of the left wing. Talks on activities in election campaigns, the reactions of workers and their organizations to our candidates or labor candidates. Illustrations of the general method and technique of election campaigns would not only prove highly instructive, but generally aid in throwing our party units more firmly into parliamentary election activities. Discussion on such talks should, of course, be conducted mainly with a view to further elaborate on the subject, to bring out any weak points in our methods and tactics and to get our members more interested and more active and more fit for party work.

A further effective method of self-education by the nuclei is collective reading from books on Marxism and Leninism. While every member should himself read the specific chapter assigned before the meeting, one member should be selected to lead the discussion and every one be urged to participate. Discussions on general political events, based on the party press, or on important party statements, setting forth its policy on a certain event or situation, should be conducted in the same manner. To make party training real, it is of the greatest necessity that any systematic educational activities be linked as closely as possible with the everyday work of the members.

Party literature should, of course, always be at hand and books or pamphlets containing educational material or lessons of certain events should be read by all members in addition to their regular large scale distribution of party propaganda literature.

Wherever possible, the organization of non-party study groups is, of course, very desirable and in general either of the methods outlined before can be applied. Moreover, our comrades should definitely strive towards establishing contact with sympathetic workers in their shops or organizations to which they belong and endeavor to draw them into such groups not only for the purpose of study, but for general support of party activities. Naturally discussing with such workers the events during the last strike of a union or of a shop, the issues in the last elections or similar subjects based on the party press and party statements in regard to them will bring such workers closer to the party and help clarify their understanding.

In cities where possible, it is taken for granted that party schools will be established giving the various grades of classes, the more elementary and the more advanced. It is, however, important that such schools not be merely isolated educational activities, but become an integral part of our general party training so that from the courses conducted in the nuclei, the members, preferably on a selected basis, pass on to bigger tasks, to the training in the party school. This should not mean that there be any limitations upon the school. The more comrades who can go thru an intensive training, the better. Nor should there be any limitations of party membership, but non-party workers should be particularly welcomed. In certain cases, non-party instructors may also help to broaden the scope of the school.

An elementary educational course conducted in the party units has already proven of great value. It can be organized in every city. The broad outline of the course, commensurate with the needs of elementary education for a Communist Party membership, should be worked out by the Agitprop Committee and the best fitted comrades selected, to first receive a short course of training in the subject themselves and then make the round of the nuclei. There the lessons should be conducted partially on the basis of the class method.

The most effective method, however, is not a mere course of lectures, but rather a series of questions, well prepared by the comrades functioning as teachers, and following the outline of the course. These questions should be addressed to the nuclei members for them to answer with a final summary by the teacher.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22. — A "Hands Off China" protest meeting will be held tomorrow night by the West Philadelphia Workers' Club at the Progressive Library, 4035 Girard Ave.

P. T. Lau will discuss the present situation in China, and the policies of the Kuomintang. Questions and discussion will follow the meeting.

driven them from the pages of the capitalist press? Even Lindbergh had his day and our murderers and rapists are having a chance to break into the news again. Those things are important and it is not our purpose to deprive the christian inhabitants of this christian nation of their mental fodder. But the Soviet Union covers one sixth of the earth's surface and a few dozen revolts in the Workers Republic should be deserving of consideration. Is it possible that the capitalist papers were not telling us the truth?

IF Aristide Briand, French foreign minister quits his post and if Ben Turpin gets his trick orb straightened out or gets involved in a domestic scandal, the Frenchman should be able to make a good and honest living with his diplomatic eye. Whenever Briand gets into a diplomatic jam at league meetings, he hangs a sheet over his left optic, and makes a bee line for Paris. No sooner does he hit his office than he recovers and the eye returns to normalcy. An eye like that is worth a fortune to a diplomat. What would it not be worth to a Hollywood director?

AT the recent session of the league council in Geneva, France was dickering with England over the terms of an anti-Soviet alliance. England is always willing to make concessions at the expense of others. She wanted Germany in the alliance, but had nothing to give in exchange except something that France had. England, it appears, was willing to go thru with the deal, but Poincare was not. So, in all probability, Briand was advised to take down his trick eye-polish it up and hang a flag on it. He did this and went home. Now we learn that Briand and Poincare are liable to break, but there is not a word about the eye.

but who remains the darling of the Tammany dominated Central Trades and Labor Council officials.

The New York labor bureaucracy professes to oppose fascism in Italy, but it is certain that they will refrain from adverse comment upon Tammany's musical comedy mayor accepting the decoration, which would be rejected as an insult by any person who professes to uphold the traditions upon which this country is supposed to be founded. We cannot expect one agency of Tammany to assail one of its bright and shining stars and consistency is out of place on the part of those alleged labor leaders, who play the filthy game of capitalist politics in an effort to prevent labor acting on the political field in its own interests through a labor party.

DRAMA

Broadway Brisk

Ivy Sawyer has been engaged for the musical version of "Just Suppose," to be produced early in the season by Joseph Santley.

The Little Hashings twins, Barbara and Arabel, recently seen in "George White's Scandals," and Ben Bard Petty are preparing for a vaudeville tour in a comedy playlet now in preparation.

Having discontinued the Saturday matinee, the "Grand Street Follies" at the Little Theatre has introduced at its Tuesday and Thursday matinees a special range of prices, from two dollars for the best seats to one dollar. The Neighborhood Playhouse group seems to be on the right path. Every evening has its usual quota of standees.

James LaPenna's new musical play "Ritzie" will open a preliminary tour in Long Branch next Monday. Ashbury Park and Atlantic City will follow, with the production coming to Broadway shortly after. The cast includes: Ann Milburn, Lee Donelly, James B. Carson, Rosalie Claire, Jack Squires, James Barrett, Mae Daly, Frank Leslie, Maxine Carson and Jimmy Lytell's Orchestra. Hugh Stanislaus Stange wrote the book, with the music by J. Fred Coots and the lyrics by Al Dubin.

Screen Notes

Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt, the well known cantor will make his first appearance in the movies with Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," which will be done with Vitaphone accompaniment.

Rudolph Schildkraut's next production will be "A Harp in Hock." He will begin work in it under the direction of Renaud Hoffman at the De Mille-Metropolitan studio early in July.

COAL BARONS MOVE TO STARVE OUT PENNA MINERS BY FOOD BLOCKADE

Court Holds Union Not Liable for Injuries in Attack by Pickets on Strikebreakers

PITTSBURGH, June 22.—On the heels of the campaign of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation to evict 6,000 striking union miners and their families has begun a food blockade to starve the workers into abject submission and drive them back to work on a non-union basis.

Stop Food Deliveries

Leaders of the miners charge that private detectives of the company are preventing deliveries of food to Meltzonmont, a nearby coal town, from merchants in Pittsburgh.

Most of the miners are now compelled to use oil lamps and lanterns since the company has turned off the electric power.

Army of Thugs.

The company is now raising a huge army of "coal and iron guards" as part of the terrorization of the strikers. These "guards" are paid by the bosses but wear the uniforms of state police and have the power of arrest.

Scab's Wife Loses Suit.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio, June 22.—The suit of Mrs. Major, widow of John I. Major, a scab killed in an attack by strikebreakers on union pickets in 1922, at Lafferty, was thrown out of court today by Judge Chas. A. Reed. Mrs. Major had sued the international local and district organizations of the United Mine Workers of America for $250,000.

The court ruled that a suit could not be made against the union, the if Mrs. Major could pick out individuals responsible, the suit could be brot against them. One man is in the penitentiary now as a result of the frame-up that followed Major's death.

Resume Wage Conferences.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—Coal barons and union officials of the Central Pennsylvania bituminous coal fields are resuming negotiations over wage schedules begun last month. The coal operators are making an attempt to slash the wages stipulated in the Jacksonville agreement.

A strike in the bituminous fields is likely to follow a breakdown in negotiations—unless union officials accept.

tain closed shop or union conditions, while the bosses are divided and soon must settle with the union and keep conditions the same as they have been in the past. Victory is near for the workers as their solidarity is strong.

Barbers' Strike On.

NEWARK, N. J., June 22.—A general strike of the barbers affiliated with Local 877 of the A. F. of L. is on since Monday. At present over 500 men are out on strike and the ranks will be doubled by 1,000 before the week is over. The spirit of the men is high. The rank and file of the workers are out picketing daily and bring in recruits every hour of the day. Meetings are held twice daily at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Today, a big percentage of the men working around the four corners, downtown, walked out on strike. In this section the aristocracy of the trade are employed. The meanest conditions exist but the men do not realize the slave shops they are working in. Newark is considered the "blackest hole" in the country as far as working conditions for the barbers. The fight to unionize the shops in Newark and vicinity will be successful. The workers realize this is their opportunity to increase their wages and shorten their hours and to establish a strong and powerful union here.

For Unity Committee Arranging Big Meeting For Union Sq., Saturday

The Unity Committee of the Furriers' Union will hold an open air meeting 1 p. m. Saturday at Union Square. The demonstration is being arranged to protest against the mass arrest of pickets and the gangsters of the right wing.

• • •

All cloakmakers, dressmakers, furriers and cap and millinery workers are urged to report to the Joint Board office, 22 East 23rd St., before 11:30 a. m. today and get a bundle of leaflets advertising Saturday's demonstration.

NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY

(By Special Correspondent.)

NEWARK, N. J., June 22.—The teamsters, chauffeurs and helpers working for firms dealing in mason materials and building supplies have been out on strike since their agreement expired the first of June.

The bosses organized into the Mason Materials Supply Association, attempted to establish the open shop and refused to sign up again with the Teamsters' Union, Local 478. As a result, workers in the yards of the employers went out on a strike and proceeded to picket. The men demanded an increase of wages of $3 and improved working conditions. The bosses refused to arbitrate or compromise.

Get Injunction.

After three weeks of striking the bosses secured a temporary injunction last week prohibiting picketing. Yesterday when the union and strikers appeared in court the injunction was modified and picketing will resume Thursday morning.

Since the strike, however, the ranks of the bosses have broken down. The following firms have broken away from the open shop bosses' association and are operating closed, union shops: John P. Callaghan, Harrison Supply, Decker Building Materials, Newark Mason Supply, Montclair Builders' Material Co., and Gornitzky & Co. The men employed are all union men. Today the anti-labor bosses thru Builders Material Supply Co. served subpoenas on Local 478 of the teamsters and Local 825 of the hoisting engineers, also 20 of their ex former employes. Fred Carlin and John Weston, the business representatives, are to appear in the Chancery Court in Trenton on July 1st.

100% Strong.

The ranks of the strikers are 100 per cent strong. All the yards of the scab employers are crippled and shut down. Practically no supplies leave the yards. The hoisting engineers refuse to handle material hauled by scab chauffeurs and drivers. Consequently they have been served with injunctions and are being fought by the bosses.

To date six employers have settled and eleven more have not seen fit to maintain agreement with the union. The strikers are determined to main-

Worker Shocked Off of Car by Electric Wire

PORTCHESTER, N. Y., June 22.—August Wilson, 62 years old, of 44 Second street, New Haven, Conn., was taken to United Hospital here today after he had come in contact with an electric wire while he was working atop a freight car in the Harrison yards of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, where he is employed as a welder. When the wire touched his body he fell from the car. The electricity burned him severely, and his skull was fractured when he struck a concrete walk. Little hope was held for his recovery.

St. Alexander Trachtenberg will speak on "International Imperialism and Soviet Armenia. Keossecca will talk on "Why Every Armenian Worker Should Join the Workers Party."

Cloak and Dressmakers Will Hold a Meeting at 1 P. M. This Afternoon

All unemployed dressmakers and cloakmakers are urged to attend a meeting at 1 p. m. today at Cooper Union. The meeting is called by the Joint Board to discuss the question of reorganization, demonstration and other trade matters.

I. R. T. Workers Grow More Discontented

constantly beaten down and their conditions of labor are almost unbearable. At the same time the public has been used to the most shameful fleecing. millions of men and women have been forced to use the rotten I. R. T. service and are jammed into stifling trains like sardines. The service has been cut to the minimum and the result is continually violated by majority of trains during the rush hours. The physical equipment is deteriorating so that it is far below the marginal line of the required stock. Hence the public is incensed at conditions and will be solidly behind a strike.

Now is Time to Strike.

The leaders of the subway strike of a year ago as well as all experienced labor leaders declare that now is the opportune time to launch a drive for unionization of the lines and that a determined stand by the organizers of the Amalgamated and the officials of the A. F. of L. will mobilize the workers of the traction lines against the company and the fake union maintained by Messrs Quackenbush, Hedley, Dahl & Co.

At the very moment when such action could be most successful the officials charged with defending the interests of the workers indulge in the most disgraceful crawling before the state labor department as well as before Untermyer, whose interest in the traction investigation is limited to fighting the Rapid-Chadbourne control in behalf of the House of Morgan and the Rockefeller controlled National City Bank.

Organizers.

Even Untermyer, hard-boiled corporation lawyer and union fighter, was amazed at the servility of the labor fakers who appear more anxious to assure the traction magnates that they will not harm them, that they are to make a pretense of organizing workers. There are indications that those workers who have since the last strike joined the Amalgamated will demand the recall of the officials from New York.

Scott Nearing Talk On War Danger Jams Workers Party Meet

More than 1,000 workers crowded into Bryant Hall, Sixth Ave., near 43rd St., last night where Scott Nearing gave a lecture on the "Menace of War."

"In 1914, when the world war started," said Nearing, "we were told that it was 'the war to end war' but ever since then we have seen conflicts. This will continue as long as capitalism exists.

"The causes of the world war are still with us, in fact even more intensified. In 1914 it was England against Germany. Today it is England against the United States.

"The League of Nations was formed, according to its sponsors to end war. However, since it has been in existence the menace of war has risen. The reason is not difficult. It is dominated by three large militaristic nations—England, France and Italy.

"America did not enter the league because she has found that more money can be made by staying outside."

When the lecture ended a substantial collection was taken up for The DAILY WORKER and many of those present signed application blanks for membership in the Workers (Communist) Party. The lecture was arranged by Section 3 of the party. Juliet Stuart Poyntz presided.

WASHINGTON, June 22. — The Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Company of Hartford, Conn., today was awarded a contract by the navy department for 30 "Wasp" nine-cylinder radial air-cooled engines of 410 horsepower. The cost is $377,087.

The engines, similar to ones used in establishing five new world records recently, will be installed in planes for shipboard use.

Preacher Made Wine by Fake Miracle and Got Drunk, Evidence Shows

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., June 22.—Rev. "King" Benjamin Purnell, chief of the House of David, "performed the miracle of turning water into wine," Henry Kirkham, a member of the colony, testified today in the state's suit to dissolve the cult.

The "miracle" was brought out on cross-examination by chief defense counsel, W. J. Barnard, who sought to discount testimony of previous girl witnesses regarding alleged drinking bouts staged by Purnell. Kirkham said Purnell turned the water into wine in front of a crowd of men and women at the colony.

Boss Barbers Hold Meet To Decide Their Policy While Strike Continues

The barbers' strike in the uptown west side is continuing with successful picketing.

The bosses held a conference yesterday at which they discussed what attitude they will take towards the union. No statement was issued by them.

The strikers held large meetings yesterday afternoon at Manis Hall, Amsterdam Avenue Inn and other halls.

Journal is Lifeless

By Y. G.

Then the Machinists' Monthly Journal is lifeless can be seen by even a hasty glance at any copy. Let us review the issue now before us, dated April 1927. Of the 64 pages of written matter 25 are given over to the Canadian 60th anniversary of the confederation (and only 4 pages of these on the story of Canadian Labor.) The other calls this the "Canadian Issue," and says that the "American editors pay a compliment to their Canadian brothers by joining in the Canadian jubilee celebration." Articles are printed on Celebration of the Jubilee, Sixty Years Development in Canadian Industry and Trade 1867-1927, Canada's Railways, The Story of Confederation, The Labor Movement in Canada, 1867-1927, Canada's Glorious Story, The Canadian Rebellion of 1837, and Canada—Present and Future.

Very little of this deals with labor.

Little to Do With Labor.

The article on railways shows history, rate of growth and revenues, revealing that all Canadian railways earned in 1926 the largest amount ever earned, but not a word on comparison with wages. The article on the celebration of the jubilee has pictures of the worthless Prince of Wales, of King, the Premier of Canada, and one of Tom Moore, so-called representative of the Canadian workers. To show the wonderful development of Canada, figures are given on population, agriculture, fisheries and manufacturing. An attempt is made to show great increases in wages, but when one examines their figures as to wages, including salaries of officials, we get an average wage of less than $1200 a year. Surely nothing to brag about.

No attempt is made to tell the condition of the farm worker or the tenant farmer. From the story on Confederation, we get a seeming justification for opposition to labor measures, as explained by "Labor's Canadian representative," J. A. Hayden, who reviewed the articles on Canada for this issue, as follows: "Labor has often sought changes to centralize authority on social and labor legislation but legislators, especially in Ontario and Quebec, strenuously oppose such action largely upon the ground that it might militate against the rights guaranteed minorities in the pact. No attempt to show that the employers use this argument to protect their selfish interests, just as in this country, textile mill owners wrap the flag of states right around them to fight the Child Labor Amendment. The story of Confederation, taken from Canadian text books, as the writer admits, is like the story of the American Constitution if taken from the school books, without analyzing the class forces, the fight of the debtor and creditor classes, etc.

Canada's Labor Story.

And what do we get in the four pages devoted to the story of Labor? Mostly historical, dealing with the early organization of the Iron Molders and the Typographical Union, and praise of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act In 1915, and for a bill allowing the registration of union labels. The writer admits that "many judges have held that picketing of any kind is illegal in Canada" and says that this is "strange to relate." And to sum up the article, we find that Canadian Labor is seeking, (evidently as the reward for its support of the jubilee) amendments that would curtail the veto power of the Senate and give parliament control over social and labor legislation." But not a word of the struggles of Canadian labor, not a word of the brave battles of the Nova Scotia miners against the British Empire Steel Corporation, of the government support of Besco with troops against the steel workers and coal miners.

The militant struggles of labor are omitted; tales of lobbying and lickspittling are told. Surely nothing here to inspire workers to struggle in their own behalf. An interpretation is given that the employers would subscribe to 100 per cent. The story of Canada—present and future is written by a business agent of the I. A. of M., dealing with facts on resources, etc., but nothing on labor.

There are three editorials, the first dealing with Canada's birthday. The second laments the fact that only 25 per cent of the members took part in the Grand Lodge Elections, but instead of probing for causes of this discontent, it throws out the suggestion for the abolition of election by referendum, and the return to election by convention. Discussing the automobile organization campaign, Editor Hewitt throws cold water on the campaign. He says: "However, time alone will reveal whether it is possible to organize this industry, which during the past quarter of a century has become the leading industry of the country."

The reports of the vice-presidents are the usual insipid reports of travel, scenery, lodge entertainments, etc.

The Usual Employers' Dope.

Each month, an article is published in a series called "Railroading on the Rails and Off" by one who worked for the railways as a hired writer, dealing with good-fellowship, showing wonderful opportunities to rise, the same dope that comes in employers' welfare magazines for their employees. The correspondence concerns itself with insurance and helping workers get patents on inventions and help in manufacturing, but hardly anything about organization, nothing about fighting injunctions, amalgamation of the metal trades unions so as to protect ourselves against the National Metal Trades Manufacturers' Association, or other issues of benefit to the organization.

FIGHT PENNSYLVANIA MINES SET TO GO NON-UNION

Drawing by William Gropel in the New York Nation.

The Pittsburgh Coal, the Pittsburgh Terminal, and the Vesta Coal Company of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation have called in a whole army of Coal and Iron Police (company guards in state uniforms) and Pennsylvania Cossacks (state constabulary) to help them in their efforts to smash the union in Pennsylvania. Progressive miners call for mass picketing.

Professional Patriots

While there is no organized co-operation among professional patriotcers they nevertheless usually respond in the same fashion and at the same time to any threat to their conceptions of "patriotism," whether the occasion is a movement to recognize the Soviet Union or to push the child labor amendment.

Of its three columns, one lists organizations of such character as the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and the National League of Women Voters, and the other two list women who are active both in peace movements and women's clubs. By connecting them up with their organizations, and the organizations with the National Council for the Prevention of War—a clearing house for anti-militarist effort—Miss Maxwell of course proves direct contact with Moscow. The naive theory underlying that proof is that the object of the whole pacifist movement is to disarm the United States so the Bolsheviks can take it. And it is seriously believed by persons of the caliber of Miss Maxwell and her military superiors.

Miss Maxwell's attitude is best characterized by the verse written by her which appears at the bottom of the chart, entitled "Miss Bolshevik." It reads:

Miss Bolshevik has come to town,
With a Russian cap and a German gown,
In women's clubs she's sure to be found,
For she's come to disarm AMERICA.

She sits in judgment on Capitol Hill,
And watches the appropriation bill,
And without her O.K., it passes—NIL
For she's there to disarm AMERICA.

She uses the movie and lyceum too,
And alters text-books to suit her view,
She prates propaganda from pulpit and pew,
For she's bound to disarm AMERICA.

The male of the specie has a different plan,
He uses the bomb and the fire brand,
And incites class hatred wherever he can
While she's busy disarming AMERICA.

His special stunt is arousing the mob,
To expropriate and hate and kill and rob,
While she's working on her political job,
AWAKE! AROUSE!! AMERICA!!!

The publication of the chart at once aroused protests from the women's organizations, both for its perversion and misstatement of facts, and its deceptive purpose. Mrs. Maude Wood Park, chairman of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee, wrote Secretary of War John W. Weeks, and a committee of women called on him to demand the chart's withdrawal and its repudiation by the War Department. Mr. Weeks responded by doing both, writing to Mrs. Park as follows:

"With reference to the letter from your committee, dated April 2, complaining of the injustice done your organization by the circulation of a chart by a subordinate in the War Department, you are informed that all the charts complained of in the possession of the Chemical Warfare Service have been ordered destroyed. General Fries has been directed to inform all persons that there are errors in the chart and to request their destruction.

"I regret the charts containing the errors pointed out by your committee were circulated by any branch of the War Department."

Very sincerely,
(Signed) JOHN W. WEEKS.

Despite the Secretary of War's action the chart continue,' to be distributed, apparently through the agencies with which Miss Maxwell was co-operating and for whom she had prepared it. The chart had appeared in slightly modified form in the "Dearborn Independent," Henry Ford's weekly, for March 22, 1924, with an anonymous article signed "by an American Citizen," attacking the leading women's organizations of the country as defenders equally of pacifism and Bolshevism. Later in 1924 the New York "World" in a series of articles exposing the militaristic activities of General Fries, General Bowley and others, told the whole story in detail. It is of no importance to go into it here, or to mention the other minor personalities involved.

AN UNEMPLOYED NECKWEAR KNITTER'S STORY

By I. LAZAROVITZ (Worker Correspondent.)

Joe woke up at six in the morning. He felt tired.

Yesterday he walked through half the city looking for a job but he couldn't get anything. He came home late and, without supper, went to bed. Lately he has begun to decrease his meals due to his lack of money.

Waking up Joe felt physically weak but he remembered about his debts and empty pockets and got up quickly. He got dressed and went out to buy a newspaper.

Joe is a knitter by trade. He has been in New York City only four months. Before he came to New York he worked in a shop where 200 workers were employed. The conditions of these workers were miserable. Family men made $18 to $20 a week. The dissatisfaction of the workers was growing. The possibilities of organising these wage slaves were good.

Joe noticed all this and tried to lay the basis for an organization that would help those workers. But being young and inexperienced, not using the proper methods, Joe exposed himself. The boss found out Joe's intentions and fired Joe.

Since then Joe tried in different factories under different names in that other city but was unable to get any work at all. Without any means of existence, Joe tried for jobs every morning but with no results. He borrowed some money from his friends but later on he could get no more from them. His friends lost confidence in him. They accused him of being lazy, without energy.

How is it possible, his friends argued, not to find work for such a long time? Joe listened to their arguments, but being hurt because his own friends refused to understand him and didn't believe him, he never replied to their arguments. Joe remained along "among old friends."

Finally Joe realized that he was blacklisted. Giving up hopes of finding a job in that city he decided to leave. Who knows, in a greater city there are more possibilities. Perhaps the people there are not as petty-minded.

Joe has been here in New York four months already, getting up every morning at six o'clock. He looks for anything possible but can get no work at all.

Today he must get a job. It can't be otherwise. He hasn't paid rent for the last two months and last night he received final notice.

An investigation of his pockets shows he has eight cents. He buys a newspaper and immediately begins to look on the Male Help Wanted page. Quickly Joe follows one after another and—yes, there is a job for him. Not wasting much time he rushes to the subway, pays a nickel and with one cent in his pocket and his heart still hoping, he takes the train to the place where the job is advertised.

Joe was the first one to get to the place, but before the foreman came there was a pretty big line waiting for the job. Finally the foreman came out. Afraid to lose this job chance, Joe was shaking.

"Who is the first one?" the foreman asked.

Joe steps out and follows the foreman into the office. The foreman begins to question. Where did you work? Why did you quit? How much did you get? etc. Joe replies quickly but for some reason or other the foreman is not satisfied with his answers and after a few more questions says:

"I'm sorry, I don't think you will be able to work here." And not waiting further he left the office to get the next applicant.

Joe was shocked. He realized what it meant for him. He wanted to run after the foreman asking, begging him, telling him he would work for half price. But the foreman is busy with another fellow.

Depressed, Joe leaves the office. Coming out on the street again, without knowing where he is going, he walks along with one cent in his pocket. He feels hungry. He is passing by a restaurant. Through the window he sees people well dressed sitting at well served tables, giving orders to the waiters.

Joe stops for a minute, but unconsciously he touches the only cent lying in his pocket. It was a signal to move ahead.

People pass by. Everyone seems satisfied and smiling to the future. Nobody can notice the miserable one—Joe.

THE BATTLE IN N. Y. NEEDLE TRADES

The Workers Go To Register

This sketch and three others which will follow in successive issues of The DAILY WORKER were written by a worker who was an eye-witness to the scenes described. The incidents are absolutely true in every case. (Ed. Note.)

• • •

By I. JEROME.

In the shop of Geller Bros., fur manufacturers, on 7th Ave.

4 p. m. The boss goes up to the workers:

"Now people, you will all have to go and register with the new union."

The workers: "Nothing doing. Nobody is going to decide for us which union we'll belong to."

"Very well then, if you want your Communist union you can't work here."

And he turns off the power. The machines stop. The workers file down stairs.

At the entrance a reception committee awaits them. A strong delegation of cops and plainclothesmen of the Industrial Squad, brutal-faced hands bristling with "lorem-order."

The workers sense trouble. They try to walk past.

The police and squadmen let them pass. Then suddenly a group of furriers is sectioned off. A cordon is made around them. Another group and another group is surrounded.

And quickly the order is given:

"Walk along!"

There are tussles. Some of the workers break through the cordons. Cries of "Let me go!" "They want to take us to the scab union!" Shrieking girls struggle with the squadmen. Police shove and drag workers to keep them within the ring. "Move along, you god damned bolshevik!" "I'll stretch you out if you don't move on!" Crowds of workers gathering on the pavements shout: "Don't let them take you! Don't let them take you to the scab union!"

The police get rougher. "Move along, damn you!" Clubs growl and dig their clubs into the ribs of the ringed-in workers. "Move along. Move along."

And the ambuscade marches on.

The following day the capitalist and the socialist press reported with bold captions the news of the hundred workers of Geller Brothers who "deserted" the ranks of the Communist Joint Board and marched in demonstration to join the "bona-fide union."

WITH THE Young Worker

The High Cost of Learning

By STUDE.

Like everything else owned by the capitalist class education is being marked up and a good technical or liberal education will be received only by the top strata of the bourgeoisie. The old dream of the ambitious shipping clerk to go to night school and enter one of the supposedly higher paid professions is being dissipated today. Modern conditions of education are showing to students and would-be students who heretofore have refused to take part in the struggle of labor, thinking themselves on the road to deliverance from the class struggle—that their conditions and their situation are similar to the conditions and situations in which the working class finds itself.

This tendency has finally received expression in words uttered by none other than our famous dime dispenser, John D. Rockefeller, at the graduation exercises of one of the most aristocratic institutions on the Eastern coast, Brown University, held last week at Providence, R. I. Said the oily sage (quotation is from N. Y. Times): ". . . the colleges today must turn to a new policy of meeting expenses through high tuition fees. . . ." Further on the New York Times correspondent reports John D. to have stated that "the student is paying less than half the cost of his education;" that "he urged that this 'philanthropic idea' be done away with;" that "those able to pay be called upon for the full cost, with (this last a hypocritic sop for public consumption) what means nothing—Stude) scholarship funds and student loans reserved to assist those actually needing them."

That this situation is well-known to educators and pink-tea liberals and is considered dangerous, is testified by the statement made by Dean Jervey of the Columbia Law School to the graduates of Columbia. "Educational institutions, like every one else have felt the higher cost of living. Tuition fees have gone steadily up and the end is not yet. This is true generally throughout the educational world. It means that if we are not careful, educational advantages will be open to the rich rather than the worthy." As a remedy for this Dean Jervey suggested a system of scholarship aid, "to be awarded to poor but worthy" students. Scholarship aid, he claimed, was the only way to prevent the door of education being closed in the face of the man with brains and character but without means.

What is the educational situation today? The young worker finds it impossible to go to college and very often cannot go to high school. The petty trader's son, who attends college only at the cost of limitless sacrifices, sees that he cannot attend college more than a here three or four years, for above that the "special" courses are most expensive. If he does manage to get through a graduate school he will probably find himself in an overcrowded profession, where in order to get to the "top" he needs must get a few years of a European finishing-off process—a most expensive process.

However, although it is obvious that in a society which is built on a theory of "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost" education must sooner or later become a club with which young men and women bludgeon a living out of society, and that capitalism controls the colleges as one of the means of propaganda for it own purposes and for the purpose of training a class of young lackeys for itself, nevertheless much can be done right now by the students and by the workers, farmers and small merchants, the children of whom cannot attain to a thoro education under present conditions.

In the first place students must organize themselves into great Student Associations and fight back vigorously any attempts to dilute the quality of the education, to make tuition rates prohibitive, and to propagandize the students. In the second place the purse strings for the colleges must be in the hands of capable educators appointed by a Labor Party administration — which means, in short, that what the colleges need right now is to be put into the hands of the state—which further means that the workers, farmers and small merchants of America must combine to form a Labor Party. However, as the writer has said above, the above measures do not mean the complete cure of the educational system. They are merely steps in the right direction, necessarily narrow because of the rigid confines of the capitalistic system, one which does not allow for the free development of real education.

And that's that as far as immediate demands are concerned. Let us not forget that these are but temporary and cannot cure the fundamental conditions in the institution of learning, o rottenness which comes from the fact that education under a private property system of production—which means a private property system of society—teaches men to take out of society rather than to put into society. The basic cure, and one which all socially minded students and young workers should recognize, is the reconstruction of society along co-operative lines, where education teaches men to work together in the building and beautifying of society and where learning, the treasure of the ages, is the possession of the many rather than the privileged, unappreciative few.

Labor Baseball Scores Broadcast Over Radio

The only labor radio station in the country, WCFL, "The Voice of Labor" is giving labor sports a boost by broadcasting the scores of the various union teams that are playing in the leagues sponsored by the local labor movement. In this way considerable interest has been developed in the trade union sports activities, and large crowds are turning out to see the games played. In addition to broadcasting the scores of the games, thru its radio station, the Chicago Federation of Labor is conducting a sports column in its organ, The Federation News, in which it gives the news of trade union sports activities.

Entries Pouring In For Labor Sports Meet In Waukegan.

If advance indications mean anything, the Labor Sports Union National Track and Field, to be held in Electric Park, Waukegan, Ill. on July 30th and 31st, will be a big success. Entries from all over the country are pouring in, and hundreds of participants are expected. Athletes are coming from the east, west, and from the coost, to take part in the meet. Posters and buttons advertising the affair have been sent throughout the country. Thousands of visitors are expected in Waukegan to see the meet.

Winchendon, Mass., Y. W. L. Training School Opens

July 5th, 1927.

The Winchendon, Mass., Y. W. L. Summer Training School, which was established last year, with quite a number of successes will reopen this summer again with expected students from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island, Vermont, New York, Connecticut, and Maryland. A total of 60 students are expected.

The course will be on the theory and practice of the movement and the particular tasks among the young workers in the United States.

Comrades Zam, Harrison, Kay and Kangus are among the instructors. Comrade Zam will guide the work of the entire school from the educational part is concerned, Comrade Kangus will take care of the sports and lighter features.

Comrade William Janhonen is the business manager of the school.

It is expected that besides a through training, which will be given every day for 4 hours except Saturday and Sundays, the students will have their recreation periods.

The school will be managed by a Students Council elected at the meeting of the Students Body in cooperation with the instructors, and the Administrative Committee.

We hope that as a result of the school the District will improve the league work further, and develop a powerful league.—School Committee Secretary, Nat Kay.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Boston Post is one of the most vicious foes of the USSR, and its indictment of the Communist regime in that country is chiefly predicated on the alleged low ethical level of the Soviet government. The manner in which the workers and peasants expropriated the capitalists and rich landowners set heavily on the Post's political stomach. It called the process theft. But what about the Post's morality? It got one of its reporters to steal material from the Rumford Press in Concord, New Hampshire, intended for publication in the Atlantic Monthly, that was not intended for publication until it had first appeared in that magazine. So much for the ethics of the Post, which by the way sold itself to the republican party and is now a fervent booster of Calvin Coolidge tho formerly a democrat organ.

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH, noted because he is the husband of Alice Roosevelt, got rid of the following piffle in an address before a graduating class at the University of Michigan: "An all-wise providence has given proof to the world within the last month that there are in this country two Americans who possess the three essentials of success in every walk of life—character, perseverance and courage." He was referring to Charles Lindbergh and his mother. Had this all-wise providence allowed the elements to drop Lindbergh into the ocean the young man's virtues and those of his mother would not mean a thing to them.

THE kosher butcher helpers, or shochtim, may go on strike. In fact they may be out now. This would cause serious inconvenience to members of orthodox congregations who want their chickens slaughtered according to the ancient ritual. The Rabbi Board of Trade has debated the question of the right of the shochtim to strike. The shochtim advised the rabbis that argument was useless. Their kosher-fed customers could defile themselves with non-kosher meat or die of hunger as far as they were concerned unless they got more money. An empty stomach is poor soil to scatter religious seed on.

A COMMITTEE of leading bankers representing American holders of Russian bonds, declares that it will fight the granting of credits to the Soviet Union until the old debts contracted by the czar to crush the workers and peasants of Russia are taken care of. Circumstances alters cases and sometimes alters them perfectly sound formulas when expediency demands a compromise, but it certainly does not seem fair that the Russian people should be expected to pay the debts contracted by their former tyrannous taskmasters. And our American bourgeoisie are supposed to personify the square deal.

WE commented recently on the recall of Lieut.-Col. Edward Davis, military attache at the American embassy in Mexico City. When he arrived in Washington the state department announced that his visit had no diplomatic significance. It was from Davis' safe that the compromising documents which revealed that Kellogg was plotting against Mexico and interfering in the internal affairs of that country, were extracted. Calles made good use of the documents. He returned them to the state department tho it is presumed he made photostatic copies. The state department declared them forgeries. Now, Davis has been relieved from his duties in Mexico City!

THE French have placed an embargo on the import of coal, and the outlook for British export coal is gloomy. If the French embargo persists many British colleries will have to close down, thus intensifying an already severe industrial crisis. At a time when every market was essential to the recovery of British industry the crazy tories decided to break with the Soviet Union, thus robbing the manufacturing interests of a rapidly developing market. This may be another case of those who are doomed to destruction being driven mad.

FOR sending a copy of the Truth Seeker to the Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton of Calvary Baptist Church, the clergyman and John S. Sumner of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, brought charges of sending indecent matter thru the mails against Charles Smith, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. The paper aroused the ire of those two notorious snoopers because of a satirical article on the subject of birth control. Birth control may be alright, but the ship has sailed. It should have been in operation thru dictatorial decree prior to the birth of Straton and Sumner.

VOIKOFF MURDER BLESSED BY COURT SAYS ROSENHOLZ

30 Bandits, Aided by Pilsudski, Captured

(Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER)

MOSCOW, June 23.—The trial of M. Kowceda, murderer of Peter Voikoff, Soviet Minister to Poland, was conducted in a partial manner, according to M. Rosenholz, who has returned from Warsaw where he had been sent to represent the Soviet Union at the Kowceda trial.

The court did everything to conceal the source of the funds with which Kowceda purchased the revolver with which he killed M. Volkoff and did all it could to shield the accomplices who aided Kowceda in his crime.

Judge Encouraged Attacks.

The attorney's speech, according to M. Rosenholz, was a defence and a moral justification of the murder, the solicitor making a series of violent attacks on the Soviet Union, while the presiding judge permitted and encouraged his attacks.

The verdict was the most lenient which the extraordinary Court could possibly inflict. The whole trial is regarded by M. Rosenholz as a stimulus to further terrorist activities of monarchist organizations which are

PICKET ARRESTED BY COP ON ORDER OF SCAB KINSMAN

Joint Board Issues List Of Settled Shops

Upon complaint of a police officer who was off duty, and patrolling the furriers' picket line in the interests of a relative who is in the fur business, a girl striker, Ray Epstein of 1412 Charlotte St., Bronx, was sent to the workhouse for two days by Magistrate Rosenbinth in Jefferson Market Court yesterday.

Jacob Mandelbaum of 1 Madison Ave., who is attorney for the Joint Board Furriers' Union, is planning to submit to Police Commissioner Warren today a transcript of the testimony in this case, for it shows that officer 11338 of Simpson St. station acknowledged that he was not assigned to duty in the fur market, and stated on the stand that Miss Epstein had not committed any breach of the peace.

Spoke to Scab.

As stated by the union's attorney in court, Miss Epstein spoke to a scab who was walking with the officer, who was in plain clothes. The officer then threatened to "break her head" if the girl did not leave the block; whereupon Herbert Schneider, a member of the union's law committee, went over to a uniformed officer and asked whether he knew this man who had made the threat.

"He is a detective, or a member of the force?" Schneider asked. And the officer said no, he was sure the man was not a detective. So Schneider called Ray Epstein from the next block and asked the policeman to place the man under arrest for threatening violence.

Arrests Girl.

Officer 11338 then showed his badge and announced that since Schneider made such a fuss about the matter he would have the girl arrested, and he carried out his threat in spite of Schneider's protests. He showed no intention of making an arrest until the union members accused him. On his complaint, and in the face of the statements he made on cross examination, Magistrate Rosenbluth gave a two day sentence.

List of Settled Shops.

The Settlement Committee of the Joint Board Furriers' Union yesterday made public the first part of a list of members of the Associated Fur Manufacturers Inc. who have settled with the Joint Board.

This list does not include many settled shops which have particularly requested that their names should not be published; and it does not include shops which have settled since the end of the first week of the strike. These additional names will be announced as soon as they have been properly checked and the union records are complete.

There are 24 shops on the list given out yesterday. These are Rawics, 142 West 26th St.; Grossman & Ratowsky, 214 West 29th St.; J.

1,400 Engineers to Serve Ultumatum On City Commissioner

New York subway engineers plan to serve an ultimatum on John H. Delaney, Tammany chairman of the city's board of transportation.

Last night at Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave., a meeting was held to decide on the policy to be determined to force the commissioner to listen to their grievances which he has consistently ignored for the past several months.

Committee Chosen.

A committee, chosen to address the communication to Delaney, will tell him precisely how much time he has to consider their demands if a strike of 1,400 engineers is to be averted.

The men, members of the Union of Technical Men, will meet again in a very short time to listen to the report of the committee. If it is adverse, it is declared, a definite move in the direction of a tie-up on subway construction work will be taken up.

Increase in pay and sick leave are among the demands of the men. The average yearly pay is now $1,560.

GANGSTERS ATTACK WORKERS WHEN THEY PARADE TO UNION OFFICES

New York Police Defend Gunmen as They Slug Hundreds of Men and Women

Sigman Followers Defeated in Attempt to Terrorize Militants

Cloak and dressmakers clashed with right wing gangsters late yesterday afternoon. As usual the police were on hand to protect the gunmen and guerrillas and at the same time beat up the militant workers.

The fight took place on 25th St. between Fourth and Lexington Ave. Marching from Cooper Union where they held a meeting, 2,600 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, banners flying, proceeded up Fourth Ave. until they reached 23rd St.

Police Break Line.

The police being informed of the workers' approach, broke the line up when it reached that street. Those that were in the front continued until they came to 25th St. where they marched east to Number 128, the office of Local 2, which the Joint Board is using as its temporary headquarters.

The rest of the paraders after being stopped by the police turned on 23rd St. and went east to Lexington Ave going up that street to 25th St.

Right Wing Celebration.

The workers that came from Fourth Ave. reached 25th St. first. In front of the old Joint Board building at Number 130 the right wing were holding a celebration meeting of their occupation of the building that was given to them as a result of a foreclosure of a mortgage and certain legal chicanery on their part.

When they arrived a right winger was addressing about 250 people from the second floor of the building. Near

Many Delegates Expected At Sacco-Vanzetti Vital Conference Tonight at 8

Tonight at 8 o'clock the third conference of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee will be held at the Labor Temple, Second Ave. and 14th St.

Plans for organizing at once demonstrations in this city calling for the immediate and unconditional release of the two framed-up workers will be made.

Delegates from a large number of labor and fraternal organizations will attend tonight's conference.

At a meeting held last night at 56 Manhattan Ave., the Brooklyn Sacco-Vanzetti Conference decided to affiliate with the New York body and voted to send five delegates to the conference tonight.

WORKERS FACE DEATH FOR PLANNING TO BOYCOTT BRITISH IMPERIALISTS

Chiang Rushes Executioners South as Revolt of Workers and Peasants Looms

SHANGHAI, June 23.—Because they attempted to organize an anti-British boycott in Chekiang Province, left wing leaders face death at the hands of the subordinates of Chiang Kai-shek, renegade Nationalist, according to reports received here from Ningpo.

The right wing general, Yenghu, commanding the Shanghai area, has arrived at Ningpo with a bodyguard of 200 men and 12 executioners and intends to carry on wholesale executions of local labor and peasant leaders, the dispatches state.

In his bid for the support of the imperialist powers, Chiang Kai-shek is making every effort to stamp out anti-imperialist demonstrations. It is around the question of imperialism that the conflict between the workers and peasants and the right wing officialdom has been taking place. Chiang Kai-shek has been catering to the imperialist powers while workers are organizing anti-imperialist strikes and boycotts.

(Although the suppression of the boycott is given as the reason for the impending executions in reports received here, the imminent Nationalist revolt against Chiang Kai-shek in the southern provinces is presumed to be a fundamental reason for dispatch of Yenghu to Ningpo.

Workers and peasants throughout southern China are rebelling against Chiang's terrorism. Reports received several days ago stated that workers were demonstrating against the right wing officialdom in the streets of Canton, while earlier dispatches reported two regiments in Fukien Province had rebelled against Chiang and had openly declared for the National allat government.)

HANKOW, May 16 (By Mail).—Despite the opposition of the right wings, organization among the peasants of Yunnan Province is taking place rapidly, according to a report of commissioners sent by the peasants department of the Central Kuomintang.

The offices of the provincial peasants' union at Anking have been raided and occupied by reactionary troops. Ten peasant leaders were arrested and two of them are said to have been executed. The report of the special commissioners states that within four months ten peasant districts have been organized.

COMMUNIST VOTE TRIPLED IN THE WARSAW BALLOT

Underground Party Won Masses to It

(By BELSHOYA.)

WARSAW, (By Mail).—At the elections to the Warsaw Town Council, held on the 22nd of May last, the left candidates, Communists, and the lists of the Polish Socialist Party and Trade Union Opposition annulled by the authorities, got more than 77,000 ont of 388,000 votes, chiefly from the working class districts in Warsaw. The elections brought to light an enormous growth in the revolutionary spirit of the Warsaw working class and the increase of Communist Party influence among the toiling masses.

Anniversary of Coup.

The Warsaw elections took place exactly a year after Pilsudski's coup d'etat. During this year Pilsudski's government has had an opportunity to show its Fascist nature, the reformists have finally displayed their treacherous policy. The elections were the trial by the Warsaw working class of the government and the reformists and the Warsaw working class pronounced on them its severe sentence.

There were neither more nor less than 27 lists of candidates for election. Many of these of course represented small chance groups.

FRAME PENNSYLVANIA SECTION CASE

Offer Lenin's Picture as Evidence of Plot to Overthrow Government by "Dynamite"

PITTSBURGH, June 23. — That Pittsburgh Steel barons attempted to bribe workers to testify against Bedaveo Communists, who are being tried on trumped up charges of "sedition" is the startling revelation that was made in the Beaver County Court yesterday.

The court was thrown into a turmoil when Steve Radanovich, former employee of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, testified that he had been offered a bribe by Chief of Police Mack of the Jones and Laughlin force, to testify against the Woodlawn defendants now on trial in Beaver.

Prosecuting attorney Craig objected vigorously to permitting Radanovich to testify. After an hour's conference between the two attorneys and Judge McCune, from which the jury and the public were excluded, the court ruled that Radanovich should be permitted to testify, but should confine himself to the events and not go into the long campaign of espionage conducted by the steel corporation.

Trumped-up Charges

The witness then told the startling story of the attempt to bribe him, last December after the Woodlawn case had been quashed for the second time. Mack called him into his office, he testified, and asked him to appear before the Grand Jury to testify that the defendants were planning to kill Mack and other officers. In return Radanovich was offered a good job, citizenship papers and money to bring his family from Europe.

The attorneys for the state failed completely to upset the testimony offered by Radanovich.

Upset Fake Evidence.

Earlier in the day several hirelings of the same notorious steel corporation testified, parroting the accusation that the defendants were teaching the overthrow of the government by "force, bloodshed, guns and dynamite." One even testified that they were plotting to blow up the Jones and Laughlin steel mills.

The defendants were charged by the same hirelings with using a Croatian gymnastic society in Woodlawn for military training and were teaching violence there.

This "evidence" was completely shattered when Burngass, a law student at the University of Wisconsin, and a member of the gymnastic society while residing in Woodlawn testified that nothing but gymnastics were taken up at the society meetings.

Several witnesses for the defense also proved that a birthday party was going on in Zima's home when it was raided last Armistice Day.

Court Protects Steel Barons.

The court refused to permit as evidence a copy of the New York Times containing Lenin's picture (offered by the prosecution as evidence of the "seditious character" of the defendants) and refused to permit questions about the seven-day week and the 12-hour day in the steel mills.

During the day several demands were made by the defense to dismiss the jury and continue the case on the grounds of unfair methods used by the attorney for the commonwealth to prejudice the jury.

Workers Split "Five Point" Plan in Strator's Church As Exposed

Disturbed with the tactics of Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, the congressional pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, 57th St., five deacons have submitted their resignations.

In making public their action the deacons declared that "a gag rule" was responsible for their inability to present their reasons for resigning to the entire membership of the church.

The energetic pastor, apparently dissatisfied with just honest-to-goodness fundamentalism, has lately been conducting in his church a return to semi-insane, primitive, religious rites.

Religious ignorance and superstition is declared to have reached its peak with the weird ceremonials which Straton has established in his church.

Called "Pantecostalism".

"Pantecostalism" is the official name for the voodooism which has culminated in the resignation of the five church deacons, who charge that the ritual is similar in all respects to the rites still practiced by country Negroes and whites in certain sections of the south and west.

These elaborate ceremonials consist of a condition of hysteria, screaming, cataleptic trances, with men and women lying flat on the floor, and all the other manifestations of temporary insanity induced by such religious frenzy.

Many of these "revivals" are said to have lasted until 2 in the morning.

LATIN AMERICAN MASONS APPEAL AGAINST KELLOGG

MEXICO CITY, June 23.—An appeal to all Masons issued by Masonic Lodge "Acelon" No. 31, of the obedience of the Grand Lodge "Valle de Mexico" of AA. and AA. S. R., at Mexico City, states:

Before the unprecedented attack from President Coolidge, who has sent Henry Stimson as special commissioner at Nicaragua, instructed to submit the constitutional government of that republic, by means of strength or subornation and thus imposing the betrayer Adolfo Diaz as a president, all Latin-American governments whose neutrality is the cause of the perpetration of such an horrid crime, must unite themselves in order to impede the triumph of force over right and thereby erect a barrier to Wall Street imperialism, whose insatiable covetousness is sacrificing a whole people.

The blood, sprinkling the land of Nicaragua by order of Coolidge, dishonors not only the name of the worst enegy of our race, but also the state chiefs of Latin-American countries who, contemplating this atrocity, will clearly exposed by means of the press and the very many meetings against American policy in our internal affairs, have abandoned their own risk our weak sister pressed by the herculean arms of the monster.

The lodge "Acelon" No. 31, accomplishing the original purpose of our order, i.e., the Defense of Liberty, unites its protest to that of Nicaraguan people lawfully represented by Dr. J. B. Sacasa, Constitutional president, against the misuse of force executed by the most powerful nation, misuse that brings his dishonor, and appeals to the fraternity as well as to the world for the heroism of the handful of braves preferring death to dishonor.

Coolidge, knowing the triumphal career of the liberal army running against the betrayer Diaz, a servant of the American oilmen, decided to intervene openly, using firstly the subordination by pffering dollars amounts of money for the weapons conquered and sustained with the blood of the Liberals, or, when he has failed in such a criminal intrigue, by extermination of the Liberal troops.

These old policies of American imperialism, incited the Philippines, Porto Rico, Sauto Domingo, etc., are yet being employed to abolish the liberty and independence of all Latin-American nations—and they are trying too in China—and they will succeed if the interested peoples don't warn themselves and end their policy of isolation. The Mexican government, born from the Mexican revolution, has sustained the right of peoples to elect their own governments without the interference of any foreign influence.

This attitude must be, an example for all American rulers if they wish to save their historical responsibility and maintain immutable the sovereignty and dignity of the nations for whose guidance they have been trusted.

We make a new and vigorous appeal to all peoples, to all Latin-American governments and by special call to all brothers and to all workers of the world, for the help of that suffering and brave people of Nicaragua, imposing by all means the consummation of the assassination of Indo-American race liberty.

Mexico, May 15th, 1927.

Prepare Machine Gun to Kill Food Mutineers

LANSING, Kansas, June 23.—Prison authorities here have stationed a machine gun at the mouth of the prison mine to kill any of the 300 strikers who are barricaded below ground in an aftermath to a demand for other better food, or some cigarettes with their meals.

The deputy warden, Hudspeth, proudly shows a telegram received from Warden W. H. MacKay, traveling in Texas, in which he is told, "They may require some hot shot. Accomodate them."

Cut Off Light.

Hudspeth has already cut off all light, prohibited any food at all from going below, and threatened to shut off the water supply.

This is the fourth mutiny of prisoners within the last few years in Kansas, all brought about by the intolerable food conditions at the prison. The usual procedure of the prisoners, driven desperate by the monotony and disease resulting from their unsanitary and unbalanced rations, is to seize some of the guards as hostages, and barricade themselves below prround in a mine as a protest, and in the hope of causing a public investigation.

This "mutiny" follows the usual course, except that the prison officials seem rather more brutal in suppressing it than before. They are emphasizing the request for cigarettes, which the prisoners made, as though it were their only grievance.

Favoritism In Navy Promotions.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The seniority rule governing promotions in the navy sustained a severe shock today when it was announced that President Coolidge had approved the action of a navy selecting board in designating eleven captains for promotion to rear admirals as fast as vacancies occur. The selections were made without particular reference to seniority, and no less than nineteen captains were passed over by the board.

Among the senior captains passed over was Franklin D. Karns, commanding the U. S. S. Colorado, which recently went aground at New York.

Stresseman Attacks France But Wavers On the Soviet Policy

BERLIN, June 23.—That Germany continues to waver between a complete alliance with the western imperialist powers led by Great Britain and a policy friendly to the Soviet Union was clearly indicated in a speech delivered before the Reichstag today by Foreign Minister Stresseman.

While following the British tory lead in an attack on Soviet "propaganda," Stresseman launched a vicious attack on Poincare's Lunaville speech, declaring "what does he really want—the Ruhr or Locarno? It is impossible to handle both."

The difference between Germany and France over the Ruhr and Germany's desire to regain some of the colonies that she lost during the war are the factors keeping Germany from joining Britain and France in an anti-USSR offensive.

Lindbergh Calls For Hoover; To Be Dupe of Patrioteers and Plutes

WASHINGTON, June 23.—That Charles Lindbergh will affiliate himself—that is give the weight of his reputation—to a commercial aviation concern was definitely learned after he had conferred with Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

"Colonel Lindbergh came to Washington to discuss commercial aviation," said Secretary Hoover. "His whole interest will lie in that direction."

Lindbergh will he made the dupe of militarism as well as big business since commercial planes are easily converted into military planes.

Landslide On Panama Canal.

BALBOA HEIGHTS, Panama Canal Zone., June 23.—A landslide which promises to dump 50,000 tons of rock and dirt into the Panama Canal has started on the east bank of the Culebra cut, it was learned today. The slide is not interfering with navigation through the canal and canal zone, officials said it is not serious.

Coolidge Gets Two Telegrams From Southern Gentlemen About Negro Victim

RALEIGH, N. C., June 23.—Blood lust is running high here, the southern white is on the war path, breaking the monopoly of the newly industrialized south with one of his periodical race hunts.

A white girl has been killed, by person or persons unknown, but a rumor has been circulated that a negro, Irvin Brandon Miller, was seen near the scene of the crime, and 2,000 persons, armed with all sorts of weapons, are cursing the countryside with the intention of mutilating and lynching him.

Miller has thus far escaped. The governor is calling out the militia in order to give a semblance of order to the mass hunt, and see that the Negro is hanged in a jail yard instead of to a tree. The Morgantown company of militia will arrive tonight.

Capture 30 Bandits.

KIEV, June 23.—Using Poland as a base of operations Ukrainian White Guard bandits, headed by the notorious Kubalinski, have been murdering Communist workers and plundering the countryside. The bandit raids are said to have been carried on with the knowledge and consent of the Pilsudski Government.

A series of brutal murders and robberies have been directly traced to the bandits and thru the activities of the secret police, thirty of the bandits have been captured.

Execute 11.

After trials, eleven of the band, including Kubulinski, have been executed. Thirty of the bandits have been given prison sentences.

It is stated that members of the band were subsidized by the British in their unofficial war against the Soviet Union.

Score McDonald Betrayal

LONDON, June 23.—The rank and file of British workers and leaders of the minority movement are denouncing the resolutions passed by the right wing General Council of the British Trade Union Congress defending the betrayal white guard bandits executed by the Soviet Union for murder, arson and espionage for Great Britain.

The action of the General Council is regarded as further evidence of the common bond between the right wing of the Trade Union Congress and the die-hard Conservative Leaders of the minority movement point out that the right wing labor leaders did not issue as strong a protest when the British Government murdered Jim Connolly, Irish liberation leader.

The resolution was passed by the General Council at a meeting held in the House of Commons. The twenty executed white guardists were employed by the Tory Government in carry out a reign of terror and espionage in the Soviet Union. (Special Cable to DAILY WORKER).

MOSCOW, June 23.—A number of the largest labor centers, provincial committees of the Communist Party and meetings of members of the Leningrad, Moscow, Ivanovvoznesensk, Kharkov and many other local organizations have demanded that leaders of the opposition be removed from the Central Committee of the Communist Party.

The Pravda, reviewing the actions of the opposition during the last year states that after the fifteenth conference, when the Party condemned the opposition's line as being social democratic, the opposition had a choice of either returning to the idealology of Leninism or continuing to waver between Bolshevism and Menshevism, rapidly moving away from Bolshevism. The opposition chose the second way.

By numerous speeches at party and non-partisan meetings and in various documents the opposition demonstrated that it followed a line aggravating the inner party contradictions and further and further falling out of the party. The opposition rendered absolutely valueless its declaration of the sixteenth of October proving the latter to be a document issued for the purpose of deceiving the party. The factional struggle of the opposition has intensified the tension of the international situation in which the Soviet Union finds itself and has politically exploited difficult moments thus putting under question its loyalty to the proletariat and the Bolshevist party in the hour of danger.

The opposition has systematically tended to the policy of liquidating fractions, within the party. The whole party will rally like an iron wall to the Leninist Central Committee, the opposition is backed by no single nucleus and all party organizations are demanding energetic measures against the opposition.

Cosgrave, King's Irish Henchman IS DAIL HEAD

Opposed by Labor, Free State Party in Minority

DUBLIN, June 23. — William T. Cosgrave was re-elected president of the Irish Free State by the Dail tonight, despite the fact that his party lacks a majority and the labor party came out in opposition to his re-election.

The vote for Cosgrave was 68 to 22, the opposition vote being that of the labor deputies.

Eamon De Valera and his republican followers made an attempt to rush into the chamber without taking the oath, but were unsuccessful and after a two hour demonstration in the Dail corridors left, declaring, "we will come back." De Valera announced he would hold a public protest meeting.

The Dail was guarded by police reserves.

Professor Hayes was re-elected president of the Dail.

Should De Valera and the small Sinn Fein group decide to take the oath and line up with the labor party, the combination would have 71 votes against the combined opposition of 68. The majority could then vote to abolish the oath of allegiance.

Angeles Comrades Preparing Special Issue of The Daily

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—The Press Conference, composed of representatives of the various language fractions, the Y. W. L., Women's Consumers Educational League, Daily Worker Builders Club, and the Freiheit Yugend Club, at its last meeting reached the decision that all tickets sold by the party units (Nuclei) at the gate of the picnic and all profits realized at the picnic shall be divided in the following manner: 10% to the Sub-District and 90% to the DAILY WORKER. That a special Los Angeles Daily Worker edition shall be issued on Saturday, August the 6th so it would reach here a day or two prior to the picnic.

The price of the tickets was made low in order to reach the poorest wage workers, for after all financial anccess is secondary to the success of drawing thousands of wage earners to our picnic.

One of the greatest tasks for our party concerning the picnic is to mobilize all our forces to carry out the decision of the conference concerning the special edition. . . It should be our aim that this special edition should reflect the activities of the local labor movement and particularly the role of our party in that movement. In order to accomplish this, the nuclei, language fractions, trade union fractions and the fraternal organizations shall send in brief articles of their activities not later than July 29th to the Secretary of the Conference, Comrade Prescott Chaplin, at Headquarters, 322 W. Second St., Los Angeles. The leading comrades as well as sympathizers can also send in brief articles for this special edition.

Every nucleus as well as every fraction must lead in sending in paid greetings. They must also induce sympathetic unions, fraternal organizations as well as individuals to do likewise. Every member of the party should ask his barber, his druggist, his grocer, his butcher or any other merchant he deals with to put in an advertisement in this special Los Angeles Daily Worker Edition. Point out to them that this edition will be read by thousands of people in the city of Los Angeles. Indeed it would be worthless to have a special Los Angeles edition without having at least two thousand copies distributed free of charge to the picnic as well as at the factory gates. Remember that the Press Picnic will take place August 14th, at Plummer's Park, 7405 Santa Monica Blvd.

Preacher's Victim in Court Tells of Rape

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., June 23.—Mrs. Bessie May Woodworth, 24, today related how she led state troopers into a sensational raid on the House of David last November when Rev. Benjamin Purnell was nabbed after hiding there four years.

Mrs. Woodworth, last important witness for the state, who testified Ben first assaulted her when she was 15-years-old, admitted she perjured herself in testifying at the 1923 probe here. She declared she perjured herself on explicit instructions from Purnell and his two chief girl lieutenants, Ada Ross and Edith Maldrim.

Trackmen Killed, Another Injured.

TRENTON, N. J., June 23.—One track worker was killed and another injured in a railroad "accident" today. The dead trackman is Harold Shover, 24, of Miller's Falls, Mass., the injured worker is William Abbott, 48, of Trenton.

Prohibition Agents Charged With Graft And Brutal Tactics

Charges of third degree methods by prohibition enforcement officials were made yesterday at the trial in Federal Court of prohibition agents who are accused of bribery.

Albert Briggs, alleged to have collected hush money from saloon keepers, for the agents testified that he was clubbed, beaten and kicked in prohibition headquarters at 1 Park Ave. on the night of December 13 last in an effort to make him implicate the agents.

Major Augustus Taise, assistant prohibition administrator, wielded the club, Briggs charged.

Beaten Unconscious.

"Heise asked me about collecting money for the agents and when I said I was only hired as a driver he ordered ma strapped in a chair," the witness said, "I was strapped there from 8 p. m. until midnight. Heise hit me with a club and the others hit me with their fists and kicked me in the stomach."

Briggs said that while he was at headquarters a Negro named Benjamin Richmond was brought in. When Richmond refused to implicate the agents he was thrown against a wall and knocked unconscious, Briggs testified.

Although not an agent, Briggs is on trial before Judge Knox and a jury with the others who are Jesse Harvay, of New Rochelle, Edward McCann, Richard Warner and Josiah Dixon.

150 Weavers Earning an Average of $18 Weekly Strike When Pay Is Cut

WALTHAM, Mass. June 23.—Nearly 150 weavers, employed in the cotton mills of the Boston Manufacturing Co. and who earn an average of $18 a week, struck yesterday when an announcement was made of a cut from $2 to $1.60 in the rate of pay per roll of cloth and in the number of looms tended by each man, from 10 to 6.

The workers have been unorganized, but steps will now be taken to form a branch of the textile workers' union.

RED INTERNATIONAL ON VOIKOV... ASSASSINATION IN POLAND

TO WORKERS EVERYWHERE! Another treacherous blow has been dealt the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Comrade Voikof, the Soviet representative in Poland has been shot down by a hired murderer in Warsaw.

Led by the conservative government of Great Britain, world counter-revolution in its struggle against the U. S. S. R. has apparently decided to adopt the usual treacherous fascist methods of shooting down defenseless men.

One of the foremost diplomatic representatives of the U. S. S. R., who was treacherously shot in a similar fashion in Geneva, was Comrade Vorovsky, whose memory at this juncture leaps to our minds. The Soviet government was systematically persecuted, and this loathsome, cowardly, and treacherous campaign finally culminated in Lord Curzon's ultimatum.

The bloody attack on Comrade Voikoff again served as the logical culmination of the frenzied campaign the British conservative government has been carrying on against the U. S. S. R. during the last few years, a campaign that finally brought about a rupture in the diplomatic relations of the two countries.

One of the many Russian White Guards, who enjoy the bountiful hospitality of Poland, has worthily imitated the tactics of political banditism so thoroughly mastered by the British conservative government. In the present-day atmosphere of implacable hostility towards the U. S. S. R. this cowardly murderer could well count not only on being let off bnt on receiving the approval of his real instigators.

Comrades! This policy of provocative pogroms and murders has led to a situation which is becoming graver every day. The Red International of Labor Unions calls on all its affiliated organizations to be prepared, to rally the active forces of the International Proletariat around the U. S. S. R., to defend the Home of Practical Socialism against the growing attack of World Counter-Revolution!

Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions.

Our Letter from Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia (By Mail).—F. J. Williams, medical superintendent of the London Missionary Society at Hankow (China), at present in Australia, said that the fundamental factor in the present situation in China was a burning desire on the part of the Chinese for complete self-government. The time had arrived, he said, when the foreign concessions should be handed back to their jurisdiction and they should be allowed to control their own tariff.

Protesting against the landing of armed foreigners in China, Williams said: "I quite realize that the presence of foreign troops in China might for a time, under special circumstances, help to restrain the violence of the mob, but it is very significant that where the clashes have occurred between foreigners and Chinese, it has been almost always where there have been foreign military and naval 'protection'. I, personally would feel very much safer in China if all foreign forces were withdrawn from that country."

Politics Static.

Election held throughout the state of Victoria on April 9th did not result in any notable change in the strength of the various parties. Labor's position remained unchanged. Prior to the elections the state of parties was: Labor, 28; Conservatives, 19; Country Party Conservatives; 12; Liberals, 4; Independents, 2. After the elections the result was: Labor, 28; Conservatives, 19; Country Party Conservatives, 11; Liberals, 2; Progressives, 3; Independents, 2. The labor party is trying to secure the support of the liberals, country party and progressives to oust the present conservative country party government.

Kuomintang Grows.

SYDNEY, Australia.—The Australian section of the Kuomintang (Chinese Nationalist) party is now a fairly healthy organization. Starting from an original membership of 40 in 1916 there are now 10,000 members in Australia, New Zealand and the Pacific Islands. There are no less than 40 sub-branches throughout the various countries covered under the Australian jurisdiction and the head executive office is at Sydney, where a large four-storied building has been erected for party rooms, printing office, and social club and rooms. The Australian section has the status of a Chinese province at the annual conferences of the Kuomintang in China. The next conference will take place at Canton next August. Mr. Yee Wing, a veteran Chinese patriot, and close friend and adviser of the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, is chairman of the Australian section of the Kuomintang.

Passports Refused.

In view of the Australian federal government's refusal to issue passports to the delegates selected by the labor council of New South Wales to attend the Pan-Pacific Congress at Canton, China, the labor council has decided to take no further action in the matter. Some of the would-be delegates favored demanding passports to Russia or some other European country and then securing other passports to get to China via Siberia.

War On Machinists.

MELBOURNE, Australia. — Engineering employers are trying to introduce the system of piecework payment in place of the existing system of daily and weekly wages. They are also trying to break down the apprenticeship margin, which at present is one apprentice to every three skilled workers, to one apprentice to every one skilled worker. Dilution of labor—that is, the use of semi-skilled workers at lower rates of pay—is also being attempted.

The engineering unions are resisting the employers' schemes. In a statement issued on behalf of the unions, Mr. W. J. Duggan, president of the Melbourne Trades Hall Council, said the workers would have to unite closely to meet the modern industrial methods of piece-work and bonus system and would have to be warned that if they accepted these bribes they would be doing an injustice to unborn generations. Piecework was a cancerous growth which would eat into the vital of the labor movement before many years.

Federal Disputes Committee.

The All-Australian Trades Union Congress is to draw up a scheme for the creation of a federal industrial disputes committee to deal with disputes extending, or likely to extend, beyond the limits of any one state. The committee is to have the power to call upon the duly appointed representatives of all unions likely to be involved in any dispute reported to them by the states disputes committees. In such disputes, the decision of the federal committee shall be supreme. The federal council is to consist of two delegates from each of the six states in Australia, such delegates to be appointed by the various states industrial committees.

Union Conference.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand. — The conference of New Zealand unions, convened by the N. Z. Alliance of Labor opened at Wellington Trades Hall on April 11. Delegates from all parts of New Zealand, representing 75,000 workers, attended. Many questions affecting the workers, including wages, housing, unemployment and immigration were discussed. It has been decided to hold a conference of the Alliance of Labor every year.

Celebrate Anniversary Of Pushkin's Birth

MOSCOW, June 7 (By Mail).—The 128th anniversary of the great Russian poet Pushkin's birth was celebrated in Moscow and Leningrad by meetings at which there participated representatives of the Academy of Sciences and the world of literature and science.

In Moscow, the memorial tablet was fixed on the house where Pushkin was born. At the official meeting in Moscow there assisted the poet's descendants.

In Leningrad, a large number of people visited the flat where Pushkin lived, and a new exhibition has been opened referring to the poet's stay in the village of Mikhallovskoe.

BARBERTON, Ohio., June 23.—The international Labor Defense will hold a meeting here June 24 at Slovenian Independence Hall, Mullberry Street to organize a branch. All workers are invited to be present.

COMMUNIST VOTE TRIPLED IN WARSAW ELECTIONS; POLISH SOCIALISTS AND MIDDLE PARTIES LOSE

voting was not very lively, only about 60 per cent availing themselves of their opportunity (all citizens over 21, irrespective of sex, have the right to vote in Warsaw, with its million-strong population. These two facts—the multiplication of lists and the weak polling—show both the diffusion and confusion in petty bourgeois elements in the government and all political groupings. Many of the non-voters would certainly have voted for the Communist candidates if their lists had not been annulled.

The Big Four.

Serious rivalry existed between 4 lists in the following groups: COPS (Committee for defence of Polish character of Warsaw)—a reactionary bloc of national-democrats and Christian democrats, embracing a section of the bourgeoisie, the most reactionary sections of the petty bourgeoisie, especially tradesmen, the priesthood and the most backward sections of the working class (domestic servants, etc.). This bloc represented those very elements which were in the majority in the former Council, so that they were forced in the elections to give an account of their stewardship. Thanks to the participation of the principles of anti-semitic slogans and anti-government tactics, this bloc gained many votes, to be precise 118,000, but lost 50,000 in comparison with the Sejm elections of 1922.

The committee for the recovery of Warsaw—a government group, embracing petty bourgeois sections, the middle classes and employes—obtained 40,000 votes.

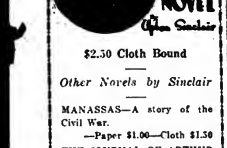
Socialists Lose.

The PSP had 71,000 votes as against 82,000 in the elections to the Sejm.

In the Jewish quarter (there are about 30 per cent of Jews in Warsaw) the bourgeois candidates, with 39,000 votes and the Bund candidates with 20,000 votes, vied with each other.

All Had Money.

All these groups had great means at their disposal and, attributing the greatest importance to the Warsaw elections, carried on intensified agitation. The two government groups distinguished themselves especially, i.e., the committee for the recovery of Warsaw and the PSP, flooding Warsaw with appeal and posters and deafening it with a succession of meetings, of which the PSP organized 10 to 15 a day. The PSP-ers were not too particular, for the most demagogical slogans, appealing for the protection of the "Polish character of Warsaw (apparently against Jews and Communists), vying with the National democrats; issued appeals to the Catholics of Warsaw, assuring them of their tolerance and good will—anything to get votes.



Communists Underground.

The Communists were crowded out. The Communist Party has been driven underground in Poland. The Polish juiges passed sentences of long-term imprisonment, on the basis of the Tsarist laws still effective in former Russian Poland, against those guilty of adherence to the Communist Party, or affaing Communist appeals. The PSP Left Wing, splitting off from the PSP last year, is a legal party but also jealously persecuted by the authorities.

Trade Union Opposition led partly by the Communist Party, partly by the Left Wing PSP, is the victim of perpetual vicious persecution by the trade unions bureaucrats, inevitably followed up by police repressions. We will merely mention the closing down of a succession of Red branches of unions, the arrests of trade unionists, the confiscation and closing down of "Glos Pracy," the organ of trade union opposition. During the whole election campaigns there was no revolutionary press and it was almost impossible to get up meetings, all agitation being carried on in conditions of incessant police repression. The punishment of the "left candidates' list on the plea that it contained candidates sentenced for Communist activity completed this sort of repression. It is highly probable that the PSP did its best to get the annulment of this list on the nail, hoping to increase its chances of getting rid of the Communists while officially protesting against the annulment.

Vote For Annulled.

The Polish Communist Party broadcast the slogan to vote for the annulled lists. [illegible] for friends and [illegible] working class [illegible] of elections would [illegible] increase in [illegible] of course the [illegible] constatively given [illegible] ible results, must have been not less than the number of Communist voting conditions with the hope of getting their candidates [illegible] standing this, the number of votes given for the annulled lists reached according to the latest news, 77,000, while the elections to the Sejm got the Communists 27,000 votes so that the number of Communist electors has been almost tripled, composing 17 per cent of all votes given, each sixth voter being Communist or sympathizer. It is characteristic that in the Warsaw elections such questions as the "economic recovery of Warsaw," on which the PSP-ers depended, fell into the background, fundamental political questions occupying the whole foreground: for or against the Fascist government, for or against the USSR. The Polish Communist Party embarked on these elections with unfurled banners and the Warsaw working class rallied around them.

Study Principles Of Revolution, Feng Tells His Officers

General Feng Yu-hsiang issued ten commandments to his high ranking officers.

They are as follows:—

(1) Developing revolutionary spirit:—To make a deep study of revolutionary principles so as to know how best to awaken the populace, support the people's corp and organs, concentrate revolutionary forces, and strengthen the revolutionary foundation.

(2) Seeking an intimate and deep knowledge of military science, political science and party work should be a part of each officer's life. Knowledge is power, therefore no matter how busy an officer may be, he must make an allowance of time for study.

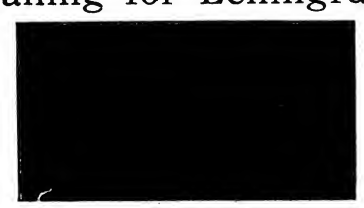
(3) Cultivating a broad and sound personality:—To tolerate what ordinary people cannot tolerate. Listen to ordinary people. Entertain no false pride. Do not lose your temper.

(4) Using executive capacity.—To realize that there are no insurmountable difficulties, no easy tasks. Entertain no fear because of difficulties. Tolerate no carelessness because tasks look easy. Weigh advantages and disadvantages before making a decision. Hold fast to decisions when made.

Words and Deeds.

(5) Exercising care with words and deeds—To see to it that no vain words are uttered, and no empty deeds are performed. Win trust and confidence of men in association, and remain always their model.

(6) Knowing men and how to employ them: To put the right man in the right position and achieve maximum results. Talents of individuals vary and tempers differ.



(7) Making right awards and punishments:—To give credit where it is due and accord punishment where punishment is due. This makes clear to soldiers what is wrong and elevates the moral standard of the whole army.

(8) Entertaining sympathy for soldiers:—To share joy and sorrow with the soldiers leads to their loyalty and devotion.

(9) Maintaining high standards of morality and conduct:—To realize that character is the foundation of a powerful personality. It is to be placed above talents and knowledge.

(10) Possessing constancy:—To see that constancy makes for success. Sun Yat-sen spent 40 years in revolution. Life-long constancy, moves mountains. Thanks to the late Tsung-li's constancy, the revolution is today making rapid progress.

Lackeys to Their Masters, the Bourgeoisie.

Following the policy laid down by the Baldwin-Chamberlain-Hicks tory government of forgery, provocation and murder, the General Council of the British Trades Union Congress echoes the Daily Mail and other reactionary organs by denouncing the Soviet Union for its execution of conspirators against the lives of the leaders of the revolution.

This council of the great betrayal, that came to the rescue of the tory government during the great general strike, just at the time it bid fair to develop into a political struggle against the state power, is so utterly debased, so devoid of even the slightest independence of view, that its resolution against the Soviet Union is taken word for word from the scurrilous mendacity of the tory politicians and press. The General Council states that it "protests against the policy avowedly adopted by the Soviet government of persons innocent of the murder of Voikoff in reprisal for that murder." Concluding it observes: "To meet murder by murder is a policy which degrades the standards of civilized life and which can be productive of nothing but harm to Soviet Russia."

These miserable poltroons, and servants to his majesty's government, are indeed gravely concerned about harming the Soviet Union, as their actions show. But they have to cover their crimes against the workers' and peasants' government by hypocritically professing to give friendly advice to the Soviet Union, while striking with the venom of rattlesnakes. A group of so-called labor leaders that are so debased that they place in the same category with the defenders of the proletarian revolution in Russia the foul czarist agent of British toryism and Pilsudski fascism who murdered Voikoff is capable of any crime against labor. Only agent provocateurs for the mad-dog of British imperialism would resort to such deliberate falsification.

The executions were carried out against the terrorist hirelings of Britain, because they conspired to repeat on Soviet soil the murderous assaults their masters paid other scoundrels to perpetrate against the Soviet diplomats in capitalist countries. The dishonesty of the general council is still further emphasized by the fact that while they condemned the Soviet Union for defending itself against the hired assassins of British imperialism they said not one word in condemnation of the tories for inciting the murder of Voikoff.

But no one can expect this general council that has loyally and persistently aided the tories in the fight against the workers of Britain to defend the workers' government in Russia. Their joining in the anvil chorus against the revolution is also for the purpose of assuring their capitalist masters that in case the government attempts a war against the Soviet Union it will have their support, just as it had their support in the world war.

In its fight against British imperialism and the tory government that has delivered crushing blows against it, the working class of Britain must drive from the labor movement the Thomases, the Clines, the MacDonalds and their ilk. They should be repudiated now so that they cannot be in position to play the parts of murderers of the working class when the masters in their final extremity can find no other lackeys to defend the citadels of capitalism.

The Law in Its Impartial Majesty—

United States Attorney General John S. Sargent, successor to the odoriferous swindler, grafter and political crook, Harry M. Daugherty, delivered a speech before the Pennsylvania bar association at Bedford in that state yesterday wherein he proclaimed his conviction that jeers at legislation and law are a national peril. According to his expressed beliefs the law should be strictly enforced, and those diarespectful "writers, publishers, soap-box orators," who sneer at it should be sternly dealt with.

Like all of his class Mr. Sargent favors law enforcement in the abstract; but concretely he enforces it against only those whom it is designed to hold in subjection—the workers.

Certainly he cannot expect intelligent workers to have any respect for a government or a code of laws that permit the Daughertys, the Denbys, the Falls, the Roosevelts and others of the Teapot Dome eminences, to remain at liberty, while innocent victims of capitalist vengeance like Sacco and Vanzetti, Tom Mooney, Warren K. Billings and hundreds of other workers rot in the foul prisons of this country.

Illustrations by the thousands are available to prove that the so-called impartial majesty of the law is an empty jest, fit only to be despised by all intelligent workers.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

A Positive Way to Build Our Party.

The members of our unit, Four F, Section 1, have launched a campaign of industrial activity. The plan is a simple one. It will merely require the doing of some systematic work, especially on the part of the union members in our unit.

The inauguration of this activity will eliminate a hitherto serious problem that confronted our unit and which now probably exists in other units. How to carry on Communist activity in reactionary unions and on the job? This is how we decided to "carry on!" We elected a special DAILY WORKER committee to negotiate with Comrade Bert Miller for the purchase of a hundred dollars worth of subscriptions to The DAILY WORKER. The subscriptions were for one month and cost 75 cents a piece. The unit therefore received 134 monthly subscriptions which it will use up in from three to six months.

The subscriptions will be distributed free of charge to sympathizers and "promising" shop workers. Candidates for a trial subscription will be proposed by party members, who will present their names to the Trial Subscription Committee elected by the unit.

The members who receive trial subscriptions for their "prospects" must "work" on the new reader and results: First, the enrollment of the prospect as a regular subscriber to The DAILY. Second the bringing into the party of the new DAILY WORKER reader.

The party member who is responsible for the starting of the paper must "work" on the new reader and report on the progress that is being made, to the industrial meeting of the unit. The unit will then be able to function out, if necessary, the strategy to be employed in the winning over of the potential convert.

The members of Unit Four F mean business. They have assessed themselves five dollars each, to be paid in weekly installments, for the fulfillment of this work. They invite other units to follow their example. Who is next?—C. K. Miller, Chairman Trial Subscription Committee, Unit Four F, Section One.

New Retreats by United Mine Workers Officialdom

Concessions to the Coal Barons—The Herrin Battle Again—Need For Greatest Vigilance and Activity of Militant Miners

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

ONCE more the Lewis leadership of the United Mine Workers has shown that it has no policy except that of surrender. In the third month of the strike there is still no sign even of preparation for an organization drive while the most recent news is that in Illinois, the largest district of the union, the union officials have offered to agree to substantial changes in the working rules provided the $7.50 per day scale is nominally continued.

* * *

IN other words the officials have already agreed, without undertaking serious organization work in such fields as West Virginia, where non-union miners produce 40 per cent of the total national hituminous tonnage to what amounts to an actual reduction of wages and a worsening of working conditions. It is proposed that the miners do more work for the same money and under provisions that disregard rulings secured by union pressure over a long period of years.

SECONDLY, the Illinois proposal is new evidence showing that district agreements are to be substituted for one national agreement—a major principle for which the United Mine Workers has contended for years and the securing of which brought the union to the peak of its strength.

The coal barons are active. Not only is production being stimulated in big non-union fields like West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky, but at frequent intervals there are statements that former union mines are starting operations on a non-union basis. In the Western Pennsylvania and Ohio fields this is to be noted particularly. The reports of sums spent for coal and iron police coming from various sources shows a substantial increase which is in direct proportion to the strike-breaking activities of the coal barons.

FAR from attempting to arouse the rank and file of the union to the seriousness of the situation and raise the morale of the membership in conjunction with the advocacy of a militant program, the official leadership of the union seems to play down the necessity for struggle deliberately. There is as yet no organized campaign for strike relief nor any evidence of intention to do anything but wait from time to time to offer concessions to the coal barons.

* * *

IT is important to note that Illinois coal barons have rejected the offer of the union officialdom and continue to insist on a formal reduction of the wage scale. In addition to the desire for the larger profits which this would bring there is another motive actuating the coal barons in their insistence upon an actual reduction.

The coal barons know that any reduction of the Jacksonville scale will do two things:

One, seriously lower the morale of the union membership and two, make it very difficult for the union to offer sufficient inducements to the miners in the non-union fields to bring them into the union.

BRIEFLY, recent developments are conclusive proof that the coal barons are working deliberately for the destruction of the most important union in the American labor movement in these fields where it has either a strong foothold or is dominant, and to prevent any extension of its influence to non-union territories.

To such a program the suspension of work in union fields is not an effective reply and this too has already been shown. The offer of concessions to the coal barons by the union officialdom is proof that the union leadership recognizes this fact.

But it does not act on its knowledge. Its policy means death to the United Mine Workers of America and a crushing blow to the whole labor movement.

THE only elements in the union which have a clear idea of the seriousness of the crisis and the steps which must be taken to overcome it are the Communists and left wing. In addition there are immense masses of the membership which sense the danger and feel that the present officialdom is leading them straight to disaster.

That the officialdom is fearful that it may be called to account and has interpreted the signs of revolt in the Peoria convention excusively as a danger to its rule rather than as a guarantee of the will of the membership to struggle and make tremendous sacrifices in order to defeat the operators and save the union, is evident from the stoolpigeon attack on the Communist members of the union by Ellis Searles at a convention of bahbitts in the klan-ridden state of Indiana on June 21.

SEARLES, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal, has become a sort of weather-cock who, when he comes to rest after a period of rapid swiveling, rarely fails to point to some new atrocity which officialdom is about to inflict upon the membership.

In 1923 Searles handled an "exposure" of Communists and Communism, which was syndicated to the capitalist and official labor press and which was followed first by a campaign of persecutions and expulsions directed against the most loyal members of the union and later by the infamous "gentlemen's agreement" in connection with the Jacksonville contract to drive 200,000 miners out of the industry.

THIS was the beginning of the real decadence of the United Mine Workers which had been forecast by the expulsion of Alex Howat and his associates while in jail for resisting the union-smashing Kansas Industrial Court law.

Now, with the union forced to strike by the refusal of the coal barons to consider anything but a reduction of wages, and after there have been offers of district agreements and the abrogation of favorable working conditions by the union officialdom all of which have been refused by the cockeyed coal barons as a basis for settlement because they hope for still better (terms) Ellis Searles once more plays the role of police informer and tries to arouse public sentiment against the one section of the membership which has made not one single mistake in estimating the extent of the bankruptcy of officialdom—the Communist miners.

SEARLES resurrects the hoary lie that Communists were responsible for the armed struggle with gunmen and strikebreakers which took place at the Lester Strip mine near Herrin during the strike of 1922 in which the company tools were defeated. He says:

"During the miners' strike of 1922 nineteen paid Communist organizers were sent from Communist headquarters in Chicago to Herrin, Ill., and these nineteen paid plotters, aided by sixty-seven Communists who lived in Herrin, fomented and were responsible for the Herrin massacre in which more than a score of men were killed. It was all a part of the Communist plot to seize the United Mine Workers' strike and convert it into the beginning of an armed revolution against the government."

BEFORE we draw a conclusion or two from the fact that such accusations are made at this time, a few other things need to be said. In the first place, the headquarters of the Communist Party were not in Chicago in 1922 but were in New York.

This is however a minor error. But it is sufficient to show the utterly unprincipled character of the Searles' statement to recall that the Herrin battle was started by the shooting of a union miner by an imported gunman who fired from behind the barricade surrounding the Lester Strip mine.

It is also rather bad for Ellis Searles that all the union miners accused of taking part in the battle were acquitted by a jury in spite of the fact that the Illinois Chamber of Commerce raised a minimum of $50,000 to prosecute them.

IT is also interesting to note that John L. Lewis, in a written statement, accused Frank Farrington, then president of the Illinois district, of receiving $100,000 to allow the Lester mine to operate during the strike.

Farrington, deposed after having been discovered receiving $25,000 per year from the Peabody Coal Company while an officer of the union, is not even mentioned by Ellis Searles in connection with the struggle in Herrin. Searles prefers to continue to demand the noose for miners whom a jury refused to convict.

* * *

HAVING in mind the fact that attacks of this nature upon Communists have always been followed by some new attempt to betray the workers in general, we believe that the militants in the union must increase their vigilance and intensify the efforts to initiate organization campaigns, build up relief machinery, acquaint the membership with the grave danger which the union faces and to put the whole union on a fighting basis.

It is something more than a coincidence that the shameless outburst

Many Novelties Slated for Stadium Concerts

At least twenty-five novelties are announced for the Stadium concerts, which will begin their tenth season on Wednesday evening, July 9th. According to the preliminary programs submitted by Willem Van Hoogstraten, conductor, and Frederick A. Stock and Pierre Monteux, guest conductors, the following works, new to the Stadium repertoire, are to be played at the Lewisohn Stadium by the Philharmonic Orchestra this Summer: Alfven: Symphony No. 3; Bliss: Hymn to Apollo; Bloch: Three Jewish Poems; Casella: Suite from "La Giara;" Converse: Flivver Ten Million; Delius: Brigg Fair; Dopper: Gothic Chaconne; Dukas: La Peri; Bach-Elgar: Fantaisie and Fugue in C minor; Handel-Elgar: Overture in D. minor; Enesco: Rhapsody No. 2; Gershwin: Concerto in F; Gershwin: Rhapsody in Blue; Glazounow: Rases d'Armour; Hindemith: Concerto for Orchestra; Holst: Selections from "The Planets;" Lladow: Baba Yaga; Ravel: Valses Nobles et Sentimentales; Resnicek: Overture, "Donna Diana;" Schmitt: The Camp of Pompeii; Skilton: "Primeval" Suite; Tchaikovsky: "Thornrose" Suite; Prokofieff: Suite Scythe; Gretry-Mottl: Dance Suite.

Another addition to the repertoire this season will be Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with chorus and soloists. Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will also be performed, and there will be a special choral festival, conducted by Dr. Stock. Willem Van Hoogstraten will conduct for the first three weeks, Frederick A. Stock the fourth and fifth, Pierre Monteux the sixth, and Mr. Van Hoogstraten again for the final two weeks.

Broadway Briefs

Vincent Lawrence's new comedy, formerly called "The Conflict," has now been changed to "Among The Married." The play opens in Atlantic City on July 11. The cast includes Louis Calhern, Warren William, Helen Flint, Kathryn Givney, William David and Milano Tilden.

"Countess Maritza" will close its run at the Shubert Theatre this Saturday night. Texas Guinan and her new show "Padlocks" will open at the same house on Monday night.

"One For All," now housed at the Princess, will be transferred on Monday night to Wallack's Theatre.

Begining with next week, the matinees of "Crime," the Shipman-Hynes melodrama at the Times Square Theatre will be discontinued.

Searles in a Ku Klux Klan stronghold comes at a time when further offers of surrender are made to the coal barons by the officialdom of the Illinois district.

The purpose is plain. It is to shift attention from the fact that the union officialdom is not leading the union in effective struggle but is playing into the hands of the coal barons and is an attempt to throttle all opposition to this bankrupt leadership.

PRESS RIDICULES ANTICS OF POWERS AT NAVAL CONFAB

GENEVA, June 25.—Repeatedly deadlocked because of the conflicting claims of the three leading fleets, the naval conference of the five powers here are daily arriving at "agreements" which are promptly shelved, only to come up for discussion at the same time on the next day.

Lord Robert Cecil of Great Britain called on M. Calonal, the French observer, and called his attention to the pessimistic and sarcastic tone of the French press and pleaded with him to strive to stop the barrages of irony. The French agent promised to endeavor to correct this.

Americans and Japanese Confer.

Private interviews took place this morning between American and Japanese representatives, but no indication of the tone of the discussions were given out. However, it is known that the views are as far apart, as they were at first and no hope is held out for a compromise agreement.

Hugh Gibson, chief of the American delegation, held a conference with W. C. Bridgeman, chief of the British group, and simply announced that numerous plenary sessions would have to be held before a working basis could possibly be reached. Gibson, pressed, to have insisted upon the doors being thrown open at the plenary sessions.

MILITANTS FIGHT LOCAL CONTRACTS IN MINE LOCKOUT

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 25.—The "new strike policy" of the Lewis administration, the United Mine Workers of America is working out towards a resumption of work in gradually more and more mines on the basis of the nominal Jacksonville scale, with considerable concessions by the employers as to working conditions, and with a complete collapse of the unity of agreements—the men are going back in a considerable number of mines on contracts between the individual mine owners and the locals and subdistricts of the union.

The progressives, one of whose slogans in the last election of international officers was, "No Separate Agreements," protest this "new policy" pointing out that this policy of local agreements, "pending settlement of the strike" mean that all hope of a real strike in the future will disappear until these separate contracts can be ended, as with more and more coal being mined under local agreements, the time will come when all the more economical mining projects are at work, enough coal will be produced without ever calling off the lockout, and a large percentage of the membership of the union will be permanently barred from work. Such a situation is certain to lead to the use of these unemployed men for the purpose of cutting wages.

GANGSTERS ATTACK WORKERS WHEN THEY PARADE TO UNION OFFICES

to him was a large American flag that covered six windows.

When the right wingers, most of them not even members of the union, but typical east side gangsters, saw the approach of the workers they darted past the police and started to attack the cloak and dressmakers.

Gangsters Get Busy.

This front line of workers was comparatively small consisting of not more than 125 people so the gangsters having an advantage showed their bravery. But, altho fewer in number, the cloak and dressmakers met them blow for blow, driving them back to the protection of the police. When the police saw that the thugs were getting the worst of it they came to their assistance and started to club the small group of workers.

By this time the main body of marchers was turning into 25th St. from Lexington Ave., and faced the gangsters from the other side. Seeing that they were surrounded by indignant workers who heard of the cowardly attack they had launched on the small group of workers several minutes previously, the gangsters with the permission of the police started to beat up those workers who were nearest to them among the new arrivals.

Workers Defend Themselves.

The cloak and dressmakers retaliated for only a few minutes.

Twenty-fifth street resounded to the sound of blows being struck. True to their trade the gangsters took out blackjacks, the burglar's weapons, to hit the workers. The police joined in, beating the workers and protecting the thugs whenever a worker in the process of protecting himself was able to get the best of the argument.

Police Help Thugs.

Right opposite the two Joint Board buildings is the 71st National Guard Armory. Several policemen stood by its gate when a dozen gunmen beat several workers most brutally. When a few workers saw what was going on and came to their rescue, the police went into action. They did not molest the gunmen but continued beating up the workers where the gunmen had left off. In addition they beat up the other workers who had come to their rescue.

By this time the gangsters in general began to realize that ultimately they would go down into complete defeat. So seeing that they were getting licked they all began to rall upon the police to protect them.

Following out instructions, the police, who were now reenforced by reserves who had just arrived, started to attack the cloak and dressmakers and drive them back. Most of them went into the office of Local 2, while the gangsters, being protected by the police, sneaked into No. 130.

By this time the right wing gangster combine apparently realized that by attacking the peareful cloak and dressmaker marchers, they had bitten off more then they chew.

Right Wing Defeated.

In addition to being utterly defeated in the field of battle in spite of the police assistance, their "celebration" was broken up and many speakers who had prepared long red-baiting speeches had to go home without delivering them.

Before marching up to 25th St. the cloak and dressmakers held a three hour open forum at Cooper Union. Under the chairmanship of A. Lupin, more than a score of rank and file workers told of their experiences with the Sigman machine in the union. They explained how the right wingers are working in open cooperation with the bosses to beat down the working standards of the dress and cloakmakers.

The last two speakers were Ben Gold and Louis Hyman. Both of them were greeted with tremendous demonstrations from the workers.

MORGAN GANG IN MOVE TO CONTROL TRACTION SYSTEM

The fight between the Chase National Bank group in control of the Brooklyn-Transit Corporation, represented by Chairman Nathan L. Miller, and the Morgan and National City Bank group represented by Samuel Untermyer, goes merrily on.

Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the board of directors of the Chase National Bank and chairman of the finance committee of the board of the B.-M. T., admitted before the transit commission hearing that his corporation bought 19,800 shares of Interborough stock to save the B.-M. T. a voice in any negotiations by the city toward acquiring the Interborough.

Morgan Fights for Control.

The hearings before the transit commission are supposed to be for the purpose of protecting the 5-cent fare, but in reality the whole thing is a dirty financial and political conspiracy to pave the way for further gouging of the workers of the city of New York who use the traction lines by increasing the fare at an opportune time.

Untermyer, Tammanyite and Al. Smith booster, is like Smith an agent of Wall Street bankers. The game he is playing now is to consolidate the two lines under the domination of the Morgan banks and the Rockefeller controlled National City Bank. Then they will be unloaded onto the city at a price based upon the potential earning power of the property under increased rates. Bonds will be issued for this purpose that will be discounted by the big banks, thereby enabling the plunderers to rut a nice melon for themselves.

Chase Bank Crowd Fights.

As against this move on the part of the larger financial magnates, the Chadbourne-Dahl-Hedley-Quack enbor-hakers fights in order to maintain their own control. Wiggin, as one of the leaders of the Chase National Bank group was forced by Untermyer to admit that he endeavored to dominate the Interborough to keep it in the hands of his own group.

Police are Active.

The police were again over active yesterday morning in arresting groups of workers on a charge of obstructing traffic. There were 64 brought into Jefferson Market Court and released on bail for further hearing next Tuesday. It seems as tho the police could not bear the sight of a splendid, energetic picket line such as was present on every street of the fur market this morning. It always rouses them to greater use of their clubs and a spasm of arrests by two and threes, or singly, no matter how orderly the pirket line is.

Anna Isaacson, arrested Wednesday for distributing leaflets, was fined $5 yesterday morning by Magistrate Rosenbluth.

Paul Goodman, a worker assaulted Wednesday by the foreman of A. Weckerle & Sons' shop, Willy Rosenfeld, was arraigned yesterday morning on a charge of disorderly conduct—altho it was he who was cut and beaten. He was released on $500 bail until next Tuesday, and this same bail was set for the man who attacked him and who is charged with assault. It was with difficulty that the union obtained Rosenfeld's arrest, for the police had at first let him go free in spite of Goodman's complaint. Rosenfeld will also come up for further bearing next Tuesday.

Shop Chairmen's Meeting.

At a meeting of the shop chairmen held last night at Stuyvesant Casino, Ben Gold gave a report of the Washington "convention". Resolutions were passed condemning the action of the police, the courts and Gov. Smith in their attempt to break the furriers' strike. Another resolution was to Aaron Gross sympathizing with him on his brutal attack by the right wing gunmen.

The shop chairmen's council also went on record that all furriers who are working should pay their assessment regularly to help win the strike.

A mass meeting of Greek fur workers is to be held tonight at 6 p. m. in Bryant Hall, 6th avenue near 42nd street, to hear a report of the recent "convention" of the International. Ben Gold, John Papiunis and George Perdicardis will be among the speakers.

General T. U. U. L. Body Right After Work Will Be Held This Evening

The Trade Union Unity Council will hold a general meeting tonight at which the workers of all trades must be present. It will be held right after work at Webster Hall, 11th St. near Third Ave. No one must be absent as an important question will be taken up.

"Influence" Needed For Hospital Jobs, Bklyn Rabbi Says

"Political dynamite is necessary in order to obtain an appointment for a Jewish internee at the Kings County Hospital," charged Rabbi Louis Gross of Union Temple, Brooklyn, yesterday.

He asserted that Dr. M. C. Jones, superintendent of the hospital, told him frankly that he didn't think anyone with an "imperfect accent" ought to be appointed to a position in the institution.

Follows Attack.

As a result of the attack on the four Jewish internes on Monday, additional evidence of anti-semitism and discrimination by both doctors and nurses is being revealed.

BOOKS

AN ENERGETIC QUACK-HUNTER.

THE NEW MEDICAL FOLLIES, by Dr. Morris Fishbein. Boni and Liveright. $2.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, "The New Medical Follies" leading light in the American Medical Association and editor of their official organ, pursues his favorite diversion of tracking the wily health quacks to their lairs, dragging them figuratively forth and with his trusty scalpel revealing them in their true light to all those who can read and think. The others, those whose mental faculties ceased to develop around the age of twelve, will continue to patronise the quacks even should they be capable of digesting the facts and conclusions presented in Fishbein's well-written and easily-read book.

Those of you who have been low in spirits because of real or imaginary illness and were therefore inveigled into patronizing the various brands of quackery from the Christian Science mental suggestion, to the laying on of hands of the naturopath or the spine snapping of the chiropractor, are urged to invest a couple of dollars in Fishbein. It might save you a few hundred dollars in bed bills later on and incessant pestering from quacks who are in business only to serve humanity.

I have had some personal experience with half a dozen brands of quackery but I was amazed at the variety that Dr. Fishbein was able to muster in his book. Tho I have not read his first book on the same subject, "The Medical Follies", I understand that he introduced at least an equally formidable array of health charlatans in this volume.

After reading this book one comes to the conclusion that unless a layman has a broken leg, a toothache or fatty degeneration of the cerebrum he should keep away from doctors, take a week off and drink buttermilk. Not that buttermilk has any particular virtue, guaranteed to cure anything from corns to consumption, but it helps to kill time and keeps the stomach from craving for beer, near or distant. I have known invalids who recovered from their imaginary diseases after they had spent their savings on doctors and exhausted their credit and the generosity of the last quack they patronized. They had to stay home or go to work.

Space permitting, I would write an extended review of Fishbein's book, but it does not, so I will confine myself to a few observations and console myself for the involuntary repression by making a vow to write a small book about quacks and non-quacks.

Fishbein does not confine himself to perforating the pretensions of the homeopaths, osteopaths, and the various offshoots of the parent quackery but he digs his medical heel into the eyes of the food fakers and marshalls enough facts on the subject to make every lettuce-eating fanatic from here to Los Angeles flee for cover. Not that Dr. Fishbein is not partial to lettuce, figs, carrots and dried bananas but he opines quite correctly that all human beings are not alike in their intestinal requirements any more than they are partial to the same kind of mental fodder. Numerous superstitions are hidden behind the cloak of science and thousands of radicals have fallen for the jargon of quackery simply because they cock their ears when the word science is mentioned. Yes, they cock their ears and give their brains an aspirin tablet.

Even tho the radicals who may be saved considerable money by following the sound reasoning to be found in Fishbein's book do not contribute their savings to The DAILY WORKER, they are welcome to it just the same. If they wrap themselves around a good meal occasionally they will have some energy left to distribute leaflets and even if they do nothing but massage the lines of woe from their countenances it will be a gain for their associates.

Those who have had experience with the mechanical junk that the clever old fraud, Dr. Albert Abrams of California, put over on the gullible section of the public will be tickled with the job Fishbein has done on this quack who left in the vicinity of a million dollars behind him when he passed away. A battle raged over this frand for a number of years and the maehine business had a new lease of life while the spasm lasted. Among those that leaped to the defense of Abrams and his bokum was Upton Sinclair, who after a fifteen-minute investigation gobbled Abram's theory tho it is doubtful if he tried it on himself. But Sinclair has survived more follies than there are in Dr. Fishbein's latest book.

The Freudians come in for a few well-merited cuffs at the hands of Dr. Fishbein. A few years ago this cult was on every tongue and it was as much as one's reputation was worth to essay a pleasantry in the presence of some seventeen-year-old emancipated woman who got her thrills out of the omnipresent sex complex. But since sufficient unto this day is the science thereof and Freud and the other psychoanalytic quacks are now as discredited as King Benjamin of the House of David, tho their credit is good at the banks thanks to the plentiful crop of suckers that this fertile country produces.

There is no guaranteed way of saving the gullible people from new fangled health quackeries. Give me the old "medic" every time, even tho he might prescribe an operation on my knee for enlargement of the heart. He may be as ignorant as a Kentucky hill-billy and as greasy as a cobbler but he is not a freak, even tho he will surely like his fee. But doctors must live and at least one and one-half per cent of them are honest. I would rather be poisoned by one of them with rose-tinted water than cured by a quack who insists that I can live forever if I only follow his advice and sign a health contract with him.

Entertaining considerable doubt about the altruism of most morbis, I must admit that from my own personal experience the medical profession has within its ranks more intelligent persons than any other with which I am acquainted except the journalistic profession. And from the general blanket denunciation of quacks and 98½ per cent of the medics I exclude the dentists with the exception of those that promise to extract your teeth without causing you pain. This has nothing to do with the case but I visited a dentist only three times in my life and methinks I will have to do it again.

STREETS AND FLAGS AND UNDERTAKER'S CHILDREN.

RED FLAG, by Lola Ridge. The Viking Press, New York. $1.50.

Lola Ridge has had three books of poems in her sure, terse, clipped music, published: The Ghetto, 1918; Sun-up, 1920, and now Red Flag. She waited seven years to wave this last rebellious banner. It is worth It all right. In seven years her fire has not cooled. The last book is as vehement, restrained, and tender as the first.

The critics are glad that Miss Ridge has not faltered, that she is still rebellious. They are glad that Red Flag spells an advance in technique. They say: "This new volume marks a distinct advance in technical achievement, in versatility, in skilful condensation and in brilliance, novelty, and vigor of poetic treatment." They say of Lola Ridge: " . . . her name is written over all these pieces. Her breath flutters through them. They throb with her heartbeat. . . . The poet of The Ghetto found her stride long since and she does not falter now. . . ."

What of it? These poems are workers' poems and they are real. I am satisfied that the flag still flies so stirringly. Why should this poet of the proletariat falter now? Is there less need of her? Is there today any decreased demand for poets who can stir the hearts, souls, and tissue of the working class to make their lives glorious and rebellious? Has Lola Ridge grown rich and soft that the critics would expect smugness and equivocation of her.

Miss Ridge is not worrying about any loss of fire. In the poem Re-birth she says;

"Though your wild dreams
May die perhaps on the cemented stone
That they have cracked asunder . . . making way
For lopped things trampled in the dust and blood
Of the year's barricades . . . and hopes that died
Alone against black walls . . . yet what new growths
Shall break in the old ground when spring is warm
Against the cobbled ways . . . and all the green
Battened down dreams of the world quickening . . .
Like spirals of aborted pines that strain
To touch their lips with stars."

I celebrate the fact that here is a poet of the working man who is capable of that trimmed unsentimental song.

There are certain poets who specialize in sentimental studies of how the other half lives: Self-conscious writers of rhymed tracts who say: "Oh, see the poor, poor people! How they suffer! Wa must do something about it, don't you know!"

That is not Lola Ridge's way. She has restraint and a sense of humor as well as passion and seriousness. She has reality. She has lived outside of glass houses. She knows wounds. Her poems reveal even while she hides to cover. Read Ward X, Solo, Veteran, the magnificent Kelvin Barry, Sleeping Ride (sung in newspaper headlines), Historiettes (on early Chicago

The Lunch Hour -- Building Organization

Professional Patriots

It is very illuminating and somewhat amusing to read the names of some of those on the "Red list" of the professional patrioteering societies. Among those cited by these zealous 100 per centers are: F. H. La Guardia, republican congressman; William Green, president of the A. F. of L., Walter Lippmann, editor of "The World," and Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of "The Nation."

It is significant, however, to note that Attorney-General Daugherty regarded Miss Maxwell's achievement kindly, writing her, "I do not know how I should have got along without it." And it is reliably reported that Mr. R. M. Whitney of the American Defense Society urged that she be granted the Distinguished Service Medal!

The Lusk Committee

The so-called Lusk Committee to investigate "revolutionary activities" illustrates relationship of the professional patriots to the government of a single state. It was appointed by authority of a resolution of the New York Legislature in March, 1919, as a result of the efforts of a committee of the Union League Club of New York headed by a young lawyer, Archibald E. Stevenson. It took its popular name from its chairman, Senator Clayton R. Lusk. Its formidable official title was "Report of the Joint Legislative Committee Investigating Seditious Activities." For over a year this committee pursued a romantic and spectacular course of unearthing conspiracies to overthrow the government. It wound up in almost universal discredit because of overplaying the game, unable to make good on its lurid charges. Its chief case was thrown out of the courts, the two laws it sponsored for the control of the loyalty of schools and teachers in New York were repealed by the legislature in 1923 and its part in throwing out of the legislature of 1920 the five duly elected Socialist assemblymen was condemned throughout the country. Senator Lusk was shortly after publicly discredited for accepting an expensive gift of a silver service from lobbyists for the New York police, who were seeking a legislative raise in pay. He retired to private life.

The committee deserves attention now only because its monumental four-volume report on "Revolutionary Radicalism" still serves as a source-book, a virtual Bible for the professional patriots, despite its gross exaggerations and misstatements, its solamn nonsense and its classification of all progressive groups as reds. The four volumes are divided into Parts 1 and 2, "Subversive Movements," Parts 3 and 4, "Constructive Measures." They total 10,963 pages. The book cost the state over $100,000 to prepare and print. Copies were distributed to libraries, patriotic organizations, officials, educators and men and women in public life.

The committee from the start was dominated by its assistant counsel, Mr. Stevenson, who did the prodigious amount of work (at a good compensation) which the committee's activities and editorial efforts required. Mr. Stevenson brought to the committee a sincere zeal as the savior of American institutions menaced by pacifism and Bolshevism. He had devoted himself during the war to secret service work for the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department, enlisting the aid of a group of wealthy young men in the Union League Club as volunteers. He served himself only in a voluntary capacity under Captain Trevor of the New York office. When he appeared 3 January, 1919, before a United States senate sub-committee then investigating "Bolshevism," he produced the results of his researches into radicalism and pacifism, creating a sensation by reading into the record a list of 62 persons holding "dangerous, destructive and anarchistic sentiments," among them Jane Addams, Bishop Paul Jones, Dr. David Starr Jordan, Prof. George W. Kirchwey and Lillian D. Wald. He was promptly repudiated by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, who issued this statement:

"I am in receipt of telegrams and letters with regard to a list of persons handed to the senate committee by Mr. Archibald Stevenson, who is represented in newspaper articles as a member of the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department. Mr. Stevenson has never been an employe or an officer of the M. I. D. of the War Department. I am told that he and a number of his associates have throughout the war sought to analyze books and newspaper comments to ascertain the tendencies of the opinions of their writers toward the war. I personally have no sympathy with the publication of lists of persons classified with reference to their supposed opinions, and grouped under general designations, such as 'pacifists,' which may mean any one of a dozen things, some of them quite consistent with the finest loyalty to the country and some of them inconsistent with such loyalty.

"As a matter of fact the War Department does not undertake to censor the opinions of the people of the United States. It has no authority to classify such opinions. In the particular list accredited to Mr. Stevenson, there are names of people of great distinction, exalted purity of purpose, and lifelong devotion to the highest interests of America and mankind. Miss Jane Addams, for instance, lends dignity and greatness to any list in which her name appears." (New York "Times," January 28, 1919.)

Undaunted, Mr. Stevenson pegged away with his Union League backing, and succeeded in getting the Lusk Committee established under the following resolution of the legislature:

"Whereas, it is a matter of public knowledge that there is a large number of persons within the State of New York circulating propaganda calculated to set in motion forces to overthrow the government of this State and the United States, and

"Whereas, sufficient facts were adduced by the subcommittee of the United States Senate Investigating this subject during the last session of Congress to indicate the necessity of further inquiry and action, and

"Whereas, it is the duty of the Legislature of the State of New York to learn the whole truth regarding these seditious activities, and to pass, when such truth is ascertained, such legislation as may be necessary to protect the government of the State and to insure the maintenance of rights of its citizens, now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that a joint committee of the Senate and Assembly be and hereby is created, to consist of four members of the Senate appointed by the Speaker of the Assembly, of which joint committee the Temporary President of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly shall be members ex officio, to investigate the scope, tendencies, and ramifications of such seditious activities, and to report the result of its investigation to the Legislature."

It is useless now to go into the story of the Committee's spectacular raids on radical headquarters, its fantastic prophecies and charges, its illegal and high-handed seizures of property and examination of witnesses. It is enough to summarize the net results of the Committee's two years of activity at great expense to the state.

1st. Its raids on the Soviet business offices in New York, on the Rand School and on the Russian People's House produced no convictions in the courts, indeed, no incriminating evidence against any one—and achieved nothing to justify the Committee's charges of a conspiracy against the Government.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER VIII.

Duties of Leading Committees.

While contact with the working masses is a prerequisite for leadership by the Communist Party itself, the same holds true, and perhaps more so, within the Party. The leading committees must therefore establish the closest possible contact with the lower units. The function of local executive committees consist of more than merely to run entertainments now and then or to arrange meetings. Practical experiences have shown, with sufficient clarity, that unless such committees actually guide the local units in application of Party policies, in directing local campaigns and local activities, the Party as a whole will not function properly.

It is therefore imperative that these executive committees thoroughly systematize their own work and co-ordinate the activities of the lower units within their territory. Mere sporadic work will not do but the persistent hammering away together with our members always being in the front ranks of the class struggle will help to establish Party leadership in the working class movement. To properly systematize its work, these committees should first of all be departmentalized.

A local executive, section or subsection executive committee should in all cases have the following departments:

Organization Department.
Trade Union Department.
Agit-Prop Department.

The function of the Organization Department should not merely be the technical transfer of comrades from one nucleus to another. It should rather be one of constant building of the lower units thru organizational measures. This department should watch the organizational function of the lower units and their executive committees. Where they are found weak and not well functioning, they should be strengthened by assigning comrades with initiative.

This department should take care that all non-active Party members are being constantly visited and all efforts used to draw them into activities. It should outline the methods for constant efforts to gain new members, see that sympathetic elements are drawn closer, given Party material and thay be asked to become members. The Organization Department should also assign the territory of the various units for literature distribution and for general canvassing as well as union meetings and shops for literature sales, etc.

Direction of Trade Union Work.

The Trade Union Department will have many important functions. The majority of our members do not as yet belong to the trade unions. Many of them are eligible now, others can become eligible. In some cases union membership may involve taking the initiative to form new unions. The first and foremost duty of this department therefore becomes the one of assisting our members to join the unions. It must gather all the necessary information, show our comrades how to go about the joining and get them interested by showing the great possibilities for work in this field. In certain cases, it may even have to help provide the necessary money for initiation fees.

This department should check up on attendance and activities of our members in the unions, in the Party fractions, and in the left wing groups. It should be responsible that such organizations, fraction and left wing groups are established and that they actually function. The Trade Union Department should direct the application of the Party policies in the various unions, help to formulate the practical slogans and give concrete expression to the issues of the day. Thru such correct formulation it should help find the ways and means for the correct approach to the broadest possible masses of the union membership in general and the progressive and live trade union elements in particular.

This should not be mis-interpreted to mean that the Trade Union Department for instance of a section or sub-section committee would have full jurisdiction with one local union in their particular territory which may be only one small part of the union of the trade as a whole in the city. Naturally the City Committee will direct the policies on a city-wide scale.

Agit-Prop Work.

The Agit-Prop Department of the leading committees should take full charge of directing the training courses carried on in the lower units and thru the Party schools. It should take full charge of the propaganda and agitation part of our Party campaigns in its local application, arrange meetings, furnish the proper material for the Party press and circularize the necessary Party literature.

The Agit-Prop Department should assist and supervise the issuance of shop bulletins in shops within their territory. It should guide the editorial policy of these bulletins so that Party policies become concretely and practically expressed in the columns, in a language appropriate to the masses and based on the problems in the shops. The Agit-Prop Department should also take care that worker correspondents are on the job, both Party members and, wherever possible, non-Party members.

It should, of course, be understood that none of these departments mentioned formulate their own policies or their own tactics in directing Party work. The leading executive committee will do that and assign the particular part to each department to work out in detail and carry out. The number of members composing the various departments will, of course, depend on the size of the committee. However, in each case the organiser-secretary should be the head of the organization department, the industrial organizer the head of the trade union department, and the agit-prop director the head of the agit-prop department.

Cal Thinks Nicaragua Liberals Baited; Calls Marines to Crush Haiti

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Withdrawal of 1,500 marines from Nicaragua is contemplated in the near future by the navy department, it was learned today. Of this number 650 would be returned to Quantico, Va., 300 sent to San Diego and 350 to Haiti.

The remainder of the present expeditionary force will be kept there indefinitely, it is understood.

radicals), the bitter and awful sonnet Electrocution, the Fifth Floor Window, Lagrimjape ("The undertaker's children play hide-and-seek in tall wooden boxes coffins come in"), Phyllis (the story of a pathetic little girl of the streets), and the tender personification in The Ailanthus Tree, which, "swarming with sparrows, squats like a begger at back doors." The poem Phyllis is reminiscent of T. S. Elliot.

Annunciation speaks of violets and the word "cyclept" is found in "After the Recital." Sometimes Miss Ridge does not avoid a fulsome womanly sentimentality, as in To the Free Children. But the let-downs are few. And to balance them there is stern disciplined writing free from pyrotechnics and impressionistic rioting.

Miss Ridge does not write poems to larks and daffodils when bugles are calling. She has produced a book that is vital, restrained, and full of meaning. Every class-conscious worker should read Red Flag, and the capitalists too. They could skip the part about Russia, or read it with one eye guarded, if they insist.

DRAMA

Soviet Union on the Music Ascendant

That the present moment in Russia should find music on the ascendant and contribute an outstanding master to the world, was the hope expressed by Olin Downes, noted music critic, in a lecture on "Contemporary Russian Composers" at the Roerich Museum, last week.

"Although one of the youngest countries" he said, in the actual lapse of its musical history, Russia has contributed one of the most dynamic musical arts to world history. There seems to be three stages in the history of every racial music. First, the stage when the music is the music of the folk, sprung from the soil of a country, and outpouring of the popular soul.

"Second is the stage when composers weave around the folk music the art convention, consciously talented, the folk music itself, as a basis. This stage is extremely rare outside of Russia, in which the composer has built up an entirely new structure, retaining the folk music in its substantially full of the feeling of the soil, that it seems to be as true and spontaneous as any folk music.

"The third stage, Russia has passed the first two stages and is emerging into the third. Perhaps before discussing contemporary Russian composers, it would be best to return briefly to the past. Glancing over Russia's folk music, we may say that perhaps there is no nation which has such a treasury of folk song as Russia. Ranging from the Ukranian across her vast spaces there has sprung from the soul of the people a wealth of melody and beauty of folk music, that perhaps any nation has ever seen. As musical history goes, it is but comparatively recently that Glinka came and he called the first of Russia's composer art writers, wrote around the folk music the "Life for the Tsar," which opened up a new era in Russian music.

Mr. Downes also spoke of Dargomizky, Glinka's contemporary, and also of "The Five"—Balakirev, Korsakoff, Moussorgsky, Borodine, Cui and, also of the great cosmopolitan Tchaikowsky. It was in the three leading figures of today that he found the high flowering of Russia's art in composition — Stravinsky, Prokofieff and Miaskovsky. Of the three, it was Stravinsky who stood out as one of the greatest musical forces. Analyzing the three works of Stravinsky, "Oiseau de Feu," "Petrouchka" and "Sacre du Printemps" on the libretto given by Nicholas Roerich, Mr. Downes showed their tremendous influence on all contemporary art. "It is amazing in "Sacre du Printemps," how Stravinsky found within himself those mysterious rhythm, some essential dynamic force.

Of Prokofieff, Mr. Downes expressed profound admiration for some of his works, while he distrusted others, the results of experiment and mastery of technique rather than mastery. Of Miaskovsky he found the greatest and restored by the influence of European suggestion." But it is in the present music that Russia's genius will emerge in its fullness who will bring young Russia to the older stages of its development, and to come to Wagner who will present great works, but based consciously on the folk music of a country, but so essential to the soil of a country, so spontaneous and overflowing, as to become a true and inspiration produced through the medium of a genius.

Robert Milton has in mind a drama and version of "Enemy Gentry" the famous 1776 Revolutionary Soldier, Bayard Wilkinson, of the Constitution.

Broadway Briefs

And here is another Negro musical show being prepared. This one, title "Rang Tang," will have Miller and Lyles heading the cast. The production is scheduled to open Tuesday July 12, at Chanin's Royale Theatre. Kay Gant wrote the book, Ford Dabney the music and Jo Trent the lyrics.

"Madame X," adapted by John Raphael, from the French of Alexandre Bisson, will be the next popular priced revival of Murray Phillips, and is due here in two weeks, probably at the George M. Cohan Theatre. The play created quite a hit when produced in 1909. Carol McComas will play the title role, with Rex Cherryman in the principal male role.

"Kiss Me," J. J. Levinson's musical comedy will open at the Lyric Theatre, July 11. Desiree Ellinger, Joseph Macaulay, Arthur Campbell and Vivian Marlow head the cast.

Skowhegan, Maine will witness the premiere of "Better to Marry" by Sophie Treadwell which the Ladywood Players will produce beginning Monday. The cast includes Harold Vermilyea, Ellen Dorr, Robert Hudson, John Daly Murphy, Wright Kramer, Nedda Harrigan, Brandon Peters, Ruth Gates, William Barry and Laura Carpenter. Crosby Gaige may do the play here.

Sam H. Harris is placing in rehearsal on Monday "The Conflict," a new comedy by Vincent Lawrence. The cast includes Warren William, Louis Calhern, Helen Flint, Kathryn Givney, William David and Milano Tilden.

Booth Tarkington's, "The Plutocrat," will be dramatised by Tom Cushing, author of "The Devil in the Cheese," as a starring vehicle for Charles Cobern.

Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," will evolve next season into a musical show sponsored by Low Fields and Lyle D. Andrews. Herbert Fields, Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart are doing the book, score and lyrics.

A. E. and R. E. Rislkin have accepted a play called "The Golden Age," by Lester Lonergan, and Charleton Andrews, author of "Get Me in the Movies," and plans to stage it early in the Fall.

The Sparring Match at Geneva

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE three principal sea powers of the world: the United States, Great Britain and Japan are in session at Geneva, the seat of the League of Nations, with the avowed purpose of trying to arrive at a solution of the race for naval supremacy which is being feverishly contested by those three powers under various subterfuges.

Looking on with a pair of cynical grins on their sinister faces are France and Italy.

It should be stated emphatically at the outset that no intelligent observer of current affairs will for a moment be fooled into the delusion that the powers are in earnest about their professions of devotion to the cause of world peace or that the present conference has any other aim than an attempt on the part of each participating power to steal a march on the other.

The present conference was called on the initiative of the United States government, the same government that made the peace gesture at the Washington conference in 1921. Between the lines of the pacific speeches made by the American delegates to the Geneva conference can be read a threat, which implies that unless the other powers accept the American program, the United States will build a navy second to none on the seas.

Since the Washington conference which established the 5-5-3 ratio for the United States, England and Japan, our naval aristocracy and the battleship and armament manufacturers have been yelling that the United States was fooled into scrapping more naval tonnage than Japan and England combined and entered into other agreements which hamstrung the U. S. naval program and reduced the standing of the navy to below that of Japan's.

This is the cry of the militarists and navalists of all countries, but it seems to be obvious that Great Britain, since 1921 has been building cruisers at a feverish rate even during the term of office of the alleged pacifist James Ramasy MacDonald.

What happened at the Washington conference is, that in return for scrapping the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the United States made certain concessions to Great Britain which left the empire in possession of naval supremacy for the time being. The restriction on gun elevation was not observed by England and this infraction was winked at by the United States, knowing that there would be another conference and another deal when the time was more propitious. That time has arrived and the United States has less reason to fear Japan today than it had in 1921.

The world importance of the United States has increased tremendously since the war. The power of Great Britain has relatively decreased. Japan is holding a precarious toehold in the Orient with the long slumbering Chinese millions in political volcanic eruption.

The Washington conference placed a limit on the building of battleships and airplane carriers. The United States would now limit the tonnage of cruisers and all other auxiliary ships.

In brief the program of the United States is the following: A proposed tonnage limitation on cruisers of: 250,000 to 300,000 tons for the United States; the same tonnage for the British empire and 150,000 to 180,000 for Japan.

In the submarine class the United States' tonnage would be from 60,000 to 90,000 tons, the same for the British empire and from 36,000 to 54,000 tons for Japan.

Against this program the British propose to reduce the maximum battleship tonnage from 35,000 to less than 30,000; main battleship guns from 16-inch to 13.5-inch, of aircraft carrier tonnage from 27,000 to 25,000; of cruiser tonnage from 10,000 to 7,500 and of cruiser guns from 8-inch to 6-inch.

The Japanese proposed a "naval holiday" and non-restriction of the building of vessels of small tonnage and aircraft carriers under 10,000 tons.

Thus the "friends" of peace haggle for position.

The aims of the British are clear. As one writer points out she aims at retaining her preponderant supremacy on the sea by discouraging the building of war vessels by other nations with a wide cruising radius. This is the explanation of her proposal for a reduction of cruiser tonnage from 10,000 to 7,500. Owing to the string of naval bases which Britain has all over the globe her ships do not need the fuel capacity that is required by American naval vessels, whose bases are fewer and farther apart. Also the British suggestion that the calibre of guns permissible on cruisers should be reduced from 8 to 6-inches, is due to the fact that merchant vessels are not built to carry guns of greater than 6-inch calibre. Should this proposition be accepted Britain's 950,000 tons of merchant fleet with a speed of 17½ knots or more would be able to thumb its nose at the world.

Of course the American sea lords will not be taken in by the specious arguments put forward by Great Britain and Japan. It is a long time since Mark Twain sent his American innocents abroad. If anybody concludes that there is any virtue running around looking for a chronicler in Geneva he is easily guiled. They are all alike and partners in culpability.

William Howard Gardiner, writing in the New York Times of June 20, gives expression to the following significant language in a peroration to a letter on the naval conference at Geneva:

"England's real task and ours is each to play our full part in the maintenance of our civilization—and to help each other to do so. As we look ont over the world from our great, mid-oceanic base, we incline to prize England's friendship perhaps more than that of any other country. But is not American friendship incomparably more valuable to the scattered British world than English friendship is to our mighty concentration? And will not England's apparent policy at Geneva militate against that maximum of American friendship and support she inevitably will need above all else before this century closes?"

This is the veiled threat that is behind the pacific language of the United States government. The same hostility can be detected in the polite diplomatic verbiage of the British foreign office. The international pirates are preparing to deluge the world in blood again over a division of markets and spheres of influence. They cannot come to terms. If they could they would hop on the Soviet Union and attempt to strangle it.

While the three great naval powers are confabbing at Geneva word comes from Paris that the French government has decided to appropriate $35,000,000 for cruisers, submarines, destroyers and mine layers.

The war left the United States sitting on top of the world. Our ruling class intends to stay there. The die-hard tories that now dominate the British government are following an intransigeant imperialist policy all over the world. They would regain the position of world domination that was snatched from them in the smoke of a common battle by the western empire. Despite a common language and other ties, all signs point to a bitter struggle for world supremacy between the two great imperialist powers unless the workingclass of both countries and of the world organize to prevent another world holocaust by taking government power out of the hands of the plunderers who now look upon the masses as cannon fodder, and follow the example of their Russian comrades in laying the foundation for a world federation of Soviet Republics.

A Scab Passes Out

By CHARLIE BYRNE

DURING the Great Steel Strike of 1919 John Barton was one of the few workers in his locality who remained loyal to the company. Very much against his will he had to stay away from the mill a few weeks. He, alone, would be no use to the company since one pair of hands could not take the place of several hundred.

John was watching a chance to muster a band of "Loyalists." He seized every opportunity of expressing his disapproval of the strike. He continuously denounced its leaders and anticipated its defeat. He endeavored to create dissension and tried to play the role of a defeatist, but did not know how to do it in an able a manner as the more skilled and better trained company hacks and stool pigeons.

Finally he found five or six workers who were staggering beneath the cruel lash of economic determinism. They were ready for anything. Anything that would increase their immediate food supply and alleviate their domestic turmoil.

With an unconcealed facial expression of satisfaction John proposed, "Let us go see the employment agent before it is too late." This was a move the others detested and feared, but, yet the fear of not making it was too strong to be successfully resisted.

Next morning five of them went to see the employment agent. John, the self-appointed spokesman, takes the lead, offers apologies and asks for reinstatement. After a brief lecture the agent agrees to forgive them and hands them over to four gun-waving policemen who escorted them to the super's office.

The super smiled for the first time in their presence. "Go in," he said, "and start the furnace. All you will have to do is keep smoke going up during the hours of daylight. You boys are in for all promotions and will have a steady job the rest of your lives."

Several weeks were spent making smoke. The local newspapers used headlines and several front page columns stating the mill had resumed operations and falsely asserting that several out-of-town mills were working one hundred per cent. Crude and old-fashioned like this propaganda was it had a severe effect on some well-meaning but non-thinking workers.

In several months after the strike John went to work as tender on the side shears. This paid one dollar a day more than his previous job. Figuring on so many days' work in the year at this new job he bought a home on the installment plan.

John, his wife Esther and their three children moved to their new home in a "respectable part of the city." Esther, like her husband was a vociferate "one hundred percenter." She continuously pointed to Ford and Carnegie as examples that all should follow. "Any one can become a millionaire if he only has ability and ambition" were some of the daily sayings of John and Esther.

One Saturday afternoon the foreman notified the men that some changes in the machinery were to be made the following week and therefore the mill would be down until further notice.

Three weeks passed before this much-looked-for notice was posted at the gate.

Great was the surprise that awaited the men on their return to the mill. New and much larger rolls were in operation. The table was five feet wider than it used to be. A new large shears stood at the end of the first table. The old side shears around which fourteen men used to work was nowhere to be seen.

The whistle blows twice. The machinery gets in action. A slab drops from the furnace to the rolling table. It quickly becomes a plate and rolls on to the shears at the other end of the table. It is sheared and continues to roll on to where it is lifted by a crane into the car.

The amazed workers could not believe their eyes. Could not see how this was possible. Just by changing the machinery the company now only required twelve men to produce twice as much as fifty could turn out before.

"Boys, I'm sorry, we have nothing for you to do," said the super. "However, we will let you know when we have an opening." "Mr.," remarked John, "don't you remember I worked during the strike." "Shut-up," snarled the super, "I'm running this place: so now get out of here before I call a policeman to have you taken out."

On their way home John and his pals met Andy, who since the strike, had been black-balled in the mill and was well-known as a Red.

"What's wrong now? Won't the company let willing slaves like you guys work for it any more?" asked Andy in a mocking manner. "It's the machinery, that cursed new machinery that has thrown us out of a job. I don't know what the world is coming to," was John's crying reply.

"Things are only pursuing their natural course," retorted Andy. "Machinery will ultimately throw millions of people out of work. Unemployment and hunger will fan the flaming fires of revolt and will finally send capitalism to the scrap heap. Machinery is not cursed. It's good, but it must be used for the benefit of us workers, instead of to our disadvantage. I am saying this because I know there are several clean minds and noble hearts in this crowd and NOT because I want to make any impression on a traitor like you. Good bye, Benedict Arnold. I hope the company gives you lots of the medicine you helped it prepare."

One day, after three months of seeking employment, John was hired as a laborer, providing of course, that he passed the doctor. After a few minutes examination the doctor declared John unfit to be employed. This added to his troubles. Now his health was gone. He had nothing to hope for. "The new shears did it all," was his continuous wail.

The real estate dealer has a dispossess served on him the following week. His insurance policies have long since lapsed. Even his dog deserted and went to seek a master from whom he would get food.

"Why should I continue in such misery? Death is staring me in the face. Why prolong the agony?" he asked himself over and over again as he watched Esther and the children sleeping. Their frail bodies and pale faces clearly indicated the long days and nights of hunger and destitution through which had passed both he and them.

"No, it's no use," he said as he stepped out of the bed, closed the windows tight and opened all the gas jets. "That's that," he muttered as he stretched himself out on the floor.

BEWARE, MADMAN!

By SAMUEL A. HERMAN.

Beware, madman, beware!
You, who so freely shake a fist at the Red Dawn,
Who fume and curse and threaten,
Who strut upon the stage of twentieth century history
Like a madman broken loose,
Enabling savage cries that startle the ear,
Borrowed like a dress suit for occasion,
From your colonial jungles.

Beware, madman, beware!
You, who would light the match of war,
To destroy the builders of the future;
Who are laying diabolical plans,
To stoke the emaciated bodies
Of the starving miners and the unemployed.
Into battalions of steel, ready to march
In the direction of your outstretched finger.

Beware, madman, beware!
Look your wretched slaves of yesterday,
Refuse compliance with your command,
And facing you with gleaming bayonets, say:
"We are not mercenaries for hire,
We refuse to march where you desire,
Not they, but you, are our real foe,
And are to blame for all our woe!"

Beware, madman, beware!
Look at the far-flung eastern sky,
Where the artistry of a rising sun,
Had painted countless crimson streaks
Upon a spacious canvas of blue!
Can the sky above be an inverted sea,
And its myriad crimson streaks,
Be a reflection of Red Army men below?

Beware, John Bull, beware!

An Invitation and a Few Suggestions

The Saturday magazine supplement of The DAILY WORKER welcomes contributions from its readers. Stories, articles, cartoons and poetry will be given consideration with a view to publication. This does not imply that everything submitted will see the light of the newsstands. Neither do we guarantee that all rejected manuscripts will be returned even when self-addressed and stamped envelopes accompany the contributions. We will do the best we can to return rejected manuscripts, but sometimes accidents happen.

A few words for the benefit of our poets. We are not prudish by any means, but we notice that poets between the ages of 12 and 17 are inclined to get rough with the English language and addicted to painting pictures of the horrors of capitalism with a brush steeped in sex phraseology. Perhaps this phenomenon is not difficult of explanation, but we must be pardoned for discouraging our youngsters from following this path to fame.

AEROPLANES AND WAR

The aeroplane is a wonderful invention. It is just like a bird flying—oh so high in the sky. With the help of the aeroplane, the human race could advance itself a great deal. Trips to the north pole, south pole, over forests, mountains, swamps and even across oceans are now quite possible. Thru these trips many interesting things could be learned about the world we live in. Furthermore, in case of disasters, such as floods, earthquakes and storms, that cut off railroads and destroy all roads, it is possible to help save the unfortunate people living there with the help of the aeroplane. Surely everyone must admit that the aeroplane is a wonderful invention. But—wait a minute, there are other uses of the aeroplane.

We must not forget, comrades, that we are living in a time when almost all countries in this world are ruled by greedy capitalists, who continually fight amongst themselves for the right to enslave weaker nations. Of course, the capitalists themselves don't fight. They declare war and the workers and farmers are sent to the battlefields to fight and die for them. But, with the coming of aeroplanes, now, WHILE world becomes a battlefield. From a position of safety, high up above the clouds, a little speck will drop explosives and bombs, killing and wounding thousands of innocent children, and women who happened to be on the streets. Whole cities will be destroyed in this fashion. This wonderful invention, the aeroplane, becomes the most terrible monster this world has ever seen. And this dear comrades, will be so until the workers and poor farmers rise up against their enemies, the capitalists and organize their own government as the workers and peasants of Russia have done.

Then and then only will the aeroplane be a bird of peace instead of a monster of war.

Our Letter Box

Capitalist Bunk

Dear Comrades: I read in the newspapers that Coolidge called a disarming conference with the other big powers. The other powers do not believe in disarming, so they did not accept it. I know it myself, that it is the bunk, because they are building a new aeroplane shop here in Garwood. I think they can use it in war any time they want to. This is the way the American capitalists mean peace.

Mother and Father Work

Dear Comrades:: I am writing a few lines about my school. My mother is working. She has to get up at 6 o'clock. She has to eat breakfast quickly or else be late. We have to go to school at 7 o'clock. I am 10 years old, second sister is 8 years and my younger sister is 5 years. I have to make the breakfast for my younger sisters. The quickest breakfast I can make is tea. We clean the table, make the beds, sweep the floor and wash the dishes. Then half past eight we get ready to go to school. Then I come home for dinner and I don't find my mother home. Then I have to rush to make dinner for my father and sisters. It makes it very hard for us because my father and mother don't make enough.

—JENNIE LUKASHEWICH.

A Poor Girl

A girl about twelve years old was walking down a street. As she was walking two well dressed girls passed her. They laughed at her because she had old clothes on. She went back home and told her mother about those two girls laughing at her. Her mother told her they were the bosses' girls. She told her daughter how they treat the poor men who worked for them. She said there will come a day when we will treat them as they are treating us.

THE ROSE BUSH

(From Fairy Tales for Workers' Children)

The man went back to his work and the Rose-bush began to meditate. Yet the longer she thought, the worse her temper grew. Yes, even the usually had very fine manners, she spoke roughly to a bee who wished to visit her. The bee was still young and timid, and flew off in fright as fast as his wings could carry him. Then the Rose-bush was sorry for her rough behavior, because she was naturally friendly, and also spoke because she might have asked the bee whether the man had spoken the truth.

While she was so engrossed in thought, suddenly some one shook her and a mischievous voice asked, "Well, my friend, what are you dreaming about?"

The Rose-bush looked up with her countless eyes and recognized the Wind, that stood laughing before her shaking his head so that his long hair flew about.

"Wind, beloved Wind!" joyfully exclaimed the Rose-bush. "You come as the you had been called. Tell me whether the man has spoken the truth. And she reported everything the man had said to her.

The Wind suddenly became serious and whistled thru his teeth so violently that the branches of the Rose-bush began to tremble. "Yes," declared he, "all this is true, and even worse. I come here from all over the whole world and see everything. Often I am so seized with anger that I begin to rave; then the stupid people say, 'My! what a storm!'"

"And the rich people can really buy everything?"

"Yes," growled the wind. Then suddenly he laughed. "Not me. They can't capture and imprison me. I am the friend of the poor. I fly to all lands. In big cities, I station myself before ill-smelling cellars and roar into them 'Freedom! Justice!' To tired, overworked people I sing a lullaby, 'Be courageous, keep together, fight, you will conquer!'

A Child Worker

I think I will subscribe to the Young Comrade. I have to make the money first. I will tell you how and where I work.

I work on the golf links where the bosses sport. When we work they tell us to hurry, but sometimes we don't hurry. Some of the men give us tips, but very few. The men that give us tips are the men who are not so rich. The bosses who are rich want to be richer, so they don't give us any tips. We have to work and carry the bags for them. Some of the men have heavy bags. If we lose a ball they call us a rotten caddy, but it is their own fault if they hit the ball into the woods. We get a dollar a day according to our agreement. The most I ever made was three dollars a day working from 7 in the morning to 7 in the night. So I will subscribe to the Young Comrade just as soon as I get enough money.

Comradely yours,

THEODORE FOLKMAN.

AN APPOINTMENT AT ONE

He eyed her carefully before edging close enough to speak. George couldn't decide whether she was pretty or not, "passable" was his final verdict. That seemed to be about right. Her face had a faint, meaningless expression which a receding chin and a prominent row of upper teeth, protruding from her mouth, made more obvious. Her cheeks were coated with a layer of powder, while a steady look, sometimes interchanging with a pathetic appeal radiated from her eyes. He continued his survey, at the same time his glance stripped her. In new beyond her white dress, and felt a desire to touch her."

George was a baker's apprentice, whose emotions ranged between "going out with the boys" and a desire to settle down. He was first drawn to Nancy by sheer physical desire, later that gave way to a regulated like. Towards the end of the evening, after they had gone the rounds on a ferris wheel and listened to the band music he was actually beginning to admire her, partly because she was not a "gold digger." As they played, their talk ran into channels of which both were ignorant but neither cared. Of which both were ignorant but neither cared. Only the present part it was confined to an accounting of their experiences.

That chance meeting became Nancy's constant topic. She dreamed, and spoke about it, always reflecting together the entire evening. She recalled how they danced in the pavilion, while thru the window she saw the swirling of a giant merry-go-round. It was the happiest day in her life. She and themselves once more wading their way thru other couples, while their feet beat rhythmic tattoos to the wailing of a jazz band.

Both looked, yet strove, fascinating music, hand in hand, all effaced thru her mind. She kept repeating, "Georgie, Georgie," petting each syllable.

"Oh you're so different from any other man I've met. I could just love you to death," she told him one night and heard a million times to herself.

"Well, you're all there," he chided back, "just enough dinner in my arms while I say I love you."

The simple phrase meant the world to her. Every night she strove to question his sincerity, and allowed his hand to explore her soft flesh freely.

"When can I see you again," he whispered. She edged out of his embrace.

"Any time you want to see me again, after the way I behaved tonight." Her question was not intended to be convincing.

"You bet I do, hon."

"Then call me up Wednesday night." "Make it in the afternoon, Nance, I work evenings," he broke in, she consented.

"Yes, I'll have tickets for some matinee, then." Nancy stifled pain and kissed him good-bye.

It was now Wednesday the day she was to meet him, and Nancy was at work as bus girl in a West 42nd Street coffee pot. She was all upset after work that she couldn't take the afternoon off as she planned. Her boss was emphatic. Another girl did not show up that day, and she was needed to help out in the noon day rush. She wondered what time it was nearing the hour when she should leave. In front of the Hippodrome.

"George promised to get tickets, I've got to meet him—I've got to meet him," she mused as she dropped food stubs to table clearing effectively. She was torn between a yearning to meet him, but that would spell the loss of her job, or keeping her job and not losing George. Both were important to her. She sought a possible escape from this perplexity, but finding none she continued piling dirty dishes into a copper tray and with a wet rag laid to the other scrubbed the marble topped tables. Then glancing at a clock and seeing that it was nearing 1 p.m. she she lapsed into consciousness in which she pictured George waiting for her. The thought of it stabbed her, she again looked at the clock and made up her mind to meet him at all costs.

With a boldness that seemed desperation, she brushed her way into the kitchen, and without telling the chef-manager, her work-dress for her own. Before examining her face, she looked thru the partly stained door, and when his back was turned walked out of it, and into the lobby of the theatre near her place. The "chef-manager" was all he said. He had a notion that she would do just such a thing from the way she pleaded to be let off. He shrugged his shoulders and turned his attention to several customers.

Reaching the street Nancy made her way to Sixth Avenue, where she intended to board a down-town car. She moved to the center of the gutter and peered ahead. There was none in sight. A stream of traffic forced her back to the sidewalk. She wanted to hail a taxi, when a green painted trolley rolled down the avenue. She stepped aboard, threw a nickel in the coin box, and took a seat. The long benches were half filled with passengers. After riding several blocks the car stopped to allow cross-town traffic to pass. Nancy was worried lest she be late for her appointment. Seconds stretched in her imagination to much longer periods. At last the conductor pulled at an overhead cord, and the car proceeded. Nancy kept cupping her fingers until she finally alighted at 44th Street.

She crossed the street, looked around and wondered. George was nowhere in sight. Her eyes dilated in roving circles about her. She entered the lobby, searched there and returned to the street. A languor spread over her, which soon left her chilled, and accompanying it came a faint giddiness.

Meanwhile people poured in from all angles, so many that she could not watch them all. She posted herself near the lobby from where she had a clear view. Man after man bought tickets at the silver domed booth, and escorted their lady friends thru the glass doors. Nancy continued to peer into their faces. Several times she thought she saw George approaching, but always a look of disappointment would sweep her face.

She left the lobby and walked over to an adjoining store where she looked at a clock hanging behind the panel of glass. The dials pointed to one-fifty. She sighed a regretful sob. "Geeez, almost an hour late," she told herself. "I'll bet George left already." This idea sent a fresh chill down her back, which was augmented by a recollection that the clock where she worked was ten minutes slow. She flushed, and under the influence of this feeling, doubled her efforts to find him.

Meanwhile her thoughts revolved around him, as she allowed silent whisperings to toy with her vagaries. "Nancy, I love you," he was saying in her pantomime imaginings. Such thought only confused her still more. She was in a dilemma. Faces of men swept by her in continuous circles. She saw in each one George, George. Her longings were the outcropping of long suppressed desires, yet she persisted in indulge in them. She continued uttering his name, at the same time experiencing a strong hate for society. Her head swirled and she felt the sidewalks slip from under her.

"Oh George, why didn't you wait, did you doubt I would be here?" she asked, and intermingled that thought with possible calamities that might have befallen him. She thought of the automobiles that may have mangled him, or of the many other accidents that could have occurred. "No, it was not that, he wasn't here at all," she finally cried. A sad premonition told her that she was fooled, tricked, betrayed once more. The thought of it lacerated her heart.

At two-thirty she decided that it was no use waiting any longer. With a discouraged hopelessness she began walking uptown. In a short time she stepped within sight of her place of employment. A feeling of hate gripped her and she decided not to resume work. She bore a grudge against the place, blaming that for her misery. She cast a furtive glance at the dazzling "Coffee Pot" sign, and retraced her steps to 6th Avenue where she took an "L" train for home.

In the eating place, sitting on a high stool was a young man. He beckoned to the proprietor.

"Say, how about a little service there Bill?"

"I'm sorry sir, in a minute, in a minute, you see my girl left me to keep a date with her fellow and I'm short of help.

After a hasty lunch the diner slipped his hand into a pocket to extract some money. Two theatre tickets fell to the floor as he did so. He stooped down, gave the grey-eyed girl a curious look and tore them to bits.

The Foam

The foam is the child of the deep rolling wave,
The deep rolling wave that takes toll of the brave,
But, mother-like, loves ev'ry spray, ev'ry splash
Of the foam that is born when waves the winds lash.

The foam is as playful as boys on the shore,
Who wonder and glee as the breakers come o'er,
And, just as they break, with a wild whoop of joy
Dash into the foam that just plays like a boy.

And just as a boy spreads his spirit abroad,
The foam it diffuses itself in the flood,
In octopus patterns and marble, I ween,
Which are slowly absorbed in sea-salty green.

The foam and the boy both get tired of play,
So each seeks his rest in his own little way,
The boy, with legs weary, on proud mother's knee,
The foam on the breast of the wave of the sea.

HERE COMES NOTHING

We have with us today, the most of you may not know it, a magazine that stands for nothing, believes in nothing, has no place to go and goes there. Because of this aggregation of facts its has a 75,000 circulation. Ladies and gentlemen it gives me great pleasure to introduce you to our worthy contempt(t)orary, The Forum.

The gentleman who discovered halitosis has nothing on the business manager of The Forum, The Magazine Without a Mission. This is the way he starts a subscription drive:

> "Leach," said the editor of a great metropolitan newspaper, in May 1923, "there is no place for The Forum. There are not ten thousand people in this country who want to do their own thinking. People want their opinions ready-made."
>
> "Give me five years," the new Forum editor replied, "and I will find fifty thousand people who want to think for themselves."
> It is four years since Mr. Leach became editor of The Forum, and we have found seventy-five thousand readers. Why?—because the public has been generous in welcoming a magazine which actually has no axe to grind. The intelligent minority is tired of propaganda, the Forum holds no brief for anyone. It is neither Wet nor Dry; Radical nor Conservative; Catholic nor Protestant; pro-Labor nor pro-Capital. This is a non-partisan magazine of controversy, dedicated to the proposition that all sides of every question deserve a hearing.

Still, people wonder what to do with second hand liberals! Ernie, the ballroom sheik must think up something new in the way of a prospectus to capture the affections of the superannuated flapper. He must be the Lothario without an ulterior motive, and with the gin they like to touch. The day of the purposeless pioneer has arrived. For those who believe nothing, earn for nothing and know nothing the millenium is here.

Read the Forum ladies and gentlemen. It will not grow fuzz on an egg, but it is guaranteed not to manicure the roots of your hair.

THE INSTIGATORS

The Rise of the Lira—Campaign for Lower Price

THE policy of the "gradual revival of the lira" announced by the fascist government has in practice led to a very violent rise, which, however, has not only failed to effect the economic recovery of Italy, but has made the industrial crisis still worse.

The sudden rise of the lira not only strikes a blow at export industry, weakening its competitive capacity on the foreign market, but creates a state of indecision and lack of faith in the morrow in the whole economic life of the country, on which rapid deflation acts just as disastrously as inflation. The rise of the lira is in itself an unhealthy sign, being as it is, not the consequence of financial and industrial settling down, but the product of artificial measures, chiefly innumerable foreign loans, on such a footing that the foreign currency falls into the hands of the "Italian Bank," the fascist government's financial instrument, thus enabling it to speculate in the lira. This speculation is among other things a source of profit for the fascist businessmen and leads to form a secret reserve fund for fascist agitation and dark machinations at home and abroad.

One of the consequences of the unhealthy growth of the lira is the discrepancy between its nominal value on the foreign market and its real purchasing power at home. While the lira stood at 24 gold centesimi on the foreign market in March last, its purchasing capacity in Italy (at wholesale prices) was only 17 cents. Even the most cautious specialists, never weary of lauding the wisdom of the government, have been forced to admit that if this discrepancy is not compensated for by a lowering of prices it will inevitably lead to another fall in the lira. If, however, wholesale prices cannot come with the rise of the lira, retail prices bear still less relation to it. The campaign for lower prices so long waged with undeviating success" by the fascist government, press and trade unions has up to the present shown no real results. Special shops for the workers, limited prices, threats to the retailers and other palliative measures have so far led to nothing substantial.

While the lira stood 92 per cent higher in February last than in the preceding August (in ratio to English pound) the index of wholesale prices during this period had fallen from 691.75 to 600.85, i.e., 12 per cent, and the average cost of living index in Italy (27 towns) from 151 to 147, i.e., two-and-a-half per cent. In Milan the cost of living index far from falling even went up from 685 to 687.

ATTACK ON WAGES: The employers have long been working at the lowering of prices in their own way. The argument as to whether the lowering of prices or the lowering of wages ought to take precedence has been answered by them in a practical manner by an attack on wages unfalteringly and a great deal more successfully than the struggle for lowered prices, carried out either in spite of, or with the assistance of the fascist unions. At first the government organs and fascist party kept officially out of this attack, in some cases even trying to moderate the zeal of the employers. The Supreme Council of the Fascist Party passed a resolution against the lowering of wages until the cost of living should come down (in spite of which, however, Belucci, Minister for National Economy, was able to announce in March last that wages had been cut by efforts of the employers, in 57 provinces).

In his March parliamentary address Belucci appealed to the employers not to take the line of least resistance, i.e., not to try to bring down prices, but cutting wages, as industry required an extension of home markets. The greater, however, the strides the lira made in its "recovery" the worse became the economic crisis. Considerable groups of industrialists began to make their voices heard in a protest against heavy taxation and customs dues, the danger of the ever-increasing foreign loans and in demand for—wage cuts. The government made up its mind. It undertook the formulation and limitation of the attack on wages.

The famous "Labor Charter" was the smoke screen under cover of which the fascist government and the fascist party are leading this attack.

Two weeks had hardly passed after the publication of the "Labor Charter" when Augusto Turati, general secretary of the fascist party accomplished a veritable fascist miracle. Calling in Brescia a meeting of representatives of the fascist agricultural unions in this province, he "persuaded them voluntarily" to pass a resolution on the lowering of the wages established for agricultural workers in the collective agreements. This diminution was, according to the resolution, to assume "such a kind and form found most convenient and fair by Turati." This turned out to be—a ten per cent cut! The workers concerned, were, of course not consulted. Mussolini and the directorship of the fascist party approved and made an example of the Brescia agricultural "workers'" resolution, which they hoped would be a signal for further "generous acts by the workers and peasantry."

The example of Brescia was followed by Pavia, where the fascist unions decided "to accept unconditionally the wage decrease for seasonal agricultural workers in the Pavia and Lemelli districts, established by the decision of the Brescia agricultural workers. It should, moreover, be known that in these very districts a strike recently occurred on account of the attempts of the landowners to impose lower wages on the workers. The same thing occurred in other localities. After the agricultural workers came the turn of the urban workers. At the Bologna conference of union secretaries a decision was taken for a 10 per cent nominal decrease of the cost-of-living bonus. In compensation the workers were promised a society for the sending of sick children to seaside watering-places. The Bologna Federation of Employers' Organizations took the greatest interest in these sacrifices made by the workers, and worked out rates for decreasing wages. It appears (1) the decrease will be 10 per cent, but not from the cost-of-living bonus, but from wages as a whole; (2) the decrease will come into force from the 9th of May, i.e., from the very day of the decision of the secretaries' organizations, while (3) each organization will have the right to demand a revision of rates in case of considerable changes in the conditions of the respective industries and in the cost-of-living index.

After Bologna came the turn of the Genoa dockers, etc.

The tone, however, was given to the attack on wages by the fatherly fascist government itself. On the 5th of May the Council of Ministers ruled out the cost-of-living bonuses for the highest categories of civil servants and lowered them 30 to 60 per cent for the lowest, including postal, telegraph and railway employes. The excuse given for this decrease was that wholesale prices had gone down considerably by the end of April. The Council of Ministers, it is true, acknowledges that the fall in the cost of living is far from corresponding to the fall in wholesale prices, but it contents itself with the remark that "in some towns the price of bread, macaroni and other products has fallen considerably during the last six months.

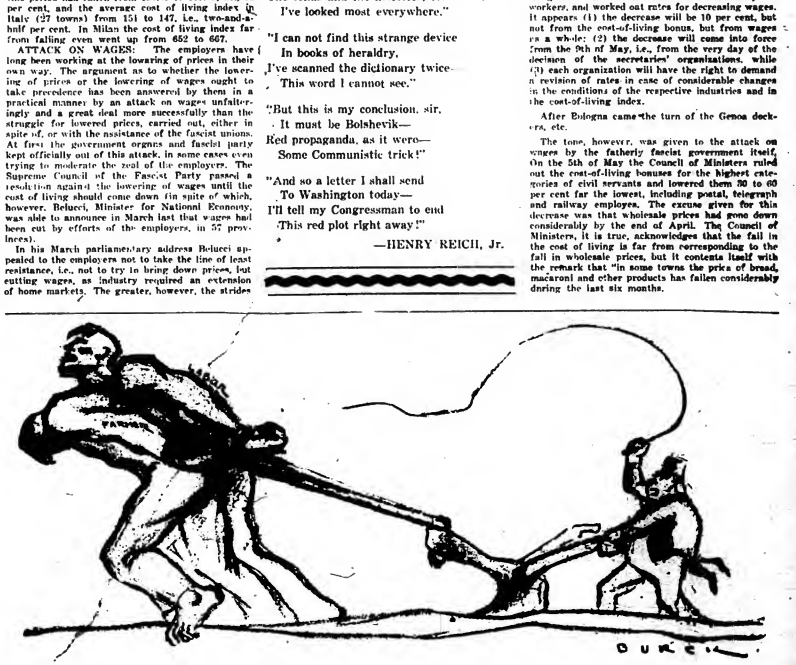
"What cabalistic sign is that?"
Asked a most learned man.
"U-S-S-R—it knocks me flat,
Nor fathom it I can!"



"I've searched the bible through and through,
I've thumbed old volumes rare,
The Atlas and the histories, too—
I've looked most everywhere."

"I can not find this strange device
In books of heraldry,
I've scanned the dictionary twice—
This word I cannot see."

"But this is my conclusion, sir,
It must be Bolshevik—
Red propaganda, as it were—
Some Communistic trick!"

"And so a letter I shall send
To Washington today—
I'll tell my Congressman to end
This red plot right away!"

An Appointment At One

By ALEX JACKINSON

ONE only met him once, but that one time was sufficient to convince Nancy that she found her beau ideal at last. With that came a miraculous change in her behavior. She began to feel gayer, sing when she'd find an opportunity, and laugh; without feeling that life cheated her of something she wanted and sought.

Having that which one often visualises in dreams turn to reality has different effects on different temperaments. To Nancy that one meeting with someone who had long lived in her subconscious mind worked wonders. She felt that she could now face people without fearing that to themselves they might think, "some girl without a lover at her age." This was a greatly exaggerated belief, for most people she came in contact with did not concern themselves about her to that extent. But, because she herself did entertain such notions, she fancied that everyone else did too. Now that worry was over, she told herself repeatedly, with inherent satisfaction.

One change that this meeting with him brought about, showed itself in the attitude towards her father. Nancy now spoke to him minus the usual resentment which characterised their former conversations. His constant wish to see her "married off" was a source of torment to her, of which both were cognizant. She recalled the many men he invited to dinner, ostensibly for a "chat" as he told them, but underlying his benevolence was the unpleasant fact that he wanted them to meet her, her, it was always her.

Nancy was the oldest of four girls, comprising in part the Brown family. That she was in the way of her younger sisters, she had no doubt. And, that they pitied her for not having a suitor at her mature age she also knew, and bitterly resented any mention on their part "that she was a lovely girl and would yet make an attractive marriage." This subject no longer served its purpose. Nancy was conscious of her thwarted desires, and at various times tried to sublimate them by stimulating an artificial interest in other fields. Failing in that she continued to fret and resent the encroachments her "people" made on her vanity.

At twenty-eight environment molded her into a hard, disciplined woman. Ill-favored by the fates, she suffered from an illusion that everybody conspired against her. This was an imaginary fancy born out of a fruitless quest for things she couldn't attain, and foremost among them was a "fellow" as she oftimes confided to herself.

She met a number of such objectives from time to time, but could never establish a permanent friendship. Something in her manner set a barrier which could not be easily bridged. Should she in the company of other girls be picked up by men, Nancy would be the one to receive least attention. She knew it, and wanted to be more frivolous, but always it conserved couched properly held her back. With the ensuing years this contrary streak was beginning to wane. It disappeared entirely when she met him.

They met on a Bronx-bound subway train. It was during the evening rush hour, and crowds of homegoers kept jostling against each other. Nancy boarded the train at Times Square. At the following station he stepped in. She noticed, but didn't give him any undue attention, at first.

Under her right arm she clasped a book, and in the other held a hat feather wrapped in tissue paper, which she had just bought. Before long felt a hand brush behind her back, the motion giving her a little more freedom. Nancy looked up and beamed a polite "Thank you" to a stalwart figure. He was waiting for just such a break. "I don't want you to crush your flower," drifted from his lips. Nancy hesitated before carrying on the tete-a-tete. "It's not a flower, it's just a cheap little hat feather, but thank you just the same." Her tone was friendly. He smiled, and responded immediately. "But you may crush the leaves in your book." This sally made her laugh. Just then the train lurched around a turn, and before she knew it she was falling in his arms. "I beg your pardon" she flushed. He felt that he had already "made" her. "Why, what did you do?" he inquired with assumed naivete. Her eyes screwed up, she looked him over, and was visibly impressed by his appearance. "You're quite a smart aleck, aren't you"? "You bet I am, with smart girls like you." Both grinned, as they attempted to read each other's mind.

The train rolled to a stop. The crowd was gradually thinning out, until several passengers remained. Nancy and her new found friend took seats.

"Going to Starlight?" he asked of her, after a while.

"Are you?"

"Yes."

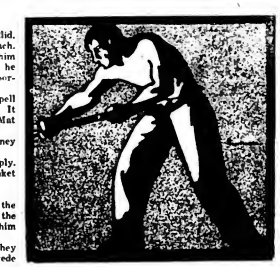
"So am I," echoed Nancy. A second later she regretted having said that, for she was on her way home then, and had no intention of going to where she signified. However she resolved to go thru with it.

They reached the 177th Street Station. "We get off here," he informed her. Nancy arose. "This way." He took her by the elbow and steered her way to the street. There were many other people on their way to Starlight Amusement Park, and together they wended up the crowded thoroughfare.

"By the way we haven't been introduced to each other yet." It was she who broke the silence. "No, we haven't." "My name's Nancy—Nancy Brown," she interrupted quickly. "George Spence is what I answer to." They shook hands and expressed satisfaction at having met so unexpectedly.

That was how they met, their parting was equally as thrilling to her. He took her home in a taxi. A necessary prelude to his motives. In the hallway he held her in his arms and vowed enduring fidelity. Nancy was a flutter of excitement.

Hitherto when she met a men she acted coldly, indifferently, always feeling inferior to him, and it was that feeling which drew a gap between them, so a girl once told her. At first Nancy resented this frank disclosure, but later gave in that it was true. She determined to follow a friendlier course in the future.



Had her mother known that Nancy was indulging in one of those flirtations she was repeatedly warned against, Mrs. Brown would have been frantic. For years she dominated her daughter's relations with men, oftimes politely barring entrance to those she labelled unsuitable. Now Nancy passed the stage where the prudence her mother advocated was considered safe.

George Spence partly lied in giving that name. Only the first was correct. He never gave girls his right name, at least not the first time. When he saw Nancy on the train platform, he resolved to "pick her up," not that she appealed to him much, it was merely that he was alone on a Saturday night, and wanted to be with a girl, any girl.

Men Who Feed the Beast

By WALT CARMON

Mat rose on the edge of his bunk.

"It's a hell of a life, eh Yank?"

Mat was too sick to answer. His face was pallid. He felt a sinking feeling at the pit of his stomach.

"Another first-tripper"—the Swede looked at him sympathetically. "Don't smear the fo'c'stle," he counselled and pointed to the bucket near the doorway.

Mat lurched toward it. He was in the first spell of sea-sickness. The ship was still in the bay. It rolled lightly on the swell. The movement sent Mat staggering uncertainly to the doorway.

"Cut out your bloody groans," the cockney growled on being wakened.

"Shut your face," the Swede answered sharply. The cockney turned over and pulled the blanket over his head.

The stokers ate from the pans of food on the table in the center of the fo'c'stle. Mat sat on the edge of his bunk. The sight of food again sent him reeling to the doorway.

The third engineer appeared. Time was up. They reached for their jackets and sweat-rags. The Swede nodded to Mat.

"Your watch, Yank."

Mat followed up the stairway and across the deck. Thru the galley, then down a ladder into a hellish pit from which the heat rose and wrapped him in a fiery, suffocating blanket. The steel rungs of the ladder scorched his hands. The pit of his stomach felt sickening. He lurched thru the doorway to the bunkers, bulging with coal.

"Take your time, now," the Swede advised. "This ain't no office." He pointed to his shovel. "Better get used to it while the coal is only a step away. It'll be worse when you have to wheel it from the bunkers."

The Swede threw the furnace door wide open with his shovel.

His hardened muscles rippled under his glistening skin as he pushed the long slicing bar under the red coals. He leaned on the bar. Pulled it out smoking and tossed it aside without effort. He threw a mighty shovelful after shovelful of coal into the furnace with an ease and grace that Mat, tho sickened and weak, watched with admiration. In a few moments the coal-pile at his feet disappeared into the fiery cavern. He clanged the door shut with his shovel. He wiped his sweat-dripping face with his rag and nodded to Mat, pointing to the spot the coal was on.

"Now dont hurry," he coached. Then with a glance at the gauge, "There's plenty of steam up for a while."

Mat heaped his wheel-barrow to ride it a few yards to the feet of the fiery moloch he must feed for eight hours everyday. For twenty days and more until the trip was over. Then back again. He stopped half way to the furnace. Seasick.

"You'll get over it, Yank. Here, get under the ventilator."

For four days all the misery of the world was centered in the pit of Mat's stomach. Every day for four hours, beginning at noon, and four hours beginning at midnight, he plodded doggedly in the heat of the stoke-hole where men were damned to turn their blood into steam that sped the ship.

The ship pitched and tossed now like a maddened bull. The waves crashed over the bow and tossed the muscle-weary stoker against the iron-work of the deck. Bruises were added to burns. Every move sent a deep-rooted ache from his body. His mind was a listless void uncontrolled and distant. After four weary hours he climbed the ladder out of the hellish hole and swallowed in gulps the wind that rode the sea. A trained parrot sat in a cage on the forward deck. At the sight of every coal-blacked stoker he screeched, "Ashes, you bawstard—ashes." It sent a shiver thru Mat.

Mat was no longer seasick. On the midnight watch the Swede taught Mat some tricks of the trade.

"Who in hell owns more than one pair of shoes, anyway? Not a bloody stoker!"

While the engineer was away, the Swede sent Mat up to make a bucket of tea. He gave full directions and a sharp knife. Mat made tea. Then he carefully walked in the deepest shadows until he reached the dining room. Quickly he cut a generous strip of the deep rug on the floor and disappeared.

Between every visit of the third engineer on the watch, the men inserted pieces of rug into the soles of their shoes. Hot coals quickly burn soles away.

Mat was no longer seasick. But now his body was a mass of aching bones and flesh. Burns and bruises. On the same watch, another first-tripper was carried out of the hole to the hospital. Each watch there were anxious moments of weakness. Mat sat on the coal while the surroundings reeled about him. The Swede gave him a bit of lime-juice. A cigarette.

"You'll be alright."

The rest of the watch looked on in admiration.

"The bloody fool 'as guts, eh mate?"

"Who in hell would a thought it of a bloody white-collar stiff!"

Each watch Mat felf would be his last.

He began to eat ferociously. There seemed no end to his appetite. With a change of water and food his stomach was in disorder. The doctor gave him a mustard plaster.

The stokers roared in laughter. Only a first-tripper went to a ship's doctor. Stokers and sailors were never sick. Whatever the ailment, they were never too sick to work. Whatever the ailment, they got a mustard plaster. The old-timers carried their own remedies from shore.

The ship was out to sea for ten days. Mat was now living thru painful hours. Four hours on, eight hours off. Fours hours on—if there was no overtime. The Swede advised a hair-cut. The Swede cut it. Mat's head was clipped close to his skin. White, uneven ridges shown on his close-cropped head.

The liquor gave out among the stokers. Firemen, coal-passers, snarled at each other, at the sailors and stewards. The cockney heaped abuse on everyone. On Mat in particular. Port was still three days away. Mat felt his bones and flesh would collapse. The Swede cautioned him and helped him out of the stoke-hole. As Mat's head rose above the deck, the parrot, perched on the deck, screeched, "Ashes, you bawstard—ashes!"

Mat was thrown into a frenzy.

"God. . . ." he cursed hysterically. He reached for a bar and threw it madly at the screeching bird, missing it by inches.

The Swede held his arm. "Come on Yank, let's wash up."

He led him to the showers. The others looked on silently.

"Go easy with the kid," one whispered.

"Here Mat, throw your bloody overalls 'n' sweat-shirt into my bucket. Let it soak."

He had not changed since the trip began. The overalls he wore to his waist were stiff with sweat, grease and coal-dust. He handed them over to soak. They could be washed tomorrow.

• • •

Another watch. More coal for the red mouth of the Moloch. An unsatisfied, deep-bellied monster. The coal in the bunkers was far back now. Deep in the back it rose in a straight ledge to the very ceiling. Above, a few huge boulders held the mass together. Mat shovelled from the foot of it fearfully.

"Watch that damn pile," the Swede cautioned. "Careful when the ship rolls!"

Mat heaped the wheel-barrow and started away. The ship rolled and the ledge moved. He dropped the wheel-barrow and turned, backing away. The huge boulders crashed down past Mat and mass of coal swirled and eddied about him.

"Jesus. . ." the Swede cried.

The men rushed to Mat's aid. Before the furnace they pulled his overalls over his knees to disclose a mass of torn skin and bruises.

The Swede felt for broken bones.

"Nothin' much, thank Christ. That'll heal with a quart of liquor as soon as we land."

Mat's nerves gave away. He did not feel the bruised legs. From head to foot his body thumped in pain. The falling coal was a last straw that made him reel before his mates. The Swede held him under the ventilator.

"Steady now, Yank. Steady, boy. . ."

The third engineer looked on sympathetically. He nodded to the Swede. He held Mat's arm and led him pale, uncerved, to the ladder. To his cabin. He poured a large tumbler full of whiskey and handed it to Mat. He drank, hardly aware of his actions. The raw liquor ran warm thru his aching body. In a moment the weariness had passed.

"Feel better?"

Mat nodded.

He returned to the stoke-hole. Ashes were piled in heaps. Two more men on the sick list threw all three shifts behind. Mat volunteered for overtime with the rest of the men.

The cockney gripped his hand. "You're the first bloody clerk with guts in 'im I ever saw."

The Swede looked on approvingly.

Three gin-soaked days in port. Three days of rest for aching muscles. Three days to forget. The spells of faintness were passing. His body was gradually becoming less pain-wracked. His muscles were hardening.

The tender breeze of the South Seas was a soft caress. The monotonous beat of the motors was becoming a soothing hum. The ship rolled about lightly on calm seas, onward, into space. The skies were star-laden.

The Swede pointed out the Southern Cross gleaming overhead. They sat on a deserted deck enjoying a cigarette before going down for four more hours in hell. Maybe six. A lone sailor stood on watch on the forward deck.

"E-le-ven o'-clock and all is we-l-l!" he sang out.

From below, a stoker in good natured banter called;

"And all the sailors can go to he-l-l!"

The Swede smiled. "You see, Yank, sorin' you must earn your livin' the sea ain't so bad."

Mat paused a moment. "Maybe it ain't." Tonight he looked at life more leniently. "Anyway, I'd like to choose what I want to do."

The Swede smiled in the dark.

"Yan, I've been to sea for fifteen years now. I worked on a farm in Sweden. Ran away from there. I worked in factories in the States. I worked all my life. And it's all the same. Sweat, work, eat, sleep."

They sat quietly a moment.

"Then crook, I suppose," Mat ventured.

The Swede tossed his cigarette over the rail. The light flickered a moment, then disappeared.

"Just like that!"

The ship rolled on into space.

"Will it ever be different, Swede?"

"There are some who say it will."

The Swede rose. He added with emphasis:

". . . and I'm one of 'em!"

FUR GANGSTERS ADMIT RIGHT WING HIRES THEM

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church has supplied himself with a spokesman realizing how useful that mythical person is to a politician in a tight corner. Straton finds his troubles multiplying as rapidly as the loaves and fishes under the miraculous hands of the lowly Nazarene. The atavistic clergyman got into trouble with his deacons because of his bizarre religious rites to which he is becoming addicted.

STRATON looks like a Southern Illinois free lance methodist preacher. He has that lean and hungry look which worried Caesar and makes even such a happy fellow as Al Smith shiver when he sees it on the drawn visage of William Gibbs McAdoo. Straton considers joy and laughter sparks from the devil's anvil and if he had his way he would stifle the happy gurgle of the child and hurn the smile from the adult face. Of such would be his kingdom of heaven.

* * *

RELIGION, like wine gains in virtue with age. Indeed that seems to be second nature to most old fashioned virtues. Dr. Straton was beginning to get fed up with the tendency to give religion a sand paper bath and fumigate it. He preferred to feast his amellers on the real thing. He looked back with a sort of melancholy satisfaction on the days of his youth when the pious could shake off their sins at a good primitive spiritual debauch. The business of religion was getting to good dimensions and scientic. "Back to Savagery!" became Straton's war cry.

* * *

THIS is where he stepped in the banana. Echoes of the fight inside his church were heard when Straton hired himself out to Hearst to interpret the Gray-Snyder murder trinl to Hearst's intellectual customers. The Calvary Church directors thot this was a rather undignified way for a clergyman to add to his salary, hut Straton stuck to his contract. Now, however, it has leaked out that the clergyman stepped off the reservation and had his congregation standing on their ears, climbing the bare walls, rolling on the floor, frothing at the mouth and imploring the "holy spirit" to walk right in. Adding to the complications is the fact that a nurse from a local hospital played a stellar role in the services under the direction of Doc Straton.

IF Straton loses his job he should open a gymnasium and cater to those citizens who are too well cushioned for their comfort in hot weather. Yes, this is the Reverend Dr. John Roach Straton who is constantly on the trail of modern literature that appeals to that part of the human anatomy that located above the chin.

COUPLING an Associated Press story from Indianapolis with the attack made on the Communists by Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal, circumstantial evidence is not lacking to convince the well-informed observor of the policies of John L. Lewis that that individual has succeeded to his own satisfaction in attaining the aim he set out to accomplish in the coal mining industry, namely, to reduce the number of miners digging coal by almost one half. Searles hearkened back to the Herrin riots for ammunition against the Communists. He blamed the radicals for the riots and the deaths of the strikebreakers, tho the slimy liar knows as well as anybody else that the action was spontaneous revolt of the striking miners against the scabs that were imported into the country by the owners of a strip mine.

THE A. P. story from Indianapolis is obviously inspired. In substance it is as follows: There are too many men in the coal industry—Lewis' diagnosis of the industrial patient. The John L. believed this point of view at national and district conventions of the union he could not well take steps to expel the necessary number of men from the mines. But "accidentally" this solution is being automatically applied thru the policy of the international union executive

B. & O. PRESIDENT DEMANDS RETURN OF TEN-HOUR DAY

Awful Shock to Class Collaborationists

WASHINGTON, June 24.—One partner in the "B & O Plan" is coming out from under his cover of "Liberalism" and showing his true colors. President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad demands the ten hour day. He is convinced that the class collaboration scheme he succeeded in getting his machinist and other shop craft employes to enter has sufficiently weakened the fighting spirit of the entire staff so that he can make a direct assault on their standard of living.

Union Officials Shocked.

Willard and eight other railroad presidents issued a formal statement yesterday that the eight hour day must end on the railroads and the nine or even ten hour day come back. Willard's friends among the upper ranks of the railroad union bureaucracy are said to be both pained and shocked at this sudden desertion by their fellow class collaborationist. Editor Fred Heretit of the Machinists' Journal, after first fully assuring himself that the report was official, permitted himself to remark: "Absurd! The railroads can be quite sure that we do not intend to go back on the eight hour day after we have struggled years to attain it."

Good By "Good Feeling."

It is understood that the ultra-conservative "Labor," organ of the sixteen standard railway unions, will be even more outspoken, and will review the long slow struggle of labor to establish the eight hour day, which even Congress and the supreme court had finally to advocate in the form of the Adamson law. "Labor" also will reprove the present combination of employers led by Willard for their temerity in ending "the era of good will obtaining on the roads in the last two years."

The rank and file workers in the railroad industry, those of them who have survived the gradual reduction of jobs during the last two years are not surprised. They feel that Willard is never less friendly to them than when he is advocating some strength sapping program by which they are to assist the employers destroy unionism.

B & O Plan Spreads.

Willard cooperated with the Machinists' union and other shop crafts to install the so-called "B & O" plan of union-employer cooperation. This plan has later been adopted by the Canadian National, Chicago Northwestern and Chesapeake & Ohio. He was also instrumental in leading railway executives to approve the Watson-Parker act, which provides machinery for the mediation and arbitration of labor disputes to prevent strikes on the railroads.

Rank and file pressure on the delegates at the recently concluded Switchmen's union convention forced them to strongly repudiate the Watson-Parker act, and to call on their officials to fight it.

Officials Forced to Act.

The inadequate increases in wages, following tardily on the heels of increased labor per man and decreases in the number of men employed has raised much dissatisfaction among the rank and file workers and forced other union executives to more or less plain attacks on the Willard plans, the "B & O" and the Watson-Parker law. Saye C. J. Goff, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; in formal dissent to the inadequate wage increase the conciliation board awarded the this week:

"Skilled workers in other lines of industry have demanded and received their share of the national income; Railway employes in the present case, instead of forcing their claims, have petitioned for justice. It appears from this award that what is economic justice is not a matter which can safely be submitted to the judgment of others."

A New Right Wing President But the Same Old Gang of Thugs

Convicted criminals, caught in the act of slashing strikers with knives, have confessed that they were hired by the right wing officials of the furriers' union to try and break the strike led by the joint board. GENEVA MAY BE FOLLOWED BY AN ARMAMENT RACE

Washington Furious at Stand of Britain

GENEVA, June 24.—United States representatives in the conference for limitation of naval armaments are alarmed because of their conviction that Britain and Japan are working together against the Washington proposals. They are fearful of the political results in the United States of a flat rejection of the proposals by both Britain and Japan. They want to save the face of the Coolidge administration that called the conference.

Are Still Deadlocked.

On the question of discussing naval disarmaments with regard to capital ships, representatives of Great Britain and the United States to the tripartite naval limitation conference, remain at loggerheads.

Shortly after a meeting of the executive committee of the conference today, both W. C. Bridgeman, British first lord of the Admiralty, and Hugh Gibson, chairman of the American delegation to the conference, issued statements to the press outlining their stands on the question of extending the disarmament proposals reached at the Washington conference of 1922, to auxiliary vessels.

Sharp Disagreement.

Claiming that Great Britain's presence at the conference is to guarantee her own defense, Bridgeman stated emphatically that he felt the British delegates to the conference could not leave without having discussed, and reached a definite conclusion, on the subject of limiting the armaments of auxiliary ships.

Chairman Gibson, in a brief statement, said that such a discussion at this time is "impractical."

"It is impractical to discuss capital ships here," Gibson said. "Such a discussion would reopen the Washington treaty and prejudice the rights of France and Italy. All the proposals submitted at Washington were drawn up by the State and Navy Departments and no political conditions were allowed to enter."

Admiral Jones, another member of the American delegation, told the press the United States was not willing to limit guns on cruisers to six inches, but probably would be willing to limit guns on destroyers to five inches.

Washington Is Irritated.

Officialdom in Washington has been gravely concerned, and not a little nettled, over Great Britain's attitude toward further naval disarmament, as revealed this week at the Geneva conference.

HIGH FINANCING FEATURES PROBE OF I. R. T. LINES

Financial juggling at the expense of the traction workers and the public was further revealed yesterday in hearings before the traction commission when Samuel Untermyer, special consul for the commission examined Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the finance committee of the Brooklyn-Manhaitan Transit Company. Wiggin and the Chase National Bank crowd are being pilloried by Untermyer who is trying to turn the control of the traction systems of New York over the Morgan's banking combine and the Rockefeller National City outfit. Meanwhile the public continues to learn startling facts about the shady practices of all the plunderers in both camps.

Millions Involved in Deals.

Financial juggling in which figures reached milliona and, it was admitted, "dollars were not earmarked," when going into the B.-M. T. from the Chase National Bank, was disclosed today at the readjustment hearing before the transit commission.

Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the financial committee of the B.-M. T. and chairman of the board's board, admitted on the witness stand that $1,500,000 was borrowed for purposes of the New York Rapid Transit Corporation. This money, he admitted was paid by the New York Rapid Transit Corporation into the B.-M. T. coffers, thus enabling the latter to declare its dividend.

Leon G. Godley, member of the commission, asked if Wiggin knew whether the borrowed money was actually used to pay dividends.

Rush More U.S. Marines To Peking Area

BULLETIN

CANTON, June 24.—The right wing administration has ordered strong military patrols to guard the city and has mounted machine guns in the railway station in expectation of a rebellion by workers.

An effective anti-British boycott has also aggravated the situation for the right wing, which is catering to the imperialist powers.

SHANGHAI, June 24.—Preparations are being made to rush 1,150 marines to Tientsin on the United States transport Chaumont, it was learned today.

That other marines will be dispatched north in the near future in preparation for the Nationalist drive against Peking was announced by Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, commanding the American marines in China. "The transport Henderson is here from Manila," he said, "loaded to the gunwales with supplies and the Chaumont's 1,150 marines are all aboard and ready for orders."

Butler expects that the Nationalists will reach the Peking-Tientsin area between July 1 and 15. Foreign troops are erecting barricades in preparation for the advance of the Nationalists.

Rumors are being circulated that a temporary military alliance has been formed between the Hankow government and Chiang Kai-shek. Borodin is reported to have resigned.

The alliance is said to have been made by General Feng Yu-hsiang and General Chiang Kai-shek at their conference at Soochow.

SEVEN THUGS CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF CUTTING UP MILITANT PICKETS

When Questioned by Police, State That They Were Sent by the International

Had First Told Cops Not to Arrest Them as They Supported Right Wing

Seven gangsters who admitted that they had been hired by the International Fur Workers Union right wing officialdom were arrested yesterday morning in the fur district after they had brutally beaten and cut up four pickets.

Stepping out of a large Packard car on Sixth avenue, between 24th and 25th street, the seven guerillas attacked the four furriers who were standing there. They hit James Metexas on the back with an iron bar and stabbed him behind the ear. Frank Weiss was stabbed in the arm while Stephen Sergadian and Harry Steinhardt were cut on various parts of their bodies.

Two of the gangsters, Moses Schwartz and James Eagan are holdup men with prison records.

Call to Cops.

Seeing the approach of several hundred other pickets who had heard the turmoil, the right wing gangsters jumped into the car and started to ride north. When several policemen and detectives joined in the chase a couple of thugs yelled from the car: "Don't chase us, we are with the right wing!" Apparently the police did not hear them due to the noise made by the angry furriers who were also pursuing them.

After riding for another block and seeing that ultimately they would be captured, they started to shoot at those that were giving them chase.

When caught at Sixth avenue and Twenty-seventh street they told the detectives that they were hired to do their bloody deeds by the leaders of the International Fur Workers Union.

In the car were found iron bars similar to those used to beat Sam Winick last Monday and Samuel Barr a week previously.

The iron bars, eight in number, found in the automobile were each a foot and half long and an inch in diameter.

EMERGENCY COMMITTEE CALLS ONE HOUR STRIKE FOR SACCO-VANZETTI

Representatives of Half Million Workers Set Date for Four P. M., July 7

With delegates from eighty-five organizations, representing over five hundred thousand members present, the Sacco and Vanzetti Emergency Committee meeting in the Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave., yesterday issued a stirring call for an hour's strike, Thursday, July 7 at 4 p. m. by all workers in order to impress upon the rulers of this nation the desire of labor that the two workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolemeo Vanzetti be not done to death in the electric chair.

During the strike period, the committee is arranging a vast demonstration with a parade and meetings at which speakers will tell of the absolutely sure proofs of the innocence of the two workers, of their false trial, and conviction by frame-up seven years ago, of their martyrdom since as they awaited constantly an execution date that was always just postponed in time to save them for the moment, but never countermanded altogether.

The committee's resolution, adopted unanimously, is as follows:

CALL OF THE SACCO-VANZETTI EMERGENCY COMMITTEE to all organized labor and sympathisers for a DEMONSTRATION and ONE HOUR STRIKE on JULY 7th, 1927.

* * *

The Sacco - Vanzetti Emergency Committee was established for the purpose of securing the freedom of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, and to arouse the workers of New York and vicinity to save these two labor men who are the victims of capitalist justice.

The innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti is so well established as to leave no doubt as to the ghastly nature of the frame-up against them.

The Sacco - Vanzetti Emergency Committee has no other interest than to unite all workers and sympathisers of the labor movement in a common endeavor to secure the freedom of our two brothers and to expose the attempt to railroad them to the electric chair.

The whole labor movement, irrespective of differences, must present a united front for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti and demonstrate to the world and to the persecutors of our brothers the solidarity of labor which by its organized power alone can save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair and open the jail doors.

We, the delegates to the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee conference at the Labor Temple, 244 East 14th street, Friday, June 24th, 1927, therefore call upon all organizations represented to participate in the demonstration arranged for July 7th, 1927.

The Sacco - Vanzetti Emergency Committee particularly calls upon the 25,000 needle trades workers assembled in mass demonstration on Union Square, New York, this Saturday, June 25th, to adopt this declaration, and to participate under their banners, in the one hour strike and demonstration, to begin at 4 p. m. on July 7th, 1927.

HOUSE OF LORDS PASSES MEASURE FOR MORE POWER

Liberals Bemoan Threat to Parliamentarism

LONDON, June 24.—Viscount Fitz Alan's motion for the "reform" of the British House of Lords was carried today by a vote of 206 to 54 after a turbulent four hours' discussion of the views of the various contending factions in British politics.

The effort to cut down hereditary membership to approximately one half, and introduce the election and appointment, for stated periods, of a portion of the members, is meeting a concentrated opposition from the Labor Party and the Liberals, who mean the Government for attempting to put through so serious a revision of the Constitution without first submitting the matter to the country for decision.

The plan of the government to strengthen the power of the Lords is companioned by one to limit that of the House of Commons through the appointment of members of the Peerage to sit in the lower House.

Liberals Forecast Revolution.

That the liberals are thoroughly aroused is evidenced by a Manifesto issued today by a meeting of the Liberal Party, presided over by Lloyd George, which says in part that the proposals of the Government "will undermine the supremacy of the representative Chamber," and "by taking away the royal prerogative to create Peers in case of a deadlock, they might force the nation to choose between an uncontrolled hereditary chamber and revolution."

The Manchester Guardian, spokesman for the Liberal Party, is very much exercised over the matter. "It is asking for revolution," said today's editorial. "The lords would have what they have never had before—the power of forcing the general election."

Labor Fears Curtailed Power.

The Labor Party, which hopes to come into power in the next elections on the wave of disgust and indignation among the rank and file against the labor-baiting tory government, are fearful of the curtailment of their power, and regard this measure as an effort to forestall their control of the government should they be swept in by the elections.

John-R. Clynes, acting leader for the opposition, on being refused his request for a day for the expression of the opposition point of view by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, declared that the Labor Party would offer a motion of censure, thereby forcing the government to listen to its objections.

Young So. American Hanged.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Elin Lyons, Colombian soldier of fortune, was hanged in the county jail today for the murder of Julius Bonfield, police officer, killed during a holdup.

The youthful South American went to his death calmly. He maintained his innocence to the last, claiming Policeman Bonfield shot himself accidentally.

Straton Denies Primitive Rites.

Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, yesterday denied that he permitted "Penetocostalism" at the church.

His denial came in the wake of the resignations of five deacons of the church who declared that there had been strange services there in which women writhed on the floor and tore their clothing in religious frenzy.

Harvard Gets Millions.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 24.—President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard today announced that the university had received gifts totalling $6,003,372.

Communists to Be Railroaded to Jail in 10 Days by Policarts

PARIS, June 24.—Decrees signed by President Doumergue ordered the prosecution of the Comintern of Deputies, Marcel Cachin, Communist leader will go to prison for one year for opposing French imperialism in Morocco.

The imprisonment of Cachin follows that of M. Semard, Secretary of the French Communist Party and editor of L'Humanite. Other French Communist leaders have been ordered to terms of imprisonment for opposing French imperialism. Cachin is charged with inciting "French troops to revolt" in the imperialist campaign in Morocco.

Requesting that other sentenced Communists be given the ten days' grace extended to him, Cachin said, "I am ready to go to prison. I have been there before and I may be again. But since ten days' grace has been given me, I ask that the same be given to the others who are condemned with me."

Needle Trade Defense

Ben Gold Will Be There.

The monster Coney Island Stadium Concert which will take place July 10th will be one of the biggest demonstrations for the striking furriers and for the other workers in the needle trades and against the traitorous clique of Sigman-Woll-McGrady and the Forward.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board Furriers Union and other leaders of the strike will speak at the concert. The lawyers who defended the furriers at the Mineola trial, will also appear.

Erno Rapee, conducting the New York Symphony Orchestra, Kosloff with his famous ballet of 50, and Rita de la Porte of the Metropolitan, will collaborate in the presentation of Borodine's Prince Igor and a fine concert program. This will be the most outstanding event of the summer.

Tickets sell at $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats.

Jails and Money.

The press dwells daily on the devotion and self sacrifice of the striking furriers to their Union and their cause. Numerous examples of faithfulness are shown daily on the picket line and in court. In order to save the Union the expense, the arrested pickets go to jail rather than allow the payment of fines. We cannot go into detail, but one incident unreported by the press is worthy of mention: Monday morning a group of pickets was reported. They were found guilty and fined $5 each or two days in jail. As usual they preferred jail. Even this wasn't enough. L. Berger, one of the arrested pickets made a collection in jail and realized $12.10 for the Furriers strike.

Brother L. N. has been doing good work for the Defense for many months. So far he succeeded in keeping out of print. Unfortunately for him, however, he happened to be arrested on the picket line Thursday morning and by the time he was rid of the 30th Street Police Station early in the afternoon, he carried with him a collection of $13.43.

Loan and Donate.

E. P. Gaberman, secretary of the Hartford Defense Committee has found a new way of raising immediate funds for the Defense of the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers and the relief of the strikers. Not being able to raise large sums of money very readily, the Hartford Committee decided to borrow $500 from a loan association. This money was immediately donated for the defense, the various members of the Committee pledging themselves to make a 50 cent weekly payment each, until the entire sum is paid off. This is such a good way of raising money in the present crisis that we earnestly recommend this method to all other cities and towns.

More Contributions.

I. Simkin of Detroit, forwarded $25 for the striking furriers. He writes he was formerly of local 35 when Breslow group was in power thru a reign of terror. He hopes that it will never again be back.

* * *

Shifre and Gedale Miller of Paterson send $2 to the office of the Defense instead of buying flowers for the new born son of Raisel and Berish Engel. Jacob Mandowitz and David Payus forwarded $5 for the striking furriers. D. Hilsig of Local 22 vacationing in the mountains on account of ill health, sent $11 and regrets that she cannot participate actively in the Union.

Patient Shoots Doctor.

INDIANA, Pa., June 24.—An unidentified patient shot and killed Dr. Frank Fisher Moore, 47, of Homer City, and then took his own life on the Indiana-Blairsville road near here today.

Dr. Moore was driving the patient to a hospital. The patient was riding in the rear seat of the physician's touring car.

The man's motive has not been established.

POLICE DOCTORED PAPERS IN TRIAL OF 4 COMMUNISTS

Read Party Resolutions In "Sedition" Trial

By A. JAKIRA.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 24.—Steve Bralick, Tom Zima, and Milan Radisav, three of the four defendants now on trial for sedition in Beaver, were called to the stand today by the defence.

Radisav who occupied the stand half the day, and who will be cross-examined to-morrow, testified that he is a member of the Workers (Communist) Party and explained underdirect and cross examination the principles and policies of the Party.

Reads Party Resolutions.

Attorney Wilson, after vigorous objection on the part of the prosecution which were overruled by Judge McConnell, read to the jury and the packed county room, the full resolution adopted at the last convention of the Workers Party and published in pamphlet form.

On the prosecution fixed the records of the Woodlawn street nucleus which were seized during the raid of November 11th last year was signed by Resetar.

The names of three workers who have never been members of the Workers (Communist) Party were added by the police to the membership lists. The additions were made by a typewriter other from Resetar's. Other changes in the records were also pointed out.

The prosecution from the beginning of the trial referred quite frequently to a pamphlet "Blood and Steel" trying to create the impression that the pamphlet was connected with the alleged attempts to blow up the Jones and Laughlin steel mills.

This maneuver was smashed when the defence introduced the pamphlet in evidence and when Resetar pointed out that the pamphlet is a statement of the brutal conditions in the steel mills which are responsible for the preventable deaths of thousands of workers.

Karl Marx's "Communist Manifesto" was continually referred to by the prosecution to show that Communist doctrines are "seditious." Attempts were also made by the prosecution to show that the Croatian Benefit Union is a Communist organization.

Aided Russian Relief.

Muselin, Resetar and Zima are active members and officers of the Woodlawn branch of the society. Prosecuting attorney Craig charged that this society had several years ago contributed $11,000 to "aid in the establishment of a Soviet Republic in Russia."

The defence easily proved that United States Government agencies had sent millions of dollars to the Soviet Union for the purpose as the Croatian Benefit Society—namely, for famine relief.

It was also brought out in today's session that one of the witnesses who testified that the defendants had preached "bloodshed and anarchy" was involved in a financial scandal in the Woodlawn Croatian lodge. He attempted to withdraw $1,500 of the society's money for his own purposes without the knowledge of the membership.

Witnesses Biased.

Muselin and Zima, officers of the society, prevented the embezzlement. He then made threats that "he would get them yet."

Another witness, the defence showed, had been driven out from his house by Zima, which he had rented from Zima, because neighbors complained about his conduct. He also promised Zima that he "would get revenge."

During the day continual clashes took place between the attorney for the defence and the prosecuting attorney, the defence demanding the dismissal of the jury and a new trial. The case will probably close tomorrow.

Geneva May End in Big Naval Competition

United States on the high seas, because of its desire to dominate the Pacific Washington officials are beside themselves with rage at today's declaration of Bridgeman, the head of the British delegation.

"Britain," said Bridgeman, in a speech that has been carefully marked down here in Washington, "depends upon control of the seas for her existence. For the United States, naval equality is simply a luxury and political by-play."

President Coolidge dissuaded congress last session from embarking upon an ambitious cruiser-program only with considerable difficulty. Should Britain persist in her initial position at Geneva, and the conference fail, it is within the bounds of probability that the new congress, on the eve of the 1928 presidential election, and with both parties straining for achievement, will take steps to launch the most ambitious naval building program the world has ever seen. With a tremendous surplus in the treasury and the necessity for more aggressive expeditions in behalf of Wall Street investments a race for armaments of every description is on the order of the day.

SEVEN THUGS CAUGHT CUTTING PICKETS COMPLEX RIGHT WING OFFICIALS PAID FOR KNIFE WORK

tion with importance attached to the International Fur Workers Union to beat back the progressive forces in the organization who are fighting to improve the working conditions of the union. Unsuccessful in their moves to win the workers by any other methods the knife and blackjack is now being used in a last futile attempt to hold power. The progressives under the lead of the New York Joint Board are conducting a strike which the right wing, is trying to break.

Joint Board Statement.

The Joint Board issued the following statement last night:

"The arrest of the seven men who attacked our members this morning absolutely substantiates our charge that the International Fur Workers Union and those American Federation of Labor officials who are supervising its affairs are hiring gangsters to attack the fur strikers.

"Several of those arrested this morning have police records, and the Joint Board will in a few days make public other revelations concerning their characters. The important point is that they admit that they were hired by the International and that they were caught with the iron bars used by them to assault our workers.

To Evade Issue.

"They claim to have been hired by a man named 'Sovel,' but no such person exists. This is simply an attempt to hide the name of the responsible official.

"Whoever this is, we intend to find him out and place upon him the responsibility for the murderous attacks which have been occurring since the beginning of our internal union difficulties. Edward F. McGrady, in charge of the 'reorganization committee' has been constantly issuing statements charging the Joint Board with gangsterism, but he has never cited a single instance of violence to prove his charge.

International's Attorney.

"On the other hand, when Meyer Friedman and Sam Cohen, neither of them fur workers, and one with a record of serving two terms for felony, were arrested for assaulting Aaron Gross, chief business agent of the Joint Board, on June 9, it was the firm of Samuel Markewitch, the international's lawyer, who immediately took charge of their case when they reached the police station, and it was the International which signed their bail bond. It is this same lawyer who appeared for Samuel Klein, who assaulted both Sam Wiesnick on June 20 and A. Kramer on June 22. It was with iron bars, similar to those found in the car this morning, that Wienick and another worker, Samuel Barr, were both knocked unconscious. This morning it was Mr. Reis, a representative of Markewitch, who appeared in the Thirtieth street station to take charge of the gangsters' case.

Had License Number.

"The license number of the Packard car in which the men arrested this morning were riding was given to the police several days ago, and it was known to the police that the gangsters were cruising in this car. We feel that this incident today explained why the International officials refused several months ago to appear before Magistrate Brodsky at his request and endeavor to clarify this issue of gangsterism. The Joint Board, which has always been anxious for an investigation of this matter appeared at that time. Mr. McGrady refused to appear and kept up his talk about the 'Joint Board hiring gangsters.' Just why he made such repeated accusations is now quite plain.

To Clean Out Gangsters.

"In view of the serious situation which is revealed by today's arrests, the Joint Board will request the city authorities to take immediate steps to apprehend those who are sending these men out to commit murder. We shall not rest until the gangsters are cleared out of the fur market and every one of them are cleared out of the unions so that our workers may be safe."

Have Prison Records.

The gangsters arrested are Moses Schwartz who has spent four years in Sing Sing for holdup; James Eagan who served one year in the penitentiary at Trenton, N. J.; Joseph Goldberg, Edward Goldman, Benjamin Wagner, Henry Goldstein, and David Kolbremer, the driver of the automobile.

When asked for the name of the right wing official who hired them, the gangsters said that a man named Sovel did so. According to people well informed, this is looked upon as a blind, no one by that name being known in the needle trades. Apparently the thugs were sorry at admitting that they were hired by the right wing, and looking for a method of escape, decided not to betray the real name of their employer.

Lindbergh Puppet of Plutes and Patriots In Aviation Project

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Charles Lindbergh will lend his name to a group of big business men headed by William B. Mayo and William B. Roberston.

Although Lindbergh will probably be a nominal official of the commercial aviation corporation that is being formed, it is stated that his job will consist of lending his reputation to the project.

Lindbergh will be made the dupe of militarism as much as big business in the venture, since commercial planes are easily converted into military planes.

Reservations Soon Closed for 6-Week Soviet Union Tour

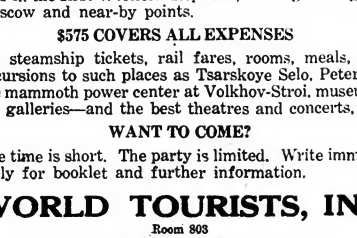
A closing date for enrollment is the six weeks' trip to Russia has been announced by World Tourists, Inc., of 41 Union Square, which is arranging for the tour which is to leave New York for Leningrad on July 14th.

There are now only 75 places open in this party, and all reservations must be made not later than July 1st, in order that arrangements may be completed in Russia by the USSR Society for Cultural Relations which will conduct the tourists throughout their visit.

Many Apply.

The interest in this first general tour to Soviet Russia is coming from many varied sections of the public. Applications have been made by doctors, dentists, teachers, business men, housewives and workers of both native and foreign birth. The party will undoubtedly be an exceptionally interesting group, some of them wanting to see the industrial development of new Russia, some curious to look at the rooms where the former czar and his family lived or the art treasures which the aristocracy used to keep hidden in their palaces. A number of the tourists will go to visit friends and relatives after the sight-seeing in Leningrad and Moscow is ended.

The moderate price of the six weeks' tour planned by the World Tourists is made possible because of the cooperation of the Society for Cultural Relations in Russia. They want to show the sights of this first Workers' Republic to both the professional and industrial workers of America. It is going to be a revelation to many members of the group to see the progress which is being made along every line of economic and social life.



War Plans Continue; New York to "Defend Itself" in the Fall

Plans are being made for an exhibition of light artillery and anti-aircraft gun practice at Fort Tilden, Rockaway, Queens, early in September, it was learned yesterday. Troops are to be sent to Fort Tilden from Fort Totten at Whitestone, to participate in the exhibition. This will be the first such exhibition at Fort Tilden in two years.

It is planned to have airplanes for targets during the day and night and these targets are to be fired at by troops at the fort.

Offices of the regular army and of the reserve corps will observe the practice, under the leadership of special instructors.

END INJUNCTION AGAINST PICKETS AT OHIO MINES

Central Pennsylvania May Strike Soon

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 24.—Locked-out Ohio union miners won their first legal battle with the operators here today when federal judge Hough dissolved the temporary injunction he granted to the operators last week, restraining the union men from picketing or interfering with attempts to open the Robeyville mines of the Pittsburgh Coal Company at Adena, Ohio.

Central Pennsylvania May Strike.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Negotiations between the scale committee of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America and the employers have about broken down, and this means that in all probability the membership in this important district will be on strike and thus be able to aid the locked-out membership of the other districts in the bituminous field.

The operators have demanded a wage reduction. The miners are determined not to accept any reduction below the Jacksonville Scale. An earlier conference broke up, a month ago, over the same question. Central Pennsylvania has been running on the Jacksonville scale thus far, while the miners in other districts were locked out as a result of a general wage slashing campaign by the employers.

In the six years that have elapsed since Great Britain "joyously accepted" naval equality with the United States at the Washington conference, one prominent official cynically observed, British views on naval armament seems to have undergone a complete change.

See Victory Soon For the Striking Barbers in Newark

NEWARK, N. J., June 24.—At present over 800 barbers are on strike here. The picketing line is being doubled and victory is near.

The bosses are holding a meeting tonight at which they are trying to line up the public in opposition to the strikers. They claim that a victory for the union will mean a one dollar haircut and a forty cent shave. The union officials say that is nothing but boss propaganda.

During the last two days 300 men have been pulled out of open shops. This morning three of the largest downtown shops were closed down. According to the union by tomorrow, 90 per cent of the workers will be out and the entire trade crippled.

The demands of the strikers are $35 as the basis, with 60 per cent of all over $45 a week that they take in. They also want their hours reduced to 60 a week. Before the strike they toiled 70 to 80 hours weekly.

Buffalo Protests Saturday.

BUFFALO, June 24.—"Life and Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti!" This is the slogan of the huge protest meeting to be held tomorrow night at 7:30 at the McKinley monument. Additional 50,000 signatures for a petition demanding their release is the goal set by the 30th of this month.

In the meantime William G. Thompson, defense attorney, has submitted a 22-page brief to the governor, with additional evidence of innocence. An important report of a Pinkerton Detective Agency operative has fallen into his hands—through the efforts of Thomas O'Connor, a Boston newspaperman, and others.

All these years the operative's report has been suppressed by the government, and by the L. Q. White Shoe Company which retained him. The detective's investigation a few days after the crime serves to further discredit the prosecution's case against Vanzetti in the attempted hold-up of the White payroll at Bridgewater, Mass., December 24, 1919.

It will be remembered that Vanzetti's conviction for the Bridgewater affair prejudiced his cause and that of Sacco when they were jointly tried for the South Braintree murder some time later.

The Pinkerton man interviewed police officers and other witnesses who later testified against Vanzetti. They told him very different stories from those they swore to on the witness stand the following year and the descriptions they gave of the bandits did not fit Vanzetti.

The Deadlock at Geneva.

The close of the first week of the conference called at Geneva to discuss limitation of naval armaments finds the three participating powers, the United States, Britain and Japan, hopelessly deadlocked.

Almost overnight the comment of the capitalist press of the two great Anglo-Saxon powers changed from expressions of exalted sentiment about the manifest destiny of these two powers being to defend the achievements of civilization to the most violent recriminations.

The actual time spent in conference during the week was precisely 45 minutes—and that on the first day. The conflict between the powers was instantly manifested and adjournment was voted in order that the "experts" might discuss the proposals.

As far as the United States is concerned its announced proposals were simple—an extension of the 5-5-3 ration adopted at the Washington conference to cover cruisers, destroyers and submarines. Britain demanded reduction in cruiser tonnage to such an extent that the United States with its present bases would be crippled as far as activities in the Far East are concerned, while leaving Britain in undisputed control because of its own closely-knit chain of bases. The proposal to establish a six-inch maximum for guns on all cruisers would also be of tremendous advantage to Britain because she could then utilize her merchant ships for cruisers in case of emergency, which would give her a tremendous advantage in naval power over the United States.

On the other hand the United States proposals for extension of the 5-5-3 ratio would force Britain to scrap many of her cruisers that she has been building since the Washington conference of 1921-22. Furthermore the United States sets the minimum for guns on cruisers at 8-inches, which would be powerful enough to blast the armed British merchant ships from the seas.

As the third party to the deadlock, Japan follows a policy far closer to Britain than to the United States and flatly refuses to consider the American proposals.

Of all conferences yet held since the Versailles treaty this one promises to be the most futile. All previous conferences ended in miserable compromises far short of the original aims. The antagonisms between the imperialist powers prevented the realization of their professed aims, but at least they always contrived to emerge with the pretense of having done something. The present conference indicates that a point has been reached where the antagonism can no longer be concealed from the whole world because compromise is impossible.

The outcome of this conference is doubtful, not because there are any chances of its patching up the differences that are so glaring, but simply because none of the three powers dares at this time definitely to proclaim the close of the era of pacifism in the service of imperialism. They dare not now admit that these international conferences are all so many maneuvers on the checkerboard of international diplomacy preparatory to the time, fast approaching, when the last move will have been made and the present conflicts are fought out on the sanguinary field of battle.

The Leopard Changeth Not His Spots.

A Daniel has come to judgment on the B. and O. plan, the beautiful scheme concocted by William H. Johnston, former president of the International Association of Machinists and Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Under the plan the worker lamb would lie down with the capitalist lion in peace and security. Or rather he would work for the kings of the capitalist jungle and be compensated for his trustfulness by the generosity of the employer. The eight-hour day was one of the keys to the solution of the eternal conflict between capital and labor.

The praises of Daniel Willard and his B. and O. were on every tongue and William H. Johnston held his precarious position in the union a little while longer as the result. Other roads adopted the B. and O. plan and profited thereby. The workers, however, got nothing out of it but thanks.

When the railroad bosses came to the conclusion that they had extracted the guts from the rail unions they dropped the olive leaf of peace and assumed the armor of battle.

Now we have Daniel Willard, suggesting that the 8-hour day be ditched and the basic working day extended to nine and ten hours, in order that (this is funny) temporary spells of unemployment could be avoided.

Verily, indeed, he that sticketh his head into the lion's mouth is liable to find a set of sturdy teeth between it and his shoulders. And the workers who trust themselves to the tender mercies of their masters without any protection other than a childlike trustfulness in their generosity, need not be surprised if they find themselves deceived.

Another pipe dream has been dissipated by the realities of life under capitalism. Business trade unionism received a deadly blow in the fiasco of the banking and investment companies of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The B. and O. plan has been kicked in the gizzard by one of its joint parents, Daniel Willard.

Let this news be carried into every local union in the United States as added proof of the Communist contention that the only relationship that can exist between worker and employer is one of struggle and that labor cannot compete with the capitalists in business this side of the social revolution.

Rapid City, South Dakota and the Liberation Struggle in the Far East.

The 1928 election colors every word of news emanating from Rapid City, South Dakota, where President Coolidge has established headquarters, and the visit of the governor general of the Philippines, Leonard Wood, is of extreme interest in this connection.

We are told by the capitalist press correspondents that the health of the governor general is such as to make his resignation almost certain and when such excuses are given for a rumored resignation of a high official we can expect always some far more fundamental reason.

General Wood leaves the Philippines at a time when the island population is showing the greatest mass discontent in their history. Especially among the marine transport workers and large sections of the agricultural workers have there been strikes and uprisings of such magnitude that the capitalist press has been forced to take note of them.

That Wood is intensely disliked and regarded as an open enemy of Filipino independence and elementary popular rights is a matter of public knowledge. It is largely upon his recommendation that the Coolidge pronouncement against independence and the throttling of the colonial governing board has taken place.

Wood has not been successful in placating the masses or even in establishing better relations with the middle class advocates of Filipino freedom. His removal is politically necessary and could be justified easily.

It happens that Wood was endorsed for the presidency in 1920 by the republican party organization of South Dakota. That he still has an ambition to shine in national politics goes without saying.

So he is brought to the Coolidge sanctum while the press plays up the probability of his resignation. Carmi Thompson, Coolidge's special commissioner who toured the Philippines, is mentioned as his successor.

Coolidge needs South Dakota support—it might be decisive in determining the attitude of a number of "farm bloc" states which are notoriously cool toward Coolidge.

Wood will probably be told that if he can swing South Dakota for Coolidge he can keep his job—otherwise the high interests of American government—and his poor health—require a change in the governorship of the Philippines.

Basically, of course, the evidences of mass discontent with American policy are responsible for the fact that Wood is in bad. The Chinese revolution has had a tremendous effect among the workers and peasants, and the suppressive measures taken by the American military authorities have made it possible for the Filipinos to make some illuminating comparisons.

By reason of this the liberation struggle in the Far East influences the trend of capitalist politics in the United States and becomes linked up directly with the struggle of the exploited American farmers.

The Coolidge-Wood parley shows the necessity of bringing home to the American masses the importance of the world-shaking events in the Far East in which the imperialist policy of the American ruling class has plunged them.

It seems a far cry from farm taxation, crop prices, mortgages, the McNary-Haugen bill and the agricultural crisis to the Filipino independence movement and the Chinese revolution but the connection is obviously made in Rapid City, South Dakota.

Cruelty Without Limit Characterizes the Treatment of Sacco and Vanzetti.

No word as to his intentions in the Sacco-Vanzetti case has come from Governor Fuller and these two workers will suffer that most cruel of tortures—uncertainty as to their fate with the odds in favor of the electric chair.

This barbarous disregard of the most elementary humanitarian principles shown by the official spokesman of the Massachusetts ruling class is now the outstanding feature of the whole case. There is one short week left before Sacco and Vanzetti are to be taken to the death-cell. It should be the immediate objective of the American working class to see that they are not taken to this ante-room to the grave.

July 10, the date set for their execution, is not far away. Every day now must be made to count. No day must pass without some powerful mass demand for their unconditional release.

The cruelty of those who desire to murder Sacco and Vanzetti knows no limits. The working class must meet this cruelty with an unshakable determination which will set free the two men who have become symbols of the oppression which bears upon their class with crushing weight.

The Cautious Angler

—AND THE PICKLED TROUT—

By T. J. OFLAHERTY.

SQUAW CREEK nestled comfortably among the Black Hills of South Dakota. Its waters, from the frisky catfish to the wild and rollicking trout, did not have a care in the world. They laughed at the hot rays of the sun which they could see thru the transparent waters of the creek and they lived like the happy savages of a utopian's ideal state, having nothing to do but amuse themselves and wearing nothing but what nature provided them with.

Sometimes the inhabitants of Squaw Creek got bored and did not know what to do with their time between meals. Living in a state of primitive collectivism, they had no need for government and hence political campaigns were superfluous since a big catfish attempted to seize power one hundred years ago. A mass uprising settled his ambitions and his head was impaled on the shin bone of a South Dakota farmer who was drowned by his wife in the days before the sash weight came into general use as a weapon for settling domestic difficulties. This ghastly warning served to cool the ardor of other individualists who might feel like destroying the democracy that existed in Squaw Creek.

The fish of Squaw Creek were noted all over the plains and hills of South Dakota for their cunning and caution. Their favorite diversion was playing with the hooks of optimistic farmers who voted the republican ticket in the expectation of bettering their condition thereby and who fished in Squaw Creek hoping against hope to provide their wives with a substitute for salt pork. The fish of Squaw Creek would hold a caucus, just like the G. O. P., and decide what to do with the enemy on the surface.

This was one of their favorite tricks: Several of them would grab a piece of ironwood between their teeth and make a furious drive for the shining bait that danced in the water. The impetus of the forward rush would cause a tidal wave, rock-ing the South Dakotan farmer's boat perilously. His hook would catch in the sticky slime on the wood and when this was accomplished the finny funsters would give two additional wags of their tails, cock their ears and with their sides almost bursting with laughter make a drive for shore.

The angling farmer by this time thot he had a shoal of fish on his hook and when he had a complete vision of a year's supply the jokers would suddenly let go and the impetus of the rush would land the farmer and his boat on shore. Needless to say the ranks of the Squaw Creek inhabitants were only depleted by old age or factional fights among themselves. Indeed the population of the creek was increasing so rapidly that the Malthusian doctrine was gaining in popularity as a matter of biological expediency when an unexpected disaster fell on the once happy colony.

A white man, noted all over the United States for the qualities that made the Squaw Creek fish the marvel of South Dakota, appeared on the scene. He was looking for new worlds to conquer. He occupied the position of president of the United States and won his way to power, because of no special ability that the voters could discern but simply owing to his habit of taciturnity and blinking his eyes whenever the simplest question was propounded for his consideration. His name was Calvin Coolidge.

"I have a presentiment of approaching calamity" remarked a middle aged devil fish to a fellow company at a social affair one evening in the devil fish's basement apartment. "I remember distinctly having a similar feeling before my father died. It is a queer trickling sensation on the hip as if somebody was trying to steal your flask or your pocketbook. Also have a wicked pain in the head like what one gets when he runs up against a preacher on the radio."

A tame dogfish, who was being treated for spinal meningitis by the only chiropractor in Squaw Creek, trembled violently and his minnow fell from his mouth. He was just about to shriek hysterically when a crab crawled slowly in as crabs will.

"Cautious Cal Coolidge is in the vicinity," he drawled.

A deadly silence fell on the gathering. Their tails drooped.

"He is having a conference this moment with his spokesman," continued the crab, "and he has invited the local farmers to meet him for a discussion on the subject of Squaw Creek. It is said that he never lost a battle since President Harding died of ptomaine poisoning after eating broiled crab and even tho he owes his present eminence to na, they say that he has a peculiar phobia against fish. Another case of a man biting the hand that feeds him."

"It is a serious matter," declared an old gudgeon, who had a reputation for wisdom among his fellows, "but I would not be unduly pessimistic. After all one must not gauge the wisdom of Mr. Coolidge by the fact that he has been elected by the American voters. Those dumbbells also voted for Wilson and Harding. We have held off all South Dakota for one hundred years and I'll be damned if Coolidge is going to get the best of us."

"He will never win South Dakota in the next elections, unless he takes fish out of Squaw Creek," muttered the crab gloomily. "As far as I am concerned I am going to park myself in the deepest hole I can find and go to sleep until he returns to Washington. I have been eating too many worms lately anyhow and I am getting so stout that the fair sex don't like me any more."

The crab ambled off and so did the others when they got a chance, all except the trout, the best fighters in the creek.

"Our crowd dies; we never surrender" shouted the chief of the trout family. The others nodded.

Just then a pleasant odor came creeping thru the water. The bass sniffled and began to move slowly towards the exit.

"Smells like Scotch," said one.

"I am afraid of it," said another. "I'll look at the bottom of the bottle and see if it was operated on. It might be from Halsted street, Chicago."

"I'd drink shellac now," said the head of the family. Without saying another word they moved in the direction where the odor came from.

"A bottle!" they shouted in unison.

There it was, the strangest looking bottle ever seen in Squaw Creek. It was covered with labels and writing matter which indicated that it came from Pittsburgh. Projecting from the bottle were six bright nipples with worms attached to them by means of specks of cement. The aroma attracted the bass to the bottle like moths to a flame. Soon they were fighting for position. Six bass wrapped their lips around the nipples and sucked. This lasted for a few moments. Soon the six trout began to show signs of inebriety. They held on to the nipples but their fins drooped and their tails curled up freakishly. The trout that did not have a chance to get at the bottle licked their lips and waited. They figured that the six would soon have enough and would stagger to the nearest bar to sleep it off.

But just then the bottle began to move upwards. The six drunken trout held on to their nipples.

"It's a trap!" shouted their now undeceived comrades. "Coolidge has got you. Let go and swim for your lives."

But the only answer of the six drunken trout was six languid tail wags and the chorus of "Show me the way to go home."

The rest of the trout darted for their crevices and went on a vegetable diet.

"Prohibition is the best curse that ever happened to this country," exclaimed Calvin Coolidge as he hauled his bottle-fed trout into the boat. It's a law that gets things for me coming and going. Wayne Wheeler will support me anyhow, and this bottle of booze puts South Dakota on my hip. Bring on the photographers."

That evening thousands of farmers from all over South Dakota gathered to pay homage to the president.

"How did you do it, Mr. President?" asked Hirsm Snuffleheffer, the famous bear hunter.

"Cal" referred the questioner to the

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER VIII.—(Continued).

As the leading executive committee of the party, and its importance it may become advisable to establish a Political Bureau with full executive powers between meetings of the executive committee.

Further Departmentalization.

While these three departments mentioned are the most necessary ones they do not cover the full scope of Party work. Wherever possible departments should also be created for Women's Work whose duty should be to establish contacts, direct the propaganda and activities of our members amongst the women in industry, among women domestic workers and housewives. It should direct our women comrades to become members of women's working class organizations and to be active particularly in trade union ladies auxiliaries. If this department actually carries on its function, it will soon find out there are issues aplenty particularly pertaining to the conditions of workingclass women.

A department should also be established to direct Party activities amongst Negro workers, to study the special methods necessary to effectively approach Negro workers and make contacts with them. To wherever possible in general work have special Negro leaflets and special Negro speakers at meetings.

Our Party should propagandize in the true sense of the word social equality between members of the various races, but the Negro department should also give special attention to have all comrades propagate this issue in all workingclass organizations. To help break down the barriers to racial, social and economic equality. The organization of fractions of Negro members belonging to broader Negro organizations is necessary as any other fraction and their work should be directed by the Negro department.

Other departments should be established as local conditions require.

An Approach to an Important Problem

In the same manner that our Party Central Executive Committee acts on national political and workingclass issues and outlines the necessary policies, our District and City Executive Committee must act on state and local issues. A short simple prerequisite is to secure all records of State Legislatures, City Councils as well as State Federations of Labor and City Central Labor bodies. These records should be followed closely, all proposed legislation should be examined particularly those affecting workingclass issues. The organization's consequence of such legislation should be explained to our units, discussed and the correct lessons drawn. The same naturally applies to important actions or issues of Central Labor bodies. This will help greatly in drawing the attention of our members much more toward practical issues of the American workingclass, political and otherwise.

The next steps are to outline concrete policies for action on the issues, which will mobilize our units and the largest possible section of the workingclass for action. It will be quite

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

In the loss of Comrade Ruthenberg the Workers (Communist) Party has lost its foremost leader and the American working class its staunchest fighter. This loss can only be overcome by many militant workers joining the Party that he built.

Fill out the application below and mail it. Become a member of the Workers (Communist) Party and carry forward the work of Comrade Ruthenberg.

I want to become a member of the Workers (Communist) Party.

presidential spokesman, who said:

"He did it with worms."

And this is the story of the great angling feat that drove Lindbergh off the front page and kept South Dakota cool for Coolidge.

a safe bet that these issues will furnish the most splendid basis of approach to the American workingclass.

Reaching the Youth.

The problems of the young workers have not received sufficient consideration by our Party. We have not even yet a regular interchange of delegates to the leading local committees. This, however, must be established as a regular practice. It is necessary that in all Party campaigns and major Party activities, the Y. W. L. members be fully drawn in. For this purpose alone contact is necessary, but while Y. W. L. members participate in these activities, the Party committees must in all instances stress the question effecting the young workers and thus provide a basis to bring them closer to the Y. W. L.

It is just as necessary that Party members take part in major activities of the Y. W. L., help build up units where none exist, and strengthen those that are weak. The Party can assist the Y. W. L. in its factory campaigns. It can assist in making arrangements that Y. W. L. members make contact with various sports organizations and not only give an opportunity to function in them, but help create labor sports on a united front labor basis. While the approach to the young American workers can be greatly facilitated thru sports and social connections it should nevertheless be borne in mind that the way to develop and strengthen the Y. W. L. is to help make it a class organization, fighting effectively alongside of the Party. The Pioneer Groups must receive the same measure of assistance.

in permitting district instead of national agreements and the "work pending settlement policy."

UNDER this dispensation several union mines have resumed operations, hiring men as they see fit. The unemployed must first work so that they may eat and as a settlement may never take place for all the miners know, the unemployed must pack up their belongings and hike elsewhere in search of work. This solves the problem as far as the operators are concerned. It means nothing else but the liquidation of the union as a protection for the miners. This is as clear a piece of treachery as was ever perpetrated against a trade union leadership. It is typical of the attack on the radicals, which is an attempt to switch attention from the perfidy of the Lewis official family to a new red-hunting campaign.

IT takes a policeman to be several centuries behind the times, even in the palmy days of the Salem witch time when a general belief in the flatness of the earth prevailed. Science hod its work cut out for it for several centuries before superstitions and some of them have survived even yet. There was one that science did not bother with. It was the belief that every socialist looked like an inverted broom from the neck up. To wear a full length crop of hair was prima facie evidence that the wearer harbored "subversive" ideas. Had this been so, before women bobbed their hair there would be no capitalist system by now.

HOWEVER, this idea went the way of the "nation of fatherless children" during the war and afterwards. But the New York police are holding the "thin red line" in this darkened superstition. One of them, a warrior of the picket line in the furriers' strike, informed a judge that several Communists were picketing. How did he know? They had long hair. If this flatheaded fellow ever had a look at the House of David he would experience consternation at the sight. He would find whiskers there in their pristine glory, but not an idea in their vicinity of a vintage later than 200 B. C.

NOW that Miss Anita Whitney has been pardoned by the governor of California there is no reason in the world why the I. W. W. victims of California persecution who are pining behind prison bars should not be given the freedom that they should have never been deprived of. Miss Whitney had influential friends and her age and gentle character made it exceedingly inexpedient for the ruling classes of California to imprison her. But she is just as guilty as the I. W. W. boys that are fretting behind the gray walls of San Quentin. It is about time for a revival of agitation to open the prison gates for every victim of class injustice in the United States.

THE date set for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is drawing dangerously near. July 10th is now only a few weeks away and the fate of these two workers is in the hands of one person, the governor of Massachusetts. We must not be lulled into a feeling of false optimism because a large number of respectable people have urged the governor to pardon. A great mass agitation is the best guarantee that the murderous ruling classes of Massachusetts will not execute Sacco and Vanzetti or bury them in prison for the rest of their lives.

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty.

THIS is not a fish story: It is rumored that General Wood, alias "Ivory Soap," the tuchun of the tobacco, rubber and sugar trusts in the Philippines has been recalled from the islands to make South Dakota safe for Coolidge. In addition to the exploitation of the Filipinos by the American tax masters, Wood's numerous blunders made a bad situation worse and it seems that the administration considered attaching a shiny can to his political tail.

* * *

BUT the exigencies of politics modify decisions and the reports now current around Rapid City, South Dakota indicate that the political lobe of the President's brain, calculates on utilising the former Proctor-Gamble white hope in the task of capturing the electoral vote of South Dakota for Big Chief Still Waters. It should be noted that Wood carried South Dakota in the primaries that preceded the election of Warren Gamaliel Harding. So, canny "Cal" figuring that Leonard might like to take another trip to the Philippines in order to catch a legitimate disease that would enable him to retire without creating the impression that he was kicked in the trousers, may agree to hold Wood's blunders in abeyance in return for the votes he may be able to bring in to the Coolidge net.

NEVERTHELESS we think that Coolidge could win more votes by suggesting a solution of the farmers' ills than by importing a white elephant. A democratic newspaper states that Coolidge's speech to a gathering of South Dakota legislators left the latter cold. Coolidge was of the opinion that there was nothing the matter with the farmer. Something like Woodrow Wilson's analysis of the industrial depression which he declared was "purely psychological." He might as well attribute their troubles to the "sex complex." It would do them as much good.

SO far the three-power naval conference in Geneva has accomplished little beyond shedding light on the keen rivalry that exists between the United States and England. Japan sits back watching every opportunity to extract some advantage from this rivalry. There will be no reduction of armaments as a result of this conference. There will be a new naval armament race between the United States and Great Britain. The admirals of both countries are snarling at each other. This is a prelude to the boom of hostile cannon.

GIANT demonstrations against the anti-trade union bill are taking place in England. Hyde Park was the scene of a lively encounter between Fascists and Communists last Sunday. The days of free speech and calm discussion of differences of opinion are passing in England. In those halcyon days of British capitalism this orderly condition (much exaggerated at that) was attributed to the English character. What a calm, cool and collected brute this Briton was? No wonder he could lord it over millions of subject peoples. But now he is getting as excited as a whirling dervish. Simply because he is losing out in the struggle for world markets and threatened with revolution at home and abroad. This refers to the British ruling class which is doomed to go and to the British workingclass which is about to come into its own.

THAT the French government bureaucrats is honeycombed with Fascist-Royalist sympathizers was proved a few days ago when by a clever ruse the Royalist editor Leon Dadet, and an associate were released from prison by confederates. A royalist representing himself as the minister of the interior called the prison commandant on the telephone and ordered the release of the two royalists and a Communist—the latter included to give the order a show of plausibility.

* * *

THE ability of the conspirators to use the telephone in the department of the interior and the laxity of the prison commandant in releasing prisoners with a written order to that effect from the competent authority would indicate a lack of discipline in the French governmental institution that would seem astounding here. There is a suspicion that the prison commandant was in on the plot. He is said to be a royalist sympathizer and embraced either Daudet or his wife when the former was released. Perhaps both.

JULY 1 IS WHEN MINERS DISTRICT TWO WILL STRIKE

Illinois Conference to Be Resumed This Week

PHILADELPHIA, June 27 (FP)—Miners of central Pennsylvania bituminous fields who have worked under temporary union agreements since April 1 face a complete shutdown of mines July 1. Failure of operators and District 2, United Mine Workers officials to reach an agreement in their second conference brings this extension of the soft coal shutdown.

Operators who have run their mines temporarily under the Jacksonville scale since the central competitive field strike began April 1 insist now on wage cuts. The union refuses any reduction. James Mark, District 2 president, offered for the union continuation of present wage rates until March 29, 1929 with certain changes of penalties and deadwork scales.

New York Central Railroad representatives led the operators in demanding 15 to 20 per cent wage cuts. Coal mines of this road have maintained agreements with the union while nearly all other employer interests of similar size have broken away.

The shutdown throws about 12,000 more men out of work. Despite the strike in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania (central competitive field), there has not been full time employment for union men in District 2.

To Resume Illinois Conference.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Little progress was made in the opening days of the Illinois coal conference between operators and the union in Chicago. The miners presented demands for a continuation of the scale that expired April 1 and the operators demanded a cut "to meet non-union competition." Peabody, the principal Illinois operator (who bought up Frank Farrington last year while Farrington headed the Illinois Miners' Union), is also an extensive non-union operator in other states. The miners are thus virtually asked to take a cut because Peabody in other states is competing against himself in Illinois. They couldn't see it.

Farrington's successor and associate in office, Fishwick, is in charge of the present negotiations. He offered the operators a separate agreement for Illinois, so that it could not strike with the rest of the field in the future, and offered to make the working conditions worse, permitting more "dead work" (work without pay) and other changes in the contract which would throw men out of employment and cut the payroll of the company, thus in effect, cutting wages, and probably to be followed by a wage cut which the union could not resist.

However, the operators demanded an open and formal submission by the union, with an open and above board wage cut.

The conferences will be resumed this week. About 3 per cent of the miners in Illinois are now at work in mines that are continuing the old scale until an agreement is reached that will end the lockout in the central competitive field.

Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party Issues Call for Five Thousand New Readers of The Daily Worker

The increasing danger of a new World War, the oncoming offensive of the American capitalist class against the labor movement and against the party, make it necessary that the party strengthen and widen its contact with the workers throughout the country. We are entering a period of renewed war preparations, during which the capitalist press will again come out openly as the willing tool of the war mongers. The capitalist offensive against the militant elements in the trade unions and against the party, the first step in the campaign to attack the basic rights of the unions to organize, to picket and to strike, is making full use of the press to prejudice the workers against their most energetic fighters.

In this struggle The DAILY WORKER is the only daily newspaper in the English language which can be relied upon to bring to the workers the true facts and to indicate the policy to be followed in meeting this onslaught.

For this reason the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has decided to call upon all the forces in the party as well as the party sympathizers for a drive on a nation-wide scale for Five Thousand additional readers for The DAILY WORKER. We call upon every party member and every comrade who is with us in this struggle against the imperialists and the reactionaries in the labor movement, to do his bit to increase the influence and power of The DAILY WORKER, and thus make stronger labor's most militant defense against the onslaught of the combined forces of reaction.

Pittsburgh Terminal Co. Cuts Off Water Supply From Its Union Miners

MOLLENAUER, Pa., June 27.—The water supply in the miners' homes here and in the mining town of Castle Shannan has been cut off by order of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co. since last Saturday.

The company has been trying to eject its miners from the houses they rent ever since it decided to go non-union. The miners have been successfully fighting the proceedings, and have appealed the case thru several courts, meanwhile posting bonds to cover the rent in case they lose.

The company's deliberate attempt to use thirst as a weapon against its tenants and former employes, whom it has so far failed to reach by legal means, is being opposed by counsel for the union.

Actors Will Fight To Keep Salaries Where They Belong

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—Motion picture actors will not passively submit to wholesale slashes in their salaries, as outlined recently by several big producers, it was believed today as the Actors' Equity prepared to act on behalf of the stars.

At a mass meeting called for Wednesday night, the actors will map out their policy in discussing the proposed 10 per cent wage reductions.

Conrad Nagel, Milton Sills, Jack Holt, Jack Mulhall, Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Ernest Torrence, Charles Ray, Lionel Belmore, Kenneth Harlan, Bryant Washburn, Robert Edeson and Alex Francis are among the members of the executive committee of Equity in California.

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL CALLS ON OPPRESSED TO OPPOSE NEW WAR

To All Suppressed Peoples! To The Soldiers and Sailors!

Text of the Appeal of the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

TO THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF THE WHOLE WORLD!

COMRADES! Brothers!

Crushed and tortured, humanity is still groaning beneath the heaps of ruins of the great imperialist war, whose countless victims still live among us as fearful witnesses of the horror and crime of this war. The new generation has not yet been able to free itself from this terror, and already there is increasing from day to day the bloody menace of a new world war.

In China a vast population of many hundred millions of slaves is shaking from its sleep the pressing yoke of international imperialism. The working and peasant masses who are being stifled under the double oppression of foreign imperialism and the native exploiters are rebelling against the unbounded exploitation under which they suffer. The workers are refusing to work for fourteen hours a day for starvation wages for the benefit of the foreign and native profiteers, for the big industrialists; and the peasants are likewise refusing to toil for the big landowners, for the usurers and for the Generals, the hirelings of international imperialism. The Chinese revolution, born out of the misery and the exploitation of the people, is rising powerfully and vengefully against imperialism; it is shaking imperialism's unsteady stabilisation and deepening the deadly crisis in the midst of which imperialism has been writhing ever since the last world war.

THE heroic example of the workers and peasants of China is awakening the broad masses of the colonial peoples; the echo of their struggles and their victories resounds to India-China, to Indonesia and to India. The vampires of the imperialist capital

WILLARD MAKES CLEAR HE WANTS TEN-HOUR DAY

Secretary Morrison Is Confused

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27.—The statement made by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in answer to criticism of his advocacy of the longer workday confirms the belief that the eight-hour day in the railway industry is under attack.

This Willard denies, but his second statement openly favors the abolition of time and one-half for overtime worked up to 10 hours.

The experience of the labor movement has shown beyond doubt that without a penalty placed upon the employer for shifts over 8 hours the 8-hour day is meaningless.

Inspired by Open Shop Roads.

Willard admits that the example of open shop roads like the Delaware and Hudson, where the work day is 9 and 10 hours has aroused his envy.

Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor has replied to Willard, but one clause of this reply is causing considerable comment in labor circles. Morrison stated that union shopmen would accept the Willard proposal only if time and one-half for time over 8 hours is paid.

This statement confuses rather than clarifies the issue, since it can be taken to mean that the 9 and 10 hour day will meet with approval in the executive council of the A. F. of L. if it is accompanied by an increase in wages which will approximate the amount of pay for two hours' overtime work.

It is pointed out here that this is a dangerous principle, since a future reduction in wages would leave the 10-hour day in force.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Retain 70c Maximum on Illinois Traction Lines.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 27.—The old scale, with a maximum of 70c an hour, remains in force on the Illinois Traction system, known as the McKinley lines. Arbitrators got the case under agreement with the union to submit disputes to third parties. The system operates through central Illinois from Danville to St. Louis.

To Try Preacher.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Defying the demand of members of his congregation for his resignation, the Rev. Alfred E. Barrows, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, chose to face trial today upon charges involving alleged "immoral offenses of a serious nature."

The pastor has been under suspension since March 5.

Rev. Barrows, who is 55 years old, is married and is a member of many prominent civic and fraternal organizations.

Commercial Trans-Continental Flight.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—The first combined trans-continental air mail and passenger service will be inaugurated on July 1, when the Boeing Air Transport, Inc., sends two planes into the air, one westward from Chicago and the other eastward from San Francisco, according to an announcement made here today by W. G. Herron, vice-president in charge of traffic for the new line.

Mitten Decides Doesn't Want Brotherhood Banks; Convention in Confusion

PHILADELPHIA, June 27 (FP)—Mitten Management, Inc., will not take over the funds of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Dr. A. A. Mitten, son of Thomas E. Mitten, made the announcement when acceptance of the scheme by the brotherhood convention seemed unlikely. The Mittens had demanded an 80 per cent majority vote favoring them, it is understood. The committee of 10 considering the proposition had not yet reported.

Chicago's Gangster War Is On; Suspect Police Take Share

CHICAGO, June 27.—Renewal of Chicago's gangland warfare was seen here today in the finding of the bullet-riddled body of Ignazio Guarrigno, 45, which had been tossed into a muddy ditch on the outskirts of the city.

Two bullets had pierced his abdomen and the face and body had been scratched and torn by sharp stones of a newly repaired road when his murderers tossed him from a speeding automobile.

It is frequently charged on good authority that the police and city departments are in partnership with the beer running gunmen. An assistant state's attorney was killed last year in the company of two notorious bootleggers, who fell at the same time under the fire of rival gangsters. State's attorney Crowe had his picture taken at a banquet of the Genna gangsters, and this picture was published. Two years ago a shakeup of police followed the discovery that the police were confiscating imported beer from one gang of runners and selling it to another, friendly group. Killings are frequent and the killers seem to have "protection."

DETROIT, Mich., June 27. — State Representative Chester A. Good went on trial today on a robbery armed charge.

Convict Officials of Telegraphone; Bell Co. Hired Them to Sabotage

WASHINGTON, June 27. — Charles D. Rood, president, and Charles A. Ballard, secretary, of the American Telegraphone Company of Springfield, Mass., were held guilty of gross mismanagement of the corporation by Justice Frederick L. Siddons in District Supreme Court today.

An audit was ordered preparatory to awarding damages to stockholders, claimed by their attorneys to be between $100,000,000 and $185,000,000.

The Telegraphone Company's product is an invention designed to record phone messages when the phone is not answered.

Rood, stockholders' attorneys alleged, sought to wreck the company for the benefit of the Bell Telephone System, a prospective competitor.

SOVIET WAR TRIBUNAL OFFICIAL DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED BY WHITE

Chairman of Moscow Army District Shot by White Guard in Tribunal Building

Moscow Workers Make Plans to Celebrate Defense Week on July Tenth

MOSCOW, June 27.—Chairman Orlov, of the War Tribunal of the Moscow Army District, lies dangerously wounded as a result of the resumption of the white guard campaign of assassination. His assailant has been arrested.

The attempt on Orlov's life occurred inside the premises of the tribunal. Although the investigation of the assailant's identity and motives is still going on, it is stated in semi-official circles that the attempted murder is part of the white guardist campaign of murder and arson that is being conducted with the support of the British tory government.

Police Take Precaution.

The secret police thruout the Soviet Union are taking precautionary measures. Although the white guards are few in number, they constitute a serious menace, operating as they do in the interests of Great Britain. White spies, in the employ of the British Foreign Office, are said to be stationed in the army and navy.

The murder of Peter Voikoff, Soviet Minister to Poland, several weeks ago, by a young White Russian, who admitted that he committed the murder "under orders" was the signal for the renewal of a campaign of murder and arson. That many of the white guards were operating under direct orders from the British Foreign Office was revealed in the confession of Riley, a captured British spy, published soon after the murder of Voikoff.

Pilsudski Aids Raids.

Other evidence made public since the Voikoff murder showed that white bandits were using territory across the Polish border as a base of operations. That Pilsudski not only knew about bandit raids in the Ukraine, but actually encouraged them, was one of the startling facts brought out by the evidence.

Official Moscow is awaiting the results of investigation of the criminal attack on Orlov.

Preparations are being made here for the celebration of Defense Week, which has been instituted by the Society for the Promotion of Aviation, beginning July 10.

RUSH U. S. TROOPS, PLANES, TANKS TO TIENTSIN, PEKING

Try Borodina; Native Taxpayers Strike

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, June 27.—Chiang Kai-shek is reported to have dispatched a note to the Nationalist (Wuhan) government demanding that it disband all labor and peasant unions. Other demands said to be contained in the note call for the dismissal of Soviet advisers and of members of the Chinese (Communist) Party.

That the Nationalist government will accept any of these demands is regarded as extremely unlikely.

(Special Cable to Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, June 27.—The dispatch of imperialist troops to north China in preparation for the advance of the Nationalists continues.

Eight hundred American marines, accompanied by tanks and airplanes have been sent to Tientsin from Shanghai, while 350 French troops have left Hankow for Tientsin.

Two more Japanese transports bearing several hundred Japanese marines have arrived at Tientsin. Tsingtao looks like an armed camp. Forty-two American warships are anchored outside of the port.

PEKING, June 27.—The second session in the hearing of Mme. Borodin and three Soviet diplomatic couriers is being held.

The court at first refused to permit the examination of witnesses in whose presence the confiscated diplomatic mail was taken and opened, but after insistent demands of the accused decided to consider the question.

The court refused to comply with the request made by the defence that wires be sent to American schools where Borodina had studied, request-

GIBSON BERATES BRITISH POLICY AT NAVAL CONFAB

Threatens Race for Naval Supremacy

GENEVA, June 27.—Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation at the Geneva naval conference, launched an open attack upon the British proposals today. When interviewed by the press, Gibson was at first noncommittal but finally he replied to the statement of Bridgeman, head of the British delegation, that his "mandate at Geneva would not let him go home without discussion," by declaring that the British delegation could discuss anything they wanted, but whether the Americans discussed it with him was quite another matter.

In discussing the deadlock which threatens to make a joke out of the international conference called by Coolidge, Gibson said:

"Another difficulty of discussing this subject, quite apart from the fact that it is outside what we consider the rules of the conference, is the existence of two British ships of 35,000 tons each, just completed at a moment when Britain considers that the tonnage of future ships should be reduced under 30,000."

The two ships referred to are the Rodney and the Nelson, the most powerful naval vessels ever built, each mounting nine 16-inch guns, all forward and able to fire a salvo while plunging dead ahead in the high seas. The ships have nine fire controls and are equipped with smaller guns aft that can repel any rear attack.

The British declare that they have no intention of scrapping these ships and that any agreement reached must deal with future ships and not present ones. This means that even though Britain did accept the 5-5-3 ratio proposed by the United States it would not scrap any of its many cruisers built since the Washington conference of six years ago. In order to achieve equal naval power with Great Britain in the line of small cruisers the United States would have to spend hundreds of millions of dollars and increase its cruiser strength by about five times.

Threaten Naval Race.

The American delegation openly threatened Britain with an armament race and boasted that the great economic power of the United States would enable it to build a navy so formidable that it could sweep Britain from the seas.

Meanwhile secret conferences have been held between American and Japanese delegations and it is understood that certain agents of American banking capitalists were there who aided in financing Japanese reconstruction after the earthquake of 1923 and who tried to use the tremendous financial power of the United States to alienate Japan away from its recent approach to Britain.

Nicaraguan Army Still Defies U. S. Marines; Has City

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, June 27.—There is still a section of the country held by the Liberal forces of the constitutional president, tho the latter has been forced by U. S. marines to make way for Wall Street's man, Diaz, as president. General Sandino at present holds a part of the Provinces of Segovia, including the city of Segovia. He is reported to be collecting loans from the natives and foreign residents.

The claims commission, which will arbitrate claims resulting from the Diaz coup d'etat is scheduled to hold its first meeting July 1.

WALL STREET AND POPE ENEMIES OF MEXICO—OBREGON

Announces Candidacy for Presidency

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—Announcing his candidacy for the presidency of Mexico, former president Alvaro Obregon, secured Wall Street and the Pope as the great enemies of the Mexican Republic.

Referring to the recent Indian and clerical revolts, Obregon implied that they were instigated by Wall Street and powerful Catholic organizations.

The highest authorities in the Mexican church, Obregon's announcement states, "have openly taken advantage of the international crisis" to repudiate the Mexican Magna Charter, believing that the government would not dare to oppose the church at such a time.

Oil and the Pope.

Referring to the recent attempts on the part of Wall Street to instigate and subsidize a revolution in Mexico, General Obregon said:

"We should be extremely cautious with regard to investments which the imperialist interests of Wall Street attempt, to make in our territory but give every facility compatible with laws to industrial, commercial and agricultural interests which may wish to come from neighboring countries who will make the truth known among their nationals when the absorbent interests of Wall Street try to twist the truth and provoke conflicts and international crises between the chancelleries of both countries, as had happened on several occasions."

Duke of York Returns From 'Good Will' Cruise For Crumbling Empire

PORTSMOUTH, England, June 27.—The giant battle cruiser Renown, docked at the admiralty jetty here at noon today, bringing to an end the six months' tour of the Duke and Duchess of York, during which they toured Panama, Australia, New Zealand, Mauritus, Malta, Gibraltar and other empire points.

The object of the cruise was to drum up "good will" for the crumbling British empire.

Natural Gas Utilized.

Gas meters, regulators and other gas equipment for nearly $250,000 is to be shipped shortly from this country to the Soviet oil cities, Baku and Grozny.

Natural gas which is present in abundance in the Soviet oil fields is beginning to be utilized, for the first time in Russia, for household and refining purposes.

Economic Theory of the Leisure Class

by Nikolai Bukharin

Nikolai Bukharin, besides being the president of the Communist International, is the leading Marxian theoretician in the world today. He has done a great deal of scientific work in the field of sociology and economics, and has published a number of outstanding contributions in these fields.

The "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is one of his most important theoretical writings to be translated for the first time into English. Just as Marx has studied the theoretical systems of the classical economists (Smith, Ricardo, Mill, etc.) Bukharin tackles the dominant bourgeois political economy known as the Austrian School, (Menger, Boehm-Bawerk, Wieser, Wairas, Clark, etc.), in a brilliant style and with lucid Marxian reasoning, he analyses the theories of Marginal Utility, Value and Profit of the leading bourgeois economists, showing that the Austrian School is governed by the vulgar psychology of the rentier, the coupon-clipper.

octavo, $2.50

Another Important Book by Bukharin

While "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is a study in the field of political economy, "Historical Materialism" by the same author is an application of Marxism to the field of sociology. This book fully overcomes the standard text book and is considered one of the outstanding Marxian classics. In fact, it is the only book available where the materialist method has been applied to an analysis of the various social phenomena.

Soviet Will Establish Consulate Offices in Leningrad and Moscow

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—The Mexican government has just announced that it will establish a consulate at Leningrad at once, and probably in Moscow in the very near future. Ignacio Rubin of the foreign office staff has been appointed consul. It is expected that he will start soon.

The relations between the Soviet Union and Mexico have been on an extremely friendly basis. Mme. Alexandra Kollantai was appointed ambassador to Mexico in 1926. She is at present on a visit in the Soviet Union.

BRITISH BREAK TO INCREASE SOVIET TRADING IN U. S.

Economic Plans of Soviet Union Not Hampered

The following statement on American trade with the Soviet Union in the light of the Anglo-Soviet break was issued to the press by Saul G. Bron, Chairman of the Board of the Amtorg Trading Corporation:

"I have received numerous inquiries as to how American-Soviet trade will be affected by the breach in Anglo-Soviet relations. While it is still too early to give any figures in detail, my correspondence of the past few days indicates that there should be a decided gain in Soviet purchases here.

U. S. Gets Canada Business.

"Last year Soviet purchases in Great Britain aggregated about $75,000,000 and in Canada during the current year about $3,000,000. It is obvious that rearrangements of o business of this volume, under unexpectedly changed conditions, cannot be affected in a few days. I am advised that existing contracts made in both countries will be scrupulously fulfilled as far as the Soviet trading organizations are concerned. The offices of the Soviet trade delegation in Canada have already been closed and the uncompleted commitments have been turned over to Amtorg for completion.

Receiving British Orders.

"We are already receiving tentative orders from Moscow that would ordinarily go to England. The next few months will give an indication of the extent of such diversions. In this connection it is interesting to note that during May Amtorg placed the greatest number of orders in the United States during any month since its organization three years ago. These orders amounted to $3,500,000. This increase was not influenced by events in England. It is also interesting to note that purchases of American cotton valued at upwards of $35,000,000 by the All-Russian Textile Syndicate during the past seven months established a new record for that company.

"I am in a position to state authoritatively that the break with England will have no effect on the economic plans for the current year in the Soviet Union. Orders to be placed abroad for industrial expansion will suffer no curtailment. The financial position of the Soviet Union in connection with commitments and trade is well taken care of.

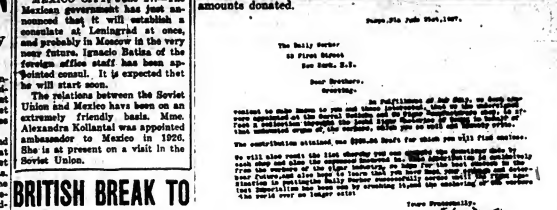
"In accordance with the plans for industrial expansion in the Soviet Union for the coming year, we may expect a considerable increase in Soviet imports and orders abroad. There is every indication that these plans for enlarged foreign trade will be fully carried out. There is also every indication that the break with England will facilitate the effort being made by Soviet industrialists to trade directly with American firms, through the authorized trading companies here, eliminating the European middle-man, and to enter into closer relations with the American technical world.

"To sum up: The secure position in connection with Soviet trade plans for this year, the industrial program for the coming year and the increase in orders placed here and the curtailment of trade with Britain, all these show the direction to be taken by Soviet trade with the United States."

Britain Loses Textile Order.

Negotiations regarding purchases of textile equipment for a Soviet cotton mill of 100,000 spindles and 3,500 looms are being conducted in this country.

Practically no equipment for cotton mills was previously purchased in the United States, the bulk of it being obtained in Great Britain.



Exports of textile equipment from England to the U. S. S. R. for 1926 amounted to $5,922,000 as against $1,571,000 for 1925 and $1,057,000 for 1924. Exports to the Soviet Union last year constituted 12.3 per cent of total British exports of textile equipment.

First Russian Paraffin Plant.

The first paraffin plant in the Soviet Union was opened last month at Grozny, one of the Soviet oil centers. Daily output of the plant was estimated at 16 tons of paraffin. The cost of buildings and equipment amounted to $1,467,750.

Letter from Tampa Cigarmakers

For its determined fight against the ravages of American imperialism and defense of the economic interests of the working class in the United States, the employees of the Corral Wodiska Cigar Manufacturing concern at Tampa, Florida, have contributed the sum of $3895.34 to the emergency of The DAILY WORKER. The following are the names of the contributors and the amounts donated.

The Daily Worker
50 First Street
New York, N.Y.

Dear Brothers,
Greetings.

In fulfillment of our duty, as loyal and class conscious workers, we are sending to you herewith enclosed check for $3895.34 as our contribution to the fund for the support of your paper, which you so well and bravely strive.

The contribution attached, was $998.56 less, than we had first intended.

We will also remit the list showing you our names and the amount each one and also the total amount collected from the workers of the cigar industry, as soon as we receive same from all shops. We have also begun a house to house collection in instituting daily Worker committees, and hope to have this completed in the near future, when you can rest assured that you will no longer exist.

Yours Proletarianly,

Tampa Committee

This letter shows a spirit of working class solidarity that should be emulated by the thousands of workers who derive far greater benefits from our paper than the workers in the cigar factories of Florida.

British Mulct Taxpayers.
(By Nationalist News Agency)

SHANGHAI, June 27.—The Chinese Rate-Payers' Association of the international settlement has organized a determined strike against taxation without representation, thousands of rate-payers are registering with the association to refuse payment of the two per cent tax increase voted by the foreign rate-payers without Chinese consent.

Quo Tai-Chi has sent a vigorous protest to the consular body pointing out that the increase is illegal under an agreement between the Chinese and the foreigners of long standing. The protest scores the municipal council for not admitting Chinese to membership in the council and for denying to the Chinese people admission to the public parks which are supported largely by Chinese taxes. "The Chinese did not partielpate in passing the budget and have not been treated as equals by the foreigners," Commissioner Quo declared.

Demand Half Control.

The Chinese are demanding for a half control of the settlement and assert that their demand is reasonable in view of the fact that they pay three-fourths of the settlement taxes. Foreign legal action against the Chinese refusing to pay the increased taxes will not be effective, it is believed, as such action must be taken in the provisional court now under Chinese control.

The Chinese struck against the last tax increase a few years ago and although were ordered to pay by the foreign-dominated mixed court, they refused and as a result the council appointed an advisory board of Chinese members to help settle the matter. An understanding was reached by which it was agreed that no further tax increase would be made without Chinese consent. The advisory board resigned after the May 30, 1925, massacre of the Chinese people by the British police because the board's advice was not considered in settling the trouble. Since then the Chinese have not been represented in the control of the settlement.

The American-owned China Weekly Review editorially advises that the local foreigners announce a program of peaceful co-operation with the Chinese "instead of sitting still, doing nothing, and then yelling for help when we get into trouble."

The Review further points out that the American Congress will investigate the expense of sending the Amorlean forces to China, and that it is likely will demand their withdrawal. British and Japanese troops will not remain long without similar demands from London and Tokio for withdrawal, it concludes.

British Boast Chinese Taxes.
(By Nationalist News Agency.)

SHANGHAI, June 27.—Chinese rate-payars who pay three-fourths of the International Settlement taxes held a meeting here and have decided to refuse payment of a two per cent tax increase voted by the foreign rate-payers without the consent of the Foreigners signed in 1899. The Chinese have suffered much business losses, the statement asserts, because of the barb-wire barricades with which the foreigners surrounded the Settlement, and the foreign police are ineffective in checking the rising crime wave. The statement goes on to say that the Chinese pay the major part of the Settlement taxes, but are denied municipal council seats, and more than a million Chinese are in the Settlements. The council spends no money for Chinese education, and the Chinese are not admitted to the public parks. British troops occupy Shanghai in defiance of International law. British soldiers have not been punished for attacking Chinese girls, and the British military authorities in Shanghai is filled with fifteen and four-year-old Chinese girls for the use of British soldiers.

The statement concludes with the declaration that "we have been humiliated by the barbarous actions of the British, and why should we pay increased taxes to support them? Shanghai is Chinese territory and foreign soldiers have no right in the city. Until Chinese members are added to the municipal council we will not pay increased taxes."

The local Kuomintang is supporting the Chinese rate-payers in their opposition to the tax increases.

Street Car Strike Looms in Chicago; Labor Bills Loose

By CARL HAESSLER.

A streetcar strike reminiscent of the long summer tieup of 1922 moved nearer when the Chicago Surface Lines refused to consider any wage increase. Vice President Guy Richardson of the lines asserted in a public statement that "these men are now receiving the highest pay and are working under the best conditions of any surface lines motormen or conductors in the world." This is not true, as the maximum for Chicago platform men is 75 cents an hour while Philadelphia's maximum is 77 cents, with a number of privileges not enjoyed by the Chicago traction workers.

The Chicago union demands a 15 cent hourly raise plus insurance. A compromise continuing the present scale but granting the insurance, which is already in force on the elevated lines, may be worked out. In case of a strike the elevated employes, though working for a different company, will quit with the surface men even if their own demands are satisfactorily met.

Printing Lockout Continues.

The printing lockout of 5 unions at the White (Regan) Printing House continues without change. Application for an injunction against picketing cost of union activity during the lockout has been made by the employer but is still under advisement. The metal polishers and grinders refused to go on strike at the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co.

Labor Bills Doomed.

At Springfield the chances for labor's bills getting through both houses before the Illinois legislature adjourns this month are becoming slighter. The woman's modified 8-hour bill, the anti-yellowdog contract bill and the old age pension bill seem to be doomed, though the 8-hour bill has a little better chance than the rest. On the other hand labor's fight on the perennial state constabulary bill has been successful this session.

Chicago Traction Kings Deny Wage Raise; Men Awaiting Strike Call

CHICAGO, (FP) June 27.—Negotiations for a new contract between the streetcar men's union and the Chicago Surface Lines were broken off when the company refused to consider a wage raise over the present maximum of 75 cents an hour. Strike action will await an interview by International president Mahon of the union with the company.

D'Autremont Brothers Get Life.

SALEM, ORE, June 27.—Atoning for one of the most widely-advertised crimes in American history, three young brothers, Roy, Ray and Hugh d'Autremont, started life sentences in the Oregon Penitentiary today.

The three brothers confessed in Jacksonville, Ore., late yesterday that they had killed four members of the crew of a gold-laden train during an attempted tunnel holdup in the Siskiyou mountains. The confessions ended a four-year campaign by Postal inspectors to bring the bandits to justice. Nearly a million dollars was spent in the search.

Efficiency at Oil Fields Raised.

Measures toward increasing efficiency in the oil industry of the Soviet Union yielded good results. The Azneft Oil Trust of Baku reports that in spite of the greatly increased output during the past three years, the number of men employed at the wells was reduced by 40 per cent. Wages increased during the period 60 per cent. The cost of borings has been decreased from over 50 dollars per foot in 1923 to about 28 dollars in 1926.

"Prince Igor" at Stadium Concert.

The famous ballet master, Alexis Kosloff, late of the "Russian Imperial Ballet," and now of the Ballet Theatre, the Metropolitan Opera House, and his company, have been engaged for the Coney Island Stadium Concert, which will take place July 16th. "Prince Igor" a legend of the first Russian czars, and one of the most beautiful productions of the stage, will be produced by Kosloff and his ballet.

Those who remember the Passaic Strike Concert for which he produced "Siberenade" will surely take advantage of this opportunity to again see Kosloff and his ballet.

Tickets for the concert are $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats. The proceeds, for the striking furriers. Buy your tickets now and you will help the furriers win their strike and at the same time be assured of a good seat.

Workers' Clubs to Help.

A conference of the New York Workers' Clubs was held in Bath Beach Sunday. Representatives of the Furriers' Relief Committee were present. They reported on the situation pointing out the importance of this fight.

The response was most enthusiastic. After a general discussion the following plans were made:

1.—Each club is to have a special meeting within a week on this question.

2.—The executive committee of each club to meet, not later than Wednesday, June 22nd, and decide upon a contribution of not less than $200, to be paid out by the treasury. If the club has no funds, the amount decided upon is to be borrowed.

3.—All clubs to do intensive work for the Coney Island Stadium Concert.

4.—A special "Defense Week" to be arranged by the clubs with special mass meetings to be held in the districts where the clubs are located. Conferences of workers' organizations in the various parts of the city, to be called. This to be developed to a monster entertainment. A special committee consisting of one representative of each club, was elected to make all the necessary arrangements for "Defense Week."

At a meeting of Branch 261, Jewish National Alliance, a committee of three was elected, consisting of Pomerante, Gelfand and Kazen to raise funds for the defense. The branch has already forwarded $8.00.

For the Striking Furriers.

The furriers' strike has aroused the whole workingclass movement. The attacks of the Sigman-McGrady-Woll gangsters, the wholesale arrest of hundreds of pickets, the murderous attack on Gross, the arrest of Gold and the delegates to the Unity Conference on Monday morning on the picket line has convinced the mass of workers that it rests upon them to supply the money to win the fight.

Letters of encouragement with checks for bonds are being received from all over the country. Following are a few of the letters: D. Rothstein of Philadelphia, writes: "Dear Comrade Striker,—Every day I read of the brave struggle you are carrying on and of the attacks made on you by the police and gangsters, and I am sending you a check for $10. I hope you will win your fight."

Answer to Bloody Attack on Gross.

B. Kanes, Neudorf, Sask., Canada, writes: "Dear Friends: — Enclosed find check for $10.—my answer to the murderous attempt on the life of Aaron Gross."

A Challenge.

A friend writes that he bought 2 tickets for the Coney Island Stadium Concert, one for himself and the other for his brother, who is a right winger. The brother is hoping that the stadium will be empty on July 16th so he will make it his business to go there and see for himself. The right winger is so sure that he will be right that he promised to buy a "10 Furriers' Defense Bond" if the stadium is filled. The outcome still remains to be seen. The furriers' strike fund will do its best to sell the right wing brother a bond. We will win only if the Coney Island stadium is packed on the night of July 16 and this rests with you. You must be the ones to pack the stadium.

Tickets are $1.00 for general admission, and $2.00 for reserved seats. Buy them now and avoid standing in line.

Right Wing Clique Calls Meeting of W. C.; Gets Cold Feet.

The so-called propaganda committee of the Sigman Bureaucracy called a conference of Branches 16, 106 and 221 of Paterson, N. J. This Committee hoped to turn the conference into relief for the Sigman clique. But when the conference opened the "propaganda committee" got cold feet and didn't show up. Naturally the meeting proceeded without them and it was decided to send support for the striking furriers, $51 being immediately collected. This is another example of what the W. C. branches are doing. Those W. C. branches who have not yet responded to the furriers' relief should do so immediately and show their national executive committee how they view the situation.

207 Pull Down Billion a Year as Corporations Clean Up 113 Billions

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Two hundred and seven taxpayers pulled down an income of a million dollars—or more—in 1925, according to statistics made public yesterday by the Internal Revenue Bureau. Corporations raked in a gross income of more than $113,000,000,000 in 1924.

In 1924 only seventy-five taxpayers reported an income exceeding a million dollars. The exceeding generosity recently accorded to big business thru surtax reductions is regarded as an important reason for the increase of plutocrats with million dollar a year incomes.

ON OPPRESSED TO OPPOSE NEW WAR

the financial magnates, the industrial magnates, the potentates of heavy industry, are trying to save the remnant of their imperialist profits. To the question of the oppressed peoples who are demanding the right of self-determination, they are replying with war.

In spite of the antagonistic interests dividing them, the imperialist states are endeavouring to weld their united front against the danger threatening them all—the rise of the colonial peoples. They are striving to throttle the Chinese revolution; their warships encircle China with an iron ring, they are standing ready in the rivers of China to drown the struggle for freedom of the Chinese people in blood. Nanking and other defencelsem towns have already been bombarded; everyday the ring of militarist intervention is closed more tightly in order to throttle the Chinese revolution with armed force or by means of the policy of corruption, the financial blockade and criminal sanctions.

BUT the fury of the Stock Exchange sharks is mainly directed against the Soviet Union, which stands as a shining example to the oppressed nations and remains the impregnable stronghold of the exploited and oppressed of the whole world. In the light of enslavement of the peoples, the Soviet Union caused to flame up the great light of freedom, not that lying, hypocritical freedom of the so-called democratic states which consists solely in the exploitation of millions of workers, peasants and colonial slaves, but the light of the only true freedom, that freedom which liberates all colonial peoples from every capitalist exploitation.

World imperialism, end in the first place British imperialism can no longer tolerate the existence of the only Workers' and Peasants' Republic, whose example calls unceasingly upon the enslaved peoples likewise to tread the path of their emancipation. Imperialism cannot endure the solidarity of the Soviet Union with the working class of the whole world: it realizes that the rapid progress in the building up of socialism constitutes a plain and palpable lesson against which all calumnies are impotent.

IN order to crush the Chinese revolution, in order to subject the colonies to intensified exploitation, in order to throttle the labor movement, in order to depress wages and to prolong the working day, in order to grind out still larger profits from all those who work and produce, imperialism must overthrow the stronghold of the proletariat, the Workers' State. The reactionary Baldwin government is preparing to make war on the Soviet Union. By means of a series of unheard-of provocations: the raids on the embassy in Peking, on the consulate in Shanghai and on the Trade Delegation in London, the Baldwin government sought to involve the Soviet Union in a war. The Proletarian State, with revolutionary coolness and deliberation, contemptuously avoided the obvious trap laid for it by British imperialism and has clearly shown to the whole world that the Soviet Union is pursuing a peaceful policy; and the Workers' State has thereby compelled British imperialism to unmask itself and to take on itself the responsibility for the breaking off of diplomatic relations.

COMRADES!

This action on the part of Great Britain is a sign of the greatest danger for the working class of the whole world, demanding the mobilization of all its forces against war and in defence of the threatened Proletarian State, which is threatened by the combined forces of world capitalism.

British imperialism has succeeded in the course of the past year, in Locarno, Laghorn and Geneva, in uniting the imperialist states against the Soviet Union. There is no doubt that it will also succeed in obtaining from the reactionary Germeny of Hindenburg, in the neme of the League of Nations, permission for the free passage of troops and munitions against Russia. By means of persistent labor, British has surrounded the Soviet Union with a ring of vassal states in which military dictatorship and terror against the proletariat and the peasants prevails. Poland and Lithuania, thanks to the coup d'etat financed by London and Roumania by the good services of Mussolini—have governments docile to Chamberlain. At the moment when it broke off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union the British government celebrated its reconciliation with the government of Poincaré-la-guerre. It is true, the united front of the imperialist great Powers is fragile, for Germany and Italy are raising the question of a fresh distribution of the world. The Mediterranean Sea and the Balkan countries are the seats of constant intrigues and jealousies between the robbers who are scrambling for the world. But these antagonistic interests are being pushed into the background. The Italo-Yugoslavian incident showed that Great Britain has succeeded for the time being in smoothing over these squabbles between the capitalist States and uniting these States against the common enemy, against the working class and its proletarian State.

Comrades!

The imperialist States do not think of concealing their war preparations any longer. The League of Nations no longer succeeds in deceiving the peoples. It has kept silent whenever a big imperialist bandit throttled a small nation. Corfu, Morocco, Syria, China, Nicaragua, Abyssinia and Albania are clear proofs of its lying policy, and its imperialist barbarity.

THE Disarmament Conferences of Geneva and Washington did not succeed in concealing the ever greater acceleration of armaments. French imperialism has just passed a new military law which means the complete militarization of the whole people. The factories are working almost exclusively on army orders. The Stahlhelm demonstration in Berlin clearly showed that Germany is reorganising its military power.

But imperialism cannot prepare for war without taking up the fight against the working class and its organisations. The war on the Soviet Union is a class war, a war against the proletariat. The great imperialist States know that the world proletariat is watching the Russian Revolution, that it will fight against any that it will not defend the native countries of its exploiters, but the native country of the working class and of the whole world. Imperialism knows that it can again rely on the support of social democracy, just as in the year 1914. But today there exists in every country a Communist Party which will expose the treachery of the Second Internationsl and will from the very first day lead the workers, peasants and soldiers in the fight against war and against the capitalist regime which engenders war—a Communist Party which will endeavor with all means to convert the imperialist war into a war against imperialism and the social revolution. For this reason the war preparations are accompanied by a general offensive against the working class and against its class organizations.

THE imperialist vultures wish to bend the working class of all countries beneath the yoke of intensified exploitation; they wish to destroy the workers' organisations in order to throttle their fight against war. The employers' attack on wages and the eight-hour day, and the rationalisation of production are accompanied by an offensive of the police and the government against the workers' organizations and the advance-guard of the proletariat. The bill against the trade unions in Great Britain, the great police conspirsey and the arrest of Communist functionaries in France, the revive of the fascist forces in Germany, the mass deportations and the fascist trade union monopoly in Italy, the intensified terror and the mass executions of revolutionaries in Poland, Roumania, Bulgaria and Lithuania are all part of the war preparations of the imperialists.

At the moment when world imperialism is drawing together its forces against the working class, when it is increasing the exploitation of the peasant masses and of the natives in the colonies and openly preparing for a new war, the leaders of the social democracy are again, as on 4th of August 1914, betraying the interests of the working class and placing themselves in the service of imperialism and of armed reaction. In Great Britain, instead of summoning the masses to the fight in defence of the trade unions, they content themselves with futile Parliamentary skirmishes, which is tantamount to a surrender without a fight. In France, the Socialist Paul Boncour, has drawn up along with the General Staff, a military law and is defending it—a law which provides for the mobilisation of women and children. In Germany, Breitscheid declared that the foreign policy of Stresemann is the policy of the German social democracy.

AT the moment when Chamberlain is bringing about the united front of all the capitalist States against proletarian Russia, the Second International is supporting the action of the reactionary English government with a shameful campaign of lies against the Soviet Union. As in 1914, the role of social democracy consists in deceiving the working class into war. But today this treachery is evan more reprehensible, because the war is directed against the proletarian State, against the Russian revolution and against the Chinese Revolution.

Comrades,

For work among the masses there exists a still greater danger than the open, cynical treachery of the Right social democratic leaders, and that is the deceitful illusion of the pacifism of the Left leaders of social democracy and of the trade unions, who utter high-sounding empty phrases regarding peace and who, instead of mobilizing the working masses to the fight against war, lull them to sleep by doping them with the opium of a sentimental and futile pacifism.

* * *

THE capitalist regime necessarily engenders war. Under the capitalist regime there can be no enduring peace. Your fight for peace, for real peace and not for such a hypocritical peace as that of Versailles, can, therefore, only be a fight against that regime which engenders and perpetuates, i.e. a revolutionary fight against the capitalist regime itself. The fight for peace which does not lead the masses to the revolutionary fight against the capitalist regime is merely a deceitful illusion only to be followed by a bloody morrow.

Workers, Peasants, Suppressed Peoples!

In view of the daily increasing danger of war you must unite your forces for bitter and ruthless fight against war and against robbers who are preparing for war. You are the strongest, and you will be victorious if you close the united front of all the suppressed against your supprressors.

Rub the sleep from your eyes, overcome faint-heartedness, oppose those who are spreading pessimism in your organizations and undermining your forces! War is at hand! Only by a mass action, by great protest meetings, by powerful demonstrations, by protest strikes, by developing an energetic mass struggle will you frustrate the capitalist offensive and compel the jackals of imperialism to slink away.

DEFEND the Chinese Revolution, prevent the transport of troops and munitions! Build up out of your million-strong army an impregnable barricade in defence of the threatened Russian Revolution!

The imperialists are preparing for war in order to strangle the revolution!

Reply to them by preparing for revolution in order to strangle war and the regime which continually leads to war.

Rally together! Close the ranks in thousands and millions in your revolutionary organizations, in the Communist Parties! Drive from your ranks the social-patriotic leaders who preach sacred unity with the exploitors! Reduce to silence those who wish to lull you with their pacifist piping.

Prepare for great struggles, prepare for victory!

Soldiers, sailors!

Sons of workers and peasants, do not forget that you belong to the masses of the workers! Fraternise! When they wish to make you hangmen and betrayers of your class, remember that you have only one flag to defend, the red flag of the international working class.

Toilers and exploited of the whole world!

Against the threatening war, for the revolutionary fight!

Proletarians of all countries, unite and you will conquer!

MOSCOW DEMANDS DISMISSAL OF TROTSKY, ZINOVIEV FROM C. E. C. OF ALL UNION COMMUNIST PARTY

MOSCOW, June 27.—Charging the Opposition, headed by Trotsky and Zinoviev, with violating Communist Party discipline, the Presidium of the Central Control Commission of the All Union Communist Party has adopted a resolution recommending that the joint session of the Central Committee and the Central Control Commission consider the expulsion of Comrades Trotsky and Zinoviev from the Central Executive Committee of the Party.

The resolution adopted by the Presidium of the Central Control Commission follows:

"Beginning with 1923, the Opposition first headed by Trotsky and from 1926 by both Trotsky and Zinoviev, has taken advantage of every difficulty which the Party has faced in its effort to build Socialism to deal a blow at the unity of our Party and its leadership.

Violated Party Discipline.

"It has not hesitated to violate Party discipline. In 1923, at the moment when the Party was struggling against the difficulty caused by the "discrepancy of the scissors," Trotsky and the group of forty-six attempted to utilize the difficulties for the purpose of factionalism, making the statement that the country had been brought to the verge of ruin by the Party's policy.

"The Fourteenth Congress of the Communist Party gave a unanimous estimate of the new Opposition's (Zinoviev and others) deviation from Leninist positions; namely, denying the socialistic character of our industry, underestimating the middle peasantry and disregarding the demand for the freedom from factional groupings.

"In the spring and the summer of 1926 the new Opposition bloc aligned itself with Comrade Trotsky, the new Opposition headed by Zinoviev completely accepting the ideological position of Comrade Trotsky.

Organized Factional Meetings.

"In the summer of 1926, in its incessant attacks on the Party, the Opposition went so far as to formally shape its factional organization as an illegal organization and even organized mass meetings in the woods (Lashavitch case).

"Having suffered all-around defeat, thru the political experience of Socialist construction, the Opposition by its actions in "avioprbor" and "Red Putilovets" works entered the path of factional sectarianism.

"Having met a unanimous repulse from the whole party and having been most resolutely rejected by the labor nuclei the Opposition was compelled to undertake the obligation of stopping factional strife. (Declaration of 16th of October, 1926.)

Promised Obedience.

"Following this declaration the Opposition recognized "its duty to carry thru the Party's decision regarding the inadmissibility of fractions." In this declaration the Opposition recognized as "especially inadmissible the support in any way of the activities of persons already excluded from the Party and from the Communist International such as Ruth Fischer and Masiov.

"In this declaration the Opposition also stated that "we consider absolutely binding for us the decisions of the Fourteenth Congress, the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee of the Party and we shall unconditionally submit to them."

"All of the subsequent activities of the Opposition, since the latter's October decieration, demonstrated that the Opposition, since the sixteenth of October, had looked upon its obligations only as a means of masking preparations for a new attack on the Party.

"Although the Fifteenth Party Congress whose decisions have been approved by the Executive Committee of the Communist International emphatically condemned the Opposition's line as a social democratic deviation, as a right deviation masked by left phraseology, although the Opposition was put backed by a single Party nucleus, it persisted in defending its anti-Bolshevik work and did not cease its factional work.

"Recently a combination of special difficulties in the Soviet Union and the international situation and partial defeats of the Chinese revolution have led the Opposition to consentrate its attack against the Party's international policy (China, Brittain).

"In response to the growing danger of a war against the Soviet Union, the Opposition has made statements which have directly undermined the Party's work in the mobilization of the masses for struggle against the danger of war and the strengthening of the Soviet Union.

"Such a statement as that made by Zinoviev, namely "if the war actually reaches us, every worker and every agricultural laborer, even the poorest peasant will raise the question: what war is this, by what means will the war be conducted?"

"Such a statement as Trotsky's at the recent session of the Executive Committee of the Communist International; "The greatest of oil dangers is the Party regime" are direct actions on the part of the opposition leaders against the Party and the dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Menshevik Attacks.

"The left pseudo-radical phrases, with which Trotzky vainly attempted to mask at the plenary session of the executive committee of the Communist international his menshevist attacks, were a device on Trotsky's part as the executive committee pointed out in its decision, a means to "mask in the eyes of Communist workers his own desertion."

"Trotsky's speech at session executive committee which the latter characterized as anti-party and a gross factional action, and Zinoviev's speech at the ninth of May, 1927, at nonpartisan meeting containing an appeal to nonpartizans against Party broke all traditions of Bolshevist Party and elementary party discipline.

"Finally at the session of the Presidium of the Central Controlling Commission Trotsky produced unprecedented calumniatory charges of Bonapartism in the Party.

"Although the question regarding the disorganizational action of Zinoviev was submitted by the Central Committee of the Party for the consideration of the Central Controlling Commission, although the Executive Committee of the Comintern condemned Trotzky's speech as openly factional, Trotsky and Zinoviev at the ninth of June, 1927, at the time of the worst attacks of British imperialism against the U. S. S. R. participated in a demonstration organized at station by opposition on the pretext of sending off Smigla.

"At a moment when England was openly preparing for war with the conquest of Anglo-Soviet relations and the Voikoff's murder as clear evidence that imperialists were passing to terroristic methods in the struggle against U. S. S. R., Trotsky made a speech to demonstrators, in which, together with other members of the opposition, called through factional apparatus, the public which happened to be at the station, participated. Thereby Trotsky and Zinoviev proved first that its obligation, which they undertook to observe Party discipline was only a tactical manoeuvre meant to deceive the Party; secondly, that at a moment when the Party's main task is the consolidation of the rear, while the main condition of the consolidation of the rear is the raising of the Party's fighting capacity, the Opposition in the name of its own factional objects, pursuing line that would wreck the Party; third, all this was accompanied by openly anti-party factional work, which has lately reached extraordinary dimensions. Instead of executing their obligations regarding Party discipline undertaken on the 16th of October, what actually took place was the printing and circulation of factional literature, the organization of an open factional declaration of the Eighty-four, containing unprecedented calumniation of Party discipline in our country.

Recommend Dismissal From C. E. C.

"Party for four years showing the greatest tolerance, the greatest patience passed from one warning in Opposition to the next, trying to make the Opposition leaders submit to Party discipline, Trotsky's and Zinoviev's latest actions show that having exhausted all means of winning them, the Party has failed to secure the obedience of the Opposition leaders; that the Opposition leaders grossly and systematically violated Party discipline which is binding for every Party member, whoever he or she may be that the Opposition under the leadership of Oppositional members of the Central Committee developing factional work and undermining Party unity pursuing a line directed towards a split, that the Opposition completely violating its obligations to desist from factional strife.

"All this compels the Praesidium of the Central Controlling Commission of the All-Union Party Control Committee to propose to the session of the Tenth Party Congress to submit to the Joint Plenary Session of the Central Committee and Central Controlling Commission, the question of the exclusion of Zinoviev and Trotsky from the membership of the Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party

Treaty of Peace and Amity Between Mexico and Turkish Republic

MEXICO CITY, June 27. — The Secretariat of Foreign Relations makes official announcement of the conclusion of a treaty of peace and amity between Mexico and the Republic of Turkey. The treaty provides for diplomatic and consular relations between the two countries.

Doubt is expressed here as to the probability of a resident Mexican Minister being named for Turkey, as Mexico has virtually no economic interests there, and very few residents. It is expected, however, that Turkey will avail herself of the privilege of sending diplomatic and consular representatives to Mexico to protect her more developed commercial and other interests.

How to Help Save the Lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

There remain but two days before July 1 when Sacco and Vanzetti will be taken to the death-cell.

Governor Fuller has made no public statement as to his intentions and two innocent workingmen endure the terrible torture of waiting for release, a new trial or death.

Words are weak weapons with which to attack such studied callousness as the rulers of Massachusetts and their official spokesman display.

It is in the face of the indignation and protest of millions in all lands that this monstrous infamy is inflicted upon Sacco and Vanzetti—two workers whose minds and bodies have already been rent and torn by almost seven years of continual suffering—suffering intensified by the knowledge that they are innocent of the crime for which they were convicted, suffering made more fearful by the knowledge that they were trapped in the web of capitalism's judicial machinery because they are its class enemies.

If the members of their class and ours will think for just one moment of what Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered and are still suffering for the simple reason that they fought the battles of their comrades in the American class struggle, the one-hour protest strike and the series of mass demonstrations arranged for July 7 in New York City will be of such huge proportions that the cowardly hangmen who hold the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti in their hands will be forced to loosen their grip.

To every worker in New York we say that it is a sacred duty to down tools at 4 p. m., no matter what the boss may say or think, and help to swell the protest against the legal torture and murder of two innocent workingmen.

A Cheap Coolidge Sneer at Impoverished Farmers.

In his address to the legislature of South Dakota at the state game lodge Saturday the president of the United States metaphorically wrapped the American flag about himself and striking a condescending posture, deliberately insulted the impoverished farmers of the Middle West. In the most cynical manner Coolidge told the farmers that they ought to be well satisfied with their miserable condition even though they cannot dispose of their crops at a price sufficient to cover the cost of raising them.

His speech amounted to impudently informing his hearers that they ought to consider it an honor even to exist under the American flag and that they had no business complaining about their condition. Said the marionette of Wall Street:

> Any one who has an occupation or a job under our flag, no matter what that occupation or job may be, in industry, agriculture or commerce, or what his station in life, that person can be assured that he has the best job of that kind of any one on earth. That's what the flag means.

While Coolidge's interpretation applies exactly to the unprincipled flunkeys of Wall Street, whose occupations are the best paying of their kind on earth, the millions of workers and farmers are unable to derive any benefit therefrom. The victims of capitalism enjoy no vicarious prosperity with their exploiters.

His eulogy of farmers in general was the height of arrogance. He compared the hills of his native Vermont with the Black Hills of South Dakota and implied that the contented Vermont farmers ought to be taken for models by the South Dakota farmers.

While the Vermont farmers were indifferent to the Coolidge veto of the McNary-Haughan farm relief bill,—or at least inaudible,—the Middle West farmers believed implicitly in the bill. Its economic insufficiency, known to all Communists, is not evident to the farmers. Certainly it was not because of its economic shortcomings that Coolidge vetoed it, but because he thought it would be detrimental to the plunderers of the farmers.

The presence of Coolidge in South Dakota and the spectacle of the so-called radical senator, Norbeck, scrambling upon a seat on the Coolidge bandwagon ought to be convincing evidence that their salvation can never be realized through an alliance with Wall Street's president, but must be sought in an alliance with the exploited industrial workers of the nation, through the medium of a labor party.

"Putting the Weight" on Wood.

Major-General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, has come thru for Coolidge in South Dakota and no more rumors of his resignation are played up in the press.

Perhaps Wood wants Coolidge for president and volunteered his endorsement but it seems hardly likely that he had to travel to Rapid City from the Philippines in order to make it public.

The incident savors about as strongly of political blackmail as has republican party maneuvering since the good old smelly days when the Ohio gang used to put its feet on the White House table and scatter its cigar ashes all over the rugs.

In the vernacular such practices as have been pulled off in Rapid City recently are called "putting on the weight".

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

From San Quentin Prison.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

I have received your letter asking me for my subscription to your paper. For reasons that have not yet been explained inmates of the prison are forbidden to receive The DAILY WORKER. And that is the reason why I have failed to renew my subscription.

You say that you consider it a real loss in not getting my subscription. And all I have to say that it has been a great loss to me as well as a great disappointment. I am here in San Quentin for life, and I do not know what day will see me out of here,—if any,—but the day will come when I shall again be able to read the only paper that stands for the working class, and that will be The DAILY WORKER.

Even the "Nation" is not permitted here. A man in prison cannot write the things that he would like to, but only those things that will pass the censor.

Will stop with regrets that I cannot have your paper instead of the ones that are around here.—C. J. J.

Geneva—Another Warning to the American Working Class.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE careful phrasing of the language of traditional diplomacy used by the delegates to the Geneva conference does not serve to conceal the tremendous struggle for naval supremacy, itself an expression of the struggle for world domination, which, under today, is the Pacific area.

But if the diplomats (and sometimes the admirals) are careful, the newspaper writers are not. It is true that they weave into their articles the stereotyped images by which a state of projection is thrown around the conference purposes, but the cold-blooded character of the calculations which precede such official utterance is obvious. For the correspondents the secrets and does his bit to boost the game of his imperialist bosses.

AT Geneva the diplomats are gambling with the lives of millions of workers and farmers. With American imperialism playing an aggressive role, the naval strategy of the next war is being worked out.

America and Great Britain are the two main antagonists. Japan is a buffer, an ally, or an enemy, as the bloody game proceeds thru its various stages.

The immediate stake is the power to conquer and rob 400,000,000 Chinese workers and peasants and seize the incalculably valuable natural resources of the nation.

AMERICAN imperialists have not been blind to the fact that China is the richest prize ever glimpsed by the buccaneers of the ruling class. Let J. Selwin Tait, Chairman of the board of directors of the Washington and Southern Bank of Washington, D. C., speak for his class:

> "...CHINA PRESENTS THE GREATEST INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL OPPORTUNITY NOT ONLY OF THE WORLD TO-DAY, BUT THE GREATEST WHICH THE WORLD HAS EVER SEEN. With a population of four hundred and fifty millions of people, according to the latest estimate of the Maritime Customs, it has a national debt amounting in round numbers to one dollar per head of its population, or less than one-twentieth proportionately of the debt of her neighbor, Japan. Were China to borrow up to the same figure as Japan, that is, over $20 per capita, she could add to her debt the unimaginable sum of $8,550,000,000 (gold), the total of which would suffice to build 170,000 miles of railway at the liberal estimate of $50,000 gold per mile.
> "Some few years ago an investigation of the effects that the Chinese railroad development had upon the commercial growth of China showed that between the years 1900 and 1907 an increase of 43 per cent in Chinese railway mileage had brought about an increase in the net imports and exports amounting to 156 per cent during the same period. Suppose we were to extend these figures and estimate the future business of China on the basis of an expenditure on her railways equal to $20 per rapita of her population. Can you form any idea of what volume her business would then be? The results would, I must be confessed, be unintelligible to the ordinary mind if placed in plain figures."

(Quoted by James Dolsen in "The Awakening of China." Emphasis Mine.)

GREAT Britain and Japan have been even more alert since the Russian Revolution rescued that rich country and its people from the clutches of the imperialists and the rivalry for robbery privileges in China has become intense and lies at the base of the struggle for the control of the Pacific. The powerful is the position of American imperialism due to her geographical isolation, her tremendous natural resources and national wealth in general, and the low political development of the American workingclass, coupled with the tremendous efficiency of American industry, that American imperialism appears at Geneva relatively unworried by the woes which beset her rivals.

SO far (June 26) the American delegation has not felt it necessary to make the slightest concession to Great Britain, but has acted in a manner which is little short of openly provocative.

But the uncertainty which characterizes the relations between capitalist states at present and which produces a seemingly endless succession of alignments and re-alignments, maneuvers and counter-maneuvers, is to be seen also in the Geneva discussions.

This uncertainty, however, has nothing to do with the policy of the participating powers toward their own navies and those of their enemies. This policy can be stated briefly as follows:

> An unshakable determination to build and maintain as large a navy as is deemed necessary for successful warfare, and finances permit, and to bring the utmost pressure upon the rival powers to force them to maintain a navy inferior to its own.

THIS is the main line of each of the powers at Geneva and if one thing is certain it is that there will be no deviation from this line except on the surface.

The second contradiction which determines the policy of the three powers is the necessity which each feels of appearing in a non-aggressive role and of preserving the initiative on the basis for the continuance of the fight for supremacy upon one or the other, or both, of its rivals.

The [illegible] which appears in the reports of the attitude of the three powers is really due to the fact that both America and Great Britain are trying either to neutralize Japan or to form some sort of an alliance with her.

WHAT we mean, can be made clear easily. The preliminary reports of the conference pictured Great Britain and Japan as already in agreement. One correspondent even noted the fact that their delegates had monopolized a wall-known hotel and hailed as a revival of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

It seems that the British delegation itself had some such idea in mind at the opening speech of First Lord of the Admiralty Bridgman was almost in the nature of an ultimatum to the United States. The "safety of Empire" was the high note of the Bridgman statement and The New Times correspondent says that it resulted in a "cold chill" sweeping thru the conference—the inference being that the bad Britishers had upset the peaceful plans of the American delegation.

THE doughty Admiral Jones was allowed to reply for America. He spoke very frankly and cited the need of America for the security of trade routes by which such commodities as rubber (of which Great Britain has a practical monopoly and for which America is the greatest market).

The whole tone of this discussion was so sharp that the capitalist press correspondents could not tone it down sufficiently to alter its sinister character.

Then came the British demand for a recosaideration of the decisions of the Washington conferences and the harsh and repeated refusal of the American delegates to discuss this question.

JAPAN also made proposals which the American delegation would not accept, but which were not dealt with in the harsh tone reserved for comment upon the British proposals.

Then the difference in the attitude toward Great Britain and Japan became clear with the broaching of the project for an agreement between Japan and America "guaranteeing peace in the Pacific." This coincided with a record of diplomatic denunciation of the British proposal for discussing the question of capital ships (battleships) which the American delegation holds as settled by the Washington conference.

IN all these interchanges of opinion the line of the American delegations is to stress the naval inferiority of America and there can be little doubt that the uncritical reader of Geneva dispatches in the American press will have received the impression that peaceful America, with a navy composed mostly of obsolete ships armed with guns of inferior range, is a lamb among imperialist wolves.

What the exact strength and status of the American navy is, is not known to us. We say so frankly, but we believe that we are no more ignorant on this subject than are the facile capitalist correspondents—and everyone else except the naval experts.

OUR opinion is that the American navy is far from being as weak as the experts say it is, but that it is by no means as invincible as the vociferous patriots proclaim. Whatever its strength the events at Geneva clearly indicate that it will be much stronger in the not far distant future.

American imperialism is engaged in a world "peace offensive." It aims to point out first, and has already succeeded, that Great Britain is the chief imperialist rival, second that the British navy is a threat to America, third that the American navy is too weak to "protect" American interests, fourth, that the militarist spirit of Great Britain is the only obstacle to progressive disarmament and fifth, that in spite of her "peaceful" intentions America must have a substantially larger navy for "defense."

NOWHERE is mentioned the struggle for domination of China except in passing. One Japanese delegate had a moment of complete frankness. Discussing the value of older types of war vessels, the Japanese delegate stated that "they are all right to send to Shanghai." They were unfit for more serious needs.

The more serious needs are those of imperialist warfare—great power against great power—and out of the struggle for world domination now centering around China the world war arises.

"OBSOLETE" war vessels are quite adequate for the purpose of butchering and subduing colonial peoples fighting for liberation. But because these imperialist aggressions are themselves proof of the relentless struggle for markets and sources of raw materials, and serve to intensify imperialist rivalry, America, Great Britain and Japan plan their navies with a view to the conflict with each other which is inevitable as soon as peace is established by the cessation of the imperialist wars and their allies, the colonial peoples.

Further proof of the growing tension between America and Great Britain is found in the latest proposal for a "peace pact" between France and America—a proposal which gold joint support from the imperialist press. Poincare and Briand.

This proposal, timed for the Geneva conference, is another blow at Great Britain. That it is anything else but a plan for peace will be apparent with but little consideration. If American imperialism really desires peace for herself and the imperialist world (we consider in this article only the inner imperialist conflicts and not the general struggle of imperialism against the Soviet Union) the requisite procedure seems quite simple. It would be sufficient for immediate purposes for the two most powerful imperialist nations—American and Great Britain—to sign a treaty against war and agree to move jointly against any other capitalist nation, nations, which disturbed the peace. The combination of forces would be too powerful for any possible grouping of capitalist nations to challenge. But imperialism is not pacifist and cannot be pacifist.

BUT at Geneva there is no talk, or even rumor of such an alliance. "Peace pacts" with Japan, yes, "peace pacts" with France, yes, with both these nations, yes—these questions are discussed and given wide publicity.

Toward Great Britain there is only hostility at Geneva, on the part of the American delegates.

Geneva is a danger signal for the American masses. (It will make no difference if the diplomats find at last some formula which will tone down the atmosphere of hostility. There will still remain the unalterable fact that American and British imperialism face each other across a chasm which will be closed only as they come to grips amid the thunder of guns.)

WE do not intend to give the impression that here and there as their interests dictate there may not be temporary understanding and even joint action as at Nanking. But these understandings will arise principally as a result of general imperialist hostility to the Soviet Union and the points and periods of agreement in inner imperialist politics will become less frequent and of shorter duration.

Already the "big navy" interests of America are gleeful. They foresee a tremendous program of naval building in the near future and the money now used to make refunds on income tax payments can be easily utilized for speedy and powerful cruisers and auxiliary craft. The plutocrats who now receive the big refunds probably will be glad to forego them if by so doing they can add to their patriotism- and the huge navy which will defend their present holdings and wrest more for them from colonial peoples and imperialist rivals.

The pressure of militarism upon the American masses is bound to increase. American imperialism, in Latin America and in China, has launched its career of conquest. In Geneva it speaks already as the ruler of the world.

Accepting the decision of the last Plenum of the Communist International, the Communist Party of America must make clear the lesson of Geneva to the American workingclass and proceed more energetically than ever before to prepare it to put in practice in the most effective way the Leninist slogan of "Fight your own imperialism first!"

Interesting Season of Shaw Plays Here July 13

The Washington Square Players of the New York University are planning a summer season of five Shaw plays beginning July 13, at the University Theatre, 100 Washington Square. The productions, which are to be staged under the direction of Prof. Randolph Somerville, will include, "Fanny's First Play," "Misalliance," "Getting Married," "You Never Can Tell" and "Candida."

New York Group to View Mausoleum of Lenin; See Kremlin

For many generations the Kremlin in Moscow has been a spot of foremost interest to the traveler, but now those who come from every corner of the earth to see for themselves the wondere of Soviet Russia are drawn to a spot outside the Kremlin walls, where the body of Lenin rests.

The present mausoleum is only a temporary building of wood but is to be replaced by a stone edifice later. Perhaps then the body will no longer be on view, but at present, those who have obtained special permission may see the remains of the leader of the Russian revolution just as he appeared on the day of his death.

It is a unique privilege which has inspired many thousands of Russian workmen and peasants, and makes a lasting impression on all those who are permitted to enter the little red building which has become world famous. Also within this tomb are the banners of the Communist International and the war banner of the Paris Commune of 1871.

A Rostrum.

From the top of this mausoleum, which is reached by steps on either side, the greatest figures in the Russian revolution have addressed the workers of Moscow and reviewed the important demonstrations and parades in the Red Square.

This mausoleum is but one of the many revolutionary landmarks which will be visited by those who leave with the World Tourists on July 14th for a six weeks' trip to Russia. Arrangements have been made with the USSR Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries to make excursions to revolutionary museums, where there are the revolutionary papers of all countries and examples of the propaganda which brought about the revolution in Russia, and various interesting objects which bring before the traveler a vivid picture of the years of struggle which produced the present Workers' Republic.

The party going under the management of the World Tourists is limited, and there are only 48 more places vacant. The time is short in which to file an application, so everyone interested should write immediately for a booklet and further information to the World Tourists, Inc., 41 Union Square, New York City.

MILLINERY AND CAP SITUATION TOLD BY T.U.E.L.

Serious Problems That Face Workers Stated

The National Committee, Cap and Millinery Section, Trade Union Educational League has issued a statement reviewing the results of the recent convention of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' Union.

"The millinery trade is undergoing the same development which all other trades have undergone within the past ten years," the statement says, "the trade is spreading all over the country, Chicago, St. Louis and many other cities have become important millinery centers. The failure of our International to undertake adequate organization work to bring this influx of workers into its folds and raise their standards to the level of the organized millinery workers in New York who in the past have supplied almost the entire market, has brot about a condition where the workers of New York are faced with the intensive competition from unorganized centers.

Ever Mere Serious.

"The situation in the cap trade is even more serious. Large cap manufacturers are gradually giving up manufacturing and becoming jobbers. The trade in the organized centers is being transferred into the hands of small contractors and to out-of-town, open shop centers, such as New Jersey, etc. On the other hand, in these open shops centers, because of the cheap labor supply, jobbers are beginning to manufacture on a large scale. This condition is resulting in competition against the New York market. The jobbers, who are becoming an ever more important factor in the industry, are thus increasing their profits, and at the same time shirking all responsibility for the conditions of the workers. The development of the jobbing-contracting system, tha spreading of the millinery industry, the organization of the unorganized, retaining of union conditions and the struggle for further improvements—all these are problems that are of vital concern to the cap and millinery workers. In fact, they are typical problems of all the needle trades. Large manufacturing concerns are now producing furs, garments, and leather as well as general women's apparel. Jobbing, contracting and splitting up of the industry in smaller production units are typical in every branch of the needle trades."

Mine Workers' Union Fights for Defense of Foreign Born Workers

Under the sponsorship of the United Mine Workers of America, District No. 2, a series of ten connective meetings will be held in as many towns and cities in the State of Pennsylvania from June 20th to 30th. The purpose of these meetings will be in the nature of a mass protest against the proposed anti-alien legislation that has been brought up at intervals in Congress. These conferences are scheduled to take place in the miners' halls of the following cities: Portage, June 20; Ehrenfeld, June 21; Beaverdale, June 22; Gallitzin, June 23; Dunle, June 24; Nanty-Glo, June 25-26; Cassandra June 27; Lilly, June 28; South Fork, June 29, and Barnesborough, June 30.

Among the important speakers who will appear in behalf of the Johnston Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers, will be Peter P. Jurchak, compensation lawyer for the U.M.W. and Jeannette D. Peral, field organizer for the National Council.

Each local is planning an extensive campaign of literature and publicity to be distributed throughout the country during the next few weeks. The National Office of the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers is located at 41 Union Square, New York City.

Workers Delegates Actively Elected to Anti-War Meeting

MINNEAPOLIS, June 27.—Interest increases daily in the forthcoming Minneapolis Conference Against Intervention in Mexico, Nicaragua and China. The conference is to be held Thursday, June 30th at 8 p. m. in the court house assembly room. Already over a hundred delegates are elected, representing labor unions, peace leagues, workers' clubs, temperance societies and other organizations opposed to a new imperialistic war.

Held Ten Meetings.

This conference was organized in January and has held some ten successful mass meetings and numerous conferences with attendance from two to seven hundred at each meeting. The four hundred members enrolled in conference are working everretically for this city conference which is expected to represent the sentiment of the entire organized Minneapolis trade union and labor movement.

Dislike New War.

These organizations realise that the danger of a new war and the present critical situation in China have a direct bearing on the standard of living of the United States workers and it is therefore not surprising that local unions and fraternal organizations, brotherhoods, lodges, workmen's circles, etc. should be so keenly interested in building this movement to prevent a new bloody slaughter.

At this writing it seems probable that prominent speakers will address the conference altho this will be a business and organizational meeting.

All organizations, whether or not they have received official invitation, are urged to send three to five delegates and all workers and citizens opposed to war, whether they are regular delegates or not, are urged to attend the conference.

Girls Work for $13 Per Week; but Even Such Jobs Are Hard to Get

Today I tried my luck in a department store. They had ads in both Sunday's and this morning's papers. The doors were still closed at 8:30, but already there were a few girls. At 9 the doors opened, and we were told that we must wait till 9:30 to get our applications. More girls kept coming. At 9:30 we got the blanks, and it took me an hour to fill mine out. Among the long list of questions relating every personal detail of my life, was one asking if I would promise to report any act of my fellow workers that I considered against the rules of the firm. It was 10:30 when I had this important document made out, and after waiting a few minutes I was led in to see the king of jobs,—the superintendent.

He looked me over and then my papers, and said that right now there were no openings in the department, but that I might try again next week. I asked him how much they paid experienced girls in that department, and he said that they paid all girls alike, regardless of what was written on their applications, and that was $15.00 a week, but that he could not put me on in any case as I had no town references. So I called it a day as it was too late to go to any other place after that.

A factory ad got my attention this morning. It read: "Girls wanted, good pay. Apply——Ave. A." When I got there, only three girls were waiting, but by the time we got in there were twenty. The ad. in the paper did not say what kind of work or the name of the firm, but I just had to get as far as the door to smell the tobacco and cigars. On the fourth floor a man came out saying that he needed fast girls only; those that had never worked in a factory need not wait. These fast workers are started at $12.00 for the first two weeks, $13.00 for the next month, and then they are given a chance to work piece-work, and can make as high as $18 a week. The girls start at 7:30 get 30 minutes for lunch and quit at 4:30. But even this job I could not get!

Prosperity A Myth, State Speakers At L. I. D. Conference

(By Federated Press).

CAMP TAMIMENT, Pa., June 27.—"Prosperity" is slipping. This is the opinion of a group of the best known labor economists who spoke at the annual summer conference of the League for Industrial Democracy at Camp Tamiment, June 23 to 27. The subject was "Prosperity."

Benjamin C. Marsh, managing director of the Farmers' National Council, told of the collapse of the farmers' standards. "With twice as many farmers in operation as are needed to produce an all sufficient basis the foods that can be sold at a fair price the tillers of the soil are in great distress.

Nearing a Speaker.

Scott Nearing said that the maintenance of the present manufacturing level depended on the marketing of $4,000,000,000 of exports. And colonial revolts and European wars which are in the making will cut these markets.

George Soule, an editor of the New Republic, and director of the Labor Bureau, took a more optimistic angle on "prosperity" for the labor movement. In former prosperous periods the labor movement boomed because there was a great demand for labor. But in the prosperity era of today there is a "greatly increased efficiency or enlarged per capita production" which has brought a decline of unemployment.

3rd Degree in Dry Office Results in Shake-up of Jobs

Proof of brutal, vicious third-degree methods in extracting "evidence" in the offices of local prohibition enforcement department has resulted in the "transfer" of Major Charles P. Mills, dry administrator for eastern New York and Connecticut, and the firing of Maj. August Heine, assistant administrator.

Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of prohibition, concerned himself with a brief statement from his Washington office that the "changes were made because of dissatisfaction with enforcement methods in New York."

Admits Brutality.

Last week Heise admitted in federal court that he strapped Albert Briggs in a chair, prohibition headquarters on December 13 and put him thru a "torture process". Briggs was kicked in the stomach, a tape and towel were used as a gag and then twisted, and then beaten on the head until he was unconscious.

Communist Miners to Give July 4th Picnic

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 27.—July 4th is the date when all the class conscious workers of western Pennsylvania will gather at the well known Gajda's Farm, Cheswick, Pa., to attend the annual picnic of the Workers Party of District 5.

Cheswick and surrounding towns are the center of one of the most important mining section of Western Pa. The miners in this section are of the more militant type and are expected to turn out by the thousands for this important event.

The slogan of those attending the picnic will be: United action of all workers against the open shop drive of the coal operators; Unity with the left wing in the Furriers' union, and the left wing in the needle trades of New York. Stop the imperialist war against the Soviet Union.

There will be plenty to eat, games and sports, and nationally known speakers.

To reach the farm from Pittsburgh: take train at Pennsylvania station for Cheswick at 10:11—11:25 a. m. or 2:50 P. M. railroad time. Or take Car No. 50 at Sixth and Smithfield, go to end of line, transfer to Car No. 34, go to end of line. Transfer to Cheswick car. Get off at Mardof stop.

Ladies' Auxiliary of Machinists' Union for Birth Control Legality

MILWAUKEE, June 27 (FP).—All legal obstacles to the giving of birth control information by physicians should be removed, declares a resolution adopted by Milwaukee Bluebird lodge 116, Ladies Auxiliary of the Intl. Association of Machinists.

Too many children in poor families means less opportunity for each child, impairs the health of mother and children, complicates the child labor problem and through national overpopulation leads to international war, the resolution points out.

Stenographers, Bookkeepers and Assistants Union 16,436 passed a similar resolution.

SUBMIT EVIDENCE OF BIG STEAL BY UNION OFFICIALS

Crooks Lift $37,000 in Dist. Council 9

Today five officials of District Council 9 of the Painters' Union will once more be faced with charges that they stole at least $30,000 in membership fees belonging to the organization.

J. Fisher, president of the council, Philip Zausner, Alex Stein, William Hartley and Charles Koenig are the officials who are directly pointed out as those who have been getting away with union funds.

Used Money In Wall Street.

Fishar and Hartley have been confronted with documentary evidance of their using the money of the union for speculation. Checks, mounting into the thousands, have been uncovered which were made out to the order of Brattel and Ludwig, Wall Street brokers. They have already confessed to the council, but said they were "paying it back." They revealed that $14,000 had been returned to the treasury, but that $37,000 is still due the organization.

In supreme court today Harry Bloom, president of Local 1,011, will seek an injunction restraining the defendants from hindering criminal action by keeping the council's books and records out of court.

Bloom states that the matter has been brought to the attention of the district attorney and that a city magistrate has also heard evidence concerning the wholesale plunder of the union treasury. Koenig, who is charged with having made away with $23,000 of the workers' money, and who is under $1,500 bail, having been indicted for grand larceny, has now disappeared.

Used Various Tricks.

Various devices were used by the crooked officials in appropriating the union's funds, by far the most frequent was in false entries of initation fees in the journal. There are numerous instances where an applicant given a receipt for $75 as initiation fee would be credited with only $5 on the journal, "the discrepancy" being covered by falsifying his age so that he would come in the non-benefit class, which included members over 60.

NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY

NEWARK, N. J., June 27.—On Friday evening at the Market Plaza, Broad St., where the Workers' Party conducts open air meetings every Friday the enemies of labor attempted to break up the meeting.

First they tried a trick of yelling that the speaker was talking against the government. Then a super patriot went over to an ex-servire man and demanded that he place his signature to a petition that the meetings be stopped in the future. He declared that all true blooded Americans would sign. This caused the worker to produce his discharge from the army and with notification he would produce more. The the sargeant of police arrived and asked to see the permit. It was produced and the meeting continued.

These open air meetings of the Workers Party have become popular and the "patriots" do not like the agitation against war. Consequently they are using all means to have the permit revoked.

The speakers were Bimba and others. Next week Bert Miller and members of the Young Workers League will hold the fort.

James Meaney Tells How He was Shot in Knee by Jersey State Troopers

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 27.—James Meaney testified that he was beaten and shot by three state troopers before the siege of his brother's farm in the trial of Alfred K. Larsen, a trooper, on a charge of atrocious assault.

The prosecution also revealed that when the 14 troopers and two agents of the "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals" came to serve the warrant, the Meaneys were given no idea as to who they were.

It was pointed out that there was no warrant for James Meaney, and in spite of the fact that he offered no resistance he was shot in the knee and left lying helpless on the road.

TRANSIT HEARING ADVANCES GAME OF BIG EXPLOITERS

City to Recapture the B. M. T. Lines

High finance is playing a stealthy game in the traction hearings. Samuel Untermyer, special counsel for the transit commission has advised the city of New York that the quickest it recaptures the Brooklyn-Manhattan traction concern the more it will save of $17,000,000 due the traction company in preferentials. This sum represents the amount due the B.-M. T. as the result of the lean years after the war when the $3,500,000 annually it was assured on its investments under the subway contract did not materialize. This amount was guaranteed to the company by the city and is now being paid at the rate of $2,400,000 annually. Untermyer contends that in case of reaspture this debt automatically would be wiped off the books.

Must Give Year's Notice.

A year's notice that the city intends to take back the lines must be given the company and it is understood that this notice will soon be given. Untermyer estimates that the lines can be reaptured at a cost of $52,000,000. This purchase will necessitate a bond issue, that will be floated by the banking houses dominated by J. P. Morgan & Co., and by the National City Bank, controlled by the Rockefeller interests. The holders of the bonds will not have to even administer the operation of the traction lines, but paid city officials will take care of that work, while the Wall Street combine will be guaranteed a certain amount of the surplus realized from the exploitation of the traction slaves. To get the lines in the hands of the city seems to be the only way the Chase National group, represented by Albert H. Wiggin, can be ousted from control of the traction systems.

The next move after the recapture by the city will be an increased fare so that the Wall Street gang can get their interest on the money invested in traction bonds of the city.

This move is being fought by the real estate speculators who deal in suburban properties, because increased fares would make it difficult for the sharks to sell as many lots and houses as they are able to sell with the present arrangement. Already real estate is slumping and the big concern of Joseph P. Day has thousands of lots an hand that it cannot dispose of. The juggling of the traction problem makes real estate still more difficult to move and strenuous efforts are being made to revive the five cent fare agitation that enabled the late Hylan administration to remain in power for so long.

Will Reduce Wages Still Further.

The control of the lines by the Tammany administration in the interest of the Morgan-Rockefeller combines will result not only in increased fares but in still further reduction of the wages and encroachments upon the working conditions of the traction slaves.

Although unintentionally, the hearings have served to bring before the public the fraud of the company union on the interborough, which is controlled by the B.-M.T. manipulators and to expose the miserable labor conditions prevailing on the lines. Everywhere, throughout the city, the topic of conversation among the workers in the car barns revolved around the chances of striking in order to force union recognition by the company and repudiation of the company union.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER IX.
Building the Party.

The process which we name the Americanization of our Party has become recognized as one of our main problems. That is, to orientate our Party upon the realities of the class struggle and adjust our tactics and methods to the conditions presented by these realities. The first step should be to turn our attention much more toward the problems of the American workers and much more to the workers in the shops. Also to draw all of our members into the main stream of the labor movement such as trade unions. This will increase and strengthen our contacts and attract the American born workers to our Party.

Since the war a certain degree of leveling process has taken place in the country, immigration has been considerably curtailed and the most decisive section within the language colonies have become the elements born in this country of foreign parentage. The result of which is that the language colonies are brought closer to the questions of the American workers in general and the workingclass as a whole has become more Americanized, more of one compact mass. This situation should be taken advantage of and facilitate the process of Americanizing the movement.

In previous chapters the need of adapting ourselves to the use of the everyday language of the workers has been emphasized. This in itself will naturally become a part of our Americanization process. Many entirely foreign terms should be eliminated from our propaganda vocabulary. Our language press in particular as well as our language fractions must become less foreign in character, which means that while taking up all questions of the international movement, it must be done properly in its relation toward the concrete problems of the American workingclass. Our Party as a whole must then proceed to appropriate the traditions of the American workingclass struggle, make them our own and incorporate them definitely in the Communist movement.

Combine Struggles for Immediate Needs With Ultimate Aims.

Our direct approach to the workers naturally goes through the everyday struggles. To establish permanent contact with them and actually win them for our movement, we must fight equally for question of a penny an hour increase in the trade union or our ultimate aims. We must create the proper combination so that every struggle for partial demands become part of the struggle leading directly toward the achievement of our ultimate aims. We must study the character of workers individually, approach them on their own basis of understanding which we should help to further develop. It is always well for our comrades to know just what points are the best contacts and then proceed from that point to interest the individual workers. We must observe closely how the masses move and react to the class struggle so that our slogans become both practical, concrete and leading toward the achievements of our ultimate aims. When our Party speaks it must become authoritative to the workers.

While we may not face the obstacles so much of the cunning social democratic lieder of the trade union bureaucrats among the workers in the shops, since they are not numerous there, we must nevertheless show that we understand practical politics in a Communistic sense. We must not only shout about the needs of the workers, but give actual help. Reformist leaders too often win the confidence of the workers with their claims of giving practical help.

In applying our campaigns, our slogans should be as simple as possible and so colned that they concentrate on the main outstanding issues. They should not be too advanced, and the fewer the better. Our slogans should be definitely connected with the organization measures taken.

A further problem of winning the American section of the working masses, is to find the correct approach to the Negro workers in the industries, and take up the questions vitally effecting the agricultural workers and small farmers.

While setting forth the immediate issues in these various fields of struggle, the strictest adherence to principle is necessary combined with the maximum contact.

Simplifying Our Tasks.

All our methods need simplification. The approach to the workers must become simplified, our machinery works in a very cumbersome manner and should operate on a more simplified basis. Too many campaigns initiated simultaneously create confusion. This can be eliminated by concentrating mainly on the outstanding issue at each specific period and engage mainly in the one campaign corresponding with this issue. Such procedure will help to obtain the maximum results in response from our members as well as from the working masses.

When engaging in a campaign, the

The Battle in New York Needle Trades

By I. JEROME.

The Proletarian Spirit.

I saw this miracle.

A hundred workers massed in a hall.

Toil-weary men and girls, cloak makers, dress makers, straight from the factories to the meeting.

This is the vanguard. The front line of the left wing.

Louis Hyman has the floor. General Manager of the Joint Board. His words are few and unemotional. These are the chosen workers. They do not need propaganda. Gamut, unfeebly, Lincolnesque, he stands before them. He talks intimately, warmly (intimately, warmly he talks to the gatherings of twenty thousand at Madison Square Garden).

. . . not a donation, fellow-workers, but a loan, and only for a short term. The union will pay back every penny it borrows. I have no pledge to give you but my word. We have been so far, fellow-workers, and shall we now fail for lack of funds? You are the defenders of the union, and the union now comes to you and says, do not let my foes crush me. Stand by me in my hour of need!"

A worker stands up. A proletarian, talking the language of the proletariat. His voice is husky. His words come rapidly.

"The bosses give money to Sigman. The yellow socialist 'Forward' gives money to Sigman. The blackshirt Beckerman of the Amsigamated gives money to Sigman. The Civic Federation gives money to Sigman. And we. Whom have we got to help us? The newspapers are against us. The judges are against us. The bosses are against us. The police are against us. The A. F. of L. is against us. Our workers are knocked-out by the long strike. Our pickets are blackjacked. Our leaders are jailed. Who's going to help our cause if not we ourselves? Workers, comrades, do your utmost. Dig deep into your pockets. Into your flesh if you have to!"

The collection begins. A girl comes forward—pale, oval-faced, a Daily Worker folded under her arm.

"I give one hundred dollars."

Her voice is low, but firm with conviction.

Another girl—two men—three—step forward. There is a rush to the front. The chairman pleads for patience. "Your money will be taken, comrades. Please give us a chance to make the entries."

One worker, a hooded cloak-maker brings to the table fifty dollars. "Will you let me bring another fifty tomorrow? I think my wife can raise it somehow."

The chairman announces that one comrade has given five hundred dollars. His name cannot be made public as he is a member of a right wing local and he fears reprisals.

Some pledge to bring money the following day, two days later, at the end of the week.

Three men club together and bring fifty dollars. Who knows how much this means to them.

Ah! one lays down his watch: "Here, pawn this."

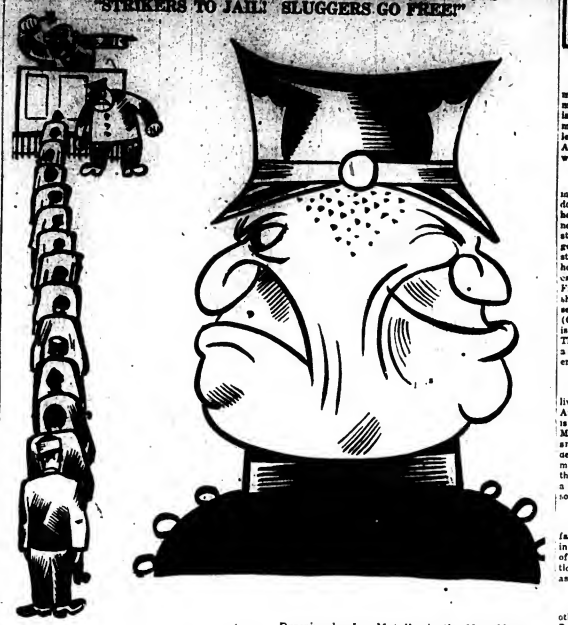
Half an hour has passed. The chairman rises to announce the results. A light of joy is in his eye.

The workers wait for the announcement. The room holds its breath.

"Over ten thousand dollars!"

"Im-poss-ible!"

The wonderment is whispered thru the room.



Over ten thousand dollars! The workers look at one another. Is it a dream? Joy floods to their eyes. If they were not ashamed, if they could but be little children they would cry. Their glances embrace each other.

Is it possible? We?—we gave it? For the first time they behold their seedy clothes, their pinched faces, their poverty.

Is it possible?

And in a corner I ask—Shall these be conquered?

Labor Faces a Turn in the Road

By BERT MILLER.

"COOLIDGE says flag of America means best job on earth" declares the New York Times. The phrase might well have been uttered by any of the Green, Woll, Lewis outfit now at the head of the American Federation of Labor. This theory of the exalted position of labor in the United States as compared with other nations, the theory of the immunity of the United States from the laws which govern the development of the class struggle elsewhere, has become the basis for a complete class collaboration philosophy, which has been carefully nourished and disseminated by reactionary labor leaders and employers alike. It has been made the basis for the theory that the trade unions are not fighting organizations of the workers but rather in the words of Green, "agencies through which cooperation between unions and management can be realized". The conservative wing of the American labor officialdom has literally swamped the labor movement with this propoganda for the last few years and it has found its concrete expression in arbitration schemes, the B. and O. plan for increasing the productivity of labor and various forms of labor banking and insurance. One cannot doubt but that the material conditions of prosperity in which America found itself during this period, gave on impetus to this propaganda, and that it seriously affected and dulled the militancy and fighting spirit of certain sections of the American working class. Even in our own ranks it gave rise to certain expressions of scepticism and pessimism from those who based their views on "temporary and superficial phenomena".

RECENT developments tend to indicate that the "honeymoon" period is over, and that the campaign against class collaboration, carried on by the left wing, was fundamentally correct. As far back as January, 1925, Joseph Wild of the Daily News Record let the cat out of the bag when he said, "Inquiry shows that cooperation and profit sharing succeed in good times to some extent but wither under adverse winds." Mr. Wild then quotes W. G. Ilaber, "The first zero breeze of rigorous times will freeze 90 per cent of these labor idiosyncrasies."

American capitalists encouraged the Golden Rule twaddle for a time for a very definite and useful purpose. During the period of expanding and developing prosperity, labor had to be drugged against launching an offensive, against demanding its share in the unusual harvest which American capitalists were reaping. This could be done only by bribing certain key sections of the American working class and by cultivating assiduously the policy of class cooperation. A few crumbs to the railroad workers, the building trades and other highly skilled categories, a few sumptuous love feasts with Woll, Hoover, Jewell, Willard, Hillman, Nash, etc., as the guests and the trick was done. As a result there has been during the last few years almost no serious struggle for increased demands by any section of the American labor movement except that led by the left wing.

THE times are changing. The economic weather man predicts some "zero breezes" approaching. While the development of American capitalism is still distinctly on the upgrade, there are signs of a turn in the road. Recent reports indicate serious declines in the automobile, textile and building industries, which are key factors in the maintenance of the present period of American prosperity. Conditions in Europe, in which American capitalism has become deeply involved are most unsettled and are highly charged with social electricity.

Under these changing conditions, it is becoming increasingly evident that the American capitalist class has decided to change its tactics, to drop its honeyed phrases, and come down to business. The following recent events bear out this conclusion: (1) The offensive against the miners' union. (2) The refusal by the Federal Board of Mediation of an increase in wages to conductors and trainmen on fifty-five western railroads. (3) The renewal of the use of injunctions on a broad scale against labor (the eastern, carmen, needle trades). (4) The proposed attack upon the building trades, now being discussed by the employers in this industry. (5) The stopping of insurance and welfare schemes by a number of employers (American Woolen Co., Morris Packing Co.). (6) The ferocity of the attack against the most militant section of the American labor movement in the needle trades. (7) The pressure being brought to bear upon the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Bank by the Mitten interests. These examples, which can be amplified by others in every section of the country, make it evident that an offensive against the trade unions of this country on a broad and formidable scale, is slowly but surely gathering headway.

THIS prospect holds the possibility of deep-going changes in the American labor movement in the not distant future. Labor is facing more and more the question of the defense of its most fundamental and elementary rights to organize, to strike and to picket. In this struggle the honest trade union elements in the American Federation, those who refuse to surrender their basic rights, must either step forward, consolidate their forces, draw in from the ranks of the unorganized new and courageous fighting elements, and build a broad militant left wing, which will hold a real promise for a renaissance of the entire American labor movement, and a period of great development and growth, or they must face the impending danger of the complete wiping-out of the trade unions and the inevitable crushing of labor's standards which will follow.

The lines are crystallizing sharply between those who are ready to desert the labor movement and those who are ready to fight for its existence.

Boy On Trial For Murder.

HACKENSACK, June 27.—James Hoey, 19, of Dumont, N. J., is expected to go on trial here soon for the murder of his friend, Elisha Smith, 19, at the home of Evelyn Silveria, 14, on March 12.

Professional Patriots

The close relationship of Fred I. Marvin of the New York Commercial and the American Defense Society to all these army officers may be gathered from Mr. Marvin's series of articles which ran in the Army and Navy Journal in the spring of 1926 (see page 92). Several of them attack the advocates of peace and international good will. All the War Department men use the Marvin material and other rehashed items from the notorious Lusk Report.

A typical verbal assault on progressive movements by big army advocates was made in 1925 on the League for Industrial Democracy in the pages of the Bulletin of the 83rd Division of the U. S. Army and in the Quartermaster Review. Other army officers took up the false charges which consisted of "treason" and references to the circulation of a so-called "slacker's oath." When these charges were investigated they were found to have originated with Mr. Marvin who is systematic in his slanderous attacks on the L. I. D. When Mr. Marvin was asked to produce evidence to prove his lying charges he failed as usual to reply. Mr. Norman Thomas, a director of the League, refers to Marvin's statements as "childish and malicious misrepresentations."

One of the earlier army officer mix-ups with the peace societies is described by Leonard Cline in "The War on the Peace Seekers" (New Republic, July 2, 1924):

"So we arrive at the episode of Brigadier-General Albert J. Bowley. Speaking always with the agreement that his utterances shall not be given to the press, General Bowley has declared that activities of the Soviet Reds have been reflected in such organizations as the Y.W.C.A. (cheers from the business men), that our colleges are teaching our young people pacifism and Communism; that Carrie Chapman Catt and Jane Addams are 'the reddest of the reds.' We have no time, however, to consider more than his speech before the Chamber of Commerce at Columbus, Ohio, on March 7.

"As usual, General Bowley exacted the promise that there should be no newspaper account of his talk. But when it was over five of his auditors, outraged, swore to affidavits recounting what she said. He attacked the National Council for Prevention of War, among whose officers are such persons as Mrs. Catt, Miss Addams, President Hibben of Princeton, President Lowell of Harvard, Maude Wood Park, Julia G. Lathrop, William Allen White, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Dr. John A. Ryan of the Catholic University of America. In particular, he attacked Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary.

"He declared, according to the affidavits, that Mr. Libby was educated for the promotion of Communism in Russia or by Russians, that after returning from Russia he taught Communism in Pennsylvania; that he is a Communist; and that he and an associate take turns visiting Russia to get instructions from the Soviet government; that the Council is the tool of the Soviets and its constructive measures are a cloak to hide its sinister designs; that the Council and Mr. Libby want to overthrow our government by violence.

"Immediately there was a hue of indignation. General Bowley was asked for proofs. He promised them. Not one so far has he supplied. His very associates have admitted that he went too far, drawing inferences not justifiable from the evidence. Fred R. Marvin, editor of the Searchlight column in the New York Commercial, of the 83rd Division of the U. S. Army and in the Quartermaster Review. The activities of other army professional propagandists is told by Mr. Cline in a subsequent article (New Republic, July 9, 1924). as follows:

"There is, for instance, the activity of Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Sheets. We have at hand a copy of a letter sent by Colonel Sheets to Dr. John A. Ryan of the Catholic University of America, who is on the executive board of the National Council for Prevention of War. Dr. Ryan had delivered an address before the convention of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Colonel Sheets demanded answers to a list of questions which imputed to the League and to Dr. Ryan as well a program of violent communistic doctrines. Religious prejudice was brought out boldly in the letter, which concluded, 'Are you willing to be branded as a self-appointed destroyer of the notion?' Copies of this letter were sent to the press.

"And there is the incessant propagandizing of such journals as the Army and Navy Register. An article in the November 10, 1923, issue of this organ declared that $3,000,000 in gold had been sent into the United States by the "Communistic International.' On the return from Europe of Frederick J. Libby of the National Council for Prevention of War, a campaign, to wipe out our army and navy would begin, the article declared, so that when the red uprising comes the country will be at its mercy."

What has been done to counteract these absurd statements from military sources? Mr. Cline reports:

"THE RETREAT FROM MOSCOW"

The British bloc against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has failed, at least temporarily, and the war of invasion is postponed for just a little. The vigilance of the Soviet Union is one main reason. Trusted assassins hired by England have been caught.

RED POETS AND BOURGEOIS INTELLECTUALS.

In his review of Lola Ridge's Red Flag Lebarbe seems to me to have misunderstood almost every aspect of Miss Ridge's work in an astonishing manner. He announces with loud and belligerent fanfare that Lola Ridge is a proletarian poet. This original discovery will probably surprise no one more than Miss Ridge herself, who may be delighted to learn that her intellectual, highly stylized, imagistic poetry is full of the heartbeat of the American worker. But in that case, what kind of creature is the American worker?

The fact that Miss Ridge has often drawn her inspiration from the masses and from workingclass history (such as the Russian Revolution) doesn't make her a proletarian poet. In her diction and in the subtleties of her emotional approach she is thoroughly alien to the proletariat. This is not intended as criticism of Miss Ridge. Since poetry in this country is still produced largely by bourgeois intellectuals (exploited workers never get a chance to indulge in such leisure pursuits), it is inevitable that the stamp of a bourgeois psyche should remain more or less intact, no matter how completely individual intellectuals may be in sympathy with the interests of the workingclass. Lola Ridge is a bourgeois intellectual. So is Joe Freeman, who is a thoroughgoing Communist. So is Lebarbe himself. (He showed it in his recent sonnet in The DAILY WORKER.) So am I and several other persons I could mention who are members of the Workers (Communist) Party. Figure it out for yourself why Carl Sandburg, who is not a Communist, is a better proletarian than Joe Freeman who is; why Theodore Dreiser, who has no real quarrels with the capitalistic system, is a more proletarian novelist than Floyd Dell, who has given some of his best energy to the revolutionary movement.

And Lebarbe's choice for proletarian laurels is strangely awry. For of living American poets Lola Ridge would be one of the most difficult for an American worker to understand. The blue-blooded aristocrat, Amy Lowell, is simple in comparison. And Lebarbe's quotation from "Red flag" proves it. Miss Ridge is one of the most persistent and most intricate of the imagists, and with this she combines an obscure, mystical intensity that places her decidedly among the "difficult" poets. Lebarbe, carried away by the subject matter of some of her poetry and her obvious sympathies, disregards everything else. And for some reason he also seems to feel it necessary to make a hysterical defense of Miss Ridge against imaginary foes. He actually is sore at the fact that critics have praised "Red Flag"!

Lebarbe's review also contains a number of curious irrelevancies. The fact that " 'Annunciation' speaks of violets and the word 'zelpt' is found in 'After the Festival' " is doubtless very interesting and literary antiquarians of the future may thank him for the information. He might also have mentioned that "Obliteration" speaks of the sea, that the word "appulse" is used as the title of one of the poems, etc., etc.

* * *

The poem "Phyllis" is emphatically not reminiscent of T. S. Eliot (another proletarian?). Let Lebarbe read or reread "Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock," "Sweeney among the Nightingales" and "The Waste Land."

* * *

The poetry of Lola Ridge has certain very distinguished qualities. But they seem to have escaped Lebarbe in his frantic desire to make a "proletarian" of her at any cost. If Lebarbe thinks I'm all wrong, let him follow his own advice and place "Red Flag" in the hands of a worker of working class origin. And if he wishes, he can choose somebody who happens to be especially sensitive to poetry. Then let him note the reactions, if any.

THE SHYLOCK OF THE WORLD.

AMERICA, THE WORLD'S BANKER, by Dr. Max Winkler. Published by the Research Department, Foreign Policy Association, N. Y. $.50.

Dr. Winkler is the Vice-President of Bertron, Griscom & Co., and was formerly the head of the Foreign Bond department of Moody's Investors' Service. While, therefore, we cannot look to him for anything in the way of a social interpretation of the phenomena of financial imperialism, he is nevertheless a first class statistician and has compiled a very valuable body of data from which Marxian students can draw deductions of their own.

This pamphlet is the best current study of the manner in which the spiral of American finance is continuing to soar skywards. Exclusive of the ten billion dollars of political or war debts advanced by the American Government to foreign Governments, private American investments according to figures compiled by Dr. Winkler, had invested approximately thirteen billion dollars abroad by the end of 1926. This figure is about a billion dollars greater than the estimates of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

The suddenness with which Uncle Sam has entered upon the role of the world's Uncle Shylock stands out above everything else in the book. Prior to 1915 foreign borrowings floated in the United States were of relatively no moment. By the end of 1926, foreign private financial investments in this country reached $12,855,000,000, geographically distributed as follows:

Region	Amount
Europe	$3,596,700,000
Canada	3,557,600,000
Cuba	1,508,700,000
Mexico	1,074,600,000
Central America	295,200,000
South America	1,973,300,000
China, Japan and Philippines	713,500,000
Miscellaneous	225,000,000

Hence, to whatever corner of the earth we may turn we find that American dollars have penetrated it and that foreign workers must sweat out interest and dividends with which to line the golden coffers of American imperialism. "America has loaned money to the Dutch East Indies, Australia, Central America, Cuba, the West Indies; in South America to the governments of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Colombia and Peru and to the provinces and states, departments, cities and municipalities within these countries.

* * *

"Today American dollars finance Chilean nitrate producers, Venezuelon oil companies, Sao Paulo coffee growers, Colombian tobacco raisers and Cuban cotton planters. Funds are obtained in the United States for Peruvian sanitation projects and for Brazilian, Chilean and Colombian railroad construction. America supplies capital for Danish banks, Swedish industrial concerns, Norwegian hydro-electric projects, Finnish financial institutions, Czechoslovak equipment and glass companies, Jugoslav railways, Italian public utilities, Spanish telephone enterprises and even Russian mining projects (Harriman manganese concession and Lena goldfields concession)."

The conclusions to be drawn from these facts are quite simple and should be very obvious. The adage is as true as it is ancient that in capitalist society "he who holds the purse strings calls the tune." But of the manner in which American imperialism directs the course of practically all of the western world and of even the major powers Dr. Winkler drops not even a word. This we must conjecture for ourselves or secure from other sources. Secondly, how long can the mad dance keep up?

On this question Dr. Winkler and the Foreign Policy Association throw just a hint. Already the world is finding it difficult to meet the interest and amortization charges which such huge loans involve although, for the time being, "the over-abundance of (American) capital will make it possible for such debtors, as may be in difficulties temporarily, to create new debts to take care of existing obligations (p. 74)." In other words, foreign nations are beginning to borrow from us to pay interest—a situation, as a result of which, "some of the recent offerings do not perhaps constitute high grade investment issues." It goes without saying that the venerable Doctor of Philosophy neglects to add that sections of the Communist International are on the job in all of the countries getting ready to take over and direct the works when the crash occurs.

MASS ARRESTS THREATEN RIGHT TO STRIKE

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty.

THIS is not a fish story: It is rumored that General Wood, alias "Ivory Soap," the tuchus of the tobacco, rubber and sugar trusts in the Philippines has been recalled from the islands to make South Dakota safe for Coolidge. In addition to the exploitation of the Filipinos by the American tax masters, Wood's numerous blunders made a bad situation worse and it seems that the administration considered attaching a shiny can to his political tail.

BUT the exigencies of politics modify decisions and the reports now current around Rapid City, South Dakota indicate that the political lobe of the President's brain, calculates on utilising the former Proctor-Gamble white hope in the task of capturing the electoral vote of South Dakota for Big Chief Still Waters. It should be noted that Wood carried South Dakota in the primaries that preceded the election of Warren Gamaliel Harding. So, canny "Cal" figuring that Leonard might like to take another trip to the Philippines in order to catch a legitimate fish that would enable him to retire without creating the impression that he was kicked the treasury, may agree to hold Wood's blunders in abeyance in return for the votes he may be able to bring in to the Coolidge net.

NEVERTHELESS we think that Coolidge could win more votes by suggesting a solution of the farmers' ills than by importing a white elephant. A democratic newspaper states that Coolidge's speech to a gathering of South Dakota legislators left the latter cold. Coolidge was of the opinion that there was nothing the matter with the farmer. Something like Woodrow Wilson's analysis of the industrial depression which declared was "purely psychological." He might as well attribute their troubles to the "sex complex." It would do them as much good.

SO far the three-power naval conference in Geneva has accomplished little beyond shedding light on the keen rivalry that exists between the United States and England. Japan sits back watching every opportunity to extract some advantage from this rivalry. There will be no reduction of armaments as a result of this conference. There will be a new naval armament race between the United States and Great Britain. The admirals of both countries are snarling at each other. This is a prelude to the boom of hostile cannon.

GIANT demonstrations against the anti-trade union bill are taking place in England. Hyde Park was the scene of a lively scrimmage between Fascists and Communists last Sunday. The days of free speech and calm discussion of differences of opinion passing in England. In those halcyon days of British capitalism this orderly condition (much exaggerated at that) was attributed to the English character. What a calm, cool and collected brute the Briton was? No wonder he could lord it over millions of subject peoples. But now he is getting as excited as a whirling dervish. Simply because he is losing out in the struggle for world markets and threatened with revolution at home and abroad. This refers to the British ruling class which is doomed to go and to the British workingclass which is about to come into its own.

THAT the French government bureaucrats is honeycombed with Fascist-Royalist sympathizers was proved a few days ago when by a clever ruse the Royalist editor Lucien Dadet, and an associate were released from prison by confederates. A royalist representing himself as the minister of the interior called the prison commandant on the telephone and ordered the release of the two royalists and a Communist—the latter included to give the order a show of plausibility.

• • •

THE ability of the conspirators to use the telephone in the department of the interior and the laxity of the prison commandant in releasing prisoners with a written order to that effect from the competent authority, would indicate a lack of discipline in the French governmental institution that would seem astounding here. There is a suspicion that the prison commandant was in on the plot. He is said to be a royalist sympathizer and embraced either Daudet or his wife when the former was released. Perhaps both.

SIGMAN'S BALLOT OFFER DESCRIBED AS A "GESTURE"

After Expulsion Vote Is Absurd, Says Hyman

Commenting on the "decision" of the General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers to allow the members of that organization to vote on the question of proportional representation, Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board of the Cloak- and Dressmakers' Union stated last night that "the action of the right wing is merely a gesture. First they kick out the left wing and then decide to allow the members to vote."

"According to the agreement that was adopted at the 1925 convention of the international, when the vote was to be taken, both sides were to be represented on the committee of tellers. By first expelling the left wing, which means the overwhelming majority of the membership, the right wing can now feel safe to allow a vote of the proposition."

Was Afraid of Members.

"In the past, the right wing clique did not want to allow the large locals to have a large representation because that meant the end of their rule. But today, when they do not have to contend with this problem the right wingers can pose as liberals.

"In every local they will have their little clique vote, and no matter which way the 'membership' decides the Sigman clique will have nothing to fear for their power will continue to be secure.

"In this move at the present time the right wing once again shows that they are not sincere. By allowing the 'membership' to decide whether they favor proportional representation or not, the right wing is throwing out another of their bluffs. This will not fool the workers of the trade; they have heard stories of a similar kind many times in the past."

Verdict of Assault Against Cossack in Attack of Meaneys

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 27. — State trooper Alfred K. Larsen was tonight convicted of atrocious assault in connection with the shooting of James Meaney in the knee last previous to the siege of his farm last December. Beatrice Meaney, a sister, was killed at the same time when 14 troopers and two agents of the "Society for the Prevention of ruelty to Animals" came to serve a warrant on one of the brothers charged with undercoding his cattle.

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL CALLS ON OPPRESSED TO OPPOSE NEW WAR

To All Suppressed Peoples! To The Soldiers and Sailors!

Text of the Appeal of the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

TO THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF THE WHOLE WORLD!

COMRADES! Brothers!

Crushed and tortured, humanity is still groaning beneath the heaps of ruins of the great imperialist war, whose countless victims still live among us as fearful witnesses of the horror and crime of this war. The new generation has not yet been able to free itself from this terror, and already there is increasing from day to day the bloody menace of a new world war.

In China a vast population of many hundred millions of slaves is shaking from its neck the pressing yoke of international imperialism. The working and peasant masses who were being stifled under the double oppression of foreign imperialism and the native exploiters are rebelling against the unbounded exploitation under which they suffer. The workers are refusing to work for fourteen hours a day for starvation wages for the benafit of the foreign and native profiteers, for the big industrialists; and the peasants are likewise refusing to toll for the big landowners, for the usurers and for the Generals, the hirelings of international imperialism. The Chinese revolution, born out of the misery and the exploitation of the people, is rising powerfully and vengefully against imperialism; it is shaking imperialism's unsteady stabilization and deepening the deadly crisis, in the clutches of which imperialism has been writhing ever since the last world war.

THE heroic example of the workers and peasants of China is awakening the broad masses of the colonial peoples; the echo of their struggles and their victories resounds to Indo-China, to Indonesia and to India. The vampires of the imperialist capital

Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party Issues Call for Five Thousand New Readers of The Daily Worker

The increasing danger of a new World War, the oncoming offensive of the American capitalist class against the labor movement and against the party, make it necessary that the party strengthen and widen its contact with the workers throughout the country. We are entering a period of renewed war preparations, during which the capitalist press will again come out openly as the willing tool of the war mongers. The capitalist offensive against the militant elements in the trade unions and against the party, the first step in the campaign to attack the basic rights of the unions to organize, to picket and to strike, is making full use of the press to prejudice the workers against their most energetic fighters.

In this struggle The DAILY WORKER is the only daily newspaper in the English language which can be relied upon to bring to the workers the true facts and to indicate the policy to be followed in meeting this onslaught.

For this reason the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has decided to call upon all the forces in the party as well as the party sympathizers for a drive on a nation-wide scale for Five Thousand additional readers for The DAILY WORKER. We call upon every party member and every comrade who is with us in this struggle against the imperialists and the reactionaries in the labor movement, to do his bit to increase the influence and power of The DAILY WORKER, and thus make stronger labor's most militant defense against the onslaught of the combined forces of reaction.

SOVIET WAR TRIBUNAL OFFICIAL DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED BY WHITE

Moscow Workers Make Plans to Celebrate Defense Week on July Tenth

MOSCOW, June 27.—Chairman Orlov, of the War Tribunal of the Moscow Army District, lies dangerously wounded as a result of the resumption of the white guard campaign of assassination. His assailant has been arrested.

The attempt on Orlov's life occurred inside the premises of the tribunal. Although the investigation of the assailant's identity and motives is still going on, it is stated in semi-official circles that the attempted murder is part of the white guardist campaign of murder and arson that is being conducted with the support of the British tory government.

The secret police thruout the Soviet Union are taking precautionary measures. Although the white guards are few in number, they constitute a serious menace, operating as they do in the interests of Great Britain. White spies, in the employ of the British Foreign Office, are said to be stationed in the army and navy.

The murder of Peter Voikoff, Soviet Minister to Poland, several weeks ago, by a young White Russian, who admitted that he committed the murder "under orders" was the signal for the renewal of a campaign of murder and arson. That many of the white guards were operating under direct orders from the British Foreign Office was revealed in the confession of Riley, a captured British spy, published soon after the murder of Voikoff.

Other evidence made public since the Voikoff murder showed that white bandits were using territory across the Polish border as a base of operations. That Pilsudski not only knew about bandit raids in the Ukraine, but actually encouraged them, was one of the startling facts brot out by the evidence.

Official Moscow is awaiting the results of investigation of the criminal attack on Orlov.

Preparations are being made here for the celebration of Defense Week, which has been instituted by the Society for the Promotion of Aviation, beginning July 10.

CITY PAYS I. R. T. PUBLICITY AIMED AT HIGHER FARES

Ivy Lee Says $212,000 Spent Since 1919

The city treasury pays for the I. R. T. propaganda aimed at higher subway fares.

Ivy Lee, who calls himself a "public relations counsel" (which means a press agent) gets $12,000 a year from the company.

"Publicity" for the higher fare has already cost $212,000 since 1919.

All this Lee testified to yesterday during the hearings which Samuel Untermyer is conducting at the offices of the transit commission.

Inspired Scab "Union".

He declared that his major services include the editorship of the "Subway Sun", but that he was also responsible for suggesting the Interborough's labor policy, namely the "Brotherhood", the company union.

8,000 Klansmen Parade But Rain Stops Formal Dedication of Church

STERLING, Cond., June 27.—As a preliminary to the dedication of a church here more than 8,000 members of the Ku Klux Klan from 10 states marched in a two-mile parade.

The Kluxers were masked and were headed by two bands and a drum corps. The actual dedication was postponed because of pouring rain which began after the parade started.

21 Women Workers Join Summer Study Group

WILLARD MAKES CLEAR HE WANTS TEN-HOUR DAY

Secretary Morrison Is Confused

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27.—The statement made by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in answer to criticism of his advocacy of the longer workday confirms the belief that the right-hour day in the railway industry is under attack.

This Willard denies, but his second statement openly favors the abolition of time and one-half for overtime worked up to 10 hours.

The experience of the labor movement has shown beyond doubt that without a penalty placed upon the employer for shifts over 8 hours the 8-hour day is meaningless.

Inspired by Open Shop Roads.

Willard admits that the example of open shop roads like the Delaware and Hudson, where the work day is 9 and 10 hours has aroused his envy.

Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor has replied to Willard, but one clause of this reply is causing considerable comment in labor circles. Morrison stated that union shopmen would accept the Willard proposal only if time and one-half for time over 8 hours is paid.

This statement confuses rather than clarifies the issue, since it can be taken to mean that the 9 and 10 hour day will meet with approval in the executive council of the A. F. of L. if it is accompanied by an increase in wages which will approximate the amount of pay for two hours' overtime work.

It is pointed out here that this is a dangerous principle, since a forced reduction in wages would leave the 10-hour day in force.

Aviators Set for 2,400 Mile Flight to Hawaii

OAKLAND, Cal., June 27.—Tomorrow morning is the time set for the two aviators, Maitland and Hegenberger, to start their 2,400 mile hop to the Hawaiian Islands.

From Honolulu came the information that planes had descended over the camp of Richard Grace, the Hollywood aviator, who hopes to be the first to fly from the islands to the mainland. His plane was being given a final examination by naval mechanics today.

244 PICKETS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY IN DISTRICT YESTERDAY MORNING

Right Wingers Point Out Militant Workers to Police Authorities

District Attorney Pecora Passes the Buck on Jailing of Fur Unionists

Two hundred and forty-four pickets were arrested yesterday morning in the fur district. When brot before Magistrate George Ewald in the Jefferson Market Court they were released on $25 bail each for trial tomorrow.

As an example of how the police carried out their wholesale arrests, union officials pointed out yesterday to the case of Al. Shaap and Joseph Winogradsky

Right Wing Spy.

Shaap and Winogradsky were walking on Seventh Ave. going from 29th to 27th St. A right wing spy who was in the neighborhood pointed them out to a policeman who followed them when they started to turn back and walk uptown, obtaining the assistance of several other policemen, Shaap and Winogradsky were placed under arrest as well as all other workers within reach. About 16 to 18 others were taken into custody in that one case, being duplicated many times during the morning.

Jacob Mandelbaum, attorney for the Joint Board, held a conference with representatives of the district attorney's office yesterday. It was held for the purpose of obtaining an interpretation of "lawful picketing" from the point of view of the city authorities.

Those present at the meeting in addition to Mandelbaum were Assistant District Attorney Pecora, Assistant District Attorney Robert McCauley, detailed to Jefferson Market Court, to which the prisoners are taken, Matthew Woll, Hugh Frayne, Edward F. McGrady, Edgar Wallace, national legislative representative of the A. F. of L., and Samuel Markowich, attorney for the International.

At the end of the meeting Pecora stated that he had been delegated by the conference to be its spokesman.

"The conference was called," said

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, June 27.—Chiang Kai-shek is reported to have dispatched a note to the Nationalist (Wuhan) government demanding that it disband all labor and peasant unions. Other demands said to be contained in the note call for the dismissal of Soviet advisers and of members of the Chinese (Communist) Party.

That the Nationalist government will accept any of these demands is regarded as extremely unlikely.

MOSCOW, June 27.—The dispatch of imperialist troops to norsh China in preparation for the advance of the Nationalists continues.

Eight hundred American marines, accompanied by tanks and airplanes have been sent to Tientsin from Shanghai, while 350 French troops have left Hongkong for Tientsin.

Two more Japanese transports bearing several hundred Japanese marines have arrived at Tientsin. Taingtao looks like an armed camp. Forty-two American warships are anchored outside of the port.

GOVERNOR WARNS TAMMANY TO BAR 'RACE ISSUE' NOW

Klan Seen as Basis of Kings Hospital Pogrom

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

Sounds of internecine strife rumbled and echoed down the dingy corridors of Tammany Hall headquarters yesterday. The loyal sons of St. Tammany are doing some soft treading and low talking these days, and all because Mayor Walker pulled a boner by raising a racial question just when Al Smith wanted all religious issues played with the pianissimo stop pulled all the way out.

Grand Stand Play.

Both sides of the contending factions within the Tammany organization are clearly aligned in the Kings County Hospital fracas when Jimmy Walker jumped in at what he thought was a fine popular issue to enhance his prestige as a "friend" of the Jews by promising to sit personally on the bench to try the six gentile doctors who indulged in a mild sort of pogrom last Monday by viciously beating up three Jewish interns attached to the Brooklyn hospital.

A city magistrate who was prominently identified with the La Follette campaign, and who particularly asked that his name be withheld said, "Governor Smith has issued orders that all racial and religious questions must not be featured in New York politics. The governor is anxious not to embitter the Klan states. The split delegations from southern states will be very useful in 1928."

Influence of K. K. K.

Nathan Sweedler, the attorney for the three Jewish interns, when interviewed yesterday intimated that the Ku Klux Klan and Klan influences have played an important role in fostering the anti-Jewish spirit which has been so noticeable in New York public institutions.

"Do you think that the Klan exercised an influence over the expelled gentile interns which resulted in the so-called hazing?" he was asked.

"While I have my own opinions," he replied, "and they are substantiated by affidavits and competent testimony, I cannot make open accusations until Wednesday at which time all the matter will be laid before Mayor Walker. Certainly it is a ques

WASHINGTON, June 27. — Charles D. Reed, president, and Charles A. Ballard, secretary, of the American Telegraphone Company of Springfield, Mass., were held guilty of gross mismanagement of the corporation by Justice Frederick L. Siddons in District Supreme Court today.

An audit was ordered preparatory to awarding damages to stockholders, claimed by their attorneys to be between $100,000,000 and $185,000,000.

The Telegraphone Company's product is an invention designed to record phone messages when the phone is not answered.

Reed, stockholders' attorneys alleged, sought to wreck the company for the benefit of the Bell Telephone System, a prospective competitor.

WALL STREET AND OIL ENEMIES OF MEXICO—OBREGON

Announces Candidacy for Presidency

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—Announcing his candidacy for the presidency of Mexico, former president Alvaro Obregon, named Wall Street and Sen. Pepper as the great enemies of the Mexican Republic.

Referring to the recent Indian and clerical revolts, Obregon implied that they were instigated by Wall Street and powerful Catholic organizations.

The highest authorities in the Mexican cabinet, Obregon's announcement states, have been taken advantage of the international crisis" to repudiate the Mexican Magna Charter, believing that the government would not dare to oppose the church at such a time.

Oil and the Pope.

Referring to the recent attempts on the part of Wall Street to instigate and subsidize a revolution in Mexico, General Obregon said:

"We should be extremely cautious with regard to international crisis which the imperialist interests of Wall Street attempt to make in our territory but give every facility compatible with laws to industrial, commercial and agricultural interests which may wish to come from neighboring countries who will make the truth known among their nationals when the absorbent interests of Wall Street try to twist the truth and provoke conflicts and international crises between the chancelleries of both countries, as had happened on several occasions."

Duke of York Returns From 'Good Will' Cruise For Crumbling Empire

PORTSMOUTH, England, June 27.—The giant battle cruiser Renown, docked at the admiralty jetty here at noon today, bringing to an end the six month' tour of the Duke and Duchess of York, during which they toured Panama, Australia, New Zealand, Mauritius, Malta, Gibraltar and other empire points.

The object of the cruise was to drum up "good will" for the crumbling British empire.

Natural Gas Utilized.

Gas meters, regulators and another gas equipment for nearly $250,000 is to be shipped shortly from this country to the Soviet oil cities, Baku and Grozny.

Natural gas which is present in abundance in the Soviet oil fields is beginning to be utilized, for the first time in Russia, for household and refining purposes.

Economic Theory of the Leisure Class

by Nikolai Bukharin

Nikolai Bukharin, besides being the president of the Communist International, is the leading Marxian theoretician in the world today. He has done a great deal of scientific work in the field of sociology and economics, and has published a number of outstanding contributions in these fields.

The "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is one of his most important theoretical writings to be translated for the first time into English. Just as Marx has studied the theoretical system of the classical economists (Smith, Ricardo, Mill, etc.), Bukharin tackles the dominant bourgeois political economy known as the Austrian School, (Manger, Boehm-Bawerk, Wieser, Walras, Clark, etc.), in a brilliant style and with lucid Marxian reasoning, he analyses the theories of Marginal Utility, Value and Profit of the leading bourgeois economists, showing that the Austrian School is governed by the vulgar psychology of the trader, the coupon-clipper.

octavo, $2.50

Another Important Book by Bukharin

While "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is a study in the field of political economy, "Historical Materialism" by the same author is an application of Marxism to the field of sociology. This book has already become the standard text book and is considered one of the outstanding Marxian classics. In fact, it is the only book available where the materialist method has been applied in an analysis of the various social phenomena.

Soviet Will Establish Consulate Offices in Leningrad and Moscow

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—The Mexican government announced today that it will establish a consulate at Leningrad at once, and probably in Moscow in the very near future. Ignacio Bonillas of the foreign office staff has been appointed consul. It is expected that he will start soon.

The relations between the Soviet Union and Mexico have been of an extremely friendly basis. Miss Alexandra Kollantai was appointed ambassador to Mexico in 1926. She is at present on a visit in the Soviet Union.

BRITISH BREAK TO INCREASE SOVIET TRADING IN U. S.

Economic Plans of Soviet Union Not Hampered

The following statement on American trade with the Soviet Union in the light of the Anglo-Soviet break was issued to the press by Saul G. Bron, Chairman of the Board of the Amtorg Trading Corporation:

"I have received numerous inquiries as to how American-Soviet trade will be affected by the breach in Anglo-Soviet relations. While it is still too early to give any figures in detail, my correspondence of the past few days indicates that there should be a decided gain in Soviet purchases here.

U. S. Gets Canada Business.

"Last year Soviet purchases in Great Britain aggregated about $75,000,000 and in Canada during the current year about $3,000,000. It is obvious that rearrangements of a business of this volume, under unexpectedly changed conditions, cannot be affected in a few days. I am advised that existing contracts made in both countries will be scrupulously fulfilled as far as the Soviet trading organizations are concerned. The offices of the Soviet trade delegation in Canada have already been closed and the uncompleted commitments have been turned over to Amtorg for completion.

Receiving British Orders.

"We are already receiving tentative orders from Moscow that would ordinarily go to England. The next few months will give an indication of the extent of such diversion. In this connection it is interesting to note that during May Amtorg placed the greatest number of orders in the United States during any month since its organization three years ago. These orders amounted to $3,500,000. This increase was not influenced by events in England. It is also interesting to note that purchases of American cotton valued at upwards of $35,000,000 by the All-Russian Textile Syndicate during the past seven months established a new record for that company.

"I am in a position to state authoritatively that the break with England will have no effect on the economic plans for the current year in the Soviet Union. Orders to be placed abroad for industrial expansion will suffer no curtailment. The financial position of the Soviet Union in connection with commitments and trade is well taken care of.

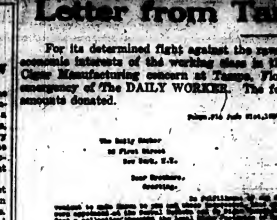
"In accordance with the plans for industrial expansion in the Soviet Union for the coming year, we may expect a considerable increase in Soviet imports and orders abroad. There is every indication that these plans for enlarged foreign trade will be fully carried out. There is also every indication that the break with England will facilitate the effort being made by Soviet industrialists to trade directly with American firms, through the authorized trading companies here, eliminating the European middle-man, and to enter into closer relations with the American technical world.

"To sum up: The secure position in connection with Soviet trade plans for this year, the industrial program for the coming year, the recent increase in orders placed here and the curtailment of trade with Britain, all these show the direction to be taken by Soviet trade with the United States."

Britain Loses Textile Order.

Negotiations regarding purchases of textile equipment for a Soviet cotton mill of 100,000 spindles and 3,500 looms are being conducted in this country.

Practically no equipment for cotton mills was previously purchased in the United States, the bulk of it being obtained in Great Britain.



Exports of textile equipment from England to the U. S. S. R. for 1926 amounted to $5,922,000 as against $1,571,000 for 1925 and $1,057,000 for 1924. Exports to the Soviet Union last year constituted 12.3 per cent of total British exports of textile equipment.

First Russian Paraffin Plant.

The first paraffin plant in the Soviet Union was opened last month at Grozny, one of the Soviet oil centers. Daily output of the plant was estimated at 16 tons of paraffin. The cost of buildings and equipment amounted to $1,467,760.

Letter from Tampa Cigarmakers

For its determined fight against the ravages of American imperialism and defense of the economic interests of the working class in the United States, the employes of the Corral Wodiska Cigar Manufacturing concern at Tampa, Florida, have contributed the sum of $306.94 to the campaign of The DAILY WORKER. The following are the names of the contributors and the amounts donated.

This letter shows a spirit of working class solidarity that should be emulated by the thousands of workers who derive far greater benefits from our paper than the workers in the cigar factories of Florida.

Street Car Strike Looms in Chicago; Labor Bills Loose

By CARL HAESSLER.

A streetcar strike reminiscent of the long summer tieup of 1922 moved nearer when the Chicago Surface Lines refused to consider any wage increase. Vice President Guy Richardson of the lines asserted in a public statement that "these men are now receiving the highest pay and are working under the best conditions of any surface lines motormen or conductors in the world." This is not true, as the maximum for Chicago platform men is 75 cents an hour while Philadelphia's maximum is 77 cents, with a number of privileges not enjoyed by the Chicago traction workers.

The Chicago union demands a 15 cent hourly raise plus insurance. A compromise continuing the present scale but granting the insurance, which is already in force on the elevated lines, may be worked out. In case of a strike the elevated employes, though working for a different company, will quit with the surface men even if their own demands are satisfactorily met.

Printing Lockout Continues.

The printing lockout of 5 unions at the White (Regan) Printing House continues without change. Application for an injunction against every sort of union activity during the lockout has been made by the employer but is still under advisement. The metal polishers and grinders remain on strike at the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co.

Labor Bills Doomed.

At Springfield the chances for labor's bills getting through both houses before the Illinois legislature adjourns this month are becoming slighter. The woman's modified 8-hour bill, the anti-yellow-dog contract bill and the old age pension bill seem to be doomed, though the 8-hour bill has a little better chance than the rest. On the other hand labor's fight on the perennial state constabulary bill has been successful this session.

Chicago Traction Kings Deny Wage Raise; Men Awaiting Strike Call

CHICAGO, (FP) June 27.—Negotiations for a new contract between the streetcar men's union and the Chicago Surface Lines were broken off when the company refused to consider a wage raise over the present maximum of 75 cents an hour. Strike action will await an interview by International president Mahon of the union with the company.

D'Autremont Brothers Get Life.

SALEM, ORE, June 27.—Atoning for one of the most widely-advertised crimes in American history, three young brothers, Roy, Ray and Hugh d'Autremont, started life sentences in the Oregon Penitentiary today.

The three brothers confessed in Jacksonville, Ore., late yesterday that they had killed four members of the crew of a gold-laden train during an attempted tunnel holdup in the Siskiyon mountains. The confessions ended a four-year campaign by Postal inspectors to bring the bandits to justice. Nearly a million dollars was spent in the search.

Efficiency at Oil Fields Raised.

Measures toward increasing efficiency in the oil industry of the Soviet Union yielded good results. The Azneft Oil Trust of Baku reports that in spite of the greatly increased output during the past three years, the number of men employed at the wells was reduced by 40 per cent. Wages increased during the period 60 per cent. The cost of borings has been decreased from over 50 dollars per foot in 1923 to about 28 dollars in 1926.

The defence asserted that diplomatic couriers are not liable to the court in question and demanded that the case in question be dropped immediately on formal grounds.

The court decided to refer the question to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

British Mulct Taxpayers.

(By Nationalist News Agency)

SHANGHAI, June 27.—The Chinese Rate-Payers' Association of the International settlement has organized a determined strike against taxation without representation, thousands of rate-payers are registering with the association to refuse payment of the two per cent tax increase voted by the foreign rate-ppyers without Chinese consent.

Quo Tai-Chi has sent a vigorous protest to the consular body pointing out that the increase is illegal under an agreement between the Chinese and the foreigners of long standing. The protest scores the municipal council for not admitting Chinese to membership in the council and for denying to the Chinese people admission to the public parks which are supported largely by Chinese taxes. "The Chinese did not partcipate in passing the budget and have not been treated as equals by the foreigners," Commissioner Quo declared.

Demand Half Control.

The Chinese are demanding for a half control of the settlement and assert that their demand is reasonable in view of the fact that they pay three-fourths of the settlement taxes. Foreign legal action against the Chinese refusal to pay the increased taxes will not be effective, it is believed, as such action must be taken in the provisional court now under Chinese control.

The Chinese struck against the last tax increase a few years ago and although were ordered to pay by the foreign-dominated mixed court, they refused and as a result the council appointed an advisory board of Chinese members to help settle the matter. An understanding was reached by which it was agreed that no further tax increase would be made without Chinese consent. The advisory board resigned after the May 30, 1925 massacre of the Chinese people by the British police because the board's advice was not considered in settling the trouble. Since then the Chinese have not been represented in the control of the settlement.

The British-owned China Weekly Review editorially advises that the local foreigners announce a program of peaceful co-operation with the Chinese "instead of sitting still, doing nothing, and then yelling for help when we get into trouble."

The Review further points out that the American Congress will investigate the expense of sending the American forces to China, and that it is likely will demand their withdrawal. British and Japanese troops will not remain long without similar demands from London and Tokio for withdrawal, it concludes.

British Boost Chinese Taxes.

(By Nationalist News Agency.)

SHANGHAI, June 27.—Chinese rate-payers who pay three-fourths of the International Settlement taxes held a meeting here and have decided to refuse payment of a two per cent tax increase voted by the foreign rate-payers without the consent of the Chinese. The Chinese rate-payers have issued a statement saying that "no taxation without representation is a principle recognized the world over."

The statement points out that the increase is illegal by the terms of an agreement between the Chinese and the foreigners signed in 1890. The Chinese have suffered much business losses, the statement asserts, because of the barb-wire barricades with which the foreigners surrounded the Settlement, and the foreign police are ineffective in checking the rising crime wave. The statement goes on to say that the Chinese pay the major part of the Settlement taxes, but are denied municipal council seats, and more than a million Chinese are in the Settlement. The council spends no money for Chinese education, and the Chinese are not admitted to the public parks. British troops occupy Shanghai in defiance of International law, while soldiers have not been punished for attacking Chinese girls, and the British military authorities sanction brothels filled with fifteen-year-old Chinese girls for the use of British soldiers.

The statement concludes with the declaration that "we have been hunted like barbarous actions of the British, and why should we pay increased taxes to support them? Shanghai is Chinese territory and foreign soldiers have no right in the city. Until Chinese members are added to the municipal council we will not pay increased taxes."

The local Kuomintang is supporting the Chinese rate-payers in their opposition to the tax increases.

"Prince Igor" at Stadium Concert.

The famous ballet master, Alexis Kosloff and one of the "Russian Imperial Ballet" and now of the Ballet Theatre of the Metropolitan Opera House, and his company, have been engaged for the Coney Island Stadium Symphonic Concert which will take place July 16th. "Prince Igor" a legend of the first Russian czars, and one of the most beautiful productions of the stage, will be produced by Kosloff and his ballet.

Those who remember the Pasaic Strike Concert for which he produced "Schererzade" will surely take advantage of this opportunity to again see Kosloff and his ballet.

Tickets for the concert are $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats. The proceeds, for the striking furriers. Buy your tickets now and you will help the furriers win their strike and at the same time be assured of a good seat.

Workers' Clubs to Help.

A conference of the New York Workers' Clubs was held in Bath Beach Sunday. Representatives of the Furriers' Relief Committee were present. They reported on the situation pointing out the importance of this fight.

The response was most enthusiastic. After a general discussion the following plans were made:

1.—Each club is to have a special meeting within a week on this question.

2.—The executive committee of each club to meet, not later than Wednesday, June 22nd, and decide upon a contribution of not less than $200, to be paid out by the treasury. If the club has no funds, the amount decided upon is to be borrowed.

3.—All clubs to do intensive work for the Coney Island Stadium Concert.

4.—A special "Defense Week" to be arranged by the clubs with special mass meetings to be held in the districts where the clubs are located. Conferences of workers' organizations in the various parts of the city, to be called. This to be developed to a monster entertainment. A special committee consisting of one representative of each club, was elected to make all the necessary arrangements for "Defense Week."

For the Striking Furriers.

The furriers' strike has aroused the whole workingclass movement. The attacks of the Sigman-McGrady-Woll gangsters, the wholesale arrest of hundreds of pickets, the murderous attack on Gross, the arrest of Gold and the delegates to the Unity Conference. Monday morning on the picket line has convinced the mass of workers that it rests upon them to supply the money to win the fight.

Letters of encouragement with checki for bonds are being received from all over the country. Following are a few of the letters: Rothstein of Philadelphia, writes: "Dear Comrade Strikers.—Every day I read of the brave struggle you are carrying on and of the attacks made on you by the police and gangsters, and I am sending you a check for $10. I hope you will win your fight."

A Challenge.

A friend writes that he bought 2 tickets for the Coney Island Stadium Concert, one for himself and the other for his brother, who is a right winger. The brother is hoping that the stadium will be empty on July 16th so he will make it his business to go there and see for himself. The right winger is so sure that he will see that he promised to buy a "10 Furriers Defense Bond" if the stadium is filled. The outcome still remains to be seen. The furriers' strike challenges its best to sell the right wing brother a bond. We will win only if the Coney Island stadium is packed on the night of July 16 and the rest with you. You must be the ones to pack the stadium.

Tickets are $1.00 for general admission, and $2.00 for reserved seats. Buy them now and avoid standing in line.

Right Wing Clique Calls Meeting of W. C.; Gets Cold Feet.

The so-called propaganda committee of the Sigman Bureaucracy called a conference of Branches 16, 106 and 221 of Paterson, N. J. This Committee hoped to turn the conference into relief for the Sigman clique. But when the conference opened the "propaganda committee" got cold feet and didn't show up. Naturally the meeting proceeded without them and it was decided to send support for the striking furriers, $51 being immediately collected. This is another example of what the W. C. branches are doing. Those W. C. branches who have not yet responded to the furriers' relief should do so immediately and show their national executive committee how they view the situation.

207 Pull Down Billion a Year as Corporations Clean Up 113 Billions

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Two hundred and seven taxpayers pulled down an income of a million dollars—or more—in 1925, according to statistics made public yesterday by the Internal Revenue Bureau. Corporations raked in a gross income of more than $113,000,000,000 in 1924.

In 1924 only seventy-five taxpayers reported an income exceeding a million dollars. The exceeding generosity recently accorded to big business thru surtax reductions is regarded as an important reason for the increase of plutocrats with million dollar a year incomes.

...ST INTERNATIONAL CALLS ON OPPRESSED TO OPPOSE NEW WAR

towns, the financial and commercial centers, the potentates of heavy industries, the tycoons of steel and bosses of their shameful profits. To the revolution of the colonial peoples who are demanding the right of self-determination, they are replying with war.

In spite of the antagonistic interests dividing them, the imperialist states are endeavouring to weld their united front against the danger threatening them all—the rise of the colonial peoples. They are striving to throttle the Chinese revolution; their warships encircle China with an iron ring, they are standing ready in the rivers of China to drown the struggle for freedom of the Chinese people in blood. Nanking and other defenceless towns have already been bombarded; everyday the ring of militarist intervention is closed more tightly in order to throttle the Chinese revolution with armed force or by means of the policy of corruption, the financial blockade and criminal conspiracies.

BUT the fury of the Stock Exchange sharks is mainly directed against the Soviet Union, which stands as a shining example to the suppressed nations and remains the impregnable stronghold of the exploited and oppressed of the whole world. In the night of enslavement of the peoples, the Soviet Union caused to flame up the great light of freedom, not that lying, hypocritical freedom of the so-called democratic states which contents itself solely in the exploitation of millions of workers, peasants and colonial slaves, but the light of the only true freedom, that freedom which liberates all colonial peoples from every capitalist exploitation.

World imperialism, and in the first place British imperialism can no longer tolerate the existence of the only Workers' and Peasants' Republic, whose example calls unceasingly upon the enslaved peoples likewise to tread the path of their emancipation. Imperialism cannot endure the solidarity of the Soviet Union with the working class of the whole world; it realizes that the rapid progress in the building up of socialism constitutes a plain and palpable lesson against which all calumnies are impotent.

IN order to crush the Chinese revolution, in order to subject the colonies to intensified exploitation, in order to throttle the labor movement, in order to depress wages and to prolong the working day, in order to grind out still larger profits from all those who work and produce, imperialism must overthrow the stronghold of the proletariat, the Workers' State. The reactionary Baldwin government is preparing to make war on the Soviet Union. By means of a series of unheard-of provocations; the raids on the embassy in Peking, on the consulate in Shanghai and on the Trade Delegation in London, the Baldwin government sought to involve the Soviet Union in a war. The Proletarian State, with revolutionary coolness and deliberation, contemptuously avoided the obvious trap laid for it by British imperialism and has clearly shown to the whole world that the Soviet Union is pursuing a peaceful policy; and the Workers' State has thereby compelled British imperialism to unmask itself and to take on itself the responsibility for the breaking off of diplomatic relations.

COMRADES!

This action on the part of Great Britain is a sign of the greatest danger for the working class of the whole world, demanding the mobilization of all its forces against war and in defence of the threatened Proletarian State, which is threatened by the combined forces of world capitalism.

British imperialism has succeeded in the course of the past year, in Locarno, Leghorn and Geneva, in uniting the imperialist states against the Soviet Union. There is no doubt that it will also succeed in obtaining from the reactionary Germany of Hindenburg, in the name of the League of Nations, permission for the free passage of troops and munitions against Russia. By means of persistent labor, British has surrounded the Soviet Union with a ring of vassal states in which military dictatorship and terror against the proletariat and the peasants prevails. Poland and Lithuania, thanks to the coup d'etat financed by London—and Roumania by the good services of Mussolini—have governments docile to Chamberlain. At the moment when it broke off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union the British government celebrated its reconciliation with the government of Poincaré-la-guerre. It is true, the united front of the imperialist great Powers is fragile, for Germany and Italy are raising the question of a fresh distribution of the world. The Mediterranean Sea and the Balkan countries are the seats of constant intrigues and jealousies between the robbers who are scrambling for the world. But these antagonistic interests are being pushed into the background. The Italo-Yugoslavian incident showed that Great Britain has succeeded for the time being in smoothing over these squabbles between the capitalist States and uniting these States against the common enemy, against the working class and its proletarian State.

Comrades!

The imperialist States do not think of concealing their war preparations any longer. The League of Nations no longer succeeds in deceiving the peoples. It has kept silent whenever a big imperialist bandit throttled a small nation. Corfu, Morocco, Syria, China, Nicaragua, Abyssinia and Albania are clear proofs of its lying policy, and its imperialist barbarity.

THE Disarmament Conferences of Geneva and Washington did not succeed in concealing the ever greater acceleration of armaments. French imperialism has just passed a new military law which means the complete militarization of the whole people. Its factories are working almost exclusively on army orders. The Stahlhelm demonstration in Berlin clearly showed that Germany is reorganising its military power.

But imperialism cannot prepare for war without taking up the fight against the working class and its organizations. The war on the Soviet Union is class war, a war against the proletariat. The great imperialist States know that the world proletariat is watching the Russian Revolution, that it fights and conquers, that it will not defend the native countries of its exploiters, but the native country of the working class and of the whole world. Imperialism knows that it can again rely on the support of social democracy, just as in the year 1914. But today there exists in every country a Communist Party which will expose the treachery of the Second International and will from the very first day lead the workers, peasants and soldiers into the fight against war and against the capitalist regime which engenders war—a Communist Party which will endeavor with all means to convert the imperialist war into a war against imperialism and the social revolution. For this reason the war preparations are accompanied by a general offensive against the working class and against its class organizations.

THE imperialist vultures wish to bend the working class of all countries beneath the yoke of intensified exploitation; they wish to destroy the workers' organizations in order to throttle their fight against war. The employers' attack on wages and the eight-hour day, and the rationalization of production are accompanied by an offensive of the police and the government against the workers' organizations and the advance-guard of the proletariat. The bill against the trade unions in Great Britain, the great police conspiracy and the arrest of Communist functionaries in France, the review of the fascist forces in Germany, the mass deportations and the fascist trade union monopoly in Italy, the intensified terror and the mass executions of revolutionaries in Poland, Roumania, Bulgaria and Lithuania are all part of the war preparations of the imperialists.

At the moment when world imperialism is drawing together its forces against the working class, when it is increasing the exploitation of the peasant masses and of the natives in the colonies and openly preparing for a new war, the leaders of the social democracy are again, as on 4th of August 1914, betraying the interests of the working class and placing themselves in the service of imperialism and of armed reaction. In Great Britain, instead of summoning the masses to the fight in defence of the trade unions, they content themselves with futile Parliamentary skirmishes, which is tantamount to a surrender without a fight. In France, the Socialist Paul Boncour, has drawn up, along with the General Staff, a military law and is defending it—a law which provides for the mobilization of women and children. In Germany, Breitscheid declared that the Foreign policy of Stresemann is the policy of the German social democracy.

AT the moment when Chamberlain is bringing about the united front of all the capitalist States against proletarian Russia, the Second International is supporting the action of the reactionary English government with a shameful campaign of lies against the Soviet Union. As in 1914, the role of social democracy consists in driving the working class into war. But today this treachery is even more reprehensible, because the war is directed against the proletarian State, against the Russian revolution and against the Chinese Revolution.

Comrades,

For work among the masses there exists a still greater danger than the open, cynical treachery of the Right social democratic leaders, and that is the deceitful illusion of the pacifism of the Left leaders of social democracy and of the trade unions, who utter, high-sounding empty phrases regarding peace and who, instead of mobilizing the working masses to the fight against war, lull them to sleep by duping them with the opium of a sentimental and futile pacifism.

* * *

THE capitalist regime necessarily engenders war. Under the capitalist regime there can be no enduring peace. Your fight for peace, for real peace and not for such a hypocritical peace as that of Versailles, can, therefore, only be a fight against the capitalist regime itself, a fight for peace which does not lead the masses to the revolutionary fight against the capitalist regime is merely a deceitful illusion only to be followed by a bloody morrow.

Workers, Peasants, Suppressed Peoples!

In view of the daily increasing danger of war you must unite your forces for bitter and ruthless fight against war and against robbers who are preparing fnr war. You are the strongest, and you will be victorious if you close the united front of all the suppressed against your suppressors.

Rub the sleep from your eyes, overcome faint-heartedness, oppose those who are spreading pessimism in your organizations and undermining your forces! War is at hand! Only by a mass action, by great protest meetings, by powerful demonstrations, by protest strikes, by developing an energetic mass struggle will you frustrate the capitalist offensive and compel the jackals of imperialism to slink away.

DEFEND the Chinese Revolution, prevent the transport of troops and munitions! Build up out of your million-strong army an impregnable barricade in defence of the threatened Russian Revolution!

The imperialists are preparing for war in order to strangle the revolution!

Reply to them by preparing for revolution in order to strangle war and the regime which continually leads to war.

Rally together! Close the ranks in thousands and millions in your revolutionary organizations, in the Communist Parties!

Drive from your ranks the social-patriotic leaders who poison sacred unity with the exploiters! Reduce to silence those who wish to lull you with their pacifist piping.

Prepare for great struggles, prepare for victory!

Soldiers, sailors!

Sons of workers and peasants, do not forget that you belong to the masses of the workers! Fraternise! When they wish to make you hangman and betrayers of your class, remember that you have only one flag to defend, the red flag of the international working class.

Toilers and exploited of the whole world!

Against the threatening war, for the revolutionary fight!

Proletarians of all countries, unite and you will conquer!

RECOMMEND DISMISSAL OF TROTSKY, ZINOVIEV FROM C. E. C. OF ALL UNION COMMUNIST PARTY

MOSCOW, June 27.—Charging the Opposition, headed by Trotsky and Zinoviev, with violating Communist Party discipline, the Presidium of the Central Control Commission of the All Union Communist Party has adopted a resolution recommending that the joint session of the Central Committee and the Central Control Commission consider the expulsion of Comrades Trotsky and Zinoviev from the Central Executive Committee of the Party.

The resolution adopted by the Presidium of the Central Control Commission follows:

"Beginning with 1923, the Opposition first headed by Trotsky and from 1926 by both Trotsky and Zinoviev, has taken advantage of every difficulty which the Party has faced in its effort to build Socialism to deal a blow at the unity of our Party and its leadership.

Violated Party Discipline.

"It has not hesitated to violate Party discipline. In 1923, at the moment when the Party was struggling against the difficulty caused by the "discrepancy of the scissors," Trotsky and the group of forty-six attempted to utilize the difficulties for the purpose of factionalism, making the statement that the country had been brought to the verge of ruin by the Party's policy.

"The Fourteenth Congress of the Communist Party gave a unanimous estimate of the new Opposition's (Zinoviev and others) deviation from Leninist positions; namely, denying the socialistic character of our industry, underestimating the middle peasantry and disregarding the demand for the freedom from factional groupings.

"In the spring and the summer of 1926 the new Opposition bloc aligned itself with Comrade Trotsky, the new Opposition headed by Zinoviev, completely accepting the ideological position of Comrade Trotsky.

Organized Factional Meetings.

"In the summer of 1926, in its incessant attacks on the Party, the Opposition went so far as to formally shape its factional organization as an illegal organization and even organized mass meetings in the woods (Lashevitch case).

"Having suffered all-around defeat, thru the political experience of Socialist construction, the Opposition by its actions in "avlopribor" and "Red Putilovets" works entered the path of factional sectarianism.

"Having met a unanimous repulse from the whole party and having been most resolutely rejected by the labor nuclei the Opposition was compelled to undertake the obligation of stopping factional strife. (Declaration of 16th of October, 1926.)

Promised Obedience.

"Following this declaration the Opposition recognized "its duty to carry thru the Party's decision regarding the inadmissability of factions." In this declaration the Opposition recognized as "especially inadmissible the support in any way of the activities of persons already excluded from the Party and from the Communist International such as Ruth Fischer and Masiov.

"In this declaration the Opposition also stated that "we consider absolutely binding for us the decisions of the Fourteenth Congress, the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee of the Party and we shall unconditionally submit to them."

"All of the subsequent activities of the Opposition, since the latter's October declaration, demonstrated that the Opposition, since the sixteenth of October, had looked upon its obligations only as a means of making preparations for a new attack on the Party.

"Although the Fifteenth Party Congress whose decisions have been approved by the Executive Committee of the Communist International emphatically condemned the Opposition's line as a social democratic deviation, as a right deviation masked by left phraseology, although the Opposition was not backed by a single Party nucleus, it persisted in defending its anti-Bolshevist work and did not cease its factional work.

"Recently a combination of special difficulties in the Soviet Union and the international situation and partial defeats of the Chinese revolution have led the Opposition to concentrate its attack against the Party's international policy (China, Britain).

"In response to the growing danger of a war against the Soviet Union, the Opposition has made statements which have directly undermined the Party's and Soviet Union's defensive forces for the struggle against the danger of war and the strengthening of the Soviet Union.

"Such a statement as that made by the Opposition, headed by Trotsky and Zinoviev, namely "if the war actually reaches us, every worker and every agricultural laborer, even the poorest peasant will raise the question: what war is this, by what means will the war be conducted?"

"Such a statement as Trotsky's at the recent session of the Executive Committee of the Communist International: "The greatest of all dangers is the Party regime" are direct actions on the part of the opposition leaders against the Party and the dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Menshevik Attacks.

"The left pseudo-radical phrases, with which Trotsky vainly attempted to mask at the plenary session of the executive committee of the Communist international his menshevist attacks, were a device on Trotsky's part as the executive committee pointed out in its decision, a means to "mask in the eyes of Communist workers his own desertion."

"Trotsky's speech at session executive committern which the latter characterized as anti-party and a gross factional action, and Zinoviev's speech at the ninth of May, 1927, at nonpartisan meeting containing an appeal to nonpartizans against Party broke all traditions of Bolshevist Party and elementary party discipline.

"Finally at the session of the Praesidium of the Central Controlling Commission Trotsky produced unprecedented calumniatory charges of Bonapartism at the Party.

Although the question regarding the disorganizational action of Zinoviev was submitted by the Central Committee of the Party for the consideration of the Central Controlling Commission, although the Executive Committee of the Comintern condemned Trotsky's speech as openly factional, Trotsky and Zinoviev at the ninth of June, 1927, at the time of the worst attacks of British imperialism against the U. S. S. R. participated in a demonstration organized at station by opposition on the pretext of sending off Smigla.

"At a moment when England was openly preparing for war with the rupture of Anglo-Soviet relations and Voikoff's murder as clear evidence that imperialists were passing to terroristic methods in the struggle against U. S. S. R., Trotsky made a speech to demonstrators, in which, together with other members of the opposition, called through factional apparatus, the public which happened to be at the station, participated. Thereby Trotsky and Zinoviev proved: first that its obligation, which they undertook to observe Party discipline was only a tactical manoeuvre meant to deceive the Party; secondly, that at a moment when the Party's main task is the consolidation of the rear, while the main condition of the consolidation of the rear is the raising of the Party's fighting capacity, the Opposition in the name of its own factional objects, pursuing line that would wreck the Party; third, all this was accompanied by openly anti-party factional work, which has lately reached extraordinary dimensions. Instead of executing the resolutions regarding Party discipline undertaken on the 16th of October, what actually took place was the printing and circulation of factional literature, the organization of an open factional declaration of the Eighty-four, containing unprecedented calumniation of Party discipline in our country.

Recommend Dismissal From C. E. C.

"Party for four years showing the greatest tolerance, the greatest patience passed from one warning to Opposition to the next, trying to make the Opposition leaders submit to Party discipline, Trotsky's and Zinoviev's latest actions have utterly exhausted all means of warning them, the Party has failed to secure the obedience of the Opposition leaders; that the Opposition leaders grossly and systematically violated Party discipline which is binding for every Party member, whoever he or she may be that the Opposition under the leadership of Oppositional members of the Central Committee developing factional work and undermining Party unity which is pursuing a direct road towards a split, that the Opposition completely violating its obligations to desist from factional strife.

"All this compels the Praesidium of the Central Controlling Commission of the All-Union Communist Party conforming to the decision of the Tenth Party Congress to submit to the Joint Plenary Session of the Central Committee and Central Controlling Commission, the question of the exclusion of Zinoviev and Trotsky from the membership of the Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party.

Treaty of Peace and Amity Between Mexico And Turkish Republic

MEXICO CITY, June 27. — The Secretariat of Foreign Relations makes official announcement of the conclusion of a treaty of peace and amity between Mexico and the Republic of Turkey. The treaty provides for diplomatic and consular relations between the two countries.

Doubt is expressed here as to the probability of a resident Mexican Minister being named for Turkey, as Mexico has virtually no economic interests there, and very few residents. It is expected, however, that Turkey will avail herself of the privilege of sending diplomatic and consular representatives to Mexico to protect her more developed commercial and other interests.

How to Help Save the Lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

There remain but two days before July 1 when Sacco and Vanzetti will be taken to the death-cell.

Governor Fuller has made no public statement as to his intentions and two innocent workingmen endure the terrible torture of waiting for release, a new trial or death.

Words are weak weapons with which to attack such studied callousness as the rulers of Massachusetts and their official spokesman display.

It is in the face of the indignation and protest of millions in all lands that this monstrous infamy is inflicted upon Sacco and Vanzetti—two workers whose minds and bodies have already been rent and torn by almost seven years of continual suffering—suffering intensified by the knowledge that they are innocent of the crime for which they were convicted, suffering made more fearful by the knowledge that they were trapped in the web of capitalism's judicial machinery because they are its class enemies.

If the members of their class and ours will think for just one moment of what Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered and are still suffering for the simple reason that they fought the battles of their comrades in the American class struggle, the one-hour protest strike and the series of mass demonstrations arranged for July 7 in New York City will be of such huge proportions that the cowardly hangmen who hold the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti in their hands will be forced to loosen their grip.

To every worker in New York we say that it is a sacred duty to down tools at 4 p. m., no matter what the boss may say or think, and help to swell the protest against the legal torture and murder of two innocent workingmen.

A Cheap Coolidge Sneer at Impoverished Farmers.

In his address to the legislature of South Dakota at the state game lodge Saturday the president of the United States metaphorically wrapped the American flag about himself and striking a condescending posture, deliberately insulted the impoverished farmers of the Middle West. In the most cynical manner Coolidge told the farmers that they ought to be well satisfied with their miserable condition even though they cannot dispose of their crops at a price sufficient to cover the cost of raising them.

His speech amounted to impudently informing his hearers that they ought to consider it an honor even to exist under the American flag and that they had no business complaining about their condition. Said the marionette of Wall Street:

> Any one who has an occupation or a job under our flag, no matter what that occupation or job may be, in industry, agriculture or commerce, or what his station in life, that person can be assured that he has the best job of that kind of any one on earth. That's what the flag means.

While Coolidge's interpretation applies exactly to the unprincipled flunkeys of Wall Street, whose occupations are the best paying of their kind on earth, the millions of workers and farmers are unable to derive any benefit therefrom. The victims of capitalism enjoy no vicarious prosperity with their exploiters.

His eulogy of farmers in general was the height of arrogance. He compared the hills of his native Vermont with the Black Hills of South Dakota and implied that the contented Vermont farmers ought to be taken for models by the South Dakota farmers.

While the Vermont farmers were indifferent to the Coolidge veto of the McNary-Haughan farm relief bill,—or at least inaudible—the Middle West farmers believed implicitly in the bill. Its economic insufficiency, known to all Communists, is not evident to the farmers. Certainly it was not because of its economic shortcomings that Coolidge vetoed it, but because he thought it would be detrimental to the plunderers of the farmers.

The presence of Coolidge in South Dakota and the spectacle of the so-called radical senator, Norbeck, scrambling upon a seat on the Coolidge bandwagon ought to be convincing evidence that their salvation can never be realized through an alliance with Wall Street's president, but must be sought in an alliance with the exploited industrial workers of the nation, through the medium of a labor party.

"Putting the Weight" on Wood.

Major-General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, has come thru for Coolidge in South Dakota and no more rumors of his resignation are played up in the press.

Perhaps Wood wants Coolidge for president and volunteered his endorsement but it seems hardly likely that he had to travel to Rapid City from the Philippines in order to make it public.

The incident savors about as strongly of political blackmail as has republican party maneuvering since the good old smelly days when the Ohio gang used to put its feet on the White House table and scatter its cigar ashes all over the rugs.

In the vernacular such practices as have been pulled off in Rapid City recently are called "putting on the weight".

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

From San Quentin Prison.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

I have received your letter asking me for my subscription to your paper. For reasons that have not yet been explained inmates of the prison are forbidden to receive The DAILY WORKER. And that is the reason why I have failed to renew my subscription.

You say that you consider it a real loss to me as well as a great disappointment. I am here in San Quentin for life, and I do not know what day will see me out of here,—if any,—but the day will come when I shall again be able to read the only paper that stands for the working class, and that will be The DAILY WORKER.

Even the "Nation" is not permitted here. A man in prison cannot write the things that he would like to, but only those things that will pass the censor.

Will close with regrets that I cannot have your paper instead of the ones that are around here.—C. J. J.

Geneva—Another Warning to the American Working Class

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE careful phrasing of the language of traditional diplomacy used by the delegates to the Geneva disarmament conference does not conceal the tremendous struggle for naval supremacy, itself an expression of the struggle for world domination, whose chief center today is the Pacific area.

But if the diplomats (and sometimes the admirals) are careful, the correspondents are not. It is true that they weave into their articles the stereotyped usages by which a mantle of protection is thrown around official spokesmen, but the cold-blooded character of the calculations which precede each official utterance is obvious. For the correspondents are patriots and each uses his bit to boost the game of his imperialist bosses.

AT Geneva the diplomats are gambling with the lives of millions of workers and farmers. With American imperialism playing an aggressive role, the naval strategy of the next war is being worked out.

America and Great Britain are the two main antagonists. Japan is a buffer, an ally, or an enemy, as the bloody game proceeds thru its various stages.

The immediate stake is the power to conquer and rob 400,000,000 Chinese workers and peasants and seize the incalculably valuable natural resources of the nation.

AMERICAN imperialists have not been blind to the fact that China is the richest prize ever glimpsed by the lieucaneers of the ruling class. Let J. Selwin Tait, Chairman of the board of directors of the Washington and Southern Bank of Washington, D. C., speak for his class:

". . . CHINA PRESENTS THE GREATEST INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL OPPORTUNITY NOT ONLY OF THE WORLD TODAY, BUT THE GREATEST WHICH THE WORLD HAS EVER SEEN. With a population of four hundred and fifty millions of people, according to the latest estimate of the Maritime Customs, it has a national debt amounting in round numbers to one dollar per head of its population, or less than one-twentieth proportionately of the debt of her neighbor, Japan. Were China to borrow up to the same figure as Japan, that is, ever $20 per capita, she could add to her debt the unimaginable sum of $8,-550,000,000 (gold), the total of which would suffice to build 600 000 miles of railway at the liberal estimate of $50,000 gold per mile.

"Some few years ago an investigation of the effect which Chinese railroad development had upon the commercial growth of China showed that between the years 1900 and 1907 an increase of 45 per cent in Chinese railway mileage had brought about an increase in the nel imports and exports amounting to 158 per cent during the same period. Suppose we were to extend these figures and estimate the future business of China on the basis of an expenditure on her railways equal to $20 per capita of her population. Can you form any idea of what volume her business would then be? . . . The result would, it must be confessed, be unintelligible to the ordinary mind if placed in plain figures."

(Quoted by James Dolsen in "The Awakening of China." Emphasis Mine.)

GREAT Britain and Japan have been even more alert since the Russian Revolution rescued that rich country and its people from the clutches of the imperialists. Meanwhile as disastrous privileges in China has become intense and lies at the base of the struggle for the control of the Pacific. So powerful is the position of American imperialism due to her geographical isolation, her tremendous natural resources and national wealth in general, and the long political development of the American workingclass, coupled with the tremendous efficiency of American industry, that American imperialism appears at Geneva relatively unworried by the woes which beset her rivals.

SO far (June 26) the American delegation has not felt it necessary to make the slightest concession to Great Britain, but has acted in a manner which is little short of openly provocative.

But the uncertainty which characterizes the relations between capitalist states at present and which produces a seemingly endless succession of alignments and re-alignments, manenvers and counter-manœuvers, is to be seen also in the Geneva discussions.

This uncertainty, however, has nothing to do with the policy of the participating powers toward their own navies and those of their enemies. This policy can be stated briefly as follows:

An unshakable determination to build and maintain as large a navy as is deemed necessary for successful warfare, and finances permit, and to bring the utmost pressure upon the rival powers to force them to maintain a navy inferior to its own.

THIS is the main line of each of the powers at Geneva and if one thing is certain it is that there will be no deviation from this line except on the surface.

The second consideration which determines the policy of the three powers is the peculiar world situation which each finds itself in. The growing tension between America and Great Britain is found in the recent proposal for a "peace pact" between France and America—a proposal which gets joint support from the political rivals, Poincare and Briand.

The proposal, timed for the Geneva conference, is another blow at Great Britain. That it is anything else but a plan for peace will be apparent with but little consideration. If American imperialism really desires peace for herself and the imperialist world (we consider in this article only the inner imperialist conflicts and not the general struggle of imperialism against the Soviet Union) the requisite procedure seems quite simple. It would be sufficient for immediate progress for the two most powerful imperialist nations—American and Great Britain—to sign a treaty of peace and agree to move jointly against any other capitalist nation, or nations, which disturbed the peace. The combination of forces would be too powerful for any possible grouping of capitalist nations to challenge. But imperialism is not pacifist and cannot be pacifist.

BUT at Geneva there is no talk, or even rumor of such an alliance. "Peace pacts" with Japan, yes, "peace pacts" with France, yes, with both these nations, yes—these questions are discussed and given wide publicity.

Toward Great Britain there is only hostility at Geneva on the part of the American delegates.

Geneva is a danger signal for the American masses. It will make no difference if the diplomats find at last some formula which will tone down the atmosphere of hostility, but the fact remains that underneath the fact that American and British imperialism face each other across a chasm which will be closed only as they come to grips amid the thunder of guns.)

WE do not intend to give the impression that here and there as their interests dictate there may not be temporary understanding and even joint action as at Nanking. But these understandings will grow principally as a result of general imperialist hostility toward the Soviet Union and the points and periods of agreement in inner imperialist politics will become less frequent and of shorter duration.

Already the "big navy" interests of America are gleeful. They foresee a tremendous program of naval building in the near future and the money now used to make refunds on income tax payments can be easily utilised for speedy and powerful cruisers and auxiliary craft. The Democrats who conserve the big refunds probably will be glad to forego them in return for loud testimonials to their patriotism and the power with which they will defend their present holdings and wrest more for them from colonial peoples and imperialist rivals.

The spectre of militarism upon the American masses is bound to increase. American imperialism, in Latin America and in China, has begun a career of conquest. In Geneva it speaks already as the ruler of the world.

Accepting the decision of the last Plenum of the Communist International, the Communist Party of America must make clear the lesson of Geneva to the American workingclass and prepare more energetically than ever before to prepare it to put in practice in the most effective way the Leninist slogan of "Fight your own imperialism first!"

Interesting Season of Shaw Plays Here July 13

The Washington Square Players of the New York University are planning a summer season of five Shaw plays beginning July 13, at the University Playhouse, 100 Washington Square. The productions, which are to be staged under the direction of Prof. Randolph Somerville, will include, "Fanny's First Play," "Misalliance," "Getting Married," "You Never Can Tell" and "Candida."

New York Group to View Mausoleum of Lenin; See Kremlin

For many generations the Kremlin in Moscow has been a spot of foremost interest to the traveler, but now those who come from every corner of the earth to see for themselves the wonders of Soviet Russia are drawn to a spot outside the Kremlin walls, where the body of Lenin rests.

The present mausoleum is only a temporary building of wood but is to be replaced by a stone edifice later. Perhaps then the body will no longer be on view, but at present, those who have obtained special permission may see the remains of the leader of the Russian revolution just as he appeared on the day of his death.

It is a unique privilege which has inspired many thousands of Russian workmen and peasants, and makes a lasting impression on all those who are permitted to enter the little red building which has become world famous.

Also within this tomb are the banners of the Communist International and the war banner of the Paris Commune of 1871.

A Rostrum.

From the top of this mausoleum, which is reached by steps on either side, the greatest figures in the Russian revolution have addressed the workers of Moscow and reviewed the important demonstrations and parades in the Red Square.

This mausoleum is but one of the many revolutionary landmarks which will be visited by those who leave with the World Tourists on July 14th for a six weeks' trip to Russia. Arrangements have been made with the USSR Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries to make excursions to revolutionary museums, where there are the revolutionary papers of all countries, examples of the propaganda which brought about the revolution in Russia, and various interesting objects which bring before the traveler a vivid picture of the years of struggle which produced the present Workers' Republic.

The party going under the management of the World Tourists is limited, and there are only 48 more places vacant. The time is short in which to file an application, so everyone interested should write immediately for a booklet and further information to the World Tourists, Inc., 41 Union Square, New York City.

MANILA, June 27.—Two thousand members of the Philippine Army, a unit of the American army, will be mobilized on the Islands for a twelve-day maneuver period, it was announced today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the American army. The purpose of the maneuvers, according to the American authorities, is to smash labor unions in the Islands as the organization of workers is taking place rapidly.

Palestinian Scheme May Fizzle Shortly, Delegates Informed

ATLANTIC CITY, June 27.—Frank admissions that the economic situation in Palestine were "grave" were made at the sessions of the convention of the Zionist organization of America being held here.

Disillusioning reports about conditions in the Holy Land helped to add to the bitterness of the controversy between warring factions, and frequently much disorder prevailed.

Conditions Bad.

Louis Lipsky, president of the organization, declared that "an economic disorder with all its attendant consequences has set in," and asserted that the Palestine government cannot, unaided, support agriculture and colonization.

"Private initiative and private capital must be brought in," he concluded.

Failure Seen.

Many of the delegates have declared that the chronic economic difficulties in the country indicate the probable failure of this Nationalist experiment.

BRITISH POLICY AT NAVAL CONFAB

Threatens Race for Naval Supremacy

GENEVA, June 27.—Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation at the Geneva naval confrence, launched an open attack upon the British proposals today. When interviewed by the press, Gibson was at first noncommittal but finally he replied to the statement of Bridgeman, head of the British delegation, that his "mandate at Geneva would not let him go home without discussion," by declaring that the British delegation could discuss anything they wanted, but whether the Americans discussed it with him was quite another matter.

In discussing the deadlock which threatens to make a joke out of the international conference called by Coolidge, Gibson said:

"Another difficulty of discussing this subject, quite apart from the fact that it is outside what we consider the rules of the conference, is the existence of two British ships of 36,000 tons each, just completed at a moment when Britain considers that the tonnage of future ships should be reduced under 20,000."

The two ships referred to are the Rodney and the Nelson, the most powerful naval vessels ever built, each mounting nine 16-inch guns, all forward and able to fire a salvo while plunging dead ahead in the high seas. The ships have nine fire controls and are equipped with smaller guns aft that can repel any rear attack.

The British declare that they have no intention of scrapping these ships and that any agreement reached must deal with future ships and not present ones. This means that even though Britain did accept the 5-5-3 ratio proposed by the United States it would not scrap any of its many cruisers built since the Washington conference of six years ago. In order to achieve equal naval power with Great Britain in the line of small cruisers the United States would have to spend hundreds of millions of dollars and increase its cruiser strength by about five times.

Fur Market Yesterday

People," but the chairman, Mrs. Macdaniel, apparently fearful of the labor board for the purpose of discussing the question of peaceful picketing.

It is to be remembered that the strict attorney is doubt that peaceful picketing complies with the law, the magistrate in every case to decide for himself. They have the power also who have jurisdiction over the question. If one so desires, they can always appeal to the court of special sessions."

Green Turned Down.

Last night a rumor persisted that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was refused an audience by Police Commissioner Warren. It is believed that he wanted to urge the commissioner to take even more drastic steps to break the furriers' strike than has been taken so far.

Postpone Wallman Case.

Max Wallman, who was brutally beaten up by members of the industrial squad two weeks ago and then arrested on a charge of felonious assault, had his case postponed to July 7 when it came up for a hearing yesterday morning in Jefferson Market Court.

At the time of his arrest Wallman was most viciously mistreated by the police. He was one of the witnesses brot to the police commissioners office last week when the Joint Board entered a protest against the way the pickets have been mistreated by the authorities.

Donate $50.

The furriers' branch of the United Council of Working Class Housewives yesterday donated $50 to the strike fund of the Joint Board. It was turned over by Gertrude Lange, secretary and Lily Bloom, treasurer. The council also announced that at their meeting tomorrow night, they will vote a donation of $10 for The DAILY WORKER. They are also planning to organize a Brooklyn branch due to the rapid increase in their membership and influence.

Greeks Support Left Wing.

At a meeting of the Greek fur workers held last week at Bryant Hall, a resolution was adopted that reads in part: "1. We express our loyalty and confidence to our organization and to its present officers who have lead us to victory and as testimony of our loyalty we declare that we will not only pay the 10 per cent assessment that our organization has decided to assess its members but we will do our best for the success of our present struggle.

"2. We condemn the anti-working class and traitorous actions of the officials of the International and the Special Committee of the American Federation of Labor, who in their attempts to break up our union not only have they cooperated with the factory owners but they made an alliance with every element of the underworld, the result of that alliance being the murderous assault against our Brother A. Gross, one of our class-conscious leaders to whom we express our sympathy and assure him in the struggle against the fakers."

Volunteers Wanted.

Volunteers are asked to come daily to the office of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee and ask for Lena Chernenko. There is important work to be done.

MILLINERY AND CAP SITUATION TOLD BY T.U.E.L.

The National Committee, Cap and Millinery Section, Trade Union Educational League has issued a statement reviewing the results of the recent elections of the Chefs Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' Union.

"The millinery trade is undergoing the same development which all other trades have undergone within the past ten years," the statement says, "the trade is spreading all over the country, Chicago, St. Louis and many other large cities have become important millinery centers. . . . The failure of our International to undertake adequate organization work to bring this influx of workers into its folds and raise their standards to the level of the organized millinery workers in New York who in the past have supplied almost the entire market, has brot about a condition where the workers of New York are faced with the intensive competition from unorganized centers.

Even More Serious.

"The situation in the cap trade is even more serious. Large cap manufacturers are gradually giving up manufacturing and becoming jobbers. The trade in the organized centers is being transfegred into the hands of small contractors and to out-of-town, open shop centers, such as New Jersey, etc. On the other hand, in these open shops centers, because of the cheap labor supply, jobbers are beginning to manufacture on a large scale. This condition is resulting in competition against the New York market. The jobbers, who are becoming an ever more important factor in the industry, are thus increasing their profits, and at the same time shirking all responsibility for the conditions of the workers. The development of the jobbing-contracting system, the spreading of the millinery industry, the organization of the unorganized, retaining of union conditions and the struggle for further improvements—all these are problems that are of vital concern to the cap and millinery workers. In fact, they are typical problems of all the needle trades. Large manufacturing concerns are now producing furs, garments, and headgear as well as general women's apparel. Jobbing, contracting and splitting up of the industry into smaller production units are typical in every branch of the needle trades."

tion of greater significance than a mere "boyish love affair."

"Do you think," he was asked, "that the treatment which the Jewish interns received at the hands of the expelled doctors might be characterized by a stronger term than 'hazing'?"

"Certainly," was the reply, "it was, to put it weakly, a mild form of lynching."

Rape Hospital Head,

Swedler refused to comment on the repeated rumors that Gov. Smith had given instructions to Mayor Walker to soft pedal the religious question involved in the "hazing".

He stressed the fact that Dr. Montimer D. Jones, the superintendent of King's County Hospital, waited a full week before he issued a statement on the outrage in which he rebutted the charges made by Swedler's clients by adducing a so-called complaint alleged to have been filed by a hospital nurse in which she asserts that Dr. Louis Rape and Dr. Hyman U. Solovay "insulted" her.

Patients Discriminated Against.

Rabbi Louis Gross of the Union Temple in Brooklyn, who is playing a prominent part in the investigation of the so-called hazing said he has affidavits from 53 Jews, former patients of the hospital, charging discrimination against them.

"I have definite and specific information," he said Rabbi Gross, "regarding conditions in the incurable wards of King's County Hospital which would be heartrending to hear."

He called attention to certain cases in which cruel and desperately sick Jewish workers were deliberately ignored by gentile doctors. He cited one case where a Jewish boy died as a result of such neglect.

Rabbi Gross pointed out that he is not alone in the desire to press the charges against the political medicos who are craring it over the inmates at the King's Hospital. He is the chairman of the 100 rabbis who form the Jewish investigating committee.

"The question is an American one," Rabbi Gross went on to say, "not a Jewish one; we live in America, not Russeia."

A reporter of an evening paper spoke up. "You mean Russia, don't you, rabbi."

"No," was the retort, "I said Rumania. The day of the pogrom has passed in Russia."

Bird S. Coler, commissioner of public welfare is to make his decision today on the petition of the King's County Hospital Alumni Association that the suspended internes be reinstated and permitted to occupy their rooms in the staff quarters.

Arraignment of the six "hazers" will be held today in the Flatbush Court at 27th St. and Snyder Ave., Brooklyn.

On Wednesday they will appear before Mayor Walker, who in his capacity as chief magistrate, will hear the case.

Organizational Problems

By ARNE SWABECK.

CHAPTER IX.

Building the Party.

The process which we name the Americanization of our Party has become recognized as one of our main problems. That is, to orientate our Party upon the realities of the class struggle and adjust our tactics and methods to the conditions presented by these realities. The first step should be to turn our attention much more toward the problems of the American workers and much more to the workers in the shops. Also to draw all of our members into the main stream of the labor movement such as trade unions. This will increase and strengthen our contacts and attract the American born workers to our Party.

Since the war a certain degree of leveling process has taken place in the country, immigration has been considerably curtailed and the most decisive section within the language colonies have become the young elements born in this country of foreign parentage. The result of which is that the language colonies are brought closer to the questions of the American workers in general and the workingclass as a whole has become more Americanized, more of one compact mass. This situation should be taken advantage of and facilitate the process of Americanizing the movement.

In previous chapters the need of adapting ourselves to the use of the everyday language of the workers has been emphasized. This in itself will naturally become a part of our Americanization process. Many entirely foreign terms should be elminated from our propaganda vocabulary. Our language press in particular as well as our language fractions must become less foreign in charneter, which means that while taking up all questions of the international movement, it must be done-properly in its relation toward the concrete problems of the American workingclass. Our Party as a whole must then proceed to appropriate the traditions of the American workingclass struggle, make them our own and incorporate them definitely in the Communist movement.

Combine Struggles for Immediate Needs With Ultimate Aims.

Our direct approach to the workers naturally goes through the everyday struggles. To establish permanent contact with them and actually win them for our movement, we must fight equally for questions of a penny an hour increase in the shops as for our ultimate aims. We must create the proper combination so that every struggle for partial demands become part of the struggle leading directly toward the achievement of our ultimate aims. We must study the character of workers individually, approach them on their own basis of understanding which we should help to further develop. It is always well for our comrades to know just what points are the best contacts and then proceed from that point to interest the individual workers. We must observe closely how the masses move and react to the class struggle so that our slogans become both practical, concrete and leading toward the achievements of our ultimate aim. When our Party's slogans it must become authoritative to the workers.

While we may not face the obstacles so much of the cunning social democratic leaders or trade union bureaucrats among the workers in the shops, since they are not numerous there, we must nevertheless show that we understand practical politics in a Communistic sense. We must not only shout about the needs of the workers, but give actual help. Reformist leaders too often win the confidence of the workers with their claims of giving practical help.

In applying our campaigns, our slogans should be as simple as possible and so coined that they concentrate on the main outstanding issues. They should not be too advanced, and the fewer the better. Our actions should be definitely connected with the organization measures taken.

A further problem of winning the American section of the working masses, is to find the correct approach to the Negro workers in the industries, and take up the questions vitally effecting the agricultural workers and small farmers.

While setting forth the immediate issues in these various fields of struggle, the strictest adherence to principle is necessary combined with the maximum contact.

Simplifying Our Tasks.

All our methods need simplification. Our approach to the workers must become simplified. Our machinery works in a very cumbersome manner and should operate on a more simplified basis. Too many campaigns initiated simultaneously create confusion. This can be eliminated by concentrating mainly on the outstanding issue at each specific period and engage mainly in the one campaign corresponding with this issue. Such procedure will help to obtain the maximum result of response from our members as well as from the working masses.

When engaging in a campaign, the measures should be worked out not merely for the higher local bodies, but for all the nuclei as well so that our whole machinery gets into motion from top to bottom.

It has now become recognized in our Party that we must pay much more attention to the parliamentary elections in the country, nationally, state-wide, and locally. The workers participate in such elections, although not on a class basis and all the issues of the workingclass are intimately bound up with the elections. It is our duty to put these issues on a class basis and utilize them as our approach to the working masses in election campaigns with a view to constantly developing these issues and giving them definite content.

Party Leadership.

Our Party is the highest form of proletarian organization. Its leadership must be deliberately trained, beginning from below in the nuclei. We must never conceal our errors, but rather openly discuss them with a view to have them properly rectified. Only in this manner can we develop the discipline of our members as well as the consciousness of Party tasks.

The Battle in New York Needle Trades

By I. JEROME.

The Proletarian Spirit.

I saw this miracle.

A hundred workers massed in a hall.

Tall-weary men and girls, cloak makers, dress makers, straight from the factories to the meeting.

Louis Hyman has the floor. General Manager of the Joint Board. His words are few and unemotional. These are the chosen workers. They do not need propaganda. Gaunt, unsmiling, Lincolnesque, he stands before them. He talks intimately, warmly (intimately, warmly he talks to the gatherings of twenty thousand at Madison Square Garden).

". . . not a donation, fellow-workers, but a loan, and only for a short term. The union will pay back every penny it borrows. I have no pledge to give you but my word. We have bone so far, fellow-workers, and shall we now fail for lack of funds? You are the defenders of the union, and the union now comes to you and says, do not let my foes crush me. Stand by me in my hour of need!"

A worker stands up. A proletarian, talking the language of the proletariat. His voice is husky. His words come rapidly.

"The bosses give money to Sigman. The yellow socialist 'Forward' gives money to Sigman. The blackshirt Beckerman of the Amalgamated gives money to Sigman. The Civic Federation gives money to Sigman. And we. Whom have we got to help us? The newspapers are against us. The Judges are against us. The bosses are against us. The police are against us. The A. F. of L. is against us. Our workers are knocked-out by the long strike. Our pickets are blackjacked. Our leaders are jailed. Who's going to help our cause if not we ourselves? Workers, comrades, do your utmost. Dig deep into your pockets. Into your flesh if you have to!"

The collection begins. A girl comes forward—pale, oval-faced, a Daily Worker folded under her arm.

"I give one hundred dollars."

Her voice is low, but firm with conviction.

Another girl—two men—three—step forward. There is a rush to the front. The chairman pleads for patience. "Your money will be taken, comrades. Please give us a chance to make the entries."

One worker, a bearded cloak-maker brings to the table fifty dollars. "Will you let me bring another fifty tomorrow? I think my wife can raise it somehow."

The chairman announces that one comrade has given five hundred dollars. His name cannot be made public as he is a member of a right wing local and he fears reprisals.

Some pledge to bring money the following day, two days later, at the end of the week.

Three men club together and bring fifty dollars. Who knows how much this means to them.

And one brings over his watch: "Here, pawn this."

Half an hour has passed. The chairman rises to announce the results. A light of joy is in his eye.

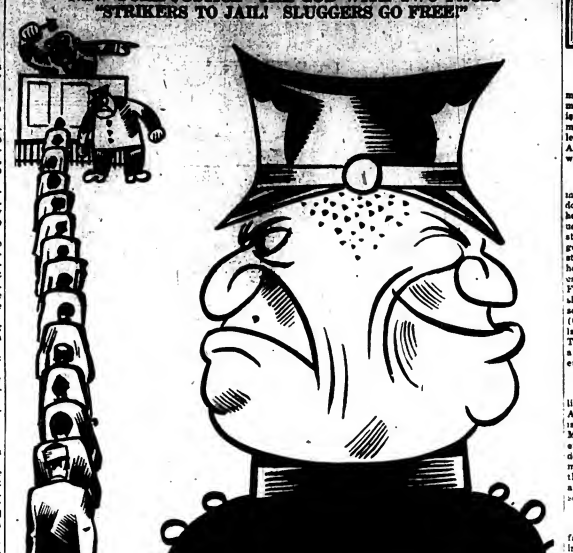
The workers wait for the announcement. The room holds its breath.

"Over ten thousand dollars!"

"Im-poss-ible!"

The wonderment is whispered thru the room.

Over ten thousand dollars! The workers look at one another. Is it a dream? Joy floods to their eyes. If they were not ashamed, if they could but be little children they would cry. Their glances embrace each other.



Is it possible? We?—we gave it?

For the first time they behold their seedy clothes, their pinched faces, their poverty.

Is it possible?

And in my corner I ask—Shall these be conquered?

NEW YORK JUSTICE—THE GOD WITH TWO FACES "STRIKERS TO JAIL! SLUGGERS GO FREE!"

Labor Faces a Turn in the Road

By BERT MILLER.

"COOLIDGE says flag of America means best job on earth" declares the New York Times. The phrase might well have been uttered by any of the Green, Woll, Lewis outfit now at the head of the American Federation of Labor. This theory of the exalted position of labor in the United States as compared with other nations, the theory of the immunity of the United States from the laws which govern the development of the class struggle elsewhere, has become the basis for a complete class collaboration philosophy, which has been carefully nourished and disseminated by reactionary labor leaders and employers alike. It has been made the basis for the theory that the trade unions are not fighting organizations of the working class but rather in the words of Green, "agencies through which cooperation between unions and management can be realized." The conservative wing of the American labor officialdom has literally swamped the labor movement with this propaganda for the last few years and it has found its concrete expression in arbitration schemes, the B. and O. plan for increasing the productivity of labor and various forms of labor banking and insurance. One cannot doubt but that the material conditions of prosperity in which America found itself during this period, gave an impetus to this propaganda, and that it seriously affected and dulled the militancy and fighting spirit of certain sections of the American working class. Even in our own ranks it gave rise to certain expressions of scepticism and pessimism from those who based their views on "temporary and superficial phenomena".

RECENT developments tend to indicate that the "honeymoon" period is over, and that the campaign against class collaboration, carried on by the left wing, was fundamentally correct. As far back as January, 1926, Joseph Wild of the Daily News Record let the cat out of the bag when he said, "Inquiry shows that cooperation and profit sharing succeed in good times to some extent but wither under adverse winds." Mr. Wild then quotes W. G. Ilaber, "The first zero breeze of rigorous times will freeze 90 per cent of these labor idiosyncrasies."

American capitalists encouraged the Golden Rule tweddle for a time for a very definite and useful purpose. During the period of expanding and developing prosperity, labor had to be drugged against launching an offensive, against demanding its share in the unusual harvest which American capitalists were reaping. This could be done only by bribing certain key sections of the American working class and by cultivating assiduously the policy of class cooperation. A few crumbs to the railroad workers, the building trades and other highly skilled categories, a few sumptuous love feasts with Woll, Hoover, Jewell, Willard, Hillman, Nash, etc., as the guests and the trick was done. As a result there has been during the last few years almost no serious struggle for increased demands by any section of the American labor movement except that led by the left wing.

THE times are changing. The economic weather man predicts some "zero breezes" approaching. While the development of American capitalism is still distinctly on the upgrade, there are signs of a turn in the road. Recent reports indicate serious declines in the automobile, textile and building industries, which are key factors in the maintenance of the present period of American prosperity. Conditions in Europe, in which American capitalism has become deeply involved are most unsettled and are highly charged with social electricity.

Under these changing conditions, it is becoming increasingly evident that the American capitalist class has decided to change its tactics, to drop its honeyed phrases, and come down to business. The following recent events bear out this conclusion: (1) The offensive against the miners' union. (2) The refusal by the Federal Board of Mediation of an increase in wages to conductors and trainmen on fifty-five western railroads. (3) The renewal of the use of injunctions on a broad scale against labor (stone cutters, carmen, needle trades). (4) The proposed attack upon the building trades, now being discussed by the employers in this industry. (5) The dropping of insurance and welfare schemes by a number of employers (American Woolen Co., Morris Packing Co.). (6) The ferocity of the attack against the most militant section of the American labor movement in the needle trades. (7) The pressure being brought to bear upon the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Bank by the Mitten interests. These examples, which can be amplified by others in every section of the country, make it evident that an offensive against the trade unions of this country on a broad and formidable scale, is slowly but surely gathering headway.

THIS prospect holds the possibility of deep-going changes in the American labor movement in the not distant future. Labor is facing more and more the question of the defense of its most fundamental and elementary rights to organize, to strike and to picket. In this struggle the honest trade union elements in the American Federation, those who refuse to surrender their basic rights, must either step forward, consolidate their forces, draw in from the ranks of the unorganized new and courageous fighting elements, and build a broad militant left wing, which will hold a real promise for a rennaissance of the entire American labor movement, and a period of great development and growth, or they must face the impending danger of the complete wiping-out of the trade unions and the inevitable crushing of labor's standards which will follow.

The lines are crystallizing sharply between those who are ready to desert the labor movement and those who are ready to fight for its existence.

Boy On Trial For Murder.

HACKENSACK, June 27.—James Hoey, 19, of Dumont, N. J., is expected to go on trial here soon for the murder of his friend, Elisha Smith, 19, at the home of Evelyn Silveris, 14, on March 12.

Professional Patriots

The close relationship of Fred R. Marvin of the New York Commercial and the American Defense Society to all these army officers may be gathered from Mr. Marvin's series of articles which ran in the Army and Navy Journal in the spring of 1926 (see page 921). Several of them attack the advocates of peace and international good will. All the War Department man use the Marvin material and other rehashed items from the notorious Lusk Report.

A typical verbal assault on progressive movements by big army advocates was made in 1925 on the League for Industrial Democracy in the pages of the Bulletin of the 83rd Division of the U. S. Army and in the Quartermaster Review. Other army officers took up the false charges which consisted of "treason" and references to the circulation of a so-called "slacker's oath." When these charges were investigated they were found to have originated with Mr. Marvin who is systematic in his slanderous attacks on the L. I. D. When Mr. Marvin was asked to produce evidence to prove his lying charges he failed as usual to reply. Mr. Norman Thomas, a director of the League, refers to Marvin's statements as "childish and malicious misrepresentations."

One of the earlier army officer mix-ups with the peace societies is described by Leonard Cline in "The War on the Peace Seekers" (New Republic, July 2, 1924):

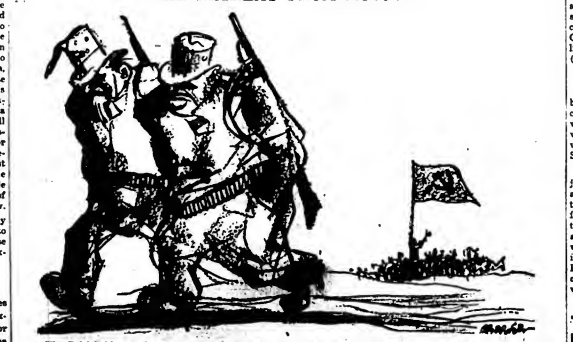
"So we arrive at the episode of Brigadier-General Albert J. Bowley. Speaking always with the agreement that his utterances shall not be given to the press, General Bowley has declared that activities of the Soviet Reds have been reflected in such organizations as the Y.W.C.A. (cheers from the business men), that our colleges are teaching our young people pacifism and Communism; that Carrie Chapman Catt and Jane Addams are 'the reddest of the reds.' We have no time, however, to consider more than his speech before the Chamber of Commerce at Columbus, Ohio, on March 7.

"As usual, General Bowley exacted the promise that there should be no newspaper account of his talk. But when it was over five of his auditors, outraged, swore to affidavits recounting what he said. He attacked the National Council for Prevention of War, among whose officers are such persons as Mrs. Catt, Miss Addams, President Hibben of Princeton, President Lowell of Harvard, Maude Wood Park, Julia G. Lathrop, William Allen White, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Dr. John A. Ryan of the Catholic University of America. In particular, he attacked Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary.

"He declared, according to the affidavits, that Mr. Libby was educated for the promotion of Communism in Russia or by Russians; that after returning from Russia he taught Communism in Pennsylvania; that he is a Communist; and that he and su associate take turns visiting Russia to get instructions from the Soviet government; that the Council is the tool of the Soviets and its constructive measures are a cloak to hide its sinister designs; that the Council and Mr. Libby want to overthrow our government by violence.

"Immediately there was a hue of indignation. General Bowley was asked for proofs. He promised them. Not one so far has he supplied. His very associates have admitted that his went too far, drawing inferences not justifiable from the evidence. Fred R. Marvin, editor of the Searchlight column in the New York Commercial, one of those to whom General Bowley went pleading for help in his predicament, was unable to say more than that 'it is impossible that in his (General Bowley's) address in Columbus he used expressions which, if literally construed, he could not prove; but as to his real purpose no honest citizen can question him.'"

The activities of other army professional propagandists is told by Mr. Cline in a subsequent article (New Republic, July 9, 1924), as follows:



"There is, for instance, the activity of Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Sheets. We have et hand a copy of a letter sent by Colonel Sheets to Dr. John A. Ryan of the Catholic University of America, who is on the executive board of the National Council for Prevention of War. Dr. Ryan had delivered an address before the convention of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Colonel Skeets demanded answers to a list of questions which imputed to the League and to Dr. Ryan as well a program of violent communistic doctrines. Religious prejudice was brought out boldly in the letter, which concluded, 'Are you willing to be branded as a self-appointed destroyer of the nation?' Copies of this letter were sent to the press.

"And there is the incessant propagandizing of such journals as the Army and Navy Register. An article in the November 10, 1923, issue of this organ declared that $3,000,000 in gold had been sent from the United States by the "Communistic International.' On the return from Europe of Frederick J. Libby of the National Council for Prevention of War, a campaign to wipe out our army and navy would begin, the article declared, 'so that when the red uprising comes the country will be at its mercy.'"

What has been done to counteract these absurd statements from military sources? Mr. Cline reports:

"THE RETREAT FROM MOSCOW"

The British bloc against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has failed, at least temporarily, and the war of invasion is postponed for just a little. The vigilance of the Soviet Union is one main reason. Trusted cossacks hired by England have been caught.

BOOKS

RED POETS AND BOURGEOIS INTELLECTUALS.

In his review of Lola Ridge's Red Flag Lebarbe seems to me to have misunderstood almost every aspect of Miss Ridge's work in an astonishing manner. He announces with loud and belligerent fanfare that Lola Ridge is a proletarian poet. This original discovery will probably surprise no one more than Miss Ridge herself, who may be delighted to learn that her intellectual, highly stylized, imagistic poetry is full of the heartbeat of the American worker. But in that case, what kind of creature is the American worker?

The fact that Miss Ridge has often drawn her inspiration from the masses and from workingclass history (such as the Russian Revolution) doesn't make her a proletarian poet. In her diction and in the subtleties of her emotional approach she is thoroughly alien to the proletariat. This is not intended as criticism of Miss Ridge. Since poetry in this country is still produced largely by bourgeois intellectuals (exploited workers never get a chance to indulge in such leisure pursuits), it is inevitable that the stamp of a bourgeois psyche should remain more or less intact, no matter how completely individual intellectuals may be in sympathy with the interests of the workingclass. Lola Ridge is a bourgeois intellectual. So is Joe Freeman, who is a thoroughgoing Communist. So is Lebarbe himself. (He showed it in his recent sonnet in THE DAILY WORKER.) So am I and several other persons I could mention who are members of the Workers (Communist) Party. Figure it out for yourself why Carl Sandburg, who is not a Communist, is a better proletarian than Joe Freeman who is; why Theodore Dreiser, who has no real quarrels with the capitalistic system, is a more proletarian novelist than Floyd Dell, who has given some of his best energy to the revolutionary movement.

And Lebarbe's choice for proletarian laurels is strangely awry. For of living American poets Lola Ridge would be one of the most difficult for an American worker to understand. The blue-blooded aristocrat, Amy Lowell, is simple in comparison. And Lebarbe's quotation from "Red flag" proves it. Miss Ridge is one of the most persistent and most intricate of the Imagists, and with this she combines an obscure, mystical intensity that places her decidedly among the "difficult" poets. Lebarbe, carried away by the subject matter of some of her poetry and her obvious sympathies, disregards everything else. And for some reason he also seems to feel it necessary to make a hysterical defense of Miss Ridge against imaginary foes. He actually is sore at the fact that critics have praised "Red Flag"!

Lebarbe's review also contains a number of curious irrelevancies. The fact that " 'Annunciation' speaks of violets and the word 'yclept' is found in 'After the Recital' " is doubtless very interesting and literary antiquarians of the future may thank him for the information. He might also have mentioned that "Obliteration" speaks of the sea, that the word "appulse" is used as the title of one of the poems, etc., etc.

• • •

The poem "Phyllis" is emphatically not reminiscent of T. S. Eliot (another proletarian?). Let Lebarbe read or reread "Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock," "Sweeney among the Nightingales" and "The Waste Land."

THE SHYLOCK OF THE WORLD.

AMERICA, THE WORLD'S BANKER, by Dr. Max Winkler. Published by the Research Department, Foreign Policy Association, N. Y. $.50.

Dr. Winkler is the Vice-President of Bertron, Griscom & Co., and was formerly the head of the Foreign Bond department of Moody's Investor's Service. While, therefore, we cannot look to him for anything in the way of a social interpretation of the phenomena of financial imperialism, he is nevertheless a first class statistician and has collected a very valuable body of data from which Marxian students can draw deductions of their own.

This pamphlet is the best current study of the manner in which the spiral of American finance is continuing to soar skywards. Exclusive of the ten billion dollars of political or war debts advanced by the American Government to foreign Governments, private American investors, according to the figures compiled by Dr. Winkler, had invested approximately thirteen billion dollars abroad by the end of 1926. This figure is about a billion dollars greater than the estimates of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

The suddenness with which Uncle Sam has entered upon the role of the world's Uncle Shylock stands out above everything else in the book. Prior to 1915 foreign borrowings floated in the United States were of relatively no moment. By the end of 1926, foreign private financial investments in this country reached $12,885,000,000, geographically distributed as follows:

Region	Amount
Europe	$3,596,700,000
Canada	3,557,600,000
Cuba	1,508,700,000
Mexico	1,074,600,000
Central America	265,200,000
South America	1,973,300,000
China, Japan and Philippines	713,500,000
Miscellaneous	225,000,000

Hence, to whatever corner of the earth we may turn we find that American dollars have penetrated it and that foreign workers must sweat out interest and dividends with which to line the golden coffers of American imperialism. "America has loaned money to the Dutch East Indies, Australia, Central America, Cuba, the West Indies; in South America to the governments of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Colombia and Peru and to the provinces and states, departments, cities and municipalities within these countries.

• • •

"Today American dollars finance Chilean nitrate producers, Venezuelan oil companies, Sao Paulo coffee growers, Colombian tobacco raisers and Cuban cotton planters. Funds are obtained in the United States for Peruvian sanitation projects and for Brazilian, Chilean and Colombian railroad construction. America supplies capital for Danish banks, Swedish industrial concerns, Norwegian hydro-electric projects, Finnish financial institutions, Czechoslovak equipment and glass companies, Jugoslav railways, Italian public utilities, Spanish telephone enterprises and even Russian mining projects (Harriman manganese concession and Lena goldfields concession)."

The conclusions to be drawn from these facts are quite simple and should be very obvious. The adage is as true as it is ancient that in capitalist society "he who holds the purse strings calls the tune." But of the manner in which American imperialism directs the course of practically all of the western world and of even the major powers Dr. Winkler drops not even a word. This we must conjecture for ourselves or secure from other sources. Secondly, how long can the mad dance keep up?

On this question Dr. Winkler and the Foreign Policy Association throw just a hint. Already the world is finding it difficult to meet the interest and amortization charges which such huge loans involve although, for the time being, "the over-abundance of (American) capital will make it possible for such debtors, as may be in difficulties temporarily, to create new debts to take care of existing obligations (p. 74)." In other words, foreign nations are beginning to borrow from us to pay interest—a situation, as a result of which, "some of the recent offerings do not perhaps constitute high grade investment issues." It goes without saying that the venerable Doctor of Philosophy neglects to add that sections of the Communist International are on the job in all of the countries getting ready to take over and direct the works when the crash occurs.

—JACK HARDY.

The poetry of Lola Ridge has certain very distinguished qualities. But they seem to have escaped Lebarbe in his frantic desire to make a "proletarian" of her at any cost. If Lebarbe thinks I'm all wrong, let him follow his own advice and place "Red Flag" in the hands of a worker of working class origin. And if he wishes, he can choose somebody who happens to be especially sensitive to poetry. Then let him note the reactions, if any.

THE fact that president Coolidge is wearing a ten-gallon hat in the South Dakota mountains does not signify that the vacant space in the headgear will contain anything stronger than the presidential head. And judging from the speech that Coolidge delivered to the South Dakota farmers the brain-waves on the inside of the hat rack are not sufficiently vigorous to put the hat out of shape. When a politician tells farmers that their economic condition is alright, while they are yelling for relief,—what he needs is not a hat but a psychopath.

ADMIRAL Field of the British delegation to the Geneva conference picked on July 4th as the date on which to give a banquet to the American delegation. Such a banquet if given in the United States, in the British embassy or in some other wet oasis, might be productive of good results, but the Americans in Geneva have access to the wine shops as well as the British, so the British admiral has nothing by way of novelty to give them.

TZARIST barons have been doing a rushing business in the American matrimonial market since the Russian revolution cut them off from their bases of supplies at home. Lesser lights among the old aristocracy did fairly well, but the barons were sweeping everything before them. Girls with millions fell before their advances like a field of grain before a mowing machine. They lost Russia, but won the heart and bankroll of the Americans that count.

BUT even as the Russian workers and peasants got sick of their aristocracy, the wealthy daughters of America's leading capitalists are finding their aristocratic foundlings anything but assets. We have the sad case of the Baron Tornow in the uniform of an imperial Russian army officer. He married the daughter of Joseph Clendenin, millionaire mining magnate. The baron had too many eyes so he may soon have to go to work for a living or hire out as an anti-Bolshevik expert to Matthew Woll and the Civic Federation.

MORE about this remarkable individual Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton! He is bringing up his son in the spook business and claims that the young lad has a full-sized holy ghost already rooming in his innards. Had a doctor been present when the holy spirit entered Straton Jr. he would have called an ambulance and prescribed ice for the back of his neck, but not so his father. The old veteran was delighted and stood in ecstacy while his son groaned, raved and frothed at the mouth. This is the real stuff. None of your anaemic, powder-puff religions for "Doc" Straton.

SOME of Dr. Straton's deacons hinted that the old fellow was unduly influenced by Uldine Utley, the youthful lady evangelist who performed recently in Carnegie Hall. Uldine is now at a bathing resort, according to snappy pictures in the tabloids. This is reminiscent of Aimee McPherson. It seems that evangelists have a weakness for the seashore. The Rev. Straton admits that Miss Utley influenced him and is grateful to his god for it. That's the way we like to hear a fellow talk.

THERE are two kinds of religious convulsions according to Straton, or rather convulsions that appear exactly alike to the naked eye, appear in a different light when seen thru the spiritual microscope. For instance his son's convulsion was the work of a genuine holy ghost, while other manifestations of a similar character on the surface are actually the work of the devil. This is one of the hazards of the business the Dr. suggests, but as we said before, every trade has its own peculiar difficulties.

ACCORDING to Chinese news dispatches in the capitalist press, Chiang-Kai-shek, the so-called moderate militarist has issued a death warrant for Michael Borodin, the Russian adviser to the Hankow Nationalist government. Fortunately Chiang is up against the same problem that confronts a hunter. He must first catch his hare. Reports have it that General Feng and Chiang have entered into an alliance against Hankow, but that Chiang wants to have all labor unions outlawed. This may be true and it may not as far as Feng is concerned, but there is no doubt but Chiang is fully committed to the imperialist program and has turned out to be an implacable and bloody enemy of the Chinese masses.

U. S. Marines Remain In Nicaragua; Will "Supervise" Election

WASHINGTON, June 28. — The Fifth Regiment of United States marines will remain in Nicaragua, according to an announcement of the navy department. The marines will remain at least a year and will "supervise" the 1928 elections for the Nicaraguan presidency.

The remainder of the marines will return to Haiti, San Diago and Quantico in the near future, the navy department stated.

Woman League Asks Freedom for Haiti; Hit U. S. Militarism

Urging that the United States grant independence to the Haitian Republic, a committee of six sent to investigate conditions in Haiti by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom scores the military dictatorship maintained by the United States over the little "republic."

Hitting at the domination of the island by Brigadier General John Russell for the benefit of the sugar interests and National City Bank, the committee in the report of its findings, called "Occupied Haiti," says:

"Since the appointment in 1922 of Brigadier General John H. Russell as high Commissioner of Haiti, no other minister has been appointed. General Russell is, therefore, at the same time representative of the state department, the army and the navy and our occupation consequently is [illegible] military [illegible]

Daily Worker Campaign for Five Thousand New Readers Opens July 1st

In answer to the call for five thousand new readers for The DAILY WORKER, issued by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, the Management Committee has decided to immediately launch an energetic campaign to reach this goal. The campaign for five thousand new readers will open officially July 1st and will last until August 30. Every Party member, every DAILY WORKER reader, and every friend and sympathizer of the Party, is to be mobilized for this campaign.

The Management Committee has further decided to assist the comrades in this drive by making a special offer of the most attractive premiums which will be announced in these columns. The following quotas are assigned to each district and will serve as a basis upon which we will judge the work of each district.

POLICE BESIEGE UNION MINERS' HOUSES

INSULL BUILDING BIG TRUST WITH CHICAGO RAILWAY

Bills Introduced Into Legislature to Start

CHICAGO, June 28.—The history of the financial influence by the Chicago utilities corporations of political corruption and bribery of the law makers, was effectively brought into the open by the famous 1926 primary election slush fund exposure. The Insull utilities corporation which is politicians by outright purchase and industrial corporations, then set out definitely to dominate the elected politicians by outright purpose and it succeeded. It is now preparing to swallow the whole Chicago transportation system and legalize its actions by law.

In the 1926 primaries Insull alone gave $237,935 to influence these elections. Of this the campaign for Frank L. Smith, the chairman of the Illinois Interstate Commerce Commission received $125,000. Brennan, the democratic boss $18,000, and $65,000 went to local Chicago political combines.

It was an established fact that further sums were paid out by Insull, but Insull refused to reveal even to the United States Senate to whom these payments were made.

A complete consolidation of the Chicago traction system has now been proposed in its initial stage in five bills introduced to the state legislature framed by the Insull lawyers.

Army Officials Confess Honolulu Flight Is Just Preparation for New War

HONOLULU, T. H., June 28.—The non-stop flight of Lieuts. Lester Maitland and Albert Hegenberger from California to Hawaii is part of a great war game, army authorities announced today. Theoretically, the big plane is on a mission of attacking a Japanese ship midway between San Francisco and Hawaii.

Under the game being played, the plane will discover its return to the Pacific Coast blocked after dropping its bombs and must continue to Hawaii.

"LABOR FRIENDS" IN LEGISLATURE KILL 8 HOUR LAW

Force Women to Long Workday, Short Pay

CHICAGO, June 28.—For fifteen years a fight has been waged by the various women's organizations and supported by labor (through methods of lobbying) for a law setting a limit of an eight hour workday for women. Once more in this present legislature these efforts have been defeated and in the usual style.

The bill provides an eight hour day, 7 day week, fifty-six hour work week. At present the ten hour law is in effect, passed in 1909 and the bosses advanced the same arguments against the eight hour day as they did prior to 1909 against the decrease to a ten hour day. This bill has been re-introduced so many times and granted so many exceptions for various industries that the eight hour day proposal in itself has become somewhat fictitious. All seasonal industries such as canneries and others were exempted in the proposed bill from an eight hour day restriction during the busy season.

More Women Work.

In Illinois as well as other parts of the country women are employed in industries in increasing numbers. In practically all instances where they perform equal work to the men employed, the wage rate is lower and exploitation is greater. The survey made in the state of Illinois in 1924 shows that in all of the industries 68.09 percent of all women employed work more than eight hours a day.

A Bill Essential to Labor.

Through this long standing fight it has been universally acknowledged by organized labor that the women's eight hour bill is one of prime importance not only from the point of view of health conditions for women, but also as a further step in advance for the labor movement in general. Hence, it has been universally supported, but how?

Prior to every election in the state the State Federation of Labor has made endorsements of candidates who should be elected, the so-called labor friends, and candidates who shall be defeated, the labor enemies. The final vote taken on the women's eight hour bill H B 61 was 74 in favor, 64 against, 8 present but not voting and 4 absent. The vote was short of the constitutional majority required for passage.

How did the so-called labor friends vote? Of those having the endorsement of the Illinois State Federation of Labor three votes against the eight hour bill, four reported themselves present but not voting, two were absent and it will thus be noted that the matter was nicely fixed so that 74 of the worthy lawmakers elected on the capitalist ticket with the labor endorsement could cast their vote in favor and maintain their record but still defeat the bill. The whole affair was pre-arranged. The extensive labor lobbying brought no practical result whatever.

Incidentally four colored legislators voted against the bill, giving as their reason that the action was determined by the attitude of the many trade

KWANTUNG GETS CRUSHING DEFEAT BY NATIONALISTS

Canton Workers Revolt Aids People's Army

HANKOW, June 28.—The Nationalist troops have occupied Ichang, and Yangtse's troops are in flight. This establishes direct railway connection between the Wuhan cities and Chenchow.

Chen Ta-shun, the most powerful Kwangtung general has attacked Klangsi and was repulsed by the third Wuhan army. He has fled to Nanching.

Canton Workers in Revolt.

The fourth Wuhan army has been sent as a punitive column against the Kwangtung province, and has reached the border. The advance of the Wuhan army is assisted by revolts of the Canton workers.

Reports declare that the Chinese of Shanghai refuse to pay extra taxes to meet the military expenditures of foreign troops. They declare: "No taxation without representation." Since the Chinese pay most taxes they demand municipal representation.

SHANGHAI, June 28. — Despite numerous and unsubstantiated rumors about a halt in the advance of the Nationalists, the imperialist powers continue to rush troops, planes and tanks to Peking and Tientsin.

A detachment of 500 U. S. marines, accompanied by five planes, has landed at Haingho, situated between Tientsin and Taku. It is reported that an American aviation base will be established there. The force at Haingho will be increased by the addition of a thousand marines and twelve airplanes from Shanghai.

It is expected that the Nationalist government will send a note to the United States protesting against the establishment of an aviation headquarter at Hsingho.

Chiang Suffers Defeat.

LONDON, June 28.—The Chinese expeditionary armies under General Chiang Kai-shek have met with a severe reverse in the neighborhood of Hsuchowfu, suffering 30,000 casualties, most of whom were killed, according to dispatches from Shanghai.

Sun Chuan-fang, whom Chiang Kai-shek defeated before Shanghai, attacked Hsuchowful in force. Chiang Kai-shek, after four days of desperate fighting, was compelled to evacuate his position and retire in the direction of Pengpu, representing a loss of 30 miles of territory.

Announce New Slash In Actors' Salaries

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 28. — Report of an additional "cut" of 5 per cent in motion picture studio payrolls startled minor employees of the film plants today when it was said the Fox Film Company had taken the first step in this direction.

Last week film producing companies announced a reduction of 10 per cent in the salaries of all stars, directors and high priced executives.

Report Daudet Visiting Fascisti Heats Franco-Italian Crisis a Little

ROME, June 28.—A report was printed today by the Popolo D'Italia that Leon Daudet, leader of the French Royalists, had arrived in Italy by airplane. Daudet was arrested after he had barricaded himself in the office of Nationalist newspaper L'Action Francais in Paris and taken to Sante prison to serve three months for libel. He was released several days ago when a royalist friend hoaxed the prison authorities by pretending to be a government official with a pardon.

PARIS, June 28.—The Poincaire cabinet today decided to stand or fall on the questions raised by the liberation from prison of Leon Daudet. They refused to answer any questions and received a vote of confidence, 350 to 185.

The bad feelings existing already between Italy and France are made a little worse by Italian celebration over the Daudet stratagem, which the French non-royalist bourgeoisie regards as a dirty trick on a government that was always friendly to the reaction.

Chicago Kuomintang Votes Aid to Hankow; Brands Chiang Traitor

CHICAGO, Ill., June 28.—"Support the Hankow government," was the slogan in a unanimous resolution passed at its last meeting by the Chicago Branch of the Kuomintang held June 24th, 2 P. M.

Previous to this meeting the stand of the Chicago Kuomintang branch was for neutrality, as between the traitor Chiang Kai-shek and the Hankow government. After a thorough discussion, the stand of neutrality was withdrawn and definite, out-and-out support given to the policies and program of the Hankow government.

Bitter denunciation of Chiang Kai-shek and his selling-out to the imperialists marked the discussion of the proposed change in policy. There were no speakers against the resolution.

"The Chicago branch of the Kuomintang," reads the resolution, "from henceforth gives its undivided and enthusiastic support to the Hankow government."

After the passage of the resolution rousing cheers were given for the Hankow government, and the Kuomintang of China.

ANGLO-JAPANESE ALLIANCE RISES AT NAVAL MEET

Washington Sees War Threat in Pacific

GENEVA, June 28.—In spite of their comical efforts to conceal their real feelings deep pessimism pervades the American delegation because of the announcement by Japan that it joins Britain in its determination to raise the question of capital ships at the naval conference which would be a violation of the Washington agreement not to open discussion of such ships until 1932, ten years after the close of the conference called by the United States under the Harding administration.

Americans On Defensive.

The American delegation is on the defensive inasmuch as they realize that the failure of the conference will have political repercussions in the elections of 1928 and would place the Coolidge administration at a disadvantage. So determined are the Americans to conceal the failure that there are indications that the Americans, rather than break up the conference, would eventually agree to discuss the age limit of battleships, pointing out nevertheless that they consider such discussions useless since any agreement reached here would be subject to revision in 1932 when a conference will be held with Italy and France present. The Americans would maintain that the parties to the original Washington arms treaty would have to make a definite arrangement before any capital ship replacements could be laid down. This would postpone actual naval construction, under any provisional agreement that might be reached here, for at least four years.

Meanwhile the technical delegates to the conference have agreed, subject to ratification by the chiefs of the respective delegations, that all surface craft under 600 tons burden, unless designed for a speed greater than 24 knots an hour, and unless armed with heavier than four 6-inch guns, shall not be subject to limitation, which leaves this class just as it is now.

The maximum tonnage of submarines not subject to limitations has not yet been decided upon, but the American delegates are making efforts to limit all submarines, down to at least 500 tons register. The Japanese delegates believe that all submarines of under 700 tons should be exempt from limitations.

The question of aircraft carriers of under 10,000 tons, which the Americans want to place within the limitation classifications, and which the Japanese want to remain unlimited, has been reserved for future discussion.

Vesta Company Gunmen Stone Children

Miners Still Fight for Drinking Water

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., June 28. — Evidently despairing of getting enough scabs to work at a dollar and a half less per day than the union scale, the Vesta Coal Co. is trying to provoke, club and hound its former union miners into its now non-union mines. They surround whole villages and prohibit men from leaving house to picket.

Mr. Joe Edwards, vice president of the company, which is owned by the union-hating Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., has called for additional recruits to his force of coal and iron police, and already gunmen from the gang haunts of the cities are on their way to enforce his edicts

Mass Picketing.

On Monday the 20th about 500 union miners from the Vesta No. 5 and No. 4 mine decided to picket Vesta No. 6, the last mine the company has tried to open and run non-union.

The sheriff of Washington county, hearing of this, placed his whole force of deputies at the command of Mr. Mussler, the superintendent of Vesta No. 6. The superintendent also had 25 members of the Pennsylvania state constabulary ("the Cossacks") at his orders, and 28 coal and iron police, who are company paid guards, uniformed and given power to arrest by the state.

The sargeant in charge of the state police held a conference with the mine superintendent, and then led his Cossacks into an attack on the miners, to

PIONEERS REACH LENINGRAD; DEFY ENGLISH GOV'T

British Children Come Without Passports

(Special Cable to Daily Worker)

LENINGRAD, June 28. The delegation of Young Pioneers who left England without passports because the tory government had refused to permit them to visit the Soviet Union arrived here today on the Soviet steamer Yushar, headed by MacKellon, Young Communist from Glasgow. Accompanying the delegation is the wife of Comrade Gallagher, a member of the Central Executive Committee of the British Communist Party. Leningrad Pioneers have arranged a grand welcome for the delegation.

Members of the delegation stated that they had come to the Soviet Union to become better acquainted with the life and achievements of the Pioneers of the U. S. S. R. MacKellon, who is directing the delegation, stated in an interview that he had received a passport by mere chance from the local authorities while the other children had left without passports, having firmly decided to disregard the action of the tory government.

To Study U. S. S. R. Pioneers.

The children do not believe that they will be barred from England, but believe that the authorities will take some action against them on the pretext that they missed school.

The delegation proposes to stay long enough to become thoroly acquainted with the work of the Soviet Pioneer organizations. The development of the Pioneer movement in England has been retarded, they believe, by the lack of experienced leaders. The delegation hopes to learn much from the Soviet Pioneers.

Bring MacManus Remains.

The delegation will stay in Leningrad for several days and will then leave for Moscow. The steamer Yushar, on which the Pioneers arrived, carried the remains of Arthur MacManus, late member of the Executive Committee of the Communist International. According to MacManus' will his remains will be buried in Moscow under the Kremlin wall.

...Plotted to Murder Lenin, Trotsky and Others

...Lenin, Trotsky and others of the Soviet Government were plotted to be murdered by a group of British officials, including two members of the present Cabinet, according to a statement issued by the Soviet Government, which is now in possession of many documents revealing the conspiracy, and some sensational arrests.

Joynson-Hicks accused the Soviet Government of espionage (the whole Joynson-Hicks case maintains "unofficial co-operation" with the Tsarist agent Ishkin, as revealed by documents published a few months ago); Austen Chamberlain accused the Soviet Government of anti-British propaganda.

Neither of them quoted a scrap of evidence—apart from a few documents "found" by Chang-Tso-Lin's White Russians.

The Tory blackguards have forgotten the evidence which the Soviet Government possesses against them: concrete and precise; not like their vague generalities. Here is a summary of the activities of the "gentlemanly" British diplomats in 1918, during the time they were supposed to be at peace with Soviet Russia. It is taken from the official report of the Extraordinary Commission:—

Every British worker will recognise the same treachery and double-dealing with which he has to cope in dealing with these gentry at home.

"The All-Russian Extraordinary Commission for Fighting Counter-revolution established the attempts of the British Diplomatic Mission in Russia to enter into relations with some units of the Army of the Soviet Republic, in order to organise the arrest of the Council of People's Commissaries and the seizure of the chief strategic points in Moscow.

"Observation established that a certain agent, Schneidchen, arrived in Moscow from Petrograd at the beginning of August, 1918, with a recommendation to the head of the British Mission, Lockhart. He succeeded in arranging an interview between Lockhart and the commander of one of the Lettish units, whom the British authorities relied upon to effect the arrest of the Council of People's Commissaries.

"The first meeting took place on August 14, at 12:30 p. m.

in Lockhart's private residence, at Flat 24, 18 Hlebny Pereulok, Basmanny Street.

"At this meeting there was a discussion on the possibility in the near future of organising a revolt in Moscow against the Soviet Government, in connection with the British landing of troops in Archangel and Murmansk. Lockhart informed the commander of the Lettish unit that the British Government had at its disposal considerable funds for the purpose of bribing the Lettish troops, and that the British Government was in touch with the Czechoslovak Corps, which was then fighting against the Soviet troops on the Volga front.

"The commander of the Lettish unit was to arrange for the arrest of the Council of People's Commissaries on the day when the British troops should disembark in Archangel and Murmansk.

"The next meeting between Lockhart and the commander of the Lettish unit took place on August 17 at 7 p. m., on the Yauzsky Boulevard. At this meeting the commander of the Lettish unit informed Lockhart of the impossibility of moving troops to Vologda, who might hand over the latter town to the British.

"The possible revolt in Moscow was to be timed for two or three weeks later, i.e., about September 10.

The British were concerned that Lenin and Trotsky should be at one full meeting of the C.P.C. which it was proposed to arrest.

"It was further intended that the State Bank and Central Telegraph and telephone stations be occupied, and martial law proclaimed, with the prohibition of any meetings whatsoever on pain of death, until the British military authorities arrived. There was further talk of arranging, with the help of the higher clergy, national prayers and sermons in support of the coup. The consent of the clergy had been received.

At this meeting, in accordance with Lockhart's promises, the Commander received 700,000 rubles (£70,000) for the organization of the proposed revolt.

"On August 22 there was a further meeting, at which the commander received a further 300,000 roubles (£30,000), and he agreed to go to Petrograd, in order to establish contact with the British military group there and the Russian White Guards organised around it. These negotiations took place on August 29. At this conference contact with Nijni-Novgorod and Tabboff was discussed. . . .

"Arrests which have subsequently been made have disclosed that the main task of the Allied agents, who are scattered throughout the towns of Soviet Russia, and equipped with forged passports, is to make food difficulties more acute, particularly in Petrograd and Moscow.

Plans for the blowing-up of bridges and railway lines with the object of delaying supplies.

"And also for the setting fire to and blowing up of food stores, were being worked out. . . . In connection with all these data, arrests were made in Petrograd and Moscow.

"All the arrested members of the Council of People's Commissaries were to be sent immediately to Archangel. This was the original plan; but shortly Sidney Reilly expressed doubt as to its desirability. He said: 'Lenin possesses a marvellous faculty of appealing to the average man. We can be sure that during the journey to Archangel he will win over the guards, and they will set him free.

'It would be better to shoot Lenin and Trotsky immediately following their arrest.'

"The conspirators used all kinds of methods, throwing up an extensive network of illegal organizations all over Russia, utilising forged documents, and spending vast sums of money on buying over the agents of the Soviet Government. All the work went on under the protection and guidance of British diplomatic representatives.

The All-Russian Extraordinary Commission possesses documents, signed by Mr. Lockhart personally, which would enable the conspirators to enjoy the protection of the British Military Mission in Moscow.

"The conspirators worked out detailed plans for the organization of the Government following the coup. A dictatorship of three was to be set up, special committees appointed in military units, etc. . . .

"Thanks to the loyalty of the Lettish units and the watchfulness of the Extraordinary Commission, this threatening peril has been destroyed for a long time to come." (Latzis' "Two Years of Struggle on the Home Front," 1920.)

COAL CRISIS HERALDS BRITISH DECLINE

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press)

Drastic wage cuts, part time and unemployment for British miners forecast a new crisis in the coal industry, far more serious than England has yet experienced. This is the opinion of men closest to the struggle. Those with greater perspective see British capitalism as a whole facing inevitable decline. The conditions are demonstrating the truth of British Labor's contention that the coal industry and eventually all industry can survive only through drastic reorganization.

England is no longer the industrial center of the world, shipping to markets eager for its products. It is just one, and by no means the strongest, industrial nation fighting for markets already overstocked. Coal is one among the many products of its industrial proletariat for which there is no adequate market. The real trouble is not over-production but a serious decline in exports which now total 52,000,000 tons a year compared with 73,000,000 in 1913.

Conference Meets.

The special delegate conference of the British miners federation, which met June 2 for the first time since the settlement of the 1926 lockout, faced a serious of cuts reducing wages to the minimum in every important area. Miners' wages in South Wales, the leading source of exports, were cut to a level only 28 per cent above prewar compared with 42.2 per cent above following the lockout. Yet in spite of low wages and longer hours some districts are working only 2 and 3 days a week while thousands of miners are altogether unemployed.

Cut-throat competition is the rule with operators forcing the miners to carry the chief burden. The stronger and more efficient companies are driving out the weaker, absorbing the best of them and then turning to fight each other. Typical is the whole-sale revolt to dump coal in foreign markets, especially France, in competition with French, German, Belgian, Dutch and Polish coal.

This trade war has induced the French government to support what amounts to a boycott of English coal. The boycott has taken the form of reductions in railway rates on coal from northern French mines to regions which have always been leading markets for English coal.

Who Boycotts.

"The real author of this boycott," says the Manchester Guardian Weekly, "is, of course, the French coalmining trust. Its instrument is the French government which has control of railway rates. Its mouthpiece is M. Tardieu, minister for public works, who explained in the chamber on April 1 that the immediate object was to reduce imports by land from 6,500,000 to 1,000,000 tons and by sea from 13,500,000 to 8,000,000 tons."

This is aimed primarily at England. France has been getting half its coal imports from England, a third from Germany and the balance from Belgium, Holland and Poland.

The imports from Germany are largely Dawes-plan payments and cannot be cut much, while Belgian coal is imported because it is near and good.

Crisis.

"Circumstances," says the London Daily Herald (labor), "are combining to bring home to the public the fact that once more the country is up against a first-class coal crisis. Last year the miner leaders warned the nation that the so-called settlement of the lockout settled nothing, and the industry was certain to drift to another deadlock. The situation calls for stern action by the nation against the system which has again proved its incompetence. The alternative is the progressive decay of Britain's basic industry, with unrest and conflict as a concomitant provoked by the intolerable suffering of the men engaged in it."

President Herbert Smith of the miners advised the delegate conference "not to talk about the crisis but to prepare."

HONOLULU, FIRST STOP IN THE AMERICAN EMPIRE

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

HONOLULU, T. H., June 28 (FP).—I do not know how much you care about Honolulu. It has its importance as the first step in expansion of the American empire westward. Honolulu is first stop in our empire.

The princesses of Hawaii still keep their titles and social eminence; the natives of Hawaii still keep title to such lands as they have not yet sold, and a position of equality in the islands. It don't cost the American over-lords anything, for the Hawaiians are dying out fast. A charming, well-built, languorous people, expert in swimming, surf-riding—but very inexpert in modern gospel of work. They didn't need to work until the white man came. But now Americans have brought up their lands for sugar and pineapple plantations, and the price of real estate has risen beyond the purse of the original owners.

One Third in Army.

About one-third of all the Americans in Hawaii are attached to the army—12,000 soldiers. All the Americans together are only some 30,000.

The Japanese are the real population of the islands. Though forbidden now to come to Hawaii, since it is a part of the United States, they form over 40 per cent of the total population. With Chinese and Koreans they are much more than half. They came in as coolies to work on the sugar and pineapple plantations. They preferred to work "on contract," taking a definite job of piece work and putting men, women and children at the job. Then they rapidly saved money and became small capitalists, barbers, chauffeurs, jitney-owners. Tens of thousands still work on plantations, but on the whole the coolie class is to new being filled by Filipinos in ever-increasing hordes imported for contract-labor.

Japanese Can't Vote.

The only Japanese who vote are those who have been born on the Hawaiian land, and citizens by land. The Japanese are not citizens and have no chance of American citizenship. The Japanese, with 40 per cent of the population, have some 5 per cent of the votes.

As for capital versus labor? Well, the land is owned by American corporations; the small middlemen are Chinese and Japanese; the coolie laborer is increasingly Filipino, with a certain number of Orientals. The governor of the islands and the supreme judges are appointed by our friend Coolidge directly. Isn't that enough? Do you wonder that American capitalism call it the Paradise of the Pacific?

Cocksure Exploiters.

I stand somewhat in awe of the ability of American capitalism. It is so sure of itself; it no longer worries about unreliability of its labor any more than about unreliability of its machines. It takes pride in the best machines and keeps them oiled and tended; it takes pride also in the regimentation of its labor and keeps up schools and clinics and kitchens with proper food.

It discards ruthlessly but dispassionately all antiquated machinery or unadaptable human beings. The Hawaiians don't fit it; they die out.

It is much easier to conquer Hankow by proclamations and special dispatches than by military power. Of course Chiang will have the ye...ships of the imperialist powers at his service. They are not now in Hankow, Shanghai and other ports for nothing. Chiang is not fighting to free the Chinese masses from the imperialists. He is merely fighting the northern militarists in order to step into their shoes. He may have temporary success, but it will be short-lived. The hundreds of millions of Chinese workers and peasants will be freed and Chiang that stand in their way will have to go.

PEASANT REVOLTS IN PHILIPPINES CRUELLY CRUSHED

Natives Hail Report of Wood "Resignation"

By HARVEY O'CONNOR

WASHINGTON, June 28. (FP).—The day General Wood resigns as governor of the Philippines will be celebrated as a national Filipino holiday second only to Independence Day when we get it."

So commented Vicente G. Bunuan, director of the Washington office of the Philippine Commission for Independence on reports that Wood is about to resign after six years of what Filipino papers describe as a dictatorship.

"Political conditions in the Islands are bound to be improved," Bunuan added. "for they could hardly be worse. The Filipino people have been given a lesson in despotism, but they like democracy better than ever. When will the American Congress redeem its promise and give it to us?"

Poor Health Bunk.

General Wood is scheduled to confer with President Coolidge in the Black Hills and may at that time offer his resignation, pleading poor health. The administration will be relieved if the resignation is proferred, because Wood's removal will take the sting out of the attacks Senator Burton K. Wheeler and other congressmen who have visited the Philippines this spring are expected to make on Wood's regime in the next Congress.

The only fly in the ointment the Filipinos perceive in Wood's withdrawal is the annual pension of 50,000 pesos ($25,000) which they will have to pay out of their taxes to him.

Senator Wheeler was given ovations in Manila and other Island ports during his recent visits, according to Manila papers. He won enthusiastic Filipino support when he withdrew from a dinner given in his honor by Eugene A. Gilmore, vice governor-general, when attacks were made on the capacity of the people to govern themselves. "We are always hearing," he declared later, "of the need of educating the Filipinos. Evidently they are not the only ones who need education. There are Americans here who have been away from home so long they have forgotten the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and the American Constitution."

Wheeler hit vigorously at Wood's proposal to sell the publicly-owned sugar centrals in the province of Negroes to Hallgarten & Co., New York bankers. The centrals' debts to the Philippine National Bank can be paid off in five years, he said, and then the refineries will be the property of the people, instead of foreign exploiters.

"Java is a lesson for the Filipinos," President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine Senate told audiences as he escorted Wheeler on his swing through the islands. Manila papers took up the significant utterance to use in headlines. Java has been the scene of recent agrarian revolts against the Dutch rulers.

Sugar Starts Revolt.

That the revolt of Flor Intrenchcrade, the mad emperor of the province of Negroes, was no mere fanatical religious outbreak is attested in reports in native papers. The uprising had all the characteristics of a peasants' revolt, with landlords flogged, plantations taken over and...mense profits. With an annual output expected within a few years of 5,000,000 tons, sugar is seen as even more important than the prospective rubber development. Cuban planters allied with New York banking firms are already using their influence to have Congress raise a tariff against Philippine sugar.

"British" Trade Union Laws in Norway

By ARTHUR HAKKEMO.

OSLO, Norway, June 10 (By Mail).—The suggestions first published in 1924 for the introduction of compulsory courts of arbitration and penal legislation against the trade unions, have now been made law by the Norwegian Storting. According to these enactments, a council of five, appointed by the government, will have authority to establish the details of wages, working hours, etc., which means that it will be able to decree, at least approximately, the wage conditions demanded by the employers.

If the workers organized in trade unions fail to submit to the verdict, i.e., to the lower wage rate, they fall under the prescriptions of the penal law, i.e., the trade unions are responsible for any such illegal strike and are exposed to all sorts of economic and penal reprisals, "if they cannot prove that they are not to blame or if they have not employed all means at their disposal to prevent the breach or the continuation of the unlicensed conditions or the illegal stoppage of work."

Fine Strikers.

If the trade unions cannot prove such an attitude or manner of procedure, paragraph 40 of the new law enacts that any one participating in a resolution to "effect, continue, subsidize, or approve of" such an illegal strike, and any one "inciting such a strike, or supporting it, or collecting funds therefor or distributing funds collected for the effectuation or continuation of the strike," shall be liable to fines ranging from 5 to 25,000 crowns or to imprisonment not exceeding three months or to both.

The same penalties apply to those that threaten the freedom of the workers, i.e., the freedom of the blackleg.

These are the main points of the law which has already been passed by the entire bourgeois bloc. An additional paragraph is still in preparation. It was suggested by the Conservatives and the Peasant Party and aims at making the libelling of strike-breakers in general (even in the case of a "legal" strike) and the publication of the names of strike-breakers punishable by imprisonment not exceeding one year. This paragraph is at present under discussion by the Parliamentary Committee for Public Justice.

The new paragraphs already passed are highly characteristic of the entire trend of present-day legislation. For they enact that, firstly, the trade unions shall be bound to report to the government not only their number of members but also all the circumstances connected with the members in question; while, secondly, the new laws are to apply not only to the existing trade unions but also to any groups or executive committees formed by members of the trade unions; and, thirdly, the so-called "working regulations," which were hitherto left to the purposes of an arbitration body, may in case of need give the authorization of a lockout, i.e., a counter-measure on the part of the employers.

Slash Wages.

How is it that just this year should see the passage of new reactionary trade union legislation in Norway? Firstly, as a result of the situation in Norwegian class relations. After a lockout of several months in four industries, the Norwegian employers were still unable to come to terms with their workers, and the bourgeoisie began to reckon with the prospect of the workers being supported by the trade unions of the Soviet Union. The effectuation of the wage reductions (by 17 per cent) in the year 1925 entailed six lengthy lockouts. A repetition of the conflicts on such a scale would have endangered the stability of the currency and other achievements of the capitalists. The employers found themselves unable to carry out a further wage reduction by 15 per cent on their own account, and they therefore had recourse to the legislative means of their labor-exploiting state, the enactments of which is at present in the hands of the Conservative Party.

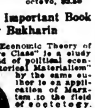
Open Shop Legalized.

During the social semi-pacifism of the former Liberal government, the employers' association was opposed to the compulsory arbitration law, as was also the Conservative Party, but in view of the readiness of the workers to fight they could find no other solution of the conflict despite many attempts in various directions, the employers and their government have had recourse to the old panacea of the Liberals, which they did all the more readily as they were in a position to combine the passing of this law with the establishment of the "stabilising" enactments of the notorious penal law, embodying their sacred principles of the "liberty of work" and the like.

See British Hand.

Added to these reasons, however, there is the political influence of foreign, and especially the British capital in Norway. Just as British capital "slightly" influences the joint-stock companies of the Norwegian aluminium, paper, pulp and other industries, the policy of Norwegian government is largely swayed by the "pacific" power of British Conservative governments in its campaign against the "menace" of labor by the trade unions. The Norwegian press rested the case of Baldwin, though naturally without reference to the

New Student Group Ready to Sail for The Soviet Union



One section of the American Student Delegation to Russia has already sailed and another is about to embark, the managing committee announces. The first section was organized by the Student Council of New York. Its members are nearly all representatives of student organizations to which they will report on the trip.

Samuel Cahan, chief advisor to the delegation, is a member of the Syracuse University journalism department. He stated before leaving with the first group that the visitors will be taking interpreters and will be permitted to visit any factories and social institutions they choose. The Central Student Bureau of Russia will provide additional interpreters and guides.

The complete delegation of 75 will split into four groups in Moscow for travel in the provinces. One section will study education; another political structure and minor nationalities; a third industry; and the fourth will cross Siberia to China and return by Pacific.

Many workers are awaiting themselves of the opportunity offered by World Tourists Inc., 41 Union Square, New York, to see Russia this summer. The cost of the six weeks trip is $575, including passage both ways tourist on the Swedish-American Line. The U. S. S. R. Society of Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries will aid World Tourists in Russia.

Economic Theory of the Leisure Class
by Nikolai Bukharin

Nikolai Bukharin, leader of the Communist International, is the leading Marxian theoretician in the world today. He has done a great deal of scientific work in the field of sociology and economics, and has published a number of outstanding contributions in these fields.

The "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is one of his most important theoretical writings to be translated for the first time into English. Just as Marx has studied the theoretical system of the classical economists (Smith, Ricardo, etc.), Bukharin tackles the dominant bourgeois political economy known as the Austrian School (Menger, Boehm-Bawerk, Von Wieser, Clark, etc.). In a brilliant style and with lucid Marxian reasoning, he analyses the theories of Marginal Utility, Value and Profit of the leading bourgeois economists, showing that the Austrian School is governed by the principle of psychology of the rentier, the coupon-clipper par excellence.

Another Important Book by Bukharin

While "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is a study in the form of a popular economy, "Historical Materialism" is the same author's contribution to the field of sociology. This book is already become the standard text book and is considered one of the outstanding Marxian classics. It is the only book available where the materialist method is applied to an analysis of the various social processes.

Life's Cheap On 50 Cents an Hour

(By Worker Correspondent.)

The factory floor the Wright Shoe is scattered, with shade (many) motes, with poorly lighted watering. Their here's passed. Monday in New York, but they aren't as happy as they look.

Most of them are skilled mechanics, and they make as low as 50 cents an hour, and only a few of them getting as high as 60 cents an hour.

Added to that is the lack of steady employment. They never know when they will be laid off for a few days, few weeks, or even permanently. They aren't sure of being able to earn enough to live on, and the married fellows are doubly hard against it.

And now on top of it all comes a speed-up system designed to increase the productive capacity of each man, and which automatically puts some of the men out of work because a slack season is on just now.

The men are unorganized and are helpless in the face of the boss's offensive against them.

Efforts are being made by the Machinists' Local 186 here to show the men how necessary it is for them to organize, and the "Wright Propeller," issued by the Communist Party nucleus in the shop every month, is also steadily urging the men to band themselves together and do something to resist these steady blows by the bosses.

Wright Motor Boss Uses Bonus as Bait To Speed Up Worker

(From the Wright Propeller.)

In our last issue we wrote about the bonus our bosses are trying to put over on us. They've promised to give us 50% of the wage rate for all we produce above the standard set by the time study.

At first glance this looks good, doesn't it? In reality, however, the whole bonus idea is simply a clever stunt—from the company's point of view—to lower the standards of the workers by holding up a fishy bait that looks like the promise of more dough.

But instead of getting extra money, what we really get is a reduction in pay. Because the bonus is handed out as a "reward" for speeding up. And speeding up means that wage rates are decreased since we get the same rate even tho we produce more in the same period of time.

The bosses are constantly on the lookout for new ways to exploit the workers, to get more and more out of them for the company's profit. We must be always on the watch for these indirect schemes to reduce wages and increase the speed-up. The bonus is one of these schemes. We must show the boss clearly that such bait will not tempt us.

Anglo-Japan Alliance Being Revived

tri-partite naval conference—and the fact that Japan is supporting her in that attitude—has led Washington officialdom to strongly suspect that the far-famed Anglo-Japanese alliance is being resurrected at Geneva.

This alliance, a prickly thorn in British-American relations for many years, was supposedly killed and buried at the Washington conference in 1921. It was to secure the abrogation of this anti-American partnership that the American government entered into a treaty with England, Japan and France for the mutual protection of each other's possessions and interests in the Pacific.

The Dead is Arising.

For six years the Anglo-Japanese alliance has apparently remained dead. But the sequence of events at Geneva for the past ten days has about convinced officials here that it is emerging from its grave to again confound American statesmanship.

First, Great Britain has virtually renounced the naval parity with the United States, which she so eagerly accepted at Washington. She insists at Geneva that "Britain's control of the seas is vital to Britain's continued existence," while the first Lord of the Admiralty, W. C. Bridgeman, bluntly informed the American delegates that "naval equality for America is simply a luxury and a political by-play."

War Clouds In Pacific.

War between the United States and Great Britain, recognized as inevitable, though not formerly considered imminent, has been brought immeasurably nearer by the action of Japan in going over to the British side of the controversy at Geneva. It is plain now that the struggle for control of the Pacific will see the United States and whatever allies it can muster on one side and Britain, Japan and their allies on the other side in the next great world upheaval.

Official Washington, or that part of it remaining at Washington, is aware of the fact that a great armament race will take place and they are desperately striving to build their political fences in an effort to corral congress behind the military program that will feature the next session.

Chi. Capmakers Will Start Forty Hour Week On First of Next Month

CHICAGO, June 28.—The capmakers of Chicago will on July 1st begin the forty hour week. The agreement with the bosses stipulates that they will work forty hours per week, providing the New York capmakers who fought the issue, actually commence the short week. There are a few rumors to the effect that the bosses, who are organized in an association, will take advantage of the slackness in the trade at the present time, and will refuse to carry out the agreement. But among the workers there is a determination to fight it out if necessary. Let us fight for the forty hour week with no reduction in wages in all trades.—A Cap-

Needle Trade Defense

The gigantic open air arena of the Coney Island Stadium, 5th Street and Surf avenue, will be the scene of the dual operatic and concert offering of the Joint Defense Committee, Cloakmakers and Furriers, Saturday night, July 16. Borodine's world famous "Prince Igor" presented by Alexis Koslioff, premier danseuse of the Metropolitan Opera House assisted by his ballet corps of 50 and 100 musicians of the New York Symphony Orchestra conducted by Ernu Rapee, internationally-acclaimed musical virtuoso will be the principal attraction, Rita La Porte, solo dancer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Victoria Youngman, and Alice Delano Weekes, formerly of the Capitol Theatre Ballet, will be presented in the principal roles.

This affair is being given for the purpose of raising funds for the defense and relief of the imprisoned furriers and cloakmakers, and also for their wives and children. A great success will be a tremendous blow against bureaucracy.

Ludwig Landy, campaign manager of the Joint Defense Committee expects more than 30,000 people to attend the concert this year. His estimate is prompted by the enormous success of last year's concert at the same place given for the benefit of the children of the textile strikers in Passaic.

This is the second consecutive year that Koslioff is appearing at the Stadium for strikers' benefit. Last summer he presented Rimsky-Korsakoff "Scheherezade." This year the ever popular "Prince Igor" will be one of the main features. Terpsichorean and ballet divertisements by celebrated artists will complete this unusually large program at popular prices.

Elaborate orchestral selections by the greatest composers of all times will be produced by the New York Symphony Orchestra. Some of them include: Wagner, Richard and Johann Strauss, Tschaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Berilot, Borodine, etc.

Tickets, which are sold at $2 and $1, can be purchased in the office of the Joint Defense Committee, 41 Union Square.

Washington Won't Take Steps to Guard Health In Deadly Negro Slums

WASHINGTON, June 28 (FP).—Tens of millions are to be appropriated by Congress this winter for ornamental structures for the national capital, but not one penny to eradicate Negro slums, if present District policies are carried out. Congress last session in a moment of unwonted emotion passed a law forbidding the renting of alley tenements, occupied for the most part by Negro workers. The District court of appeals found the law unconstitutional and the District commissioners announce they will not appeal the decision to the Supreme Court.

Slimy streams, it was reported to the Federation of Civic Associations, colored, run from sties containing thousands of pigs into a creek which runs through the Negro district. In flood times, the filth spreads over acres of ground, endangering the health of residents. "Shovel the muck back into the creek," Dr. W. C. Fowler, District health official, told protesting Negroes when they complained. In another locality a refuse dump has resulted in several cases of smallpox, but the District refuses to do anything about it.

Whom We Have in Washington

The capitalistic Mr. Hoover has captured Lindbergh. The flyer has announced that his future is in the hands of the Secretary of Commerce, Hoover, the organizer of capitalism. And so Hoover, ever on the qui vive for reinforcements in his lofty fight for the Presidency, presidential campaign in 1928, sets the most popular American of the moment to his private staff.

Hoover is undoubtedly the most powerful man in Washington, now that Secretary Mellon has accomplished his great mission of lowering taxes for the wealthy. Hoover, with his own State Department in the fabulous bureau of foreign and domestic commerce; his control over the radio air lanes secured through the capture of the new federal radio commission, now housed on an entire floor of his commerce building; his gradual conquest of the air through his expanding aeronautical bureau; his quick grabbing of the Mississippi flood limelight from the war and interior departments; his excellent standing with the church people through his Red Cross connections in the flood work and in European reconstruction—Hoover is practically the American government itself.

Hoover Has Machine.

All this in addition to the extensive and fast-growing apparatus of the department of commerce, with representatives in every community and close contacts with every chamber of commerce and commercial club in the country. Washington awards the palm to Hoover as the

The young man who is now the national hero, will also discover that much of his most profitable business, that of carrying air mail, comes to his company through business methods denounced in Washington as among the shadiest yet perpetrated by the Harding-Coolidge boys. Miners Surrounded.

The miners of Vesta No. 6 were unable to join in the picketing because coal and iron police armed with guns and clubs surrounded the miners' houses and prohibited them from leaving their houses.

Two miners, Steve Aregedi and John Thomas were walking down a dark road about 9:30 in the evening a couple of days before this. They were going home from a meeting in Moose Hall. Two coal and iron police arrested them, took them to the company jail, and being joined there by a third, beat them up. The next day the company owned squire fined them a dollar each "for disorderly conduct". Their case is being appealed and they are out on bail now.

Arrest Pickets.

Other recent arrests are those of Joseph Gouonky, John Muha and Steve Blonki, all members of the miners' union Daisytown local. They had been picketing, and two were arrested while talking quietly in a gasoline station while the third was arrested while walking alone down the road. All were held on bonds for "disorderly conduct".

Stone Children.

On June 20 a large touring car with one member of the Vesta Coal Company's coal and iron police in plain clothes and three scabs aboard rushed down the road from Daisytown to Walkertown. The company policeman drove and the scabs bombarded miners' wives and children with rocks, of which they carried a store in the car. Complaints by the women to the state police resulted in no action by the latter.

Still Trying to Get Water.

CASTLE SHANNON, Pa., June 28.—The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co. continues to shut off the water supply of the miners here and at Mollenauer. The miners have protested to the health authorities that such action may result in an epidemic, as they will have to carry their water a considerable distance, and even at that, obtain it from a probably polluted source.

The president of the company, Horace F. Baker, has answered the health officers that the company is determined not to provide water to men who insisted on defying the company's order to work non-union and for a lower wage. "Let the miners boil their water," said Baker to one of the officials, Dr. John Conovor.

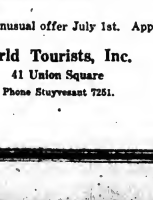
Cappelini At Work.



PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 28.—Summarily settling the strike of 800 coal miners employed at Seneca colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., on terms rather more to the advantage of the company than the men, and arbitrarily calling off the meeting intended for today in this city of the Anthracite Conciliation Board, were the two latest acts of Rinaldo Cappelini, president of District No. 1, United Mine Workers of America.

The conciliation board was to take up the question raised by the Hudson Coal Co., which refuses to recognize that contract enacted between the employers and the Cappelini administration, with the blessing of John Lewis, president of the international administration of the union, calls for a closed shop and the checkoff.

These two questions, on which it is freely charged that Lewis and Cappelini sold out the miners, and purposely made the contract so vague as to give the employers a case, are thus left just where they were and the company disregards the union.

Cappelini yesterday very indignantly denounced anybody who would attempt to start a strike in his district to enforce either of them.

Stop the New Imperialist War Drive!

"Grand Duke" Nicholas predicts the early fall of the Soviet government; Sir Josiah Stamp, the president of the London Midland and Scottish Railway, declares that the Soviet Union is near collapse; the activities of the opposition in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union are again being played up by the capitalist press.

If the tempo of the drive on the Soviet Union does not slacken, it will soon be possible for the Riga, Bucharest and Helsingfors correspondents to turn a few honest pennies with the aid of their typewriters, their imaginations and a supply of postage stamps.

The British agents are busy and all is grist that comes to their mill. The need of the empire is great and nothing, which can be used against the Soviet Union, is too small to be neglected.

The reason for the hectic fervor with which the agents of British imperialism are working is shown well by Walter Duranty's interview with a prominent British military man, now in China, who told him frankly:

"Whether the world knows it or not, it is a fact that the fate of the British empire hangs upon our successful resistance to the Russian . . . action against us in China. If we lose the Chinese game, there will be speedy and serious consequences in the Straits Settlement, Burmah, India and Egypt. We cannot afford to lose."

Here we have the frank statement of a British imperialist. The mere existence of the Soviet Union, the fact that all of the peoples who are oppressed and robbed by British imperialism realize that the Soviet Union is their friend and ally, is enough to induce the British ruling class to plot its destruction.

The drive against the Soviet Union is deadly in its purpose and earnestness and its purpose is WAR.

The workers in all imperialist countries constitute the only force which, when united with the colonial peoples, against whom the war drive is also aimed, can put a stop to this murderous adventure.

No war on the Soviet Union but war against imperialist war is the reply that must be made by the masses if another monstrous bloody sacrifice is not to be placed once more on imperialism's altar.

Important Recent Developments in the Chinese Liberation Struggle.

The defeat of Chiang Kai-shek near Hsu Chow Fu, where it is rumored his army suffered 30,000 casualties, is to be regretted even tho he is an enemy of the Wuhan Peoples' Government. He is fighting the northern militarists and his defeat, if it has actually occurred, serves only to make the immediate military task of the Wuhan government, that of defeating the agents of the imperialist powers in the north, so much more difficult.

But the defeat of Chiang will very likely have important political consequences for the Chinese liberation movement which will discount the military reverse.

If the report of this defeat is confirmed it means that Chiang has suffered the logical consequences of his desertion of the Kuomintang, his attempt to crush the labor movement and to make the liberation movement solely the expression of the wealthier sections of the population. It means that Chiang is no longer in a position to deliver ultimatums to the Wuhan government and must either join with it and support it or be entirely isolated.

The reports of the terms of the alliance between General Feng, who supports the Wuhan government, and Chiang, carried by the New York Times, and which represent it as a move against the Wuhan government, are to be looked upon with the greatest doubt. On the fifteenth of June General Feng declared:

"All troops formerly known under the name Kuominchun have now been reorganized in the Kuomintang army loyal to the principles of Sun Yat Sen. All the troops under my command are now subordinated to the orders of the Central Committee of the Kuomintang and the National revolutionary government and in accordance with the instructions of the Nationalist revolutionary government, they will carry on the struggle against the Mukden troops to the bitter end."

This is a categorical endorsement of the Wuhan government and it is unlikely that, after having been sent to conclude a military alliance with Chiang against the northern militarists, under the instructions of the Kuomintang Central Committee, that Feng has done anything else than carry out his instructions.

The defeat of Chiang, if confirmed, means also that his forces were sufficiently demoralized by his assaults upon the labor unions and peasant organizations and his defiance of the Central Committee, to be defeated by Chang Tsung Chang's troops whose morale is also very low.

It becomes clearer every day that the real center of the liberation movement, its organizing and driving force, supported by the workers and peasants, is the Wuhan government, which works directly under the instructions of the Central Committee of the Kuomintang.

It is inevitable that there should be traitors like General Chiang and that the Chinese masses will have to pay a heavier toll in blood and lives as a result of their defection.

But the Chinese liberation movement is a mass movement and its political party, the Kuomintang, is the leader of the struggle. Like the traitor Chiang who meets defeat and not the Wuhan government in spite of his feverish ultimatums to it, which made it possible for the imperialists and their northern allies to get a breathing spell.

Japan on Defensive With Britain.

Japan's decision, officially communicated from the naval authorities at Tokyo to Admiral Saito and Viscount Ishii, delegates to the Geneva conference, to join Great Britain in its demand for opening of the discussion on capital ships, is not only a decisive rebuke to the Coolidge administration, but is also a blow at the Washington agreements of 1921-22.

It exposes the breakdown of the secret conferences between Hugh Gibson, the chief of the American delegation, and Saito, chief of the Japanese delegation. The entire week has been taken up with the struggle between the two conflicting powers, Britain and America, to win over Japan. The British emerge victorious.

This attack upon the Washington naval treaties is one more step in the building of an international bloc against the mighty power of the United States, which was already perceptible at the Locarno conference in 1925. But it is much more than that. It is indicative of the revival of the Anglo-Japanese alliance against the United States. That the American policy of the "open door" in China is directed toward domination of that country by Wall Street to the exclusion of the other powers hitherto enjoying spheres of influence in China is plain to all but the veriest dolts. It is also evident that American diplomacy behind the scenes at Geneva this past week has been directed toward dividing Britain and Japan, in order first to break British influence in the Far East with the aid of Japan and then to smash Japanese influence. Divide and conquer, that old Machiavellian maneuver, was defeated by the wily Jap imperialists, who prefer to share with Britain and other countries the exploitation of China, rather than abandon Britain and stand alone at the tender mercies of the Wall Street octopus, insatiable in its determination to secure undisputed domination in China, provided, of course, the nationalist movement can be controlled and China can again be brought under the sway of imperialism.

The break-down of the Geneva naval conference is the signal for the greatest armament race in history because it means preparation for a war that will surpass a hundredfold in its destructiveness the frightfulness of the last war.

The collapse of the era of imperialist antagonisms disguised as pacifism must be the signal for closer bonds between the oppressed of the world who have but one common enemy—capitalism.

Lindbergh Visits Wall Street.

Young Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris is still being capitalized by the war mongers. This son of a father who opposed war has become the principal propaganda asset of the imperialists. While in the vicinity of New York he is entertained at the Long Island home of F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war.

On Monday Lindbergh, on invitation of Dwight Morrow, visited the House of Morgan and had luncheon with the staff of that colossus of American parasitism, in whose interest the last world war was fought and on whose behalf the next slaughter of populations is being prepared.

Still disguising its war preparations under the slogans of pacifism, the United States strengthens its air forces under the guise of "commercial aviation." Young Lindbergh is to lend his name to one of these concerns, which will be financed by Wall Street. His refusal of the hundreds of thousands of dollars offered by movie magnates was prompted by guarantees of a far greater amount from the war mongers.

It requires no profound analysis of the tactics of the militarists to understand that planes manufactured in so-called commercial aviation plants are as useful for dropping bombs upon armies, warships, and unarmed populations as planes manufactured under direction of the United States army. In periods of war all such planes can be commandeered by the government for its own purposes, just as the great industrial plants of the steel and automobile trusts have been so reorganized that over night they can be changed from a peace to a war basis.

Not only is the flight of Lindbergh being used to decoy the young manhood and the youth of the land into the imperialist armed forces of the nation where they can be sent to death on foreign battlefields, but his name is also to be used for strengthening the air forces of the country.

He is the tool of Wall Street and every worker should understand his role and refuse to be deceived by the propaganda of our exploiters who want to use us as cannon fodder in order that they may exploit the rest of the world.

THE SILENT CONFLICT

By H. M. WICKS.

WHILE nominally agents of the United States and Great Britain are members of the committee of experts which is to report to the League of Nations council within ten days on the question of the Dawes plan, behind the scenes the United States is trying to induce Japan to abandon its new approach to Britain, a new spectacle is being staged, a new act in the endless conflict, now in the realm of world finance. The outcome of Geneva will probably be the signal for a new race in naval armaments, with the United States expending hundreds of millions to rival the cruiser strength of Britain. To be sure the race will not be confined to naval armaments alone, but will extend to all branches of war preparation. At the same time this naval race is being launched we see the world powers engaged in the most stupendous strides on the field of aviation. This must be supplemented with the work of the war chemist who strives incessantly to concoct more deadly high explosives to be hurled from the aircraft to lay waste not only armies but whole populations. Training camps for adults, boy scout organizations, the army, navy and marine recruiting services engage in the most intensive activity in preparation for the coming struggle.

The tory government of Britain, desperately striving to maintain its position as a world power, has instituted a regime of forgery, provocation and murder. In the Far East both the giant imperialist powers are driven to temporary unity against the advance of the National liberation movement. But even in this unity—this cooperation—each power fights for its own special advantage; the United States insists upon its "open door" policy to blast its way into those spheres formerly dominated by the other great powers, and Britain fights to hold its own. Though assuming diverse forms the conflict rages throughout the world.

THE grandiose strutting of statesmen upon the world stage is only the apparent movement of events. The real movement is the struggle for the mastery of the world's finances. THE REPORT OF CAPITAL to the effect that the United States has become the world's creditor nation, with the export of goods over the import of goods, is only a superficial statement of the case. The United States is creditor nation to the extent that it has become the world's banker. By virtue of the present gold standard, which is the basis of international finance, the United States controls the greater part of the total gold supply. The return of the Soviet Union to the gold standard has added enormously to the gold at American gold. The standard that determines the power of Wall Street measures the indebtedness and dependence of the rest of the world.

Britain with its limited capital desperately strives to achieve financial penetration of the other European countries in order to bring them into its political orbit or to create blocs of creditors to resist the mighty power of Wall Street. Already, through financial and political juggling Britain, taking advantage of the weakness of the franc has been able to wrest Poland from France. But in every conflict with the United States the British exporters of capital lose.

Britain is in a position where she cannot possibly obtain sufficient gold to supply the demand. Her problem is to obtain gold with which to invest in other countries. On the other hand the United States faces the equally pressing problem of trying to prevent the accumulation of a plethora of gold. Gold flows into the United States in such volume and at such velocity that the past week has witnessed a new phenomenon in the entire history of finance. While the tri-partite naval conference was deadlocked at Geneva the United States was doing its best to ward off or deflect a movement of Gold from Europe into the American bank reserves. To achieve this required as much engineering in the financial world as is required in other fields to divert into harmless channels the raging waters of the Mississippi. The Federal Reserve of the United States, in order to prevent a dangerous influx of gold resorted to a daring financial manoeuver, blazed new trails in international banking, according to the financial experts of the capitalist press.

Vast as are the ramifications of American finance capital in European, African, Asiatic and South and Central American countries, the enormous surplus produced by the workers who slave in industries dominated by Wall Street accumulates too fast to be disposed of through ordinary channels. Hence the unparalleled financial action of the United States during the past week.

ON the other hand England faces a steady export demand for gold and it is feared that the reserve supply in the Bank of England will have to be broken into in order to meet the demand. Part of the new gold that arrived recently in the London market went to France through an underhanded system of buying thru secret agents in Britain. Some of the new gold went to India and the remainder to Hungary. The selling of this gold in the open market was bitterly resented by the Bank of England. It raised such a howl over the transaction in which French agents participated that the Bank of France has agreed to arrange further gold purchases with Bank of England in order not to disturb the London money market. At the same time France is trying to obtain some of the United States gold supply by offering industrial securities. The difficulties encountered by the Poincare government in stabilization of the franc force the bankers of France who carry on international trade to purchase gold bullion the commodity whose bodily form is described by Marx as "the immediate social incarnation of human labor in the abstract." Wall Street, which has come to the rescue of France on previous occasions, is anxiously awaiting the opportunity for further inroads upon the industrial structure of that country.

With its limited resources Britain is desperately striving to secure a dominant position in Germany, but is being gradually eliminated there. In spite of the refusal of the London market of New York by the Berlin municipality for its new $25,000,000 loan, the German bankers declare that Germany must borrow predominantly from the United States. Municipal and state loans are guarantees that the capitalists investing in them have a claim on the taxation of such governmental units forever and they continue to realize interest from the loans long after the original capital has been dissipated in projects for which they were issued.

Although temporarily a means of absorbing surplus capital the investments in European industrial and state bonds soon turn into new sources of surplus and the mountain of wealth piles ever higher, raising in a still more acute form the problem of disposing of the surplus.

It is this exact economic problem that drives the American imperialists relentlessly forward on their campaign to subdue the whole world to their will. The necessity for export of capital, the desire born of necessity to exploit the whole world is, after all, the real movement that impels the diplomatic lackeys of Wall Street in all their negotiations whether at Geneva, face to face with the agents of other imperialist powers, or forging state documents in Mexico, or ravaging Nicaragua, or maneuvering for advantages in China.

Great Britain, before the world war the leading imperialist power of the world, is engrossed in the struggle on the defensive. Her star of empire is growing dimmer. On every hand she is fighting to maintain what once was conceded by all to be hers. She will never completely succumb to the mighty power of Wall Street without a fight.

It is for the security of the ruling cliques that the working class of the two countries eventually will be called upon to fight in order to determine which set of looters will plunder shall be victorious, when the last words of the pompous lackeys of Wall Street and Lombard Street have become inaudible in the roar of cannon and the shriek of shrapnel.

The Battle in New York Needle Trades

By I. JEROME.

DRIVE HIM OUT!

A dingy synagogue somewhere between Stanton and Rivington Streets. Dusk. The congregation is assembling for the afternoon prayer. Little knots in conversation. Petty traders, grocers, push-cart peddlers. Skrawny Jews with goatees. Some with prosperous bellies. Frail, ascetic Jews. Types of the marriage-broker, of the merchant of nothing-in-particular, types of the saintly Talmudist.

The prayer-service subside. The service-leader advances to the altar. Reb Leib. A patriarchal Jew, in his sixties, with a flowing grey beard. A grocer turns to a merchant of nothing-in-particular: "A worker, ha? a cloak presser, and such a scholar." "Yes," comes the answer, "a fine old man. I wish my son had half his learning."

Reb Lieb lays his hand on the prayer-stand. All eyes are fixed on him reverently. With lyrical devotion he intones the opening verse:

"And He, the Merciful One, will forgive iniquity."

Suddenly—a commotion. A thickset Jew rushes forward. He points an accusing finger at Reb Lieb. "He is a communist! He doesn't believe in God! He won't register in Sigman's union. Drive him out!" The cry is taken up by others. Some protest. But the synagogue is in the hands. The sexton pounds in vain for order. Red Leib looks round at the congregation in deep bewilderment. Someone shouts: "He is an apostate!" The uproar grows. Hands menace him. Hands abield him. He stands before the people old and tragic-eyed. A friendly hand leads him away from the altar.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

T'a other night there was a delightful performance conducted by workers' various trades and occupations for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER. During the day they toil as tailors, shoemakers and bakers; they stand on the picket line. At night they attend meetings and join in the struggle for a better life for the working class.

This splendid affair took place in the Dwellers' Building, cooperatively owned and operated by the United Workers' Cooperative Association of the Bronx.

It was an inspiring gathering of men and women, living under the vast roof of comradeship. Thay sang and laughed together, smiled happily and danced. During the end of the evening the good news came: "The furriers have won their strike in Newark." This was of course received with great enthusiasm and prolonged cheering by several hundred workers. The affair netted a fair sum for our fighting paper, The DAILY WORKER.—M. KELMANSKY.

American Imperialism

By CY OGDEN.

The Weekly Survey of the Department of Commerce for June 20th contains an article on the "Growing Importance of the Caribbean Markets," which helps to explain why American marines are vacationing in that part of the world. The article deals only with the import and export trade and does not touch on investments which are an important factor of American imperialism in this region.

According to the statistics given here, the total trade in 1926 between the United States and this territory (which includes the West Indies, Central America, and the northern coast of South America) amounted to $854,050,889, excluding Porto Rico which is an American possession, and over $1,029,000,000 if Porto Rico is included. Of this latter total about 566 millions were imports and about 468 millions were exports. There has been an increase in imports over 1925 but a decrease in exports. The market depression in Cuban sugar, in Porto Rico, and in some of the other islands during the past year is responsible for decreases in both imports and exports to those regions. The import losses were, however, more than balanced by the rapid development of the petroleum industry in Venezuela and Colombia, most of the oil being shipped to the United States.

Petroleum, sugar and tobacco are the main raw materials that this section supplies to the United States. In return it absorbs machinery and manufactured products. The department of commerce urges American business men to export their products to this region and speaks of the "desirability of a more intense development of this area." It points out that American exports in 1926 were one and a half times greater than they were before the war and states that American business "occupies a favored position in the Caribbean market and has long enjoyed a large percentage of the total trade."

Several reasons are given for the predominance of American exports in the Caribbean, among which are the "network of steamship lines radiating from the United States," which facilitato trade, the closeness of the territory to the United States and "the fact that American manufacturers are large scale producers of the commodities which must be purchased." Other factors NOT mentioned in the report are the control over the economic life of the Caribbean by American banks and the marines and warships which make this control effective.

The recent development of the petroleum on the northern coast of South America has helped to spur on the enthusiasm of American capital for making these parts of the world "safe for democracy." The developments in Venezuela are somewhat older than those in Colombia and are now producing on an average of 33 million barrels of oil a year.

Professional Patriots

"On several occasions, efforts have been made to point out to the War Department the impropriety and unfairness of the attacks the military men have been making. More than a year ago, a delegation called on Secretary Weeks, following a speech by General Fries at Kansas City in which he declared that the purpose of the National Council for Prevention of War is to establish Communism in this country."

On the committee were such people as Charles A. Lyman, of the Farmers' National Union; Marian Pankhurst, of the National League of Women Voters; Ethel Smith, of the National Women's Trade Union League; Frances F. Bernard, of the American Association of University Women (now dean of Smith College); and Mrs. Henry Fenimore Baker, president of the National War Service Legion. Secretary Weeks gave them to understand that General Fries would be required to mind his own business. . . . Shortly after this the spider-web chart appeared.

What happened to the spider-web chart we have already indicated. It was only an unusually ludicrous specimen of the work of the professional patriots in the army cooperating with the professional civilian fascists and chauvinists.

Another army man who recently joined in the attack is Lieutenant Colonel George Chase Lewis, of the 95th division of infantry stationed at Oklahoma City. He attempted to defame John Nevin Sayre, vice-chairman of the Committee on Militarism in Education, and to prevent his getting a hearing when he spoke at the University of Oklahoma in December, 1926.

Colonel Lewis wrote and telegraphed the president of the university describing Mr. Sayre as more dangerous than an avowed Communist. He warned the president that Sayre would speak for a congressional measure which would cut off appropriations for the stationing of army officers to give military training in colleges and high schools. He tried to connect Sayre with communists in the behalf of a fair trial and free speech for communists arrested under a criminal syndicalist law. He used as his authority for his information about Sayre the late R. M. Whitney's "Reds in America." He closed his letter to the President, "I trust you will be able to curtail pernicious activities at Norman" (the university town). Finally, when he was unable to prevent Mr. Sayre's meeting he came to it, made some preposterous charges against the speaker, failed absolutely to substantiate a single one.

Out of this incident developed a correspondence between Mr. Sayre and Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, in which Mr. Davis declared that Colonel Lewis was expressing "personal views" and that the War Department could not and would not interfere with the practice of such officers in signing their full military signatures to assaults on liberals and persons working against military training in the schools.

In reply to this position Mr. Sayre wrote to Mr. Davis on December 30, 1926. He cited various attacks by army men and closed as follows:

"If the gentlemen to whom I have referred were all expressing only individual views as individual citizens, but yet permitted the use of their titles as 'Lt.-Col. U. S. Infantry,' 'Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War,' and 'Assistant Secretary of War,' how in the world can the average citizen tell when they are speaking for the War Department and when it is only for themselves?"

A fair number of the attacks, as in the case of Colonel Mumm above mentioned, have come from titled military men connected with the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States and the Military Training Camps Association of the United States. The former is an unofficial organization, covering the country, with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Colonel Fred B. Ryons is on duty in charge of the Reserves, though the members of the association are not in the service. Hence the War Department cannot be held accountable for statements made by these officers and their frequent and irresponsible attacks on persons working for peace and other "subversive movements." However, it is known that many of their speeches are prepared by publicity men on the staff of the military intelligence service of the War Department. It has also been discovered that War Department franked envelopes have been illegally used by members of this association in sending out their propaganda against the peace societies and persons connected with the movement for civil liberty. The weighty titles carried by these men often give to the lay mind the impression that their statements are authoritative and official. Hence they have been a powerful factor in the anti-liberal propaganda of the professional societies with the officials of which they have naturally cooperated. The association publishes from its national headquarters "The Reserve Officer," which has been full of attacks on the Committee on Militarism in Education and other peace bodies. A considerable amount of the military intelligence work of the War Department is carried on by members of this association and they are expected to exert a generally "educating influence" for heavy military appropriations and against all persons and organizations daring to question the wisdom of adopting a militarian policy for the United States.

The Basis of Soviet Union Land Policy

Drawn up by Lenin and presented to the All-Russian Council of the Peasant delegates in the name of the Social Democratic Fraction (Bolshevik) by Comrade Smilga in May, 1917.

1.—All manorial and private estates as well as crown and church lands, etc., shall be handed over to the people at once without compensation.

2.—With a view to the best agricultural use of the land, the peasantry must systematically proceed to take possession of the estates through its Soviets of peasant deputies, but without prejudicing the final determination of the agrarian regulations by the National Assembly or by the All-Russian Council of Soviets, should the people entrust the central power of the state to such a council of Soviets.

3.—Private property in land must be abolished altogether, i.e., the right to own land must appertain to the whole of the people only. The administration must be in the hands of the local democratic officers.

4.—The peasants must reject the advice of the capitalists, the landed proprietors and their provisional government to enter into "understanding" with the landowners with a view to determining the method of administration. The administration of the land must be determined by the organized majority of the peasants settled in a district and not by an agreement between the majority, i.e., the peasants, with the minority—and that such an insignificant minority—such as the landed proprietors represent.

5.—Not only the landowners but also the capitalists are fighting and will fight with all the means in their power against all the manorial lands passing into the hands of the people without compensation. The capitalists not only have large sums of money at their disposal, but they can influence the peasants who are still ignorant, through their press, through the great number of officials who are used to the power of capital, etc. For this reason, the passing of all manorial lands into the hands of the peasants can neither be carried out nor ensured unless the confidence of the peasant masses in the capitalists is destroyed, unless a firm alliance unites the peasantry with the urban proletariat, unless the transference of the whole power of the state into the hands of the Soviets of Workers', Soldiers' and Peasant Delegates becomes a fact. Only if the power of the state is in the hands of such Soviets and if the state is not ruled by police and officials, nor by an army separated from the people, but by the general armed militia of the workers and peasants, only then is the power of the state able to carry through the transformation of the conditions of landed property deserted above and demanded by the whole peasantry.

6.—The agricultural laborers and poorest peasants, i.e., those who, to a certain extent, eke out their existence by working as laborers, because they have not enough land, cattle and tools, must, with all their force, organize themselves independently in special Soviets or form special groups within the general peasant Soviets in order to defend their own interests against the rich peasants who are sure to wish for an alliance with the capitalists and landowners.

7.—In consequence of the war, Russia, like all the belligerent countries and many neutral states, is threatened with ruin, catastrophe, famine because it lacks labor power, coal, iron, etc. The only way to save the country is for the Workers' and Peasants' Delegates to take over the control and the management determined by the organized majority of the peasants settled in a district and not by an agreement between the minority, i.e., the peasants, with the minority—and that such an insignificant minority—such as the landed proprietors represent.

8.—Not only the landowners but also the capitalists are fighting and will fight with all the means in their power against all the manorial lands passing into the hands of the people without compensation. The capitalists not only have large sums of money at their disposal, but they can influence the peasants who are still ignorant, through their press, through the great number of officials who are used to the power of capital, etc. For this reason, the passing of all manorial lands into the hands of the peasants can neither be carried out nor ensured unless the confidence of the peasant masses in the capitalists is destroyed, unless a firm alliance unites the peasantry with the urban proletariat, unless the transference of the whole power of the state into the hands of the Soviets of Workers', Soldiers' and Peasant Delegates becomes a fact. Only if the power of the state is in the hands of such Soviets and if the state is not ruled by police and officials, nor by an army separated from the people, but by the general armed militia of the workers and peasants, only then is the power of the state able to carry through the transformation of the conditions of landed property deserted above and demanded by the whole peasantry.

9.—The agricultural laborers and poorest peasants, i.e., those who, to a certain extent, eke out their existence by working as laborers, because they have not enough land, cattle and tools, must, with all their force, organize themselves independently in special Soviets or form special groups within the general peasant Soviets in order to defend their own interests against the rich peasants who are sure to wish for an alliance with the capitalists and landowners.

10.—In consequence of the war, Russia, like all the belligerent countries and many neutral states, is threatened with ruin, catastrophe, famine because it lacks labor, coal, iron, etc. The only way to save the country is for the Workers' and Peasants' Delegates to take over the control and the management determined by the organized majority of the peasants settled in a district and not by an agreement between the minority, i.e., the peasants, with the minority—and that such an insignificant minority—such as the landed proprietors represent. This is why it is necessary even now, to bring about an understanding between the Soviets of Peasant Deputies and the Soviets of Worker Delegates. They must negotiate about the exchange of corn and other agricultural products for tools, boots, clothing, etc., and bring it about without the interference of the capitalists who must also be removed from the administration of the factories. With the same object in view, efforts must be made to transfer the live-stock and implements of the landed proprietors to the peasant communities, so that the general public may have the benefit. In the same way, model farms must be established on every large estate where the land is cultivated by the community according to the best methods under the guidance of agricultural experts and according to the resolutions of the Soviets of agricultural workers.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE GRINDS OUT ANTI-LABOR BILLS

Labor Lobbying Proves Next to Worthless

By ARNE SWABECK.

THE Illinois Legislature is about to close a busy session at which it has been grinding out a number of bills favorable to the bosses, turning down those containing points to labor's advantage.

Laws have been enacted giving the Chicago utilities corporation full sway in gobbling up the Chicago transportation system, applying only a few brakes contained in a number of amendments added to the bills as originally proposed. These adopted bills give no regard whatever for the demands of the street car man or elevated employes for improved working conditions. The legislature enacted the law declaring immunity for Governor Small, clearing him of any charges of stealing state funds during the period of his state treasurership. This was enacted on the basis, however, that the governor returns part of the funds which disappeared at that time. The women's eight hour bill was defeated, the one important bill favorable to labor.

These are but some of the many examples. The celebrated policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies as pursued by the trade union officials has once more in practical application brought proof of its criminal futility. The so-called labor friends, as could be expected, failed completely to live up to their distinction. On the issues raised they showed themselves as legislators chosen by the parties controlled by capitalism, elected on their ticket and with the help of their slush funds.

What Did Labor Lobby Accomplish?

THE Illinois State Federation of Labor is the official political expression of the trade unions in the state, one of its objects being to work for legislation favorable to labor. It uses no other methods than those of lobbying with the legislators seeking favors in this manner. Additional labor lobbying is being maintained by various unions and central labor bodies, but once more these labor lobbys do have no record to show. The methods of labor lobbying can be of value to the workers only when used on a class basis. Only by labor representatives appearing before legislatures or their sub-committees using it as a forum in which labor's demands are voiced, simultaneously organizing outside parliament the necessary mass pressure through working class propaganda, demonstrations, etc. This, however, is by no means the program of the present labor lobbyists.

PRESIDENT WALKER of the Illinois State Federation of Labor in appearing recently before the Chicago Federation of Labor was compelled to acknowledge the capitalist control of the legislature. He said that efforts made by labor for a more favorable attitude could only be appreciated by those who had been present at the "battle front." By this he evidently referred to the luxurious lobbys in the Springfield capitol. He acknowledged the difficulties encountered by the fact that the law makers in practically all of them were elected by the funds put into the political campaigns by the bankers and big employers. He proposed as his solution to merge yet deeper into capitalistsession when there is not sufficient support available for their passage. Those who can best afford to blur their so-called labor friendly record remain absent. When defeat is assured sufficient number of "labor friend" legislators will vote in favor in order to maintain their record. If this method appears uncertain sufficient amendments will be slipped over in order to make these labor friendly bills worthless or else impossible of passage.

How Do the Bosses' Politicians Work?

THE capitalist politicians work out a shrewd game of maintaining an appearance of labor friends wherever such distinction is necessary to hold their constituency. Bills favorable to labor are usually held up in committee until the last few days of the politics by endeavoring to get control of the ward and precinct captains of the two old polltical machines.

HOW impossible absurd such a proposal is can easily be understood when we just look back to the 1926 primaries and compare the figures of hundreds of thousands of dollars contributed by the big corporations to the small sums available for labor. What is more important, this would be absolutely contrary to labor's political action which can have its basis only in mass sentiment of the workers, and mass organizations of the workers, not within the capitalist parties.

ANTI-LABOR bills are generally also rushed through during the last period of the session with the rails greased quietly for quick passage. The so-called labor friends vote against these bills in sufficient number to maintain their record without endangering the victory of the anti-labor bills. This session has become a shining example of such practice. All the proposed bills of any consequence were left to the last few days of the legislative session and are rushed to victory or defeat as political bosses had decided in vance.

THERE is an old saying advising the Greeks to beware of Greeks bearing gifts. The Greeks were the original horse traders within and a reputation for trickery was handed down to their ancestors that conquered a city by marching a horsefull of armed Greeks into it. Since the Greeks were entirely surrounded by horse the denizens of the doomed city did not know what they were getting until they got it in the neck.

All reminder of this ancient myth by the announcement that the Greek section of the Workers (Communist) Party is about to launch a daily paper. It will see the light on July 1st and its baptismal name is "Empros." The christening will take place next Friday evening at Bryant Hall and the Greek workers have issued a blanket invitation to as many as can be accommodated in the hall to come and say "hello" to the baby. Here is a gift for the Greek workers in America that they are sure to appreciate. We cordially greet it.

THE old saying "as safe as a bank" does not mean a thing any more. Two Los Angeles bankers are accused of embezzlement in a petroleum deal. Of course this is not so bad at that. The bankers simply took advantage of their positions to swindle the public thru the issue of fake stock. Bankers usually plunge their arms to the elbows in the treasuries and make themselves scarce. Sometime ago there was quite a movement thruout the middle west for the organization of vigilantes to protect banks from hold-up men. But the bankers got nervous and the movement did not develop.

CALVIN COOLIDGE is in the grip of a South Dakota heat wave. The S. D. sun must have its nerve. Looking at the presidential face in the shade of that hat one would think that the sun would need an electric blanket to keep from freezing. If this sultry condition continues the Coolidge slogan that rendered good service in the last national elections will be useless in the next. Instead of "Keep Kool with Koolidge" it will be "Vote For Coolidge and Get Skinned."

BECAUSE of low wages and still lower tips, three employees of a Fifth Avenue millionaire are said to have destroyed a quarter of a million dollars worth of art housed in that gentleman's private apartments. Judging by the names of the alleged vandals arrested by the police, charged with the destruction, they are of the catholic faith. So far they have not been charged with harboring "subversive" ideas. The only mitigating circumstance that might be offered in extenuation of their act is the consumption of large quantities of liquor which they apparently located on the premises of their employer.

ROCHESTER police are taking a kindergarten course in literature as a result of the theft of several rare volumes from local bookstores. The police found in the vicinity of $2,000 worth of literature in the home of Donald Gothals, so they immediately assumed that only a thief would be liable to have such a well stocked library. The police admit it is the toughest assignment ever handed to them. The chief however is keeping them well supplied with aspirin and bromo seltzer.

SIXTEEN year old evangelists are now the rage. We thot that Aimee Semple McPherson was rushed for a row of Elmer Gantrys by Udine Utley, who made some of his trouble for Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton. But Aimee came back by proxy. One of her husbands forseeing squalls ahead bestowed a child on her. This child Roberta, has now become filled with the holy ghost and is on the way to filling the maternal coffers with dough. She is now in Chicago with a novel theory that should make Cicero go to bed for a year.

INSTEAD of taking her text from the scriptures, the youthful ushers of the lord picked up an old gag that was ancient in Pullman smoking rooms twenty years ago. It is "two is company, but three is a crowd." We never thot that this prosaic truism would be turned into cash, but here is where we were mistaken. The Chicago correspondent of the New York World, himself filled with the holy spirit or Italian "red", gives Roberta Semple credit for "convincing logic". Lest you might think we are kidding we will let the sixteen year old explain it in her own way.

"TWO who make company are god themself. When the devil comes it be makes three, and it is a crowd." This is some explanation.

Mme. Sun Yat Sen Asks Funds to Aid Wounded Nationalist Soldiers

Appealing for funds to aid troops wounded in the Chinese liberation struggle, Mme. Sun Yat-sen has addressed the following cable to all Hands Off China organizations:

HANKOW, June 29. — Two thousand wounded in Wuhan hospitals are in need of urgent help. Foreign medical authorities from all parts of China are assisting in this great emergency. Can you help? Address remittances to me.

SCORE BETRAYAL OF SOVIET LABOR BY TUC LEADERS

British Right Wingers Aid Chamberlain

(Special Cable to Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, June 29.—Scoring the right wing leadership of the British trade union movement for betraying the international workingclass movement of the world, and stressing the need for immediate action on the part of British labor if a new imperialist war is to be averted, the All-Union Central Committee of Trade Unions has addressed a declaration to the workers of the Soviet Union and Great Britain.

Referring to the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee, the statement says, "The alarming international situation arising from the danger of an attack on the Soviet Union by British capitalism has not aroused the Anglo-Russian Committee to any action whatever. The Anglo-Russian Committee, however, was organized for a struggle against the onslaught of capitalism and for the unity of the trade union movement against an imperialistic war.

Refused to Hold Conference.

In response to the attempt of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions to call a meeting of the Anglo-Russian Committee at Berlin (June, 1927), the General Council of British Trade Unions eluded the invitation.

Therefore the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions deems it its direct proletarian duty to address the following declaration to the workers of Great Britain and the Soviet Union:

The All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions considers that the moment has come when organs should be created by the labor movement of both countries to struggle against an imperialist war. The international trade union movement not only can, but must meet to discuss the situation and bring its authority to bear in defense of peace and against the preparations for a new war.

Criminal Silence.

To be silent or inactive at such a time would be a crime on the part of the Anglo-Russian Committee. Such is our deep felt conviction.

It was in this spirit and this conviction that the All-Union Central Trade Unions made unequivocal and

21 Firemen Blinded by Fumes in $500,000 Fire In Chemical Warehouse

Twenty-one firemen were overcome and temporarily blinded by chemical fumes in a $500,000 warehouse fire at Bleecker and Eleventh streets today which routed 200 residents of adjoining apartment buildings, and blanketed Greenwich Village with yellowish green smoke.

An emergency hospital was set up on Bank street and two doctors worked over the pugnate and blinded firemen as they were rescued by their fellow fire fighters.

COMPLETE STRIKE ON BRITISH SHIPS IN CHINA WATERS

Determined to Resist Wage Cut; Kill Shipping

SHANGHAI, June 29.—Five hundred British officers and men on seventy-five steamers engaged in Chinese coast-wise trade will walk out on strike this evening in protest against a ten per cent wage slash.

One hundred and fifty thousand tons of shipping will be tied up by the strike. Officers and engineers on incoming ships will join the strike as soon as they put into Chinese ports.

The strike in combination with anti-British boycotts which are being organized thruout southern and middle China promises to completely tie-up British trade in China.

Yelp for intervention.

(By Nationalist News Agency).

SHANGHAI, June 29.—The official British newspaper here, the North China Daily News, publishes an editorial in today's issue which is allegedly "contributed by an American." It bitterly attacks the United States for not intervening in China and declares that the Washington attitude was dictated by commiseration of the coming presidential election.

The editorial says, "The most casual reader of American political reports will have noted that both the republican and democratic parties are pathetically short of first class presidential timber. Observries the democrats would not allow Al Smith's name to be mentioned as a possible candidate, nor would the republicans permit President Coolidge to ruminate upon his chance of a third term. Our readers who have not forgotten how the Nanking outrages were internationally shelved when Washington backed water, will appreciate that every foreigner in China has good reason to wish the coming American election with an apprehensive and jealous eye."

Local Americans believe that if this attack was written by an American it emanated from the pro-British clique of the American chamber of commerce which recently appealed for American intervention without success, and attempted ousting John B. Powell, the editor of the China Weekly Review, because of his stand against intervention.

GARMENT WORKER CHAIRMEN CALL FOR MASS PICKETS

Hillquit Sends Funny Letter Asking Money

At a crowded meeting of shop chairmen of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union held last night at the Manhattan Lyceum a resolution was unanimously adopted against the cossack tactics being employed by Matthew Woll and Edward F. McGrady in their efforts to crush the furriers' and cloakmakers' strikes. The resolution reads as follows:

WHEREAS: hundreds of strikers are arrested daily and thrown into jail as a result of the conspiracy of the Sigmans, Wolls and McGradys to break the strike of the furriers and cloak dressmakers and thus force their corrupt and discredited leadership upon our membership, who are today engaged in a life and death struggle to maintain union conditions and save our union from complete destruction, and

WHEREAS: in order to accomplish their destructive purposes, these traitors have secured the active cooperation of the police, the judges, and hired thugs from the underworld whom have publicly admitted that they are in the pay of Sigman and Co. to make murderous attacks on the striking fur workers and,

WHEREAS, all their efforts are now concentrated in an attempt to

STANDARD OIL THANKS NAVY FOR SERVICES IN CHINA; LAUDS BOMBARDMENT OF NANKING

Whose property and whose lives American marines and warships are protecting in China is vividly brought out in the following letter sent by the Standard Oil of New York to the Navy Department. The letter, signed by the assistant general manager, is addressed to Admiral Williams, commander of the American fleet in Asiatic waters.

Dear Admiral Williams:

We wish to convey to you our sincere thanks and appreciation of the great assistance rendered to us by the units under your command.

Conditions in China have been most chaotic; in many cases it has been impossible to anticipate the future. During these periods of emergency your staff has, without exception, rendered our various branches invaluable assistance both during periods of evacuation and in protective measures.

The assistance rendered us by you has in innumerable instances, not only protected the lives of our staff, but saved us from greater financial loss.

The action taken by your forces during the Nanking incident, the evacuation of Changsha, Ichang and Chinking, the protective measures at all treaty ports, the convoy of our vessels thru disturbed districts and the courtesy of your wireless to points cut off from normal communication have placed the Company and our staff under deep obligation to you.

We would greatly appreciate your extending our thanks and appreciation to the several units under your command for the full co-operation and the privileges extended to us, with unfailing courtesy, providing this request meets with your sanction.

Very respectfully yours,
STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF NEW YORK
Assistant General Manager.

SACCO-VANZETTI STRIKE PLANS GO ON; JULY 7TH AT 4 P. M.

Workers Organizations Line Up for Action

Local labor organizations through their representatives involving a membership of over 500,000 have endorsed the plans for a Sacco-Vanzetti protest strike which has been scheduled for July 7th at 4 p. m.

At that time all workers will down tools and proceed to Union Square where a mass protest demonstration will be staged. Vivid banners emblazoned with revolutionary slogans will feature this mass gathering.

Among the organizations which are behind the strike move are the following: Amalgamated Metal Workers of America, United Textile Workers, Joint Board Furriers' Union, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Typographical Union, Local 7, Brotherhood of Painters and Paperhangers of America and 16 other labor groups.

In addition, various fraternal and political associations have pledged their support to make the protest strike 100 per cent effective. They are the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, International Labor Defense, all branches and units of the Workers Party, Workmen's Circle and among many others the Young Workers League.

The American Federation of Labor has on repeated occasions rapped the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti in sharp and condemnatory terms. At a recent convention the death-sentence was branded as "a ghastly miscarriage of justice."

Hundreds of thousands of leaflets are being distributed by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee. A volunteer distributing corps is in action throughout the entire city. Special attention is being given to the industrial centers.

One of the leaflets reads in part: "The whole working class must sink its differences and present a united front against the enemies of the labor movement who would railroad our two brothers to the electric chair. The call to strike ends with the slogans: "DOWN TOOLS AT 4 P. M. ON THURSDAY, JULY 7th—RALLY TO THE DEFENSE OF SACCO AND VANZETTI—SACCO AND VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE."

The Sacco - Vanzetti Emergency Committee, which is the central strike organization, feels confident that the New York strike will be as dramatic and effective as the various Sacco-Vanzetti strikes which have been held throughout the world, notably in Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil.

39 FUR PICKETS GIVEN JAIL TERMS BY BIASED JUDGE

205 More In "Silent Defense" as Protest

Thirty-nine striking furriers were sentenced to jail yesterday morning by Magistrate George Ewald in Jefferson Market Court.

Three of the men workers were given 10 days each because they were arrested before. Ten men were sentenced to five days each with no choice of a fine, while 11 women were given the alternative of 3 days in jail or $10 fine. They all chose jail. Another woman worker was given ten days after she had been pointed out by Samuel Markewich, right wing attorney.

The other 205 who were arrested Monday will come up for trial this morning but after seeing how the magistrate acted yesterday they have decided not to put up any defense, declaring that it is a waste of time.

When Jacob Mandelbaum, lawyer for the strikers, entered objection yesterday to any act of the magistrate, he was immediately ruled out of order in a rough manner.

"If you continue to object, I will

RYKOFF NAILS BRITISH LIES ABOUT EXECUTION OF 20 WHITE GUARDISTS

Answers British Labor Party Leaders; Says Assassins Received Trial, Guilt Proved

MOSCOW, June 29.—Replying to a telegram from George Lansbury, James Maxton and Fenner Brockway, leaders of the British Labor Party, "deploring" the execution of white guard assassins by the Soviet Government, M. Rykoff, Chairman of the Council of Peoples' Commissaries, points out that a series of anti-Soviet lies and calumnies about the execution are flooding the capitalist press with a view to gaining additional support for an offensive against the Soviet Union.

Assassins Received Trials.

Rykoff, in his reply, points out that the executed assassins received a trial before an extraordinary tribunal despite the reports in the capitalist press.

The telegram from the British Laborites which invoked Rykoff's message says:

"We appeal to you that executions without trial be stopped, they shock British public opinion, particularly friendly Labor opinion. We oppose the British Anti-Soviet policy, but executions making our activities impossible difficult. We ask you to stop your reprisals."

Rykoff's reply follows:

Guilt Proved.

"Your telegram is apparently due to the publication of the sentence inflicted by the United State Political Department on twenty whiteguards for organizing espionage against the Soviet Union and terror against Soviet leaders.

"Although this sentence was inflicted on active whiteguard counter-revolutionaries whose guilt had been proved by documentary evidence, it is broadly made use of abroad for rousing public opinion against the Soviet Union.

"In connection with this sentence innumerable lies and calumnies are

DUNNE, ENGDAHL, BITTELMAN AND MILLER FACING FEDERAL PRISON

Government Joins Patriotteers and Militarists to Crush National Labor Daily

Indicted for Attacking Business Men and A. F. of L. Labor Fakers

The United States grand jury in the New York district yesterday returned indictments against and ordered the arrest of J. Louis Engdahl and William F. Dunne, editors of The DAILY WORKER, and Bert Miller, business manager. Included in the indictments are Alexander Bittelman, editor of the New Magazine of The DAILY WORKER, and David Gordon and Joseph Kalar, contributors to the columns of this paper.

This new drive against The DAILY WORKER was inspired by the same reactionary militarist clique that initiated the attack of the courts of the state of New York which resulted in convictions of the editor, business manager and one of the contributors, and which are now on appeal to the higher courts. It is generally recognized as part and parcel of the general vicious capitalist offensive that is being waged against the labor movement in the United States.

Blow after blow has been delivered against The DAILY WORKER as the lone English labor daily in the country, but in spite of all efforts to suppress the paper it has been able to withstand the fight. The federal indictments are the most menacing attack yet made against us inasmuch as conviction carries long prison sentences in the federal penitentiary.

Sentence may be as much as five years in prison or $5,000 fine or both.

The same aggregation of spies and labor-haters that inspired the attack in the state courts were in evidence when the government made its attack. Prominent among the names of those who made the complaint was that of Captain G. A. Darte, who calls himself "adjutant general" of the Military Order of the World War.

"Pamphlets and cartoons attacking American business men, the American Federation of Labor, religious organizations and German trade unions" was the description of the "indecent writings" objected to by the federal authorities.

In view of the fact that the present charges are brought on a federal and not a state law, the mailing privileges of The DAILY WORKER are now in immediate danger of suspension.

Chief Assistant Federal Attorney George S. Leisure, who presented the evidence to the grand jury said: "The government has a right under the law to stop any letters, pamphlets or publications from circulating thru the mails that contain 'indecent' written matter."

However, Post Office Inspector Keene called attention to the fact that the defendants have persisted in directing a campaign against the publicity in favor of citizens' military training camps espoused by the post office, which explains what the federal authorities consider indecent.

The federal attorney said that "investigation has revealed" the fact that J. Louis Engdahl, one of the editors of The DAILY WORKER is now in Soviet Russia. This is especially ridiculous in view of the fact that Engdahl's special articles and dispatches dated from Moscow have been appearing in The DAILY WORKER for the past two months.

The DAILY WORKER and those indicted have not yet been officially notified of the action of the grand jury, and also of the specific articles and cartoons which are alleged to have violated the federal law.

COAL COMPANY'S WATER SIEGE MAY START A PLAGUE

Negro Tells of Abuses By Coal Iron Police

CASTLE SHANNON, Pa., June 29.—A steady stream of complaints and the real danger that a serious epidemic of typhoid fever and other diseases will result from the use of polluted water has forced the state department of health to make a gesture at an investigation of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company's attempt to drive its miners back to work by shutting off their drinking water supply.

Governor Fisher states: "I have received complaints about the turning off of the water, and we are making an investigation. It is alleged the water supply is under control of the coal company. It appears water has been shut off from some of the miners' houses and the occupants have been forced to secure water from open springs.

"The state health department is investigating these sources to determine if the water is free from a menace to health. The direct interest of the state applies in case the supply is found to be contaminated."

State health authorities of Pittsburgh are reporting daily by telephone to Dr. Theodore Appel, secretary of the state department, Harrisburg, on their investigation.

L. E. Wickersham, district health engineer, declared today he had requested Horace F. Baker, president of the Terminal corporation, on Saturday, to turn on water hydrants which had been disconnected and that Baker had refused.

Conditions in Port of New York—The Decline of the Seaman's Union—Widespread Unemployment—Slave Conditions.

New York City is the largest port in the world, both in size and in the extent of shipping entering and leaving daily. Besides the gigantic liners which are constantly in the public eye, and whose arrivals and departures are daily listed in all the newspapers, the port is crowded with the freighters, the tankers of the shipping industry, bringing cargoes from all parts of the world to provide industry with the goods necessary for its existence. The average worker little realizes the importance of New York as a seaport, and pays very little attention to the conditions of those men who toil on the ships, the seamen.

During the war and the period immediately following, American shipping was at its height. Great Britain's shipping was being crippled by the German submarine warfare, and the United States by a tremendous shipbuilding drive was rivalling England as the foremost maritime power. It was during this period that the American seamen were able to demand wages and conditions which made their existence the best compared with that of any other seamen in the world.

Seamen's Union Declines.

However their prosperity was shortlived. In 1921 came the big strike in which the backbone of the Seamen's organization was broken. At the present time their organizations are practically powerless. The International Seamen's Union which at one time was able to dictate its terms to the shipowners is now on its last legs. Ruled over by the reactionary and bureaucratic Andy Furuseth it has lost every vestige of fighting spirit and consequently the confidence of the seamen who have quit the organization in disgust. No attempt is made to organize the sailors and firemen whose conditions are daily becoming more miserable. Wages have been reduced from an average of 85 dollars to 55 dollars per month. Food, never at the best very good, has become as bad as prison fare. Sleeping quarters are crowded and unclean, pay for overtime has practically disappeared. Taking advantage of the weakness of the seamen the ship owners have taken away every concession which was won during the war period.

At present unemployment has helped to make the lot of the seamen even more miserable. Walk along South Street, New York's saltiest thoroughfare and you will find the avenue crowded with seamen thrown out of work, some of them on the beach for months, and many of them destitute and hungry and on the verge of starvation.

Slaves Of South Street.

It is on this street running along the East River that the infamous human docks of the United Fruit Company are located. And it is from the hopeless and half starved workers that crowd South Street that this company recruits the "cargo to unload" its ships. Speeding up the workers by means of the latest machinery and driving them mercilessly by means of brutal foremen, this company is reaping enormous profits by the relentless exploitation of South Street's army of unemployed. The United Fruit Company has always taken the lead in fighting any attempts at organizing the seamen and is the first to take advantage of their weakness in order to impose worse conditions. It has already instituted the two watch system for sailors on deck which is equivalent to a twelve hour day.

There is no limit to which the ship owners will go in exploiting the seamen unless there is some organized force to stop them. It is only by meeting the attacks of this highly organized and merciless group of profit seekers by the combined force of all those who man the ships and unload them on the docks, that the seamen will be able to demand conditions that will ensure them a decent standard of living.

Coal Company's Water Siege Perils Health

Many springs at Mine No. 2, near Castle Shannon, to which the "water siege" drives the miners for water, were posted as dangerous and unprotected, with warnings that the water should be boiled, said Dr. John R. Conover, county health director. Some person tore down many of the warnings, Conover declared.

Guards Abuse Scabs.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 29.—Savage tactics by Pittsburgh Coal Co.'s coal and iron police against even strikebreakers, and bitter exploitation and discrimination against the Negro miners, mingled into scabbing is proved by the following letter taken from a Negro paper in Pittsburgh. It is written by a resident of that city, and is, in part, as follows:

Something for Race Miners To Look At.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company is doing the same as most corporations do after the strike is well on. They failed to pay the price for mining rock. They will not give you full weight; they will not give you good houses to live in, and will not let you make over $50.00 a pay for loading coal, unless you work day and night. Lots of men wait from one to three days for a cut after they clean up. Lots of times you get two cars by 11 a. m.; lots of times you sit in the mine waiting on the man trip and then won't out; lots of times the pit bosses fail to turn in all of your time, and you wait from one to three pay days to get all of your day work. But the company never fails to get the blacksmith, doctor fees, relief fund and store bill. I have seen lots of men beg for a little credit for powder and supplies so they could go into the pit. When the company hires men in another city they tell them they can have full set of tools. When you get on the job they give you one pick, one shovel, lamp, cap, powder and dinner bucket and tell you to go on in.

No Money In Scabbing.

The boss in the mine gives you a room with four to 12 inches of water, sometimes a driper thrown in—no pay. Or he gives you a room with two cars of coal by squaring up good and a day or day and a half of rock. Sometimes you lose a car of coal on the road. Cars that will go 5,000 pounds you may get 3,900 to 4,300 pounds. When your rack shows 16 inches in the center and 13 inches on the sides the boss will tell you it is not enough to measure this time. You talk to the superintendent and he will give you a promise, that's all. When you go to the office and see the timekeeper he snaps at you like a mad dog.

After Miners' Wives.

Then too, you have the imported gunmen, known as Coal and Iron Police in day time and on night, unless a colored woman is willing to bow to his insults, and you are willing to be driven around. Then you will be sent out of camp. Sometimes they tell you to get out in two hours. One man knocked a Coal and Iron policeman in the head for insulting his wife. One of our foolish race men saved the Coal and Iron policeman by hitting the race miner and snapping his gun in his face. I know of a race man who was discharged for voicing his sentiments and standing by this man's home to see that no more Coal and Iron police insulted this man's wife. The superintendent told this lady's husband he would not stand for him hitting a man like that and he could get his time.

The general manager told me that if the colored men were that timid about their wives it would be better to get another place for them to be posted.

Quit Helping the War-Makers of Europe

DENVER, June 29.—Senator Borah, of Idaho, in an address last night to the Forty-third Annual Convention of the International Advertising Association, urged the necessity for American conservation on domestic problems, the conservation of our natural resources which are being recklessly and heedlessly debauched by the short-sighted greed of private owners, and the futility of our "delusive effort to aid Europe."

Waste Of Oil Resources.

Borah laid particular emphasis on the "orgy of production" in the oil fields and of the shameless waste of this important resource of the nation in many oil fields which are being damaged or ruined through careless or hasty drilling operations. He pointed out that in a report filed by the Federal Oil Board last September, the statement is made that the known oil fields of the United States hold oil sufficient to supply this country for six years, and probably no longer.

"As the world is now organized," said Borah, "oil is an essential element of national power, an indispensable factor in national security. Without oil in these days, a nation faces economic vassalage."

He indicated, somewhat cautiously, that the oil interests would have to set their house in order and stop the alarming "naturalia" of reckless competitive production for profit if they wished to avoid governmental control, having previously exposed the impotence of the government which had already admitted its inability to control the national brigands.

Speaking of the damage caused by the Mississippi flood, amounting to approximately $400,000,000 and the misery and desolation of the people in the flood areas, Borah points to the waste in national wealth, the waste in "human suffering, discouragement and the breaking up of the plans of a lifetime," and concludes that "we, as a people, as a nation, should turn our attention to the working out of an intelligent and permanent national program, a national policy" to solve these problems which involve the welfare of the people.

Squirms at Government Control.

But Senator Borah's humanitarian impulses begin to squirm a little uncomfortably over the possibility of government control of the basic industries. "It is not so easy to determine," he says, "our course, or what it is wise to do as a government, when it comes to dealing with the problems which oil, power and coal present. I venture the opinion, however, that the extent to which the government shall take part in these matters will depend primarily upon those who own and control these industries. Government dominance or government ownership will depend very largely, if not wholly, upon the action and conduct of those who own or are in control of these things. Wide spread waste, and reckless exploitation prevails, if the people are charged unreasonable prices, the government will have no alternative; it will have to act in the interest of the people."

Senator Borah feels that the great war is "responsible for the deflection of our attention, as a government and as a people, from our domestic problems to the problems of reconstruction and stabilization which confront Europe.

Helping the Warmakers.

"Under the present policies of Europe," Borah stated, "cancellations of debts and loans will serve but little, if at all, in reconstruction. Every one seems now in need of great military establishments and a strengthening of the war program; we are not helping the people of Europe but the warmakers of Europe. The present policies do not mean peace, do not mean reconstruction.

"The history of Europe during the last thirty days has in it every element of strife which preceded the years before the war. The premier of Italy in a public speech declared that he is on the way to creating an army of 5,000,000 men, to the building of a great navy and to the reconstruction of an air force second to none in the world. What are these things for?

"The break between Great Britain and Russia, the assassination of the Russian minister in Poland, the executions in Russia, have made Europe, mentally and spiritually, if I may use the terms, an armed camp. Last Sunday a week the premier of France, at Luneville, delivered a public address steeped in bitterness and intolerance. In the fact of such speeches militarism becomes a flimsy piece of organized hypocrisy. The league convenes in an atmosphere of dissension and strife."

work. The head Coal and Iron police refused to make any arrests in this case, the same as he refused in the month of April when a Coal and Iron policeman shot at two men and myself. In this case one of his shots went through a window and shot a colored lady in the stomach. When I went to the general office I was informed that it had never been reported.

Needle Trade Defense

At the concert arranged by the Joint Defense and Relief Committee to take place July 16 in the Coney Island Stadium, 20,000 workers will meet to express their protest against the Sigman-McGrady-Woll clique and to support the striking furriers and the imprisoned needle trades workers. Once more the workers of New York will show the Forward and its gang that they are with the Joint Boards of the Furriers and Cloakmakers Unions. In itself the concert will be the best of the season. The New York Symphony Orchestra of 100 will participate. Erno Rappe, internationally known, will conduct. Alexis Kosloff, former ballet master of the Russian Imperial Theatre, with his famous ballet, will produce "Prince Igor." Those who saw Kosloff at the Stadium last year will surely not miss this opportunity to see him at his best. Tickets are $1.00 and $2.00 for reserved seats and can be gotten at the Joint Defense and Relief Committee, 41 Union Square, Room 714.

211 Times 25.

A whole line of 244 pickets was surrounded by the police and dragged off to court Monday morning. This move on the part of the police had no effect on the spirit of the workers. The broken ranks were repaired and the arrested workers replaced by hundreds of other pickets. The trial was postponed until Wednesday and bail of $25 was fixed for each of the arrested workers. This money had to be raised in one day. Such occurrences take place daily. The police and the right wing traitors are determined to exhaust the treasury of the union so that the workers will be compelled to submit. Such a time is, however, far distant. The working masses stand solidly behind the striking furriers and steadily supply the ammunition to help them in their struggle.

$121.00 was collected at a mass meeting of the Passaic Workers Culture Club which was held Friday. A committee of 8 was elected to continue the work for the Defense Committee. Kaplan of the Cloakmakers and Shapiro of the Furriers were present at this meeting.

The Brownsville Youth Culture Center forwarded $32.00 to the Committee with a promise to make it a $100 before the week is over. The Brownsville Workers Club collected and elected a committee to visit the members of the Branch to collect further funds for the striking Furriers. Branch 564 Workmen's Circle forwarded $8.00.

Sanl Yellin bought 2 bonds at $10 each, one for himself and the other for his friend. He also sold $10 worth of tickets to the Coney Island Stadium Concert and took another batch. Yellin is a member of the Freiheit Singing Society.

Mrs. Nomkin, Mrs. Tabachnik, Sarah Cohen, Clara Kushner of working Class Housewives Council No. 7 were arrested for picketing and were fined $5.00 or two days in jail. The women preferred jail and saved $20 for the defense.

SACCO-VANZETTI EXECUTION PUT OFF ONE MONTH

Mass Meeting Sunday in Philadelphia

BOSTON, June 29.—Gov. Alvan T. Fuller today ordered a postponement of the death sentence imposed on Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, framed-up Italian radicals, until August 10th.

At the same time he granted a respite to Celestino Madeiros awaiting execution for the killing of a bank cashier and who has made a full confession that he and several others of the notorious Morelli gang were responsible for the murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti have been convicted.

Vanzetti's Statement Published.

Vanzetti's masterly statement to Gov. Fuller, and the six affidavits by newspapermen and others against Judge Webster Thayer, have been distributed in pamphlet form by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee. The pamphlet is entitled "Massachusetts' Reputation at Stake!"

The affidavits all tell how the judge ranted against the defendants in club room, restaurant and railroad coach during the trial period: "Those bastards!" was one of the judge's mild expletives.

John Nicholas Beffel, who reported the trial for the Federated Press; Frank P. Sibley, veteran of the Boston Globe; Elisabeth Bernkopf, of the International News Service; Robert Benchley, of Life magazine; Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul, of the Boston Federation of Churches and George U. Crocker, rich University Club man, made the affidavits. Their sworn statements—now in Fuller's hands—all serve to show Thayer was unduly bitterly biased to give the two Italian radicals a fair trial.

Philadelphia Protest Sunday.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—One hundred and sixty organizations representing nearly 20,000 members are arranging the monster protest open-air demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti on Sunday which will be preceded by a parade which will form at Broad and Christian Sts. at 2 o'clock.

Among the speakers will be James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvanie Federation of Labor; H. M. Wicks, editor the DAILY WORKER; Norman Thomas, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Louis Budenz, editor of "Labor Age," Carlo Tresca, R. Maglincano, Carlo Fama, of the North American Anti-fascisti League.

CHICAGO, June 29.—The movement to send a national labor delegation to Gov. Fuller who will call for the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti is taking definite form.

At a last meeting of the Chicago Sacco-Vanzetti Conference held Monday it was decided to send telegrams to all leading central labor unions in the country urging them to support the movement for the labor delegation, and to select delegates to represent them.

The International Labor Defense has informed all its units of the decision of the Chicago conference, and has instructed its members to work for early action in the central labor unions.

Klan Chances for Radio To Broadcast American Propaganda Pretty Slim

WASHINGTON, June 29 (FP).—Efforts of the Ku Klux Klan to establish a national radio station in Washington to broadcast "patriotic, protestant, American" propaganda are practically doomed to failure. The federal radio commission has told the Fellowship Forum, klan organ, that 300 prior applications for wave lengths are on file with little hope for granting any of them.

The Forum has sponsored a campaign to raise $46,500 for the station, to operate on 10,000 watts, placing it among the most powerful in the country. Scores of klan chapters have contributed to the fund which now totals $17,000.

Harbor Workers Win Compensation From U. S. After Struggle

WASHINGTON, June 29 (FP).—All navigable areas of the continental United States have been divided into 14 compensation districts for the administration of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' compensation law. Instructions have been sent to all stevedoring firms and insurance companies on how to comply with the provisions of the law, which becomes effective July 1.

For the first time earp workers are given compensation protection. State laws seeking to protect them have been declared unconstitutional on the ground that such maritime work comes under federal jurisdiction. After a long, hard fight, labor forced Congress in the last session to pass a compensation act. Longshoring and stevedoring are among the most hazardous occupations in all industry.

Appeal to Our Readers!

If you are satisfied that this DAILY WORKER will be of value to the workers of this country in their struggle with the bosses, we desire to appeal to you for support in securing not only a large circulation amongst your fellow trade unionists, but also for financial assistance to render it possible for us to keep THE DAILY WORKER in existence. We have started with a six-page paper, and are anxious to see it enlarged to contain all the material which comes to us. This cannot be done under existing circumstances, and therefore we are compelled to ask you to come to our assistance. Interest your labor organization in the paper by getting them to take regularly a quantity for your members; get your union to send us a donation, however small; ask your fellow-workers to send us a subscription to the Maintenance Fund—all will be acknowledged if forwarded to the General Managing Committee, address: 33 East First Street, New York City.

Orders for The DAILY WORKER should be sent to the same address, and will be promptly attended to. Single copies 3 cents at the newsstands.

Fraternally,

L. HOFBAUER.

SCORE BETRAYAL BY TRADE UNION COUNCIL LEADERS WHO INJURED SOVIET UNION WORKERS AND PEASANTS

repeated propositions to the Central Council of Trade Unions.

However, the General Council of Trade Unions deferring its evocation under various pretexts systematically avoids submitting for the discussion of the Anglo-Russian Committee the most important questions over which Soviet as well as British workers are anxious.

Workers of the Soviet Union have watched with the greatest sympathy the struggle of British workers against their capitalists. On behalf of the workers of the Soviet Union, the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions offered fraternal aid to British workers engaged in the general strike.

Betrayed General Strike.

Did the general council take steps to rally proletarian forces against the attack of capital? No, it did not. With the assistance and the connivance of the right wing and "left" leaders of the general council, the British workingclass was pressed in the clutches of the police and the Trade Union Act.

Did the general council ever take any steps to prevent the attack of British imperialism on the Chinese revolution? No, the general council did not.

No Protest on Areos Raid.

Did the general council take any measure to censure Chamberlain's provocative note to the Soviet government? Did the general council intervene when the Soviet offices were raided in London? Did it call the Anglo-Russian Committee at the time of the Anglo-Soviet rupture? No, the general council did nothing of the sort.

The policy of the General Council virtually aimed to wreck the Anglo-Russian Committee and to liquidate it as an organ of British and Soviet workers.

Holding the liquidation of the Anglo-Russian Committee as harmful to the Soviet and international labor unity, the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions regards the open and veiled attempts of the leaders of the General Council to smash the Anglo-Russian Committe as tantamount to an open betrayal of the class interests of the proletariat and treachery to the cause of the Soviet Union.

Sided With White Guards.

However, the General Council's only political reply to the All-Union Central Council's proposition to call the Anglo-Russian Committee to discuss the most important question for the struggle was a telegram protesting against the actions of the workers state against white guard spies who waged a campaign of terrorism against the Soviet Union.

The adoption by the General Council of the resolution condemning the shooting of open enemies of the working class, of terrorists and incendiaries who from behind the covers of the representatives of the proletariat and by terorist methods attempted to restore the old regime, hated by the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, is as a matter of fact a direct insult to the workers and peasants of the USSR and means the shameful rallying of the General Council leaders to the anti-Soviet campaign raised by the venal bourgeois press. To say nothing about the danger of war, not to tell the workers about the significance of the Anglo-Solet rupture, not to pillory Chamberlain's foreign policy while at the same time joining with the black hundreds on the question of the so-called "red terror" is the General Council's general platform. Such tactics cannot be considered other than treacherous attempt to smash the Anglo-Russian Committee.

In the name of ten million organized workers of the Soviet Union, the All-Union Council of Trade Unions deems it its direct duty to loudly proclaim the danger to peace. The council considers that all of the honest representatives of the British workers must ruthlessly brand the criminal, bandit and arrogantly provocative policy of Baldwin's conservative government.

Only the blind can fail to see that England is preparing a war against the Soviet Union, entering an agreement with fascist Italy, mobilizing the forces of reaction, enlisting allies and yearning for a repetition of the horrors of intervention, fighting to bring about another blockade of the Soviet Union and ruin the workers and peasants' state.

Must Stop War.

The realization of this monstrous scheme to wreck the Chinese revolution and launch a bloody attack against the Soviet Union must be prevented at all costs. War must be prevented. The proletariat must not be taken unawares.

Calls For Struggle.

The All-Union Central Council states again that it deems it absolutely inadmissable that at such an acute moment the Anglo-Russian Committee should be silent and remain inactive. The Anglo-Russian Committee must be one of the centers for the mobilization of proletarian opinion, and must put forward measures for carrying on the struggle against the imperialist onslaught.

Placing the entire blame for the policy of sabotaging the Anglo-Russian Council on the General Council the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions calls upon all British and Soviet workers to put up a fight against the defeat of the forces trying to bring about a new imperialist war.

American authorities are doing everything in their power to crush the rapidly growing labor unions. Several weeks ago Admiral Kittelle compelled workers at the munition dump at Orville to swear that they would report them to him.

The growing unrest of the peasantry on sugar and tobacco plantations coupled with the organization of workers is causing the American officials a good deal of anxiety. The success of the Chinese revolution is believed to have had a good deal to do with the growing consciousness of Philippine workers.

Federal Troops Leave Kansas Textile Strikers

MERIDEN, Kans., June 17.—Textile workers here, who struck against the Federal government's ban given rise to the rumor that the strike was the success of their agitation, the machinery, etc., have been finally ordered and split up into small groups.

General Francisco Manno, military commandant of Semora, has notified President Calles that a large Federal force was no longer necessary and that 2,000 troops could be withdrawn from the territory.

It is believed that certain oil interests, in cooperation with the disgruntled priest element of the district, have been in the main responsible for inciting and aiding the lynchmen in their gloried cattle raids.

Tourists Sailing For Soviet Union To Start July 14

The tourist rush for Europe has begun. Last Saturday's papers reported the greatest number of passengers that ever sailed on one day. Thousands of dollars spent in farewell gifts of flowers and candy; thousands of friends crowding the boats and piers to wave farewell as the boats swung out into the river and down the bay.

Nothing is quite so thrilling as seeing an ocean liner hop off except being on one yourself and watching the New York skyline fade and the old statue of liberty dwindle to pigmy size and finally disappear over the horizon.

On one of these boats last Saturday was a delegation of American students setting out for Soviet Russia; and on July 14th another group including doctors, nurses, teachers, business men and workers will be slipping out of the Swedish American line dock on the "Gripsholm" bound for a similar trip to the first Workers' Republic.

To some of these tourists this will be a first ocean voyage, and nothing was ever more thrilling than that. To others it will be a return to their native land which has seen such mighty changes since they left it fifteen or twenty years ago. Many of this party have visited almost every other country of Europe, but Russia has always been the land of the unknown about which their curiosity has been aroused by lurid and fantastic newspaper tales for many years. All of these tourists have grasped eagerly this first opportunity to make a trip to Soviet Russia, realizing that the simplification of the visa problem alone is a tremendous advantage. An arrangement to guarantee visas for all members of the party has been made by the Cultural Relations Society of the U. S. S. R. with the World Tourists Inc. of 41 Union Square and only by joining this July 11th tour will Americans be assured of entrance to Soviet Russia for many months to come.

Further information on this six weeks' trip should be obtained at once. Only a few days are left in which to decide. Write now to World Tourists, Inc., 41 Union Square, New York.

DUNMORE, June 20.—William Montgomery Brown, the heretic bishop, Albert Welsbord, organizer of the Passaic strike and Arturo Giovannitti will be among the speakers at a mass meeting to demand the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti at All Saints Hall, Reilly and Warren Street, on July 2nd.

Rykoff Nails British Lies

being spread through the medium of the foreign press hostile to the proletarian state. The direct object of this press campaign is the desire to divert attention from the danger of war which is threatening the Soviet Union and from new adventurers being prepared against the Union with material and moral support from the British conservative cabinet.

"All this induces me to reply to your telegram at some length.

"The verdict passed by the USPD you call in your telegram 'executions without trial.' This is incorrect. According to the law of our state, the Collegium of the USPD, in those cases when it is necessary to combat counter revolutionary activities, is vested with the powers of a revolutionary tribunal. Thus the Collegium of the USPD is an extraordinary court which formally is analogous to such extraordinary courts and court, martials as exist in all bourgeois states, the difference in principle consisting in that the Soviet Court inflicts punishment on counter-revolutionaries, while in the bourgeois countries punishment is being inflicted on the revolutionary workers.

White Terror Forces Executions.

"I would like to remind you that the extraordinary commission which existed during the period of intervention and civil war was immediately liquidated as soon as the Soviet State succeeded in driving out the interventionist forces organized and financed by Churchill and in overcoming the internal counter-revolution.

"By this act the Soviet State showed that it considered possible under the new conditions to use former methods of defending the Soviet power against counter-revolution only in extraordinary contingencies when compelled thereto by attempts on the part of whitegaurd plotters.

"In your telegram you state that part of British opinion is "shocked" by the recent sentences inflicted by the USPD. I thing this is due to underrating those specific conditions in which the working class of our union has to defend the right of the toilers' state of existence and the right to build up the socialistic society.

"The working class of our union has to carry on its constructive work in a surrounding of capitalistic states. At the present moment the conservative government of Great Britain having broken off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union is carrying on against the latter a fierce political campaign throughout the world and is preparing another war adventure.

British Plots.

"Every bourgeois state may use for the struggle against the first proletarian state all the resources of its state machinery, its financial power and its press. And now the question of using in the struggle against the U.S.S.R. armed forces as well is being put forword.

"In view of this fierce struggle energetic action of the workers government against active plotters, counter-revolutionaries, adherent's of monarchy and of bourgeois regime in the U.S.S.R. is a forced and absolutely inevitable action.

"When the enemies are using all kinds of means, even bribery, plotting, murders, provocation, arson and [illegible] of military attacks, it would be criminal not to take resolute measures to protect the interests of workers and peasants, and the workers of the U.S.S.R. would consider such conduct as treachery to the revolution and connivance with counter-revolution.

Caught Red-Handed.

"Bourgeois public opinion is 'shocked' by the execution of nobles, landowners, monarchists, who have been caught red-handed in counter-revolutionary activities. But such a position cannot be shared by the working class.

"You ask that the reprisals should cease. The Soviet Union attaches the greatest value to the opinion of the British working class, but it seems to me that it is in the interest of the working class of the world despite the hatred and the inimmerable blows from class enemies to preserve the toilers' state—the first in the history of mankind—which was born in battle and which is carrying on its world important work of organizing the socialistic society in exceptionally difficult conditions.

"It is not the defence of any convicted persons that the campaign actually being waged against U.S.S.R. in connection with the verdict of the U.S.S.R. is aiming at this campaign is an integral part of the general campaign against the Soviet Republic. By the means of this campaign interested circles and in the first place the British tory 'diehards' wish to divert public opinion from the flagrant crime they are committing by preparing a new war, launching a fierce attack against the working class, suppressing with the utmost cruelty the liberating movement of oppressed peoples and classes thruout the world, financing monarchist and whiteguard organizations.

Must Defend Revolution.

"The primary duty of true representatives of the working class is to defend the interests of the proletarian revolution against counter-revolution in all its aspects and not to cover whiteguards, brigand monarchist organizations and their agents.

"I hope that the wide circles of British public opinion, to let alone the working masses, will not give in to the policy of provocation lies and preparation of a new war which is being conducted by the British government."

Japanese Capital in China

In the Yangtze district there are 94,376 Japanese subjects (including Koreans and inhabitants of Formosa). They are grouped in the following harbouses: Shanghai, Nanking, Soochow, Wuhu, Hangchow, Kiukiang, Shasking, Wuhan (Hankow), Chende, Sase, Ichang and Shangshai.

Of the 36 factories in Tsingtao the Japanese own 16, that is to say 43.5 per cent. Reckoning their investments in Chinese factories in Tsingtao also, then Japanese own about 80 per cent of the total invested capital. In the rest of the Shangtung district, the Japanese own 7 of the 10 textile mills, 2 of the 8 grain mills, 3 of the 5 match factories, 1 of the 5 [illegible] power stations. The great part [illegible] and coal mines of Shantung are [illegible] entirely in Japanese hands.

In Manchuria, the Japanese [illegible] a special position. There are a [illegible] mendous number of Japanese [illegible]

dents there:

District	Families	[illegible]
South Manchuria	82,836	214,[illegible]

Apart from this, numerous Japanese merchants have great interests in Chinese concerns.

Gold Concessionaires Do Business in USSR Despite Tory Break

MOSCOW, June 1 (By Mail).—That the Anglo-Soviet rupture would not affect the operations of "The Lena Goldfields, Ltd.," a British concessionaire company, was stated by the representative of this company.

The company is enlarging its activities in the U. S. S. R. The international research company "Exploration" has been invited for carrying on new research work, as well as prominent Soviet, English and American engineers. One of the biggest dredges in the world is being installed in the Lena fields.

The Revdin works, in the Ural, are being re-equipped, while a new copper refining mill, with a productive capacity of about 12,000 tons yearly is being constructed at Dektiarka, also in the Ural.

The working of foreign concession enterprises in the Soviet Union is quite possible, in the concessionnaire's opinion. Foreign capital can meet with a fair attitude towards it in the U. S. S. R. and the sure of a broad field for its activities.

USSR Takes Export of Platinum From Anglo-American Trading Firm

Saul G. Bron, chairman of the board of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, and K. Abolin, of the Russplatina, the Soviet platinum export organization, yesterday announced jointly an important change in handling exports from the Soviet Union.

Up to April such exports were in the hands of an Anglo-American syndicate. At the termination of its contract, the export business was taken over by Russplatina, which has its foreign headquarters in Berlin. On behalf of Russplatina Mr. Abolin has now signed a contract making Amtorg the sole representative of Russplatina in the United States.

The new arrangement under which American imports of platinum will come direct from the Soviet Union is expected to have a favorable influence on the Russian-American platinum trade.

THE most embarrassing moment in the life of chief of police Michael Borrell of Cliffside, N. J., occurred a few days ago when federal sleuths on trouble bent raided a building in his and characterized it as an alcohol cleaning plant. The building was misrepresented as an automobile laundry and nobody was more surprised than the chief when he discovered that wicked bootleggers were using the place to carry on their nefarious business. Chief Borrell should hang a bell on his revolver, else some wise kid will sneak it out of his pocket.

DAN MOODY, governor of Texas and 200 prominent citizens of that state arrived here on Monday to see the dreadful Tammany tiger in his lair. Away in the distant south the voters have heard horrible stories of the treacherous beast of prey but they are from Texas, they have this in common with Missourians — they have to be shown. Now, if Al Smith can promise Moody a nice soft job with a lot of dignity thrown in, when the tiger lands in Washington, the state of Texas might forget William Gibbs McAdoo.

Baron Jailed For Rape.

LONDON, June 20.—Sir Gerald Maxwell Willshire pleaded guilty in Kent Assizes, Maidstone today to a charge of indecently and unlawfully, assaulting Miss Jean Olds, a London Mannequin, and was sentenced to six months imprisonment.

Miss Olds charged that Sir Gerald had taken her to the woods near Bearsted last May 10th, and attacked her.

Despite the warning of the presiding judge that the case was one that refined people would not wish to hear, the courtroom was crowded with fashionable women. The case had aroused tremendous interest throughout England.

STUDENTS OF JOURNALISM MUST STUDY HISTORY, ECONOMICS AND POLITICS IN THE SOVIET UNION

MOSCOW, June 17.—(By Mail.)—Requirements for men and women who wish to enter the Soviet schools of journalism have just been published in the press here.

Those who want to study in the State Institute of Journalism must be able to orient themselves in current political events. They must have a correct understanding of the decisions of party congresses and conferences, especially of the 14th and 15th party conferences, and the recent plenums of the CC of the CPSU (b). They must also be well grounded in the history of the CPSU (b), as well as in economics and in the history of the class struggle.

Students with university education who register for journalism courses must pass examinations in the following subjects: economics, the history of Russia and western Europe, and the history of the party.

In economics the minimum requirements are Karl Marx's "Capitel", volumnes I and II, and Lenin's "Imperialism: The Last Stage of Capitalism".

In the history of the class struggle in western Europe the minimum required is: "Modern History of Western Europe", N. M. Lukin, Chapters 1 to 4; the "Class Struggle in France, 1848-1850, Karl Marx; the History of the Labor Movement in England, France and Germany; and the "Civil War in France 1871," Karl Marx.

The rest of the required reading included in the minimum includes "History of the CPSU (b)", by Popov; "Russian History from Ancient Times, Vol. IV", Pokrovsky; "Concise Russian History", Vol. III; "Brief Description of the History of the Revolutionary Movement in Russia during the 19th and 20th centuries."

Preparations for War in the Air.

The two army fliers, Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert F. Hegenberger, started Tuesday from Oakland, California, to Hawaii, endeavoring to repeat in the Pacific the performances of Lindbergh and Chamberlain in the Atlantic. The fact is definitely established that army planes flying from this continent can drop high explosives on the principal capitals of Europe. The flight to the middle of the Pacific was openly proclaimed as a military maneuver, theoretically attacking a Japanese fleet midway between Honolulu and San Francisco, discovering its return trip spotted and continuing to Hawaii.

Simultaneous with these flights occurs the open breach at Geneva between the United States on one side and Britain and Japan on the other over the question of naval armaments. According to Wythe Williams, Geneva correspondent of the New York Times, the American delegation is going to begin a propaganda campaign to prepare public opinion for the conflict between these powers that, although not imminent, is inevitable. Williams reports that in the event of the complete breakdown of the Geneva conference "the American delegation feels that the American public would then fully realise our exact position in relation to other world powers."

We can assure the pen valets of capitalism that to the extent that it is in our power we will do our utmost to see to it that at least the exploited section of the American public—the vast majority—fully realizes the fact that a new blood bath is being prepared by the greedy and avaricious imperialist monsters of Wall Street and that the position of the United States in relation to other powers is that of a giant endeavoring to bestride the earth, and bring the rest of the world under its domination. To achieve its aim it now starts its propaganda machine working overtime in an effort to deceive the workers into the shambles of the next war.

Tremendous strides in aviation indicate a revolution in warfare. The uncertainty, hesitancy and general confusion that characterize discussions of army and navy policy is due to the fact that profound changes are taking place in the technique of warfare. That aviation will play a leading role, if not the leading role, is evident. Capital ships will have to depend for protection upon a formidable array of planes that can fight off the air forces of the enemy. Characteristic of the revolution in warfare is the recent award of the Airship Competition Board to the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company in the design competition of a new dirigible of 6,500,000 cubic feet gas capacity. This will be by far the largest airship in the world, exceeding by a million and a half cubic feet gas capacity the largest of the British dirigibles and almost twice the size of the biggest German type of dirigible. The new airship will be capable of carrying five of the largest type of Fokker planes, which can be launched from the big ship while it is in the air.

The frantic race that will unquestionably be launched for the building of naval cruisers and the keen aircraft competition now raging throughout the world must be met with the most relentless, militant and determined opposition on the part of the workers. Right now, while the imperialists are making their preparations for the next war, we must expose their machinations and impede with every means at our command the sanguinary preparations of the international butchers.

Workers' Tours.

A workers' tourist agency (World Tours, Inc.) seems a far off cry from the class struggle but nevertheless its entry into the field of workers' activities has considerable value for the American worker, farmer progressives and other liberals.

As a first venture the trip to Soviet Russia demonstrates the invaluable effectiveness of such an agency. Barriers are removed which formerly seemed arduous, visas secured without any red tape although ordinarily it takes much longer. Sightseeing trips in Moscow and Leningrad are being arranged with various Soviet institutions that formerly only granted privileges to official delegations.

Instead of going to dead Sphinxes and dead cities the tourists will visit a living world, full of wonders building up a new society. Its attractiveness as a trip and reasonable charge cannot be overstressed.

All comrades should stimulate interest in the tour among their fellow workers, the liberal elements in their neighborhood who have friends and relatives in Russia.

The tour is of great value not only because of its rare opportunities for having a thrilling vacation but it also has splendid propaganda value.

Recognition of Soviet Russia, and Hands Off Soviet Russia campaigns will take on new life with 500 or 1000 enthusiastic tourists returning from a country where the workers and peasants are building Socialism.

Let all comrades get behind the World Tours, Inc., boost its first venture to Soviet Russia and help make it possible for tens of thousands of workers in the near future to see new worlds in the making in Russia—in China and other countries which will soon be definite factors in the World Revolution.

Support of the Furriers' Union Is Defending the Right to Picket.

Judge Ewald of the Jefferson Market court, unquestionably following a deliberate policy decided by far more important officials in the city hall and the state capital, dealt another blow Wednesday morning to the right to peacefully picket.

The sentencing of some fifty members of the Furriers' Union to jail from three to ten days for picketing is an act committed in the face of the recent decision of the state supreme court authorizing peaceful picketing. No claim is made that the picketing was in violation of the law as recently interpreted but these workers are in jail nevertheless. The arbitrary power of the police and a magistrate makes the ruling of the supreme court a farce.

The convictions and sentences come after the arrest of 246 workers on the picket line as a climax to the general attack that has been made on the union for months.

The issue is clear. The bosses and their courts are determined to make peaceful picketing impossible while at the same time saving the face of their higher and more eminently respectable judicial bodies.

The actions of the police and magistrates are a challenge to the whole labor movement.

If it takes a passive attitude, if determined and uncompromising support for the Furriers' Union is not forthcoming, the precedent established will be used against the labor movement in all its strikes for years to come.

Strikes without picketing mean little in most industries. The effort to prevent picketing by mass arrests and jailings is also a blow at the right to strike.

The New York labor movement, operating in the largest city in America, has the duty of speaking and acting determinedly, not tomorrow or a week from now, but today.

The Furriers' Union is in the first line trenches defending the right to strike and picket. The reserve army of labor must come to their aid or they face defeat in a field of labor activity where such privileges as exist have been won by years of struggle.

The defense of the Furriers' Union and support for its strike, is defense and support of the whole American labor movement.

Standard Oil Thanks Admiral Williams.

Rear Admiral Williams, in command of the naval forces that initiated the shelling of Hankow and the slaughter of 7,000 unarmed inhabitants, is the recipient of a congratulatory letter from the assistant general manager of the Standard Oil Company. The letter, published in another part of this issue, contains none of the perfervid hokum that filled the columns of the reptile press about protection of American lives. Standard Oil states frankly that it values the services of Williams, because he "not only protected the lives of our staff, but saved us from greater financial loss," and "convoyed our vessels through disturbed districts."

This letter reveals at one stroke the real reason for the presence of armed forces of the United States in Chinese waters—they are there to protect the American exploiters of China and to pave the way for further imperialist penetration of that country, and the war against China is in the interest of Standard Oil, the House of Morgan and other bandits of Wall Street.

This letter should be kept in mind by all workers who may be called upon to fight to defend the interests of these exploiters under the cheap patriotic slogans of defending American lives and property or making the world safe for civilization.

DANGER AHEAD!

By T. LOAF.

ON May 13 a coup d'etat was staged since the military coup of Pilsudski in Poland. This fascist stroke, unopposed with the assistance of England, started the pronouncement will on England's part to encircle the Soviet Union. But at the same time this overturn in Poland meant the shelving of the influence of France in Poland, a fact of no little significance to one who knows the post-war history of that fascist-ridden country, as in Rumania the Bolsjavs, so in Poland the influential Nationalist Block have been resentful of this change of foreign orientation, in one case from France to Italy that is to England, in the other directly from France toward England.

EXACTLY a year later, on May 12th, 1927 the die-hards of the British government, inspired by the Colonial Secretary Amery and directed by Scotland Yard orientated by Home Secretary Joynson-Hicks were giving by means of the Arcos raid, an act of unprecedented diplomatic banditry the "final touches" to this policy of isolating the Soviet Union and at the same time were trying with their "most modern and scientific" burglar tools to rivet an Anglo-French diplomatic unity.

THE Arcos raid preceded but by four days the French visit; and the reported dissension and debate in the English cabinet as to the advisability of a complete break with the Soviet Union was paralleled by "conversations" between Chamberlain and Briand. To this fact and not to the excuse of a necessary thoro examination of the stolen papers—most of the capitalist papers admitted that the raid was in this respect a fiasco—was due the delay in the government's declaration in parliament.

The four days of bargaining between the so-called "statesmen" of England and France were taken up with forming a united front" at the coming session of the League Council. As far as the English policy was concerned, it meant the putting of all the League powers to the anti-Soviet chariot of Britain.

There were still some mere "coincidences" that centered around that date of May 12th.

IV

ON May 12th was set the conference of the three Little Entente powers in Joachimsthal, Czecho-Slovakia. It was known that Yugo-Slavia, threatened with complete encircling and isolation by the Italo-British policy, was asking for the support of the other two presumable allies.

This time, because of the "dashing" policy of Italy in reestablishing the influence of their extended antagonist Hungary in Central Europe, there existed a possibility that the Little Entente might receive a new lease of life. But the strengthening of the Little Entente meant a marked setback to France and by this fact alone it meant the weakening of the continental influence of Great Britain, while for Italy it would mean a marked setback to her Balkan plans. Moreover it was known that Yugo-Slavia was ready to conclude a neutrality agreement with the Soviet Union.

ANOTHER occurrence closely connected with the determination of the aggressive and rabid anti-Soviet politicians in the Baldwin cabinet was the "first Locarno" where the "spirit of Locarno" was to be invoked in the proposition being reached in adopting a resolution which would give a meaning to the participation of the Soviet Union in the peaceful world economy and would by implication work against a too inimical policy of the English tories. Because of lack of space we cannot here discuss the economic significance of the known formula, presented to the conference by the Soviet delegation—this estimate anyway is longer than originally projected—but it would surely lessen for a time the tension between the imperialist world and the Soviet Union.

TURNING back to the Anglo-French "understanding" for the session of the League Council we see how the raising of the question of the Soviet Union necessarily involved all the burning issues between the imperialist powers. Whether the French government was informed before of the coming Arcos raid, or the tories decided to put before it an "accomplished fact" we do not know. But the raid surely was meant to unite the two powers in a joint campaign, aiming to start with, at a diplomatic and economic blockade to clear the way for a warlike expedition against the Soviet Union.

By an irony of fate it made, according to us, the actual bargain between all the powers harder to arrange.

WHAT were the issues to be "settled" between England and France at that moment?

First, the extent to which France was ready to support England's anti-Soviet policy and, be it added, also Chinese policies and the price England was ready to pay for this support.

Second, what should be done with the still largely unpaid "compensation" to Germany for signing the Locarno pact? The possible necessity of her joining England and France in an anti-Soviet campaign was making the "settling" of the question absolutely imperative. But then, how big a "reward" it should be and which of the two powers should pay the bigger portion of it?

Third, the exceedingly aggressive and forceful expansionist policy of Italy which by her intrigues in Albania and Rumania, and lately also in Bulgaria and Greece, was trying to establish herself in the Balkans for good and was extending her tentacles into North Africa and Asia Minor, everywhere coming into conflict with the "established" imperialist interests of France; nay, more, nurturing anew the spirit of "Italia Irredenta" with regard to the city of Nice, the province of Savoy and also the island of Corsica.

WHAT should be done with all that if even a school boy knows that behind Italy there was standing Great Britain? What to do with this "Balkan problem", the mention only of which revives all the memories of the World War that was ignited in this "cursed" territory with its tradition of thousands of revolts and constant guerilla warfare?

It at once brings to the fore the question of the control of the Mediterranean Sea, that is the route to India, the question of Turkey and the whole Near East Indeed, all the cess olds Persia and Afghanistan, on the other Egypt.

It is against all these the economic, the political of the Berlin-Bagdad railway, that thanks to Yugo-Slavia's overtures to Germany is being again broached there.

IN a word, a powder magazine of a myriad imperialist covetings and rapacities was apt to be stirred to a point of explosion in a world whose stability—as a result of the last war—is surely very shaky.

WE do not know the secrets of the conversations between Chamberlain and Briand, but despite the fact that the negotiations between Chicherin and the French in the matter of Russian debts and presumably also regarding France's attitude towards the Soviet Union, have not met with success and despite also the hateful anti-Soviet clamoring of the French capitalist press and some members of the French cabinet for the suppression of the French Communist Party, France could not afford to appear as absolutely tied to England in his policy. Then if the French Nationalists had nothing against and possibly even encouraged a break with the Soviet Union, these very same Nationalists were against any conciliation with Germany.

This meant for Briand that he could not pay a too high price for his "Thoiry policy"; he could not give satisfaction to the German demand of an effective evacuation of the Rhineland. But this was in its turn making it difficult for Briand to come to tri-partite understanding with England and Germany about a policy against the Soviet Union.

HOWEVER, despite all the difficulties, it is more than probable that Chamberlain and Briand have reached in London au agreement as to their policy at the coming League session. It is said that Briand was offered by Chamberlain compensation in China through extension of the French "sphere of influence" from Indo-China into the Chinese province of Yunan.

Briand was probably assured also of a continued French partnership in the control of Mediterranean Sea as well as of England's readiness to check somewhat the too troublesome Mussolini. Furthermore both powers agreed probably on the number of troops to be evacuated from the Rhineland as well as about the question of Germany's colonial aspirations.

THE fact that France has supported England's policy in Egypt during the negotiations between the British imperialists and the Egyptian Nationalists coupled with the planned visit of the French fleet to Portsmouth and the festivities of the French state visit to England, is indicative of some common policy.

The key to this common policy lies in the often disregarded fact that France is the second largest colonial empire. In this respect an "entente cordiale" between England and France means the basis for common suppression of colonial peoples. If France supports Great Britain in keeping Egypt in check it is because she gets support for her policy in Rumania in suppluated by a benchman of the Rumanian "boss" Bratiano, Stirbey (later by Bratiano himself). While the first means highly provocative act of Yugo-Slavia against Italy, the second meant a return back to a French orientation in Rumania. The League Council stood thus before a new tease situation in the Balkans.

However, it was primarily the question of Germany, more correct of the German "price" demanded for her "western orientation" that broke up that memorable meeting.

"Streets of Sorrow" European Film Sensation Opens at Cameo Sat.

Beginning this Saturday the Film Arts Guild will show at Moss' Cameo Theatre the American premiere presentation of "Streets of Sorrow," a picture which has been accorded tremendous receptions in Europe and hailed as a screen-sensation. The director, George W. Pabst, who recently gave us "The Treasury and Secrets of a Soul" has painted with artistic naturalism post-war life in Vienna.

The story is taken from the novel by Hugo Bettauer and deals with the ghastly conditions in the Austrian capital spawned by the backwash of war and intensified by the money-grubbing speculators and capitalists of the period. One street, Melchior Gasse, serves as the axis around which revolves a cross-section of black misery when human emotions warped and tangled by incredible misery plunged its people into a cauldron of seething suffering. Starvation, endless meat-lines waiting hopelessly in front of butcher shops—gold lust—stock manipulations of the war —rich—intrigues of the allies—the harlotry of middle-class daughters—murders—a frenzied buying and selling of everything—forbidden night pleasures carried on surreptitously—all were neighbors on the "Streets of Sorrow."

A cast of thirty principal players, of continental renown enact the numerous situations of this remarkable screen-drama. Four of the outstanding roles are portrayed by artists who are familiar to New York audiences: Greta Garbo, Werner Kraus, A. Nielson and Einar Hansen.

Broadway Briefs

John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, who played in "Flesh and the Devil," will again appear before the camera together in "Love," Metro's newest production based on Tolstoi's famous novel, "Anna Karenina." Edmund Goulding will direct the film.

2,000 boys, members of the Street Safety School Patrol, will be guests of Warner Bros. at a special showing of the Barney Oldfield film, "The First Auto," at the Colony Theatre, tomorrow morning, July 1st at 10 A. M.

"The Cabinet Of Dr. Caligari," seems to have settled down for a run at Moss' Cameo Theatre, where it is now in the second week. It is planned to follow this program with the premiere presentation in this country of "Streets of Sorrow," a dramatic and engrossing European film of post-war life in Vienna in which Greta Garbo, Werner Kraus, Einar Hanson and Asta Nielson play the featured roles. The film is sponsored by the Film Arts Guild.

What's What in Washington

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.

WASHINGTON, (FP) June 29.—The Washington establishment, evidently convinced that now when England, Japan and America are at cross-purposes and observe is the time to strike terror into the hearts of the minds of countrymen, has drawn forth sharp reprisal from even such a fire-eater as Chairman James of the house committee on military affairs.

The Army and Navy Journal, "spokesman of the services," seeing the economy program of President Coolidge as the only obstacle to congressional action in favor of bigger military forces, warns the President sternly that if he stands in the way of appropriations this winter Congress will override him.

U. S. Communists Active.

Outstanding is the conviction that the chauvinists have at last convinced party leaders that America must launch into the world's heaviest armament-building program. Secretary of State Kellogg has informed the British delegation at Geneva through Minister Hugh Gibson that the United States will "insist on absolute and unqualified parity with Great Britain in all types of ships."

And back of that threat is the warning that if no treaty is signed, the United States will not content itself with merely achieving parity with the British navy, but will aim at building the "world's biggest navy." The ratio between the British and American navies now is 7.7 to 5, with Japan rated at 4.1.

Move Cruisers.

Representative Britten of Chicago, member of the house committee on naval affairs, in a statement July 27, declared that if the French fail to approve the treaty of the U. S. "I seriously doubt," declares Edwards, "if there is a more ardent advocate of universal peace in America than myself; but America cannot afford to be second to any nation in the matter of naval strength."

Leads to War.

Exactly that line of talk, say officials of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, with headquarters here, accompanied Germany's pre-war naval expansion which ended in the world war. Similar talk in Japan before the world war strained Japanese-American relations to the breaking point on innumerable occasions. America's ill-concealed intentions now similarly enrage big navy advocates in Britain and Japan and prelude another mad armamenta race.

American navalists admit that this is true, but declare that this country is so rich that neither Britain nor Japan can now attempt to keep up with us, if Congress really plunges into the armaments race. So far as the resultant increase in international suspicion and hatred is concerned, they answer that America with the biggest navy, the biggest air force and a strong army can afford to ignore the enmity of the rest of the world.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Job Hunting.

Many bosses write or phone the advertisers of "situations wanted," not with the view to hiring them, but only to find out just how little they will work for.

They write or speak ambiguously, something like this: "Kindly call to see Mr. Blank in reference to job." Then after you spend several hours searching for the boss you discover that all he wants to know is the lowest wage you will work for, how much experience you have, and where you worked last, and quite often your nationality and union affiliations.

He promises to "let you know," but he seldom does. Many unemployed men let good (?) jobs slip thru their fingers, while they visited these prospective bosses.

As to the worker, he spends his money and time, and each day is dragged down economically and morally.—JOHN THANASOULOE.

ELLA REEVES BLOOR INTERVIEWING GOVERNORS, INDIANS, MEXICANS AND MINERS FOR THE DAILY

DENVER, Colo., June 29.—The desert trip through Imperial Valley to Yuma was remarkable for the fact that we passed through 35,000 acres of cantaloupes just ready to be shipped with armies of Mexicans, Hindoos and Indians on the picking job. After one of the hottest rides in the world through the Yuma desert, to Phoenix, we found a few comrades still on the job there. Phoenix is a very active city of 30,000 population, with many thousand Mexicans.

Here we were told by some gullible workers that governor Hunt was "their" governor. We then wended our way to his office and asked him if he would like to talk to a "Bolshevik"—we also gave him our card as "representatives of The DAILY Worker."

Hunt grinned a little, eyed the paper curiously, and then began to talk about Russia. He said he should be recognized by Russia. When we touched the subject of the Boulder dam, and the Colorado River project which is stirring the whole west, he became reticent, but as usual tried to convey the impression that he was fighting for the people of Arizona against the great "interests." The very next day he started on a trip to Colorado, with a host of officials of all the states interested, all of them servants of big interests."

The Mexicans.

After a house to house campaign with Comrade Wm. O'Brien, the DAILY WORKER agent of Phoenix—we held a big meeting on the City Hall Plaza, speaking on "World Labor News." This brought out a number of Labor men—Mexican workers, railway workers, and a specially interested group of Negroes. A collected was taken for The DAILY WORKER, and some subscribers secured. Here in Phoenix a large railway center, the Santa Fe R. R. has "killed" the Railway Clerks Union by establishing a Company Union that controls their very life.

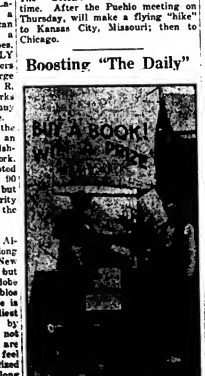
The first move was to order the poorer paid workers to report an hour earlier every morning, establishing a nine hour day for the hardest work. The Union Telegraphers voted against the Company Union by a 90 per cent vote all along the line, but the Railway Clerks by a big majority meekly submitted their necks to the yoke of the Company Union.

Indian Farms.

The trek from Phoenix to Albuquerque, New Mexico, was a long and hard one. All through New Mexico we encountered nothing but Indinn farms, everywhere Indian dobe houses and many old dobe Pueblos still inhabited. The everyday life is almost as primitive as in the earliest days. Albuquerque is managed by Mexicans—they have gained, not only in industrial power, but are deeply interested in politics. We feel sure if the workers here realized their condition, low wages and long hours, they would struggle; we hope to get El Machetez can be sent there and distributed in as large numbers as in Los Angeles, via 300 per week.

From Albuquerque to Trinidad we can reach the coal mines and let me say right here, there is a "rumble" in the Colorado Coal Mines that may bring forth organization so ardently desired all these years.

One young miner told me, an American miner, that in his mine near Trinidad, the boss told them Saturday, that if ever one piece of slate should be found in their coal they would be fired.



Secured a few subs in Trinidad and then went to the Standard Oil owned town of Pueblo.

Fuel Prospects.

The Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. has its great steel mills here, and the town has an aspect like Pittsburgh. We opened an open meeting of Party members, selling many subs for "Enquiry," "The Communist" and a few for the "DAILY WORKER." They urged me to return and hold a meeting there. Such a meeting has been arranged for Thursday evening, with such as the Labor Temple, [illegible] where I shall speak on "World Labor News" for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER.

Coming to Denver on Tuesday, I addressed the Pride D. E. C. that evening, Wednesday evening, Women's Forum; Friday evening, Workmen's Circle "Labor League"; Saturday, a big Italian protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti; Sunday, The DAILY WORKER picnic; Monday, the Farmer Labor College at Indian Hills. Tuesday, Judge Lindsay will speak at Labor Lyceum on "Companionate Marriage." I will try to get an interview with him for The "DAILY WORKER" at that time. After the Pueblo meeting on Thursday, will make a flying "hike" to Kansas City, Missouri; then to Chicago.

Boosting "The Daily"

As a result of the flood, Negro slavery, which has existed for years in the South, was discovered to be still flourishing, and interferred with the saving of the Negro residents of flooded districts.

TO INSURE A LEGAL LYNCHING

National guardsmen on the roof of the Jackson, Miss., courthouse and jail with machine guns, and detachment stationed behind barbed wire fence around the building. A mob was trying to hang John Burley, railroaded thru the courts and sentenced to death, without waiting for the regular legal formalities. When a Negro is charged with murder in the South he is always hanged, but lately the state administrations have been insisting on having it done by due process of law.

Professional Patriots

A sample bit of propaganda issued by the R. O. A. is the following letter:

RESERVE OFFICERS' ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES
NEW YORK STATE ASSOCIATION
342 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

Office of the President September 27, 1926.

Fellow Officer:

If any Reserve Officer receiving this Bulletin thinks he has no personal responsibility beyond his own individual activity in advancing the cause of National Defense, let him write (but—NOT as a Reserve Officer) to the National Council for the Prevention of War, 532 17th Street NW, Washington, D. C., for a copy of their pamphlet "Organizations in the U. S. A. that Promote World Peace." If—what you learn from that publication of the scope and strength of the pacifist opposition to Defense does not secure your immediate and active participation in our work, then may God halp the National Defense Act! It will soon be beyond our aid!

The pamphlet contains 34 pages and lists 82 organizations with officers of each, Purposes, Legislative Program and Activities. Some of these societies are working sincerely for World Peace along lines we, as Reserve Officers, can heartily subscribe to. The regretable feature of their affiliation with this "National Council" is that it associates them with organizations frankly opposed to the best interests of our form of government. For instance: The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, at one time presided over by the Honorable Elihu Root, is lined up with the League for Industrial Democracy directed by Robert Morss Lovett who is also an active member of the American Civil Liberties Union and other radical groups.

The real reason radical groups oppose Defense is to save the way cleared of all opposition, when their time comes to strike. This explains why they line up with every sort of pacifist movement; why they initiate pacifist societies under different names as a camouflage, through which they are able to secure funds from persons who are for Peace, but who would be shocked at the idea their money is aiding socialist-communist activities.

Now—what have we to oppose the tremendous volume of anti-Defense printed matter aad other propaganda being broadcasted by these organizations—over 100 of them? Who are the avowed friends of National Defense? First, naturally, the three components of the Army of the U. S.; then we have the support of the various patriotic societies—the Sons and Daughters of the Revolution—the G.A.R. and its auxiliaries—the Spanish War organizations—The American Legion and Auxiliary —The American Defense Society—The Navy League—National Security League.

Numerically our strength is pitifully small compared with those leagued against us. Spiritually, however, our Cause is a powerful FORCE provided we can put it to work. All will agree that in every community there are far more honest than dishonest people. One is honest because of right thinking. Our problem is to get our fellow citizens to THINKING RIGHT on National Defense. Once we get our people THINKING RIGHT on this subject, the catch words and phrases of our opponents such as "Militarism" and the "Militarizing of our schools and colleges," will fall flat.

Below are listed a few of the most important anti-Defense organizations affiliated with the National Council referred to previously. Watch for any sort of activity in your community sponsored by these societies:

Association to Abolish War
American Federation of Teachers
Association for Peace Education
Church Peace Union
Fellowship of Reconciliation
League for Industrial Democracy
National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Committee to Outlaw War
Interrolligeiate Peace Association
National Students Forum
Women's International League for Peace and Freedom
Women's Peace Society
Women's Peace Union of Western Homisphere.

As a Reserve Officer don't you believe it is YOUR obligation to be informed of the forces constantly working against preparedness? Get the facts! When you are properly posted, National Defense will mean a very great deal more to you and we will not have to be pleading for assistance in the work we are carrying on.

Fill out the application blank on the back of the enclosed bulletin—or, if you are a member, get one of your friends to join! Don't wait—the time to act is now!

Faithfully yours,
Lt. Colonel Fred Cardway, President.

The secretary-treasurer of the Reserve Officers' Association of the Indiana department contributed his share to the propaganda against peace workers when he mailed out the following letter in an effort to prevent the organization of the Indiana Council on International Relations of which the National Council for the Prevention of War was giving its aid:

RESERVE OFFICERS' ASSOCIATION OF DEPARTMENT OF INDIANA
Indiana Trust Building
Indianapolis, Indiana

May 11, 1926. (cas)

The enclosed papers are sent to a number of the officers of the American Association of University Women in Indiana, due to the fact that the Association is said to be giving support to one Frederick J. Libby, Executive Secretary for the National Council for the Prevention of War.

Pacifists are making a determined effort to destroy military training in the schools and colleges and Mr. Libby is believed to be associated with persons who are active in working to this end. This is likewise a very prominent objective of communist efforts in this country, and the propaganda is well financed and aggressive.

It is regretted that no compilation of data is available now to show the unfortunate and, with very many persons, unintentional alliance between communists and good people who have thoughtlessly lent their support to the attempted destruction of our national defense policy.

It is suggested that your State Association withhold support to the National Council for the Prevention of War, pending further investigation of this body and its associates.

WITH THE Young Worker

Negro Youth

A. GUSAHOFF.

It seems that the most important problem, for the bourgeois professors of the white and Negro race to solve, is to prove, that the American Negro is progressing, that the Negro of the olden days, who was isolated in the far south, on the cotton, textile, sugar and other plantations, working under the most miserable conditions of the slave system, is gradually bettering his conditions, and is securing for himself a place in the various industries of the North, as well, as in the industrialized South, among the always "superior" white workers.

These research workers, who are so much interested in the problems of the Negro, show to us with great pride and happiness, that the Negro is not only taking an active part in the industrial life of this country, but also in the political life, and that he is more and more bebomiug race conscious (they bother very little about his class consciousness) and strives for closer cooperation with the white workers of this country.

It is of great importance to examine this existing situation, and really see if the conditions of the Negro in the United States have changed much, if the conditions of the Negro youth have changed any, and if they can be compared with those of white workers.

Lynchings.

A good example of the changed conditions, will be the fact, that even today lynchings are taking place in the various states of this great country. Of course the yearly average has decreased but still it does not look as if this barbaric method of disposing of people had been eliminated, which by the way, does not give much prestige to our "democratic" government, which promises protection to "all," who live under our "starry" flag.

Industrialization.

Another of the important changes, is the industrialization of the Negro in general, and the Youth specifically. The statistics given show that the bulk of the Negro population is gainfully employed in the various important and basic industries of this country. With the exception of the foreign born, a larger percentage of Negro men are engaged in gainfull occupations, than any other group of workers. Children make up a large per cent in industry.

The Negro usually works at a smaller wage than the white worker does which explains the necessity of a great number of children working in various industries in order to help their parents to make a half decent existence.

In one of the recent publications, which deal with the life of the Negro in the South, it is stated: that though a Negro of the South may work steady all his life, it will be impossible for him to have any money saved. Not because of his extravagant living, but because he is always underpaid, and never makes enough to live on.

The conditions of the Negro, especially the youth in the North is just as bad. That is because of the refusal of the A. F. of l.. to accept them into the existing trade unions, and in general lack of organization. It is necessary to note that certain liberals, who seem to be so much concerned with the race problem, are developing the theory, that the Negro is "better off," by not joining the unions, because an employer would never pay the same wages to a Negro worker, when he can get a white worker to do the same work for the same price.

We all know that this is not true. That even in time of slack many white workers were let go, while the Negroes remained. We all know during the last investigation which was made not so long ago in the Pittsburgh district in 28 steel mills it was proven that Negro workers are employed, and paid the same wage as the white and that the owners of these factories found Negro labor more reliable.

This bunk is being spread in order to keep the Negroes out of the unions with their own free will, and always be able to use them as scabs to break strikes of the white workers, and in such a manner still more strengthen race hatred.

What are the other chances, extended to the Negro and the Negro youth?

Where are these special privileges given to the Negro that bring them nearer to the white workers and share the privilege of slaving together, under the severest exploitation of the bosses.

America is famous for her public schools, and the education given free to all. Let us now compare the illiteracy among the whites and the Negroes.

The illiteracy among the whites is only 4.0 per cent of the entire population, while the illiteracy among the Negroes is 22.9 per cent. Why is it? It is because first, not as much money is spent for the Negro schools as for the schools of the white children, and second, because the Negro youth has to leave the schools much sooner and already in the early age, carry upon themselves the responsibility of his own upkeep.

There is only one time when no exceptions are made, and that is when the question of protecting American property is coming up. That is the only time when the Negro youth is reminded of being a citizen of this great democratic country, and appeals are made to him to join the army, navy, etc. and not let this country be ruined by foreigners.

What is there for the Negro youth and for the adult Negro to do? How can they solve their problem? The Negro youth ought to once for all understand that their emancipation is closely linked up with that of the entire working class. That they must fight first the battle of all the workers of this country, fight for their organization on class basis, for their admisaion into the trade unions and organize themselves into a strong class organization, which will be able to wage a fight against the entire capitalist system, and only then their problems will be solved.

The place of the Negro youth is in such militant organizations, as the Y. W. L. who fight for the interests of all the workers without any race differences.

Only with the downfall of capitalism which not only supports race discrimination but use it as a medium to keep away the workers of one race from another, will the problem of all the races be solved.

SPORT

DETROIT TO WITNESS A CRACK SOCCER GAME JULY 3.

DETROIT, Mich., June 29.—Two outstanding rivals in soccer football will meet each other at the Great Workers Press Picnic July 3rd at Rochester Friends Park. The Detroit team of the Labor Sports Alliance is challenging the Mansfield team for championship. The Mansfield team is coming to Detroit with vengeance in their eyes because in the last three attempts they have failed to get the best of the Detroit team. Each of the teams has won one game and one was tied. Both teams recently have gained new strength and a great deal of training for the coming conflict.

The main game will be played at 3 p. m. on July 3rd. In the morning of the same day and at the same place the second teams will play a game that will also prove interesting.

The Detroit teams are preparing a banquet for the Mansfield team on the evening of July 3rd. This sporting event will be the leading feature of this picnic and will be followed by a crack baseball game on the fourth of July on the same grounds. The Admission to the picnic is 25 cents.

SENTENCE 46 WOMEN FURRIER PICKETS TO JAIL

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE frightful conditions under which men work on board ship was again brought to public attention when 85 Chinese managed to leave the Holland-American liner Rotterdam, after she reached port a few days ago. The Chinese leased the "blackhole gang" in Rotterdam and were promised shore leave when they arrived in Hoboken. They were obliged to work for the miserable wage of $3 a week, while white workers received $8 a week.

WHEN the Rotterdam arrived in Hoboken the captain broke his promise to the Chinese stokers, but pacifism is not now a Chinese virtue, if it ever was, so the deceived stokers armed themselves with weapons of various kinds and proceeded sto cut their way thru to shore. They waded thru all opposition until a considerable portion of the armed forces of New York City was mobilised to block the advance. At that only 54 of them were arrested. The rest are probably quenching their thirst with fairly good beer and enjoying the movies.

THE 85 Chinese workers that fired the Rotterdam on her way from Holland to the United States received less for their week's arduous toil than the wages of four New York carpenters for a week's work under union conditions. The conditions under which toilers of the sea work are almost intolerable. They have no union worthy of the name, the scab ostrich headed by the arch-chief-breaker Havelock Wilson of Great Britain being a stool pigeon agency for the British government and a tool of the shipping companies. The colored workers on the ships are the worst sufferers thru lack of organisation.

SOME years back there was an organization with headquarters in New York City which took in Chinese, Japanese, Malay, Filipino and workingclass natives of other Oriental countries. It was called the Oriental Seafarers' Association and did splendid work while it lasted. The reactionary bureaucrats of the A. F. of L. refused it affiliation, and it passed out. Now, the Oriental seafarers are completely at the mercy of the shipping bosses. How long until all workers who participate in the transportation of passengers and commerce on sea will join hands for their mutual benefit?

SOME wise sleuth has discovered that the "Russian Soviet"—the ass's designation for the U.S.S.R.—is organising the Negroes in the United States for the purpose of overthrowing this government. He has made the remarkable discovery that several Negro students are attending a university in Moscow where they are being trained in the art of leadership. The startling "expose" appeared in the Herald-Tribune, simon-pure mouthpiece of Calvin Coolidge.

• • •

NOBODY but a stoolpigeon would possess the modicum of idiocy necessary to withstand the ridicule usually poured out on the sap, who breaks into print with such an obvious truism as, for instance, that water is wet. Negro progressives have been working their fingers off for several years trying to attract public attention to their activities, which are designed to better the condition of their doubly exploited and persecuted race whose members are lynched, burned at a stake and tortured with impunity by the prototypes of the fink who wants to make a few shekels by pouring the drippings from his mental sewer into the columns of a capitalist sheet.

• • •

WHEREVER the oppressed raise their voices for more liberty or organise to take it by any feasible means, the apologists and hired menials of the oppressors immediately blame the government of the Soviet Union for the struggle for freedom. This is the highest compliment that could be paid to the government of the Workers Republic. It proves that the men and women charged with the responsibility of keeping the U.S.S.R. on the right road have been true to their trust and that neither cajolery nor threats, the clinking of coin or the clanking of swords swerved them from their purpose.

Bukharin Brands Feng Traitor; Says Chinese Revolt Takes New Turn

MOSCOW, June 30.—Branding Feng's alliance with Chiang Kai-shek as a betrayal of the Chinese revolution, N. Bukharin in an article of the Pravda points out that the alliance means the consolidation of the big native bourgeoisie, whose aim is counter-revolutionary and whose tendency is towards an open alliance with feudal militarists and the imperialist powers.

"Feng Yu-hsiang has passed into the camp of the enemies of the people's revolution and a relentless war must be declared against him."

Pointing out that the revolution takes a new turn with the defection of Feng, Bukharin says, "The Wuhan should fall surrounded by enemies the struggle would be carried on in new forms. The liberal counter-revolutionaries are incapable of even a half solution of the agrarian and peasant question."

BOYCOTT, STRIKES HIT IMPERIALIST SHIPPING BARONS

SHANGHAI, June 30.—British and Japanese shipping interests are suffering heavy losses as the result of the anti-imperialist boycott that is rapidly spreading thruout southern China.

Despite the attempts of right wing officials, headed by Chiang Kai-shek to prevent the boycott, workers and peasants thruout the lower Yangtze Valley are refusing to purchase British goods. The landing of Japanese troops in Shantung has aroused a great deal of indignation here and has made the boycott even more effective than it would otherwise have been.

Coupled with the boycott is the walkout of officers, engineers and

Apologize for Kicking Out Prohibition Dicks Who Used Third Degree

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Denying thers was any "politics" in the shake-up of prohibition enforcement personnel, prohibition commissioner Doran declared today that Maj. Chester P. Mills had been removed as administrator at New York for "disciplinary reasons," growing out of the revelation that third degree methods had been resorted to by Mills' subordinates in New York on recalcitrant prisoners.

Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury, recently said in a public statement that Mills had been "promoted." Doran's statement today was the first official admission that Mills had been "disciplined."

FULL VICTORY IS WON BY STRIKING NEWARK BARBERS

Union Recognition and More Pay for 1000 Men

NEWARK, N. J., June 30. — An overwhelming victory was today won by 1,000 barbers who were on strike for the past two weeks when the Master Barbers' Association acceded to all of their demands, including union recognition, increase of wages and the closed shop.

Besides winning a basic weekly rate of $35, a uniform working schedule was also agreed upon, the hours hereafter being from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

One off-day every other week was also agreed upon by the bosses at yesterday's conference.

Prior to the strike the average pay of the barbers was $25 weekly.

Union Sq. Protest On Thurs., July 7 at 4

Despite the fact that Governor Fuller of Massachusetts has granted a one-month stay of execution to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, framed-up Italian workers, the New York City Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee is proceeding with its plans for a one-hour monster protest strike which is scheduled for July 7th at 4 p. m.

The committee, which is the local central organization directing the plans for the mass demonstration on the 7th, is of the unanimous opiulon that Governor Fuller's reprieve is of no significance and has been granted merely for the purpose to allow more time for the advisory committee to the governor to complete their report. The strike committee is urging its 26 affiliated bodies to intensify their activities for the coming demonstration.

'According to plan, after the downing of tools next Thursday, the striking workers will proceed to Union Square where the demonstrators will be addressed by prominent speakers, including William G. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti; Clarence Darrow, Upton Sinclair, Oswald Garrison Villard, Arturo Giovannitti, Vincenzo Vacirca, and ot[illegible]

Resist Latest Attack on Daily Worker!

The terrific drive against the labor movement in the United States that is characterized even by assaults upon such conservative unions as the building trades, that has already weakened the miners, that is playing havoc with the needle trades unions, has met with determined, militant resistance from but one source—the Workers (Communist) Party. In order to strike a blow at the Party, its official English daily organ, The DAILY WORKER, was chosen as the first point of attack.

The first blow was delivered at a time when we were faced with most menacing financial reverses. When the state courts attacked us we deemed it our duty to state frankly to our readers the real situation. For weeks we did not know from one day to the next whether we would ever again publish our paper. But the admirable loyalty of our comrades and readers, expressed through personal sacrifices to enable us to weather the storm, enabled us to survive.

No sooner had we recovered from that crisis, to the unbounded fury of the patriotic societies who were doing the dirty work of the master class in their desire to crush us, than we against face the organized power of the capitalist state. This time the attack comes from the United States government in the form of indictments on charges that on conviction carry sentences of five years and $5,000 fine or both. Those indicted are both editors, Comrade J. Louis Engdahl and Wm. F. Dunne; the business manager, Bert Miller; the editor of the New Magazine, Alexander Bittelman; and two contributors to our columns, David Gordon and Joseph Kalar.

Frankly and cynically the government admits that we are attacked because of our assaults upon business men, the trade union bureaucracy, attacks on the church, etc. Comrades, we must meet this new attack as we met the previous one. Let every comrade that stood by us in the dark days of a month ago, again rally to defy the forces of reaction that are trying to destroy the labor movement of this country. Send contributions at once to 33 East First Street, New York City.

FRANK P. WALSH IN LETTER TO MAYOR WALKER POINTS OUT POLICE BRUTALITIES; MAGISTRATE JAILS 132 IN ALL; FIVE GIVEN SIX MONTH TERM

Tells of Professional Assassins Hired

In a moderately phrased letter, addressed in respectful terms to Mayor Walker of New York, Frank P. Walsh, former head of the War Labor Board, recites a cold and appalling list of charges against the police department, and the gangsters hired by the right wing in the needle trades unions of New York, each charge specific and all of them of a most serious naturs.

"What began as an industrial dispute . . . has degenerated into a state of organized crime which in recent days includes numberless cases of criminal assaults, attempted assassinations, acts of mayhem, outrageous treatment of citizens, men and women, and countless felonies and misdemeanors," says Walsh.

Police Also Criminal.

"The crimes are committed by notorious criminals and professional assassins, all known to the police," Walsh charges, and police officers, he says, instead of stopping the violence, have themselves "committed brutal assaults upon innocent and law abiding men and women both before and after arrest."

Frank P. Walsh is an outstanding figure in American history. In addition to a long and distinguished legal career he has held among others the position of president of the Kansas City Board of Civil Service, Chairman of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations, joint chairman, with ex-President Taft of the War Labor Conference Board, and representative of the people on the National War Labor Board. He was also chairman of the American Commission on Irish Independence and in that capacity argued the case of Ireland at the Versailles peace conference.

Walsh's letter requests an answer from the mayor, but to date nothing has been received from Walker. The letter in full is as follows:

• • •

June 28, 1927.

Hon. James J. Walker

My dear Mr. Mayor,

I would respectfully call your attention, as Chief Magistrate of the City to a condition of affairs now existing, which, in my opinion, calls for your immediate interposition and action:

1. In the garmeut manufacturing district, comprising a very large industrial and residential area of the city, there is a complete breakdown

Street Cleaners Win Raise by Strike Threat

CHICAGO, (FP) June 30.—By threatening to strike July 1st the Chicago street cleaners union extracted a promise of a 25 cents a day raise from the finance committee of the city council. They had demanded 40 cents. The new wage will be $5.60 a day.

State Prison Cases Wait.

OSSINING, N. Y., June 30.—Official annoncement is made today by officials of the state department of correction that inmates in the four state prisons and other penal institutions under this bureau have now begun to decrease.

Right Wing Lawyer Is Aid to Judge

A storm of indignation broke loose in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning when Magistrate George Ewald sentenced the first 12 furriers who were brot before him to five days each in the workhouse. During the morning 132 workers all told were sentenced.

When the first 12 men and women were being sentenced by the magistrate, boolug and stamping greeted the decision of the court.

Held for Contempt of Court.

Incensed by this demonstration Magistrate Ewald announced that the demonstrators would be held in contempt and indiscriminately slnged out three men, Broday, Shusterman and Ganterman and two women who were sentenced to six months' terms. One of them, Brody, was given an additional two months' for picketing, bringing his sentence up to eight months. The only crime that one of these workers committed was to hold a newspaper in his hand.

Showed His Colors.

After sentencing the five workers for contempt, Magistrate Ewald, vented his spite on the other workers who followed. One girl was given 30 days, while the other women were sentenced to ten days in jail with a choice of a $25 fine.

They all chose the former. The men were given 15 days each, with no choice of a fine. Altogether 46 women were jailed.

Yesterday evening only nine of the 46 women asked to be released on bail. Most of them are mothers and have to take care of their children.

Right Wing Assistant.

While the workers were being sentenced, Samuel Markowich, counsel for the right wing International and former assistant district attorney of New York County, acted as an unofficial prosecutor, pointing out pickets to the magistrate.

In the "contempt" cases, Ewald refused the plea of Jacob N. Mandelbaum, attorney for the strikers to permit them to choose their own
